10,000 Alcoholics to Mark 15th Anniversary of A.A.

By NEA SERVICE

CLEVELAND— (NEA)—From 10,000 to 15,000 incurable alcoholics will convene here July 28-30.

But no extra police and no drunken riots are anticipated because all these visitors will be cold sober—men and women assembled from all the states, Canadian provinces and foreign lands —celebrating the 15th anniversary of the founding of Alcoholics Anonymous.

The organization that now numbers well over 100,000 members was born in Akron, O., in the summer of 1935. A New York securities salesman, whose idea it was to maintain his own sobriety by helping other alcoholics, met an Akron doctor who had become a hopeless drunk.

These two men, recognizing the fact that they were "incurable drunkards" as long as they drank, evolved the principle of AA which has brought thousands of other alcoholics back from the gutters, from physical, moral and mental bankruptcy to respectability.

In simplest terms, the code of AA is: "I am a drunk. I want to quit drinking. I will not drink today. I will ask a Power greater than myself to help me. I will help others to accomplish the same result."

At this first international conference, the strides of AA into industry, education and social welfare will be reviewed and more steps planned. The idea has been absorbed rapidly into industry where such firms as E. I. DuPont de Nemours, Thompson Products, Eastman Kodak, Consolidated Edison and others have embraced it.

Its spread abroad will be related by one of the founding fathers who has just returned from visiting AA groups in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, France, England, Ireland—even in Scotland, home of Scotch whisky.

Medically, the simple therapy of AA has received wide endorsement by physicians, many of whom now add "Join AA" to their prescriptions. Groups have been formed in prisons, a phase on which the visitos will be addressed by Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin. Headquarters reports many sheriffs and police officials registering as observers.

Growth of AA, on lines of utmost simplicity, has been astounding. There are no solicitations, no dues, no paid officers or directors, no membership campaigns, no controversies or forced reforms. The goal is self support by contributions of members who pay their own way in every phase of activity. Many legacies and offers of gifts from outside have been turned down.

Members maintain small printed bulletins in their communities and support the Grapevine, monthly published in New York where the text "Alcoholics Anonymous" also is printed. Conference expenses are met by $1.50 individual registration fees.

How does AA work? First of all an alcoholic whose life has become unmanageable must have the sincere desire to quit drinking. A member of AA calls on him and becomes his sponsor. Then comes hospitalization for at least five days during which he receives medication.

When he is "out of the fog," members call on him with counsel, friendly help, and the man learns that his story is not much different from theirs.

Released from the hospital, the man identifies himself with a group of his fellows meeting weekly, but he is not limited to one group. In a typical city such as Cleveland, he can go to a meeting every night in the week, choosing any one of a dozen nightly group meetings.

There are 12 steps toward rehabilitation. After admitting he is an alcoholic, acknowledging a Supreme Power and making amends for wrongs to others, he is committed to frequent moral inventory and meditation and the desire to carry to others the method that helped him.

One 14-year member, who went from a Wall Street millionaire to panhandling nickles on the Bowery, was asked to comment on a new pituitary gland treatment of alcoholism through hormones and adrenal injections. Recent successes with this chemical procedure have been noted in New York City.

"It sounds wonderful," said the veteran. "But we've got something better than a physical panacea. Ou. treatment goes deeper. AA is a way of life that reaches not only the mind and body but the whole spiritual being!"

EYE TOPICS

STRANGE EYES

Nature has created many strange eyes for her creatures. For vision is the king of the senses — vital to all living and moving things.

The eyes of theStarfish are tiny clusters of sensitive nerves at the ends of its arms. These nerves can see light only and not objects or colors. The Ant has two kinds of eyes. It has clusters of nerves on the top of its head which enable it to see light in all directions. In addition it has simple eyes with which it examines its food closely.

The Fly has 4,000 tiny eyes clustered together and pointing in all directions. But each of these eyes has only one nerve. our eye has more than 130,000,000 nerves on the retina.

Among higher animals are eyes more nearly like man's—but none of them so perfect and keen, so able to see fine detail and color. While the eyes of the Dog are big, friendly and round, they do not see color. To the Dog the world is like a great black and white photograph. The Owl hunts its food at night. Nature has given it eyes that are extremely sensitive in dim light.

But of all the strange eyes found in nature, none rivals the perfection of the HUMAN EYE. None is keener, more able to see near and far objects with clarity. Man's supremacy in the animal kingdom is in large part gained through his visual mastery. Perfect eyesight is a priceless gift.

U.S. VISITOR—The escort carrier Mindoro, flagship of Task Group 81 of the United States Navy, is shown in Quebec harbor where it arrived this week. The carrier and seven destroyers, manned by navy reserve midshipmen and officers in training, visited the port as part of a goodwill tour of Canadian ports.

London Holiday Is Profitable For Canadian Writer

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON — (CP) — Youthful Don Harron of Toronto took just three days to make his mark in London's entertainment world.

Harron, 25, arrived in Britain on a holiday. First night out, he went to see the London version of "A Streetcar Named Desire" at the Aldwych Theatre.

Next day he called on Bonar Colleano, one of Britain's best-known radio, stage and screen figures. Colleano, an old friend, suggested Harron take over the script-writing job on the Colleano show, "It's A Great Life."

Harron accepted and now collaborates on the program with George Wadmore, an Englishman.

Third day in London, Harron tried out for a part in "Street-Car." He got it. He plays the small but important role of a newsboy who comes to collect money from Blanche Dubois, central character in the play.

Other Canadians

"Streetcar" is practically an all-Canadian vehicle these days. two other parts are filled by Canadians. Frances Hyland, 22, born in Shaunavon, Sask., and raised in Regina, recently replaced Renee Asherson in the role of Stella, sister of Blanche; and Bernard Braden, 33, of Vancouver, plays one of Blanche's suitors.

Writing a radio script and appearing in a play keeps Harron busy.

"I like what I've seen of London, travelling between studios and the theatre," he said, "but that's about all I will see for a while."

He said in a Canadian Press interview that he came here originally with the idea of staying a couple of weeks.

"It was just supposed to be a holiday. But I don't know now—the way things are going I'd like to stay over here two or three years."

Remember Louisiana

MONTREAL, July 20 (CP). — The founding of Louisiana by early French settlers will be commemorated here by the naming of a new park and three streets in north-end Rosemount. The new park Wednesday was given its name—Louisiana—by the city executive committee. Streets will be named Mobile, Tonty and Biloxi.

KINGSTON, July 20 (CP). — Queen's University here announced Wednesday the appointment of Ruth Bowyer of Bristol University, Bristol, England, and Howard Gruber of New York to the teaching staff of its department of psychology.

Cancer Lecture At Westwood

WESTWOOD, July 20—(ENS)—A lecture on the diagnosis of cancer was delivered Tuesday night to a public meeting of about 60 Westwood and district residents by Dr. Louis Zacks of Peterborough.

Dr. Zack's lecture was part of an educational campaign launched by the Peterborough County Cancer Society to acquaint local people with the symptoms of this disease. The secondary objective was to sell memberships which finance the society's work.

In the Peterborough group were John R. Broadhurst, president of the society; John Duignan, membership chairman, Mrs. E. Bennett, R. E. MacDonald and Dr. Zacks.

Mr. Broadhurst was chairman of the meeting held in the community hall.

Recall Reservists

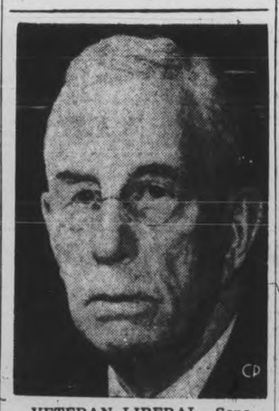
WASHINGTON, July 20 (AP) —The United States defence department announced Wednesday the army and air force will begin immediately recalling a limited number of reservists to active duty. The navy also will start immediately a "selective recall" of reserves, the announcement said.

Heads Federation

TORONTO, July 20 (CP). — Dr. G. F. McNally of Edmonton, president of the University of Alberta, was elected president of the Baptist Federation of Canada at Wednesday's closing sessions of the Federation's second assembly. He succeeds Dr. Miles F. McCutcheon of Montreal.

College Burned

RIVIERE DU LOUP, Que., July 20 — (CP). — Notre Dame des Champs College at Sully, Que., 30 miles south of here, was destroyed Monday in a $600 000 fire of unknown origin. No one was injured.



VETERAN LIBERAL—Senator T. A. Crerar is a former Liberal member of the Mackenzie King cabinet who was appointed to the Senate in 1945. He was leader of the Pro'ressive Party and resigned in 1922. In 1929 he became minister of railways and canals in the Liberal cabinet. Born at Molesworth, Perth County, June 17, 1876, he was minister of the Department of Mines and Resources in 1936.

Shah Discounts Russian Charge

TEHRAN, Iran, July 20 (AP)—Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi said Wednesday Russia has no rights under a 1921 treaty with Iran to send troops here if she feels herself threatened by foreign activities in Iran.

The Shah in an interview said the Soviet Union, in her propaganda blasts recently, misinterpreted the 1921 Iran-Russia friendship pact. He said the treaty provided for Soviet intervention only in the event of war-like activity on the part of counter-revolutionary white Russians.

For several years the Soviet Union has been pointing to the treaty and charging an American military mission has been building bases there.

The Shah labelled this charge "ridiculous."

Officiate At Service

MONTREAL, July 20 (CP). — Col. G. Walter Peacock of Toronto, retired chief secretary of the Salvation Army in Canada, will officiate at a memorial service here July 30 for General Evangeline Booth, former world commander of the Army, who died in Hartsdale, N. Y., Monday.

MONTREAL, July 20th — Let's keep cool! And, one very sure way I've discovered to guarantee a cool start on a Summer's day is to serve the family crispy-light QUAKER SPARKIES — PUFFED WHEAT one day and PUFFED RICE the next! Yes, Quaker Sparkies come in both Wheat and Rice varieties — so you have a turnabout treat for every day in the week! You should try them with fresh fruit on top, smothered in milk and sprinkled with sugar — so flavourful, so nourishing, so cool and satisfying! Treat the family from tomorrow on with refreshing Quaker Puffed Rice Sparkies and Quaker Puffed Wheat Sparkies — the best hot weather breakfast idea yet. Save the box tops from Quaker Sparkies. Get a set of Tudor Plate for less than half price. Full particulars on the package.

A Fashion Editor I know tells me her clothes economy begins with her shoes. She has beautiful shoes — keeps them new-looking longer than you'd think possible! Her secret? She polishes them regularly with MELTONIAN Shoe Cream! Not only does this internationally famous English cream keep shoes looking new — it actually preserves the leather. I've taken this economy tip from my fashion-wise friend . . . keep a handy supply of Meltonian Shoe Cream in the colours I like. And I've found that shoes last much longer beautifully with regular "Meltonian Beauty Treatments"! Ask for Meltonian Shoe Cream in the convenient Handitube — at better stores everywhere.

Footnote—There is also a Meltonian Wax Polish available in the new easy-to-open key tin.

You've Never Seen Anything like it . . . the new FRIGIDAIRE "Thrifty-30" ELECTRIC RANGE! It's a completely new idea in electric ranges! It's amazingly compact . . . only 30 inches wide . . . yet it has enough cooking capacity for the biggest family meals! And . . . this new "Thrifty-30" Range is really a "budget-watcher's" dream. It has a Thrifty Giant Oven . . . that stretches clear across the range and cooks more food with no more current. New High-Speed Waist-High Broiler . . . with unit recessed in oven top. New 5-Speed Radiantube Cooking Units . . . for faster, better "top-side" cooking with less current. New Switch Knobs out in front . . . easy to read and use. Take a tip from me . . . take a trip to your Frigidaire Dealer without delay . . . and see the amazing value in the Frigidaire "Thrifty-30" Electric Range!

A Thoughtful Mother I know always keeps a supply of lemons on hand so her family can have the luscious refreshment of cool lemonade whenever they want it! And she makes sure that the lemons she buys are SUNKIST CALIFORNIA LEMONS . . . they're the finest, juiciest grown. Just try this sometime when you're feeling hot and "sticky" . . . make yourself a glass or two of "Sunkist" lemonade. So wonderfully refreshing — so full of zest and lively flavour! You'll feel better in a jiffy! But remember to ask your grocer for Sunkist lemons to get the plump, ripe juicy lemons you want for truly delicious lemonade!

Everyone Will Tell You how lovely you look when you wear wonderful new WOODBURY DREAM STUFF! It's glorious! . . . and it does glorious things for you! Dream Stuff is a tinted foundation and powder magically blended into one make-up. Not a drying cake — nor a greasy cream . . . no "powdery" look. Pat it on with its puff and it clings for hours. Tuck it in your purse to carry with you wherever you go — it can't spill! Only 65c in four dreamy shades . . . the "Tropic Dream" shade is particularly lovely for a suntan complexion.

There's Nothing Like The Piquant, true fruit flavour of homemade jams and jellies to please the man in your life. No matter what your favourite is — strawberry, raspberry, grape, plum, cherry — jams and jellies have a deeper, more satisfying appeal when you "do them down" yourself. With CERTO FRUIT PECTIN at hand, along with my favourite fruits and sugar, it's so easy to have wonderfully sure results every time! I simply follow the easy directions on the booklet under the label of each Certo bottle and do my jams and jellies in about one-third of the time of the long boil method. I actually find with Certo that I get up to 50% more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit.

Such A Marvelous Bargain In Beauty! . . . you can buy a cake of smoothing WOODBURY FACIAL SOAP for just one penny! All you do . . . buy 3 cakes of Woodbury Soap at the regular price — and get a fourth cake for just 1c! You can't miss this marvelous "1c Sale" . . . 4 cakes are packaged together with a bright red sticker! Take advantage of this bargain opportunity to try Woodbury Facial Soap — the soap with the beauty cream ingredient. You'll love Woodbury Soap . . . so mild — leaves your skin feeling satin-soft! Doctors' tests among women show no "skin-burn" with Woodbury's mild, mild lather! This amazing offer good only while 1c sale units last!

Whether It's For A Garden Party or a family treat — iced tea is one of the most welcome hot day beverages I know! In fact, most folks say they never get enough of it! But it's easy to make — and always delicious when it's BLUE RIBBON TEA! For the blenders of this famous-for-flavour tea have chosen the very finest of India and Ceylon teas — then blended them to perfection! So "keep cool" on a hot summer day with a "one day's supply" of iced Blue Ribbon Tea — made like this:—

Infuse six heaping teaspoons of black tea or six tea bags in pint of freshly boiling water. After five minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container. While hot, add sugar to taste. Stir well until sugar is dissolved, then fill container with cold water while original liquid is still hot. Store in ice box for use as necessary. Serve with plenty of cracked or cubed ice and lemon.

There Are three things I couldn't start the day without: brushing my teeth, washing my face AND putting 2 drops of MURINE in each eye! The last is as important as the others . . . for I work my eyes hard. So naturally, even though they seldom complain, they must get tired. I never fail to "treat" them to Murine — for it rests and refreshes tired eyes instantly! There's a good reason why this is so. The seven ingredients of Murine blend perfectly with the natural eye fluids and soothe the delicate eye tissues ever so tenderly. Just use Murine regularly for one week. See how fresh your eyes feel!

It's So Easy And Quick to open your favourite corn starch package now! Yes, DURHAM CORN STARCH is now available in a new package that's easy to open! All you do:—just break the seal and inside you'll find Durham Corn Starch neatly protected in a paper bag. No fussing 'n' fuming with a knife or other sharp instrument to open the package. And when you've used as much "Durham" as you need at the time, simply replace the package top. It fits snugly — keeps out dust and keeps the starch from spilling. You'll be delighted, too, with the recipes on the new Durham Corn Starch package. They're Ann Adam recipes — so, of course, they're delicious!

Here's A Real Bargain In Silverware! . . . Yes, you can get a set of famous Wallace Brothers Silver Plate for half price and less! In the beautiful "Laurentian" pattern . . . silver-plated on finest quality nickel silver with an extra deposit of silver at the point of greatest wear. All you do — simply save your LIBBY'S EVAPORATED MILK labels and get—6 teaspoons ($2 open stock value) for just $1 and 6 Libby's Evaporated Milk labels — OR — a 24-Piece Set of 6 teaspoons, 6 dessert spoons, 6 forks, 6 knives ($15 open stock value) for only $6 and 24 Libby's Evaporated Milk labels. (Labels from both large and small tins are acceptable for both offers.) So get in the happy habit of using Libby's Evaporated Milk in your cooking. Save the labels and send them to me with your money order — Barbara Brent, 1411 Crescent St., Montreal, P.Q.

Just As Popular With Baby as with us grown-ups . . . that famous Heins "keystone" label that means "tops in quality"! It's true — baby can't read the label — but he can appreciate the yummy flavour of the HEINZ BABY FOODS! Meat products—soups—cereals—vegetables and desserts . . . all cooked specially for baby in Heinz gleaming kitchens! And here's another Heinz "Special" for babies! . . . Three plastic cap covers (to fit over the tops of Heinz Baby Food tins when baby doesn't eat a full tin at one mealtime) and two baby food scoops (for scooping out the last morsel of baby food from the tin) are yours if you'll simply write to me — Barbara Brent, 1411 Crescent St., Montreal, P.Q. Enclose just 10c in coin or postage stamps and 3 labels from Heinz Baby Food tins. And be sure to tell me if your baby is a boy or girl so I'll know whether to send these five "baby specials" in pink or blue!

Gargan Oracle After Succession In Television

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, July 20 (AP) —This week the most popular actor in Holywood is an amiable Irishman named William Gargan Wherever he goes, Gargan is buttonholed by his fellow actors, many of whom haven't worked for a year or two. They want to know what to do about television.

"I tell them to jump right into it," said Bill. "I've always said that an actor out of work is no better than anybody on skid row. He's just a guy without a job."

Gargan is a guy with a job — 44 weeks, without options, as Martin Kane on TV and radio. Thus he is the envy of his fellow craftsmen and an oracle for them.

"Look—for 17 years I made a good living but here," he says "I was never a star; my name appeared above the title in B pictures, but I always got featured billing in the big ones."

Now's The Payoff

In 1949 a friend urged him to take a look at the TV set-up in New York. Gargan did. He now is taking his first vacation in 18 months.

"Naturally, I didn't make much money the first season," he admitted. "But now television is beginning to pay off. And the Hollywood names had better get into it soon. Because TV is creating its own stars.

"A few years ago, I used to figure the name Gargan meant a quarter-million dollars on a movie marquee. Somebody like Gary Cooper would mean perhaps $5,000,000. Cooper may be worth that today, but I wouldn't say there were more than 10 other stars whose names mean anything at the box-office.

"The mountain (TV) isn't going to come to Mahomet (film stars). It will have to be the other way round."

N. Korean Morale Declared Low

TOKYO, July 20 — (AP) — Morale and training among some recently-organized North Korean divisions is "startlingly low," a United States headquarters communique said today.

North Korean troops don't surrender easily, headquarters said, because they fear they will be killed if they do.

The communique said intelligence agencies reported, as an example of low training and morale:

The 15th North Korean Division was built around a nucleus of battle-hardened officers and men with Manchuria and China experience.

Specialists—tank and mortar crews, machine - gunners and other skilled personnel—trained in the North Korean army were added. In June draftees were added as foot soldiers.

The draftees had been called up in April and sent to the "Young Democratic Training School." They were in garrison the first month and in the field the next. Some of the captured men said they had fired as few as three practice rifle shots.

Jehovah's Witnesses Banned From Colonies

LONDON, July 20 (Reuters)—Jehovah's Witnesses have been banned from entering certain British colonies because their teaching may have "very harmful results" in colonial communities, Colonial Secretary James Griffiths told parliament Wednesday.

As colonial secretary he wished to give the maximum religious liberty and tolerance he said. But he was satisfeid that their teaching of opposition to all kinds of authority created difficutly.

Liberal M.P. Archibald MacDonald had asked why Jehovah's Witnesses were not being allowed into the African colonies of the Gold Coast, Kenya, Gambia, Nigeria, or in the Fiji Islands in the Pacific.

Padlocked Cafe Closed 4 Months To Be Re-opened

The Paris Cafe, closed down by the city council April 17, when the license of proprietor Thomas Hum, was cancelled, is expected to open about the end of July if the building, its new management and staff pass examinations by the the Sanitary Inspector, the chief of police and the fire chief.

Five men have gone into partnership and are cleaning up the main floor, the basement and two upper floors.

Most of the new owners are related. Two of them have the same name, Henley Hum. The others are Hum Yee, S. S. Mac and Choy Lin.

The former owner, Thomas Hum, is reported running a restaurant on Sarvis St. in Toronto.

Careful Check

Sanitary Inspector Ronald MacPherson has been keeping a careful check on all stages of the cleaning.

In many cases he is telling the painters and decorators what work must be done. Some evidence of the former condition of the rooms is still to be seen. Some of the floors are still thick with dirt. But the new owners appear to be eager to make sure the floors and walls will be spotless before they are put to use.

Mr. Mac will himself be living in some of the upstairs rooms. The third floor, which formerly was let to roomers, will be sealed off and not used.

New Equipment

Most of the kitchen equipment will be new, including stainless steel sinks. A soda fountain is also being installed in the front of the restaurant.

The basement walls and ceiling are going to be painted as well as shelves in the basement refrigerator.

Sanitary Inspector MacPherson said he will give the building his official inspection when the new owners are about ready to open.

Assistant City Clerk Harry Hamley said no application for a restaurant license has yet been received from the owners, but before a license will be issued to them, they must get approval from Chief Constable John Thompson and Fire Chief George W. Smith.

New Collegiate Plans Altered For Two Gyms

If possible, the Board of Education is going to have two gymnasiums in the new collegiate, each the standard 70 feet by 45 feet.

The Board consulted with John B. Parkin, school architect for nearly an hour and a half Wednesday night so all the members could discuss the preliminary plans.

[Plans call for a 17-room high school accommodating 550 pupils. The site is Monaghan Rd., south of McKellar St. Monday night city council gave tentative approval to the Board's request for a by-law to issue $550,000 in debentures, estimated cost of the collegiate.]

The accommodations committee recommended a gymnasium 80 feet by 60 feet. This could be divided in two for physical training classes for boys and girls. The whole gymnasium would be used when basketball games were played.

Girls Need Gymn.

G. B. Goulding, PT instructor PCVS, was consulted and gave his approval. The present gymnasium, at the PCVS 100 feet by 50 feet, is too long for basketball.

Mrs. Paige Rowell championed the cause of the girls.

"If the boys are using the gymn the girls can't, and that's too bad. There should be the same facilities for both."

"Besides," continued Mrs. Rowell, "we are building for a school to hold 1000 eventually. One gym wouldn't be sufficient then."

Cost a Hitch.

K. S. Wightman said there was no doubt that it would be desirable to have the 6,300 square feet of the two gymnasiums rather than the 4,800 as planned, but the cost was a hitch.

Construction costs are estimated at $10.90 to $11 a square foot.

Mr. Parkin, after listening to the suggestions of the Board members, said he thought he could work in the two gymnasiums. If all went well he would have the preliminary plans in a month's time.

Labs Planned For.

The seventeen rooms will include eight standard classrooms; chemistry and physics rooms that at first will be used as classrooms; an agricultural science room that can also be used for chemistry and physics; and a library, general shop, home economics room, and two other rooms for commercial subjects and art. The gymnasiums are extra.

G. Wilson Craw, chairman of accommodations, said it seemed a sound idea to plan for the chemistry and physics rooms in the initial stages of the building. Until the school expanded to grades higher than 9 and 10 they would be ordinary classrooms. The necessary plumbing would be installed below the floor.

The Board members informed Mr. Parkin that $550,000 is the limit for total cost of the building and he is aiming at a construction cost figure of $450,00. The remainder would be required for cost of site, furnishings and fees.

No Local Rush To Colors Yet Despite Expanding Arm Plan More Recruits Larger Places

Headquarters of the 50th Heavy Anti-Aircraft Regiment, RCA, report there is no headlong rush among local young bloods to join this Reserve army unit. Enquiries and enlistments are about the same as before the outbreak of war in Korea. Large increases in the number of applications for volunteer service in the armed forces are reported today from Toronto. The R.C.A.F. recruiting centre, York St., Toronto, has received about double the usual number of applications since the Korean war began. Only the normal number have been accepted, largely because qualifications have not yet been modified.

Army officials said much the same situation exists with them.

Possibly this enthusiasm "to join up" is not reflected in Peterborough because the 50th HA Reg't is a "reserve" and not an "active" unit. The nearest recruiting centres for permanent force units are Toronto and Kingston, though applications for active service are received at the Peterborough armories.

Government Call

Today the government is issuing a call for physically fit young men 17-19 to join the active forces or the reserve.

All three armed services are calling for recruits.

The RCN wants men so more fighting ships can be commissioned.

The Canadian Army wants to increase its strength—particularly in the armored corps, parachute, artillery and other units.

And the RCAF wants both aircrew and groundcrew. Wanted in groundcrew are technicians for aircraft maintenance, radar and communications.

No Speed Trap Set In Omemee, Isolated Case

"It's only an isolated case," Omemee Police Chief Walter Stevens commented, referring to a recent speeding charge in Lindsay police court which was dismissed for lack of prosecution.

This week, a Toronto man appeared in Lindsay court, charged with speeding through Omemee on June 29. Chief Stevens, who laid the charge, was not present, and Magistrate R. B. Baxter of Port Hope dismissed the case. The information was laid on July 10 and he was instructed to appear on July 19. There was also attached a slip stating that the accused could settle out of court by sending $12.50.

The chief said he had often appeared in court and his cases would not come up so he had arranged with the magistrate to be called when to appear. "Apparently I was out on another job when this case was called," he said.

The Toronto man told Magistrate Baxter he was certain he had not done any speeding through the village, as he was in the habit of stopping at the Omemee post office to pick up his mail.

He said he had noticed no police officer trailing him and since he has a cottage in the Lindsay area, had come to court to learn how his speed had been checked.

Both the chief, and Reeve Harry Deyell of Omemee denied there was a speed trap set up in the village and said great care was taken before charges were laid.

"As a matter of fact," said the reeve, "the chief told me he allows drivers 10 miles an hour leeway before he charges them. That means he wouldn't charge anybody unless they were driving over 40 miles an hour. And our speed limit is 30."

Sunny, Warmer 'Tis Promised

A slight fall in the temperature has resulted in chilly weather during the past two days. This weather in May would be considered hot, but after the hot spell registered last week, the contrast has been too great. As a result summer wearing apparel is augmented with jackets and an extra blanket is needed for sleeping comfort.

Yesterday, the registered high temperature was 72 degrees and the low, 56. At 9 a.m., thermometers greeted their shivering public with a cool 60 degrees. The night low was 56.

A check on the weather for July 19, 1949 reveals little contrast in the night low. At this date the thermometer fell all the way down to 53, but those suffering the chilly night weather were compensated by a high of 81 during the day.

Little change in temperature is noted today, but predictions for tomorrow are a little brighter—sunny and warmer.

Four More DP's Come To Farms

Four displaced persons who will be employed by farmers in this district arrived in Peterborough, Wednesday evening. They were met at the C.N.R. station by Wm. H. L. Mellis, Manager, and J. R. Sharp, Employment and Relations Officer of the Peterborough branch of the National Employment Service.

These four new Canadians landed in this country two months ago and have been employed on the sugar beet farms near Chatham. They will complete their one year contract with farmers in this district.

3 Babies Need Kind Homes Shelter's Call Unheeded

In the city of Peterborough, where babies and children have always enjoyed a warm place in the heart of the community, there are today three babies, all under the age of three, who have no homes and no one to give them the care and affection which is usually taken for granted as a birthright.

The babies—two boys and a girl—have come under the jurisdiction of the Children's Aid Society, which means that foster homes are being sought for them, but Miss Rachael Young, superintendent of the Society, and her helpers on the Board of Governors, are finding the search for homes a tough job.

While there is a waiting list of couples wanting to adopt children to bring them up as their own sons and daughters, there seems to be no one who feels able to take care of the helpless youngsters whose circumstances do not permit actual adoption.

At Mercy of Community

What is going to become of the baby girl and the two baby boys Miss Young does not know, because she has just about exhausted every channel through which she has been able to find homes in the past.

The youngsters are entirely at the mercy of the community to which Miss Young is appealing on their behalf.

At the present time there are 61 children in Peterborough living with foster parents under arrangements made through the Children's Aid Society. They were unable to be adopted for various reasons which the Society felt were insurmountable, but they have enjoyed the normal family life of the community.

Are the three babies for whom the Society is now searching for homes, going to remain unwanted by the Peterborough community? That is the question Miss Young puts now.

Difficult In Summer

It's always more difficult to find foster parents during the summer, she says, because people quite understandably, do not feel like taking on the responsibility when they are planning their summer holidays.

The present need is for both Protestant and Roman Catholic homes.

Since 1893, the Society in Peterborough has been looking after helpless, homeless babies and children, finding them foster homes and doing all that is possible to overcome the handicap of not being brought up by their own parents.

It was a happy day for Miss Young this week when she received a card from a married woman who was once a ward of the Society, announcing the birth of her second child. There are today a number of happy homes in the city in which men and women, once wards of the Society, are now bringing up their own families.

CATALPA BLOOMS GONE

The catalpa trees at CGE have shed their creamy white bloom. They are late, if not last, in breaking into flower, and have been more attractive than ever this summer.

FLORAL NOTE

The most central flower strip in the city is the row of hollyhocks that are radiant these days at the customs house, right under the town clock, and at the corner of George and Charlotte Streets.

GIRL INJURED

Christina McKibbon, 128 Rubidge St., suffered a cut right knee and two scraped legs Wednesday when her bicycle struck the opened door of a car on George St. Owner of the car, Alex G. Prentice, Pickering, parked on George St., opened the left door to get out and the girl hit the open door.

PETERSON CENSURE

Four of the members of St. Thomas city council were absent from a meeting Tuesday night. Said Mayor Jack Peterson, formerly of Peterborough, adjourning the meeting: "It is a shocking and disgraceful situation when we cannot get a quorum. My time is as valuable as theirs. When a meeting is called they should at least have the courtesy to let us know they can't come." There are seven aldermen in the council's roster.

FULL HOUSE.

The Summer Theatre is in full stride. Wednesday— C.G.E. night —Queen Mary auditorium was jammed to the doors. Several people stood for the entire performance of For Love or Money, and three dozen were turned away: All Sold Out. Accommodation prospects are better for tonight, Friday and Saturday, and Mr. Sadlier re-assured all turned away Wednesday night that he would have seats for them, come what may. Next week's play, the remarkable thriller "Night Must Fall" by Emylyn Williams, is shaping up as a sell-out all six performances.

Imming Is Remanded

Paul Imming, 25, charged with forgery and fraud, was further remanded today to August 3 by Magistrate W. R. Philp. Bail was continued at $8,000. Russell and Edna Riches, parents of Mrs. Paul Imming, were remanded to the same date. They are charged with being accessories after the fact.

Welders Go Back Before Holidays

All 17 welders in the structural steel department of CGE who went on strike Friday morning are back at work today.

Terms of settlement have not been announced and talks are continuing between the union—Local 524, United Electrical Workers—and the company. However it appears the dispute will be ended before the two-weeks vacation period begins on Saturday.

The welders claimed the company was trying to make them repair a defective job without pay. The job was regularly inspected, they said, and so the company should pay full wages for the repair work.

On the other hand the company stated the welders had an established grievance procedure for such disputes and should remain on the job while the grievance was being considered.

Six of the men directly involved went on strike Friday morning and the other 11 walked out in sympathy shortly afterwards.

Biggest Floral Clock Prepared At Niagara

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 20 (CP)—The biggest floral clock in the world will go into 24-hour operation at its site near the Queenston power house here within a week to 10 days, it was announced today.

During the last two weeks, workmen have been testing the huge timepiece. This occasional operation has attracted so many tourists workmen have found it impossible to continue, so the clock will be put on a full day schedule until September.

A stone tower is to be erected to hold the chimes. Until that time, the clock, which works very much like any kitchen electric clock, will not be making much noise.

Instead of numerals the clock has the letters "Ontario Hydro."

LONDON —(CP)— Sadler's Wells Ballet Company has accepted a shoe company's offer to supply dancers with two pairs of walking shoes for a North American tour this fall.

Hey, That's Good Hay

HAVELOCK, July 20—(ENS) — Farmers have been reporting good crops of hay this year, but how many can boast of crops as high as five feet? Mrs. R. MacDonald, of Toronto, has found a stalk near her cottage on Round lake which measures five feet one inch.

What Do Peterboroug h's 5,300 Children Do All Day With Their Lo ng Summer Holidays?

What do children do in the summer? If they're 16 and over, most of them work, and if they are under 16, and there are 5,300 of them in Peterborough, about three-fourths spend their summer in the city ,and the other quarter at cottages or camps.

A rough estimate of children attending movies on Wednesday afternoon showed there were 500 or so at the four theatres in the city.

Last week's playground attendance was more than 6,000, and it could be assumed that about 1,000 children attended the city's eight playgrounds on Wednesday.

Probably another 2,000 found ways to amuse themselves by playing cops and robbers around the house or baseball on a corner lot. That takes care of 3,500, leaving about 1,800 unaccounted.

A good number of these will spend their summer at cottage or camp, and others will visit relatives in the country or in other cities.

And that's what Peterborough's children do in the summer. Their harried mothers could fill in other details.

Paper Makes Its First Offer

NEW YORK, July 20—(AP)—The World Telegram and the Sun Wednesday gave 400 striking newspaper Guildsmen its first formal offer since a strike began five weeks ago.

The paper has not published since the strike started.

Talks continued after a spokesman for the American Newspaper Guild (CIO) said the offer duplicated proposals the newspaper had made informally in previous negotiations and "does not meet the Guild's position."

The offer covered only job security, grievance procedure and union security.

TWO MEANINGS

WOKING, Surrey, England — (CP)— Woking magistrates, told that a driver's insurance policy forbade him to use his automobile while "soused," interpreted the word as "so used."

Now! Proof that

Research shows that decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst after meals. When you brush your teeth with Colgate's right after eating, you help remove mouth acids before they can harm enamel.

2 Years' research by LEADING UNIVERSITIES proves that test groups brushing teeth right after eating with Colgate Dental Cream showed amazing reduction in tooth decay!

Under the direction of eminent dental authorities, one group of college men and women always brushed their teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating—while another group followed their usual dental care. The average of the group using Colgate's as directed, and using Colgate's exclusively, was a startling reduction in the number of new cavities—far less tooth decay. The other group developed new cavities at a much higher rate.

FURTHER PROOF FROM SCHOOL CHILDREN

Leading Canadian dentists examined and directed over 8,000 school children in corrective dental habits. In addition to diet changes where required, the children were asked to brush their teeth after each meal.

The results! 16% fewer children with tooth decay!... Cavities dropped from an average of 5 per child to just over 3! ... 53% more children received dental care that prevented either loss of teeth or serious dental troubles later in life! ... The number of children with no defects—increased by 200%!

CLEANS YOUR BREATH AS IT CLEANS YOUR TEETH!

Scientific tests prove that in 7 out of 10 cases, Colgate's instantly stops bad breath that originates in the mouth! Colgate's active penetrating foam gets into hidden crevices between teeth—helps clean out decaying food particles—stops stagnant saliva odors—removes the cause of much bad breath!

HELP YOUR CHILDREN AVOID TOOTH DECAY!

CIRCUS FOR SANDRA — This was a circus performance on Main Street in Oconto, Wis. It wasn't a big circus—only one act—but it gave a big thrill to a bedridden girl who doesn't have long to live. The performance was for nine-year-old Sandra Medd, seen propped up in the window at left. A circus performer puts the elephant through its paces for the little girl who is doomed to die of cancer.

Pacific Coast Industrialists Ready To Produce Weapons

PRESQU'ILE POINT, July 20 (CP).—In the present war of ideas, victory will go to the side which is able to occupy with its thoughts the minds of the greatest number of able human beings, Justice Minister Garson said Wednesday.

"The best way to do this is to demonstrate in practice that under freedom the whole body of the people is better off both materially and spiritually," he said in a speech here at a Liberal picnic organized by the Hastings South and Northumberland constituencies.

"In order to do this, we who have enjoyed freedom and know its value are under the absolute responsibility of doing everything we can to make our free society work."

Mr. Garson said that although no nation was more exposed to world conditions than Canada, her government's policies had brought to Canada relative prosperity during a time when world conditions were desperately adverse.

Not Over Yet

"But we should be deluding ourselves if we thought for a moment that our trials, both inside Canada or outside Canada, are over.

"Apart altogether from any possibility of war, the world still faces some great political, financial and economic adjustments between nations. These adjustments are bound to present great problems for a country like Canada, which does so much of her business with other lands and which is, therefore, exposed to conditions within them."

Canada had limited control over conditions outside, but she could by intelligent steps within the country "continue to maintain ourselves in a position in which we can best protect ourselves against what is happening there.

"In doing so, I know of no single step which is more important than the achievement of maximum co-operation between the federal government and the provincial governments of Canada."

Must Establish Freedom Value

VANCOUVER, July 20 (CP)—Pacific coast industrialists, addfidence that peace can be preing a fervent prayer it won't be necessary, said today they are confident British Columbia can swiftly produce weapons of war.

But shipbuilding alone would be B. C.'s forte, they said, because of the need for decentralization and dispersal.

For example, they said, there is little chance of reopening the giant Boeing Aircraft plant at nearby Sea Island, whatever the world situation may be.

"I doubt if we'd ever manufacture planes or other large items here," said one business leader. "Even in Seattle they're trying to move the Boeing plant from the coast.

"Large factories of this kind would probably be set up in Alberta or Manitoba.

A Different Matter

Shipbuilding is a different matter. Vessels must be built on the water, vulnerability of the Pacific coast could be a necessary gamble; and, as one shipping man said, because "we (B.C.) have the yards and the skilled men who could go to work very quickly."

Spokesmen for Victoria's two major shipyards—Victoria Machinery Depot and Yarrows Ltd. —said neither has been dismantled or broken up in any way and work, in most cases, could begin as soon as material arrived.

There would be no shortage of skilled manpower. Union officials said there are many skilled men who would "jump at the chance to get back in the shipbuilding industry."

Corvettes, frigates and 10,000-ton freighters were built at Victoria during the Second World War.

Urge Farmers Guard Woodlots

MONTREAL, July 20—(CP)—Farmers should take more care of the old family woodlot.

At least, that's the view of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

The woodlot produces a crop just like other crops, says a Chamber report issued today and prepared by G. C. Cunningham and J. B. Prince, of the Federal Department of Resources and Development.

"Under sound principles of forestry management and practice, the farm woodlot can produce some of the finest timber in the world, with annual yields running up to a cord or more per acre."

New products being made from wood include plastics, linoleum, unbreakable dolls and other products. Waste material coming from these operations can be used in many ways.

"Lack of interest in the care of woodlands is a serious problem that should concern the whole community."

Cupid Working Overtime In Chalk River

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

OTTAWA, July 20 (CP)—For three years, employees at Canada's Chalk River plant have defied any suggestion that an atomic energy plant is no place for marriage and children.

Cupid is working overtime and the birth-rate is high at the huge National Research Council atomic project.

The Lancet, a British medical journal, said recently that babies whose parents have been exposed to atomic radiation might suffer from "serious physical defects."

Officials here said today there is no evidence to support this at Chalk River.

Since 1947 there have been 56 marriages at Deep River, Ont.—the self-contained village where 2,000 Chalk River employees live. In 37 of these, both wooer and wooed were working on the atomic energy project. There were 15 other marriages in which either husband or wife was a Chalk River employee.

High Birth-Rate

The birth rate at Deep River is believed to be higher per capita than anywhere else in Canada. The number of children born since 1947 reached 281 in June, with 47 births since the turn of the year. The 1949 births reached a peak of 103.

No ill-effects either to children or parents have been reported. NRC officials say Chalk River employees are better protected against atomic radiation than any other group in Canada.

"No one, so far as is known, has ever suffered ill-effects from working at Chalk River," one official said.

Employees at Chalk River—130 miles northwest of Ottawa—travel six miles to their modern, well-built frame houses at Deep River.

"I do not think any of them are afraid their health will suffer from working on an atomic energy project,' the official said. "They know they are well protected."

Testify Policemen Accepted Loot

MONTREAL, July 20—(CP)—Two women testified here Wednesday that alleged bank bandit Charles Emile Poliquin had contacts concerning money with Quebec Provincial Police officers last November and December.

Mrs. G. O. Nolet, 40-year-old Three Rivers, Que., hotel keeper, and Berthe Galipeau, pretty, 25-year-old girl friend of Poliquin, were witnesses at the trial of Detective Lieut. Marcel Patenaude, Detective Sgt. Gaston Archambault and former Detective Paul Hervieux. Hervieux was dismissed from the Provincial Police some months ago. Patenaude, head of the hold-up squad, and Archambault have been suspended from the Provincial Police.

All three are charged with conspiring to commit three armed robberies and inciting other persons to commit two robberies.

In On Loot

The 28-year-old Poliquin claims they planned rural bank robberies for him to commit, and that they were in on a split of the bank loot.

Poliquin himself goes on trial next month for the $3,500 robbery last Dec. 2 of a bank branch at St. Hugues, Que.

Mrs. Nolet testified Wednesday that Poliquin came to her hotel last December accompanied by two men whom she identified as Archambault and Hervieux.

"During the evening I went upstairs to tell the party not to make so much noise," she said. "While I was standing outside the door I heard the men discussing money matters."

Earlier, Miss Galipeau told the court she had stood in the corridor at Provincial Police headquarters in Montreal while Poliquin gave $1,000 to Patenaude.

RCAF Mercy Trip Aids Three Eskimo

MONTREAL, July 20.—(CP).—Two Eskimo women and an Eskimo child are in the Indian hospital at nearby Caughnawaga today after a 1,400-mile non-stop flight in an RCAF Lancaster from Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island in the Northwest Territories.

The RCAF made a special trip from Greenwood, N.S., into the northland to bring the three here for medical treatment. They arrived yesterday.

Hospital authorities would not reveal the nature of the illness. The flight from Frobisher Bay took seven hours and 44 minutes.

Using Planes To Help Hunters

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (CP)—Latest sport in southern New Zealand is wild goose shooting with an airplane as beater or musterer. In the Rangitata Valley area of the South Island, Canadian geese are so numerous that they have become a pest and farmers organize regular goose shoots with the aid of a plane.

A pilot in a light, easily manoeuvrable plane, flies over the flocks of feeding geese at a low altitude to get them into the air. Then he drives them toward the shooters, spread out across the valley. By chasing from side to side behind the flock as a dog does with sheep, he can drive them toward the guns in a compact group which makes the best target.

When fresh, Canadian geese can make 60 miles an hour, but if the pilot can keep them moving for a few miles they slow down. The pilot must drive the birds low enough to be in the range of the guns, but if he gets too far above them he loses sight of them as their dull brown backs do not show up against the Tusock country below.

The pilot has the problem of keeping out of the way of shot intended for the birds. An experienced bird musterer can often take a flock several times backward and forward over the guns, in which time heavy bags are secured.

War Brings New Demands On Canadian Economy

By FORBES RHUDE,
Canadian Press Business Editor.

President Truman has asked Congress for an additional $10,000,000,000 to raise United States defence expenditures to $27,000,000,000.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, without naming an amount, says Canadian defence spending, originally estimated at $425,000,000 this year, will be increased.

If it were increased to the same relative amount as that of the United States it would be somewhere about $1,350,000,000, though nothing like this figure is expected yet.

One can't figure out just what these vast sums will mean in increased demand on North American resources, but they must inevitably speed the whole economy and make new demands on the productive powers of everyone.

Take Up Slack

The figures won't add their full amount to total demand, for to some extent they will displace other demand, but if there was any slack in our business and industry, they should soon take it up.

And, as far as one can see, they are just a start. There is almost a sense of unreality as the world on one hand prepares for a cataclysm and on the other tries to attend to its affairs as though the threat to cataclysm were not there.

For, if we are to go through the things which we seem to be facing, these may be the closing days of the world as we have known it.

Higher Costs

Meantime, to get back to things as they are, the magazine steelways of New York gives an example of how much more it costs to replace industrial machinery than it did 10 years ago. Says Steelways:

Before the war, a grinder to resurface the rolls that make sheet steel cost $24,500. Such machines wear out and must be replaced, and today the same roll grinder costs $138,000. Thus $113,500 must be raised and added to the $24,500 originally set aside.

If investors refuse to furnish the necessary capital, then the money must be taken out of profits. But profits are taxable. Last year the United States government's 'take' averaged 38 per cent. So besides the extra $113,500, 38 percent in taxes must be raised to pay for the grinder.

Western Europe Hails Truman's Mobilization Call

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON, July 20.—(AP). — Western Europe today hailed President Truman's mobilization call as a historic move in the fight against aggression.

In Britain and a number of other countries the firmness of American policy was hailed as heartening evidence of American unity in the face of dangers.

"This time the reply to menaces is unmistakable," said the Times.

The reaction on the part of the Communist press was quite the contrary.

"Say no to America," exclaimed the London Daily Worker. "Not a penny, not a man for McArthur's war."

But the general chorus was one of acclaim.

"President Truman's latest message to Congress is also a message of hope for the world of free men," said the London Daily Mail.

The Daily Telegraph said: "The men of the Kremlin . . . like Hitler and Mussolini before them . . . had mistaken the disinclination of the democracies to arm themselves in time of peace as moral decadence ,and their forebearance in face of innumerable provocations as evidence of material weakness. . . . President Truman has resoundingly dispelled such illusions."

The conservative Frankfurter Allgemaine Zeitung in West Germany expressed doubt that the $10,000,000,000 asked by the President will be sufficient.

The leftist Franc Tireur in Paris said that Stalin, whatever he may have been hoping for in Korea, has achieved "the moral and material mobilization of America."

The French Communist organ L'Humanite published news of the president's message under a headline saying, "Grave Threats of Truman Against Peace."

In Rome, the conservative independent Il Messaggero hailed the American step.

Largest Airliner May Make Channel Trips

By ALAN HARVEY.

LONDON (CP).—The world's largest airliner may be used to carry holiday crowds from London to Paris for as little as £5 ($15.50) a passenger.

The idea, which so far hasn't got past the suggestion stage, is that the eight-engined, 130-ton Bristol Brabazon I, originally designed to carry 100 persons nonstop from London to New York, should make cross-channel flights instead.

Sponsors of the plan argue that since the Brabazon's operating cost is estimated at about £400 an hour, a 200-seater aircraft could charge as little as £5 return and still show a profit. The present minimum for cross-channel trips is about £10.

These arguments are expected to be resisted by the Bristol Aeroplane Company, which built the Brabazon prototype as a kind of "living laboratory" to discover uncharted secrets of the air. Present plans call for tests to continue another 18 months, when later versions will be built.

The Brabazon I has been several years in the building. The project will have cost Britain £15,000,000 by 1954. Because of frequent delays in construction, there have been suggestions that the Brabazon would turn out to be the white elephant of British aviation.

Now the critics aren't so sure. The Brabazon came to London for its first demonstration flights in mid-June, and left a trail of superlatives behind it.

Spectators craned from windows and automobiles pulled to a stop as the mammoth plane, whose cabin looks as bid as a subway station, circled over the city. In landing at London airport, the Brabazon required less than half the runway.

"She pulled up just like a car," an airport official said.

Although 177 feet long, the plane turned round on the 300-foot runway with room to spare. It became airborne again after a run of only 25 seconds.

"She's indeed a queen of the air," said Sir Miles Thomas, chairman of the BOAC. Supply Minister George Strauss said the liner looked more beautiful in the air "than any other plane I have ever seen."

Viscount Pakenham, Minister of Civil Aviation, said the demonstration flights marked an historic occasion, "not only in Britain but in the world."

Wage Increase Not Warranted

SYDNEY, N.S., July 20 (CP)—Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation told a conciliation board here Wednesday that "no increase in the wage rate is warranted" for workers at its huge steel plant here.

Instead, the company's brief said, "a lower wage rate than set by the 1949 contract would be more appropriate."

Increased costs would bring back curtailed operations and precarious employment.

The 4,000 members of the Sydney local of United Steel Workers of America (CIO-CCL) are asking a reduction of four hours in the 44-hour week with no reduction in the present basic take-home pay of $1.04 an hour.

Offers To Get Volunteer Army

TORONTO, July 20 (CP) — A Toronto business man Wednesday offered to raise a force of 10,000 Canadian volunteers for Korean fighting within 30 days.

Edward J. Pyman wired the United Nations that he could raise the men in 30 days and have them ready to embark in 90 days "with intensive training."

Mr. Pyman, now employed with the sales division of an engineering firm, said he had previously helped raise Canadian volunteers for Finland during the Russo-Finnish war and for service in Israel. He is a veteran of the Canadian army and RCAF.

2 'Voyageurs' Paddle 3,000 Miles

WINNIPEG, July 20 (CP) — Two copper-colored 20th-century voyageurs interrupted a 3,000-mile cross-Canada "paddle" here Wednesday.

John Beard of Portland, Ore., and 17-year-old Joe Kirkwood of Hood River, Ore., are tracing the course of empire builders Dr. John McLoughlin and Sir George Simpson who crossed Canada 125 years ago to found Fort Vancouver, now Vancouver, Wash.

Sir George and Dr. McLoughlin extended the holdings of the Hudson's Bay Company so that they stretched from California to Alaska and from Fort Hall, Idaho, to the Pacific ocean.

The modern duo is travelling at a 50-mile-a-day pace. The trip will be continued tomorrow.

Goal In Sight

After a portage at Kenora, they will travel Lake of the Woods, Rainy Lake Lake Nipissing and the Ottawa river ending the trip at Riviere du Loup Que., on the St. Lawrence river.

The trip, which is to commemorate the 125th anniversary of the founding of Vancouver, Wash., started May 28 and is scheduled to end in August. The pair loaded a tent, mosquito net, clothes and food supplies into their 17-foot canoe at Vancouver, Wash., and paddled eastward.

After travelling from 50 to 85 miles a day on the Athabaska and Saskatchewan river, shooting rapids and making portages, Beard and Kirkwood became windbound on Lake Winnipeg for five days. They were picked up by a fishing boat and brought to Selkirk, Man., from where they paddled up the Red river to Winnipeg.

Big Rocket Fizzles, Stays Grounded

COCOA, Fla., July 20 (AP).—The US Army's big double-header bumper rocket aimed for the Atlantic fizzled out on the launching platform today after nine tortuous hours of off and on waiting.

The 250,000-pound rocket — a V-2 with a little Wac Corporal on its nose for launching in flight at perhaps 3,000 miles an hour—stood white and still in a small feathered footing of smoke for some seconds before the bull horn on the telephone channel linking seven control stations bellowed mournfully:

"The missile did not lift. The missile did not lift."

A few minutes later a voice on the channel announced that a main valve apparently had failed to open and that only the initial igniter flow of fuel had come through.

Post's BRAN FLAKES WITH OTHER PARTS OF WHEAT

A Product of General Foods

Super fine! Anytime!
Appetizing BRAN MUFFINS

¾ cup milk
1 cup Post's Bran Flakes
1 cup sifted flour
3½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
3 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening

Pour milk over bran and let stand 5 minutes. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Add egg and butter to bran mixture and mix well. Add flour, beating only enough to dampen all flour. Bake in greased muffin pans in hot oven (425°F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 10 muffins.

Gets Big Fish In Rice Lake

Fighting half an hour, Emmett Roliff of Kent Ohio, hauled in a 25 and a half pound muskie from Rice Lake Wednesday morning.

The fish measured 45 inches long. Mr. Roliff, fishing with Martin Steffee, of Ravenna Ohio, was trolling using a yellow river runt.

The fishermen are staying at Deer Head Lodge operated by B. B. Chadwick. Mr. Steffee has been coming to the Kawarthas about 20 years, but Mr. Roliff is a more recent visitor.

Both men have been catching plenty of pickerel as well.

"Bossy" Gillis Not So Stormy Citizens See Change In Mayor

NEWBURYPORT Mass., (AP) — The once rambunctious Andrew J. (Bossy) Gillis is so quiet these days some people have to think twice before recalling who is mayor of this old seashore city.

Six months of the Canadian-born mayor's fourth term have gone by with scarcely any excitment. It was not so back in 1928, when Gillis had red hair and a flair for getting into trouble.

Such as—running the city's affairs from jail after he drew a two-month sentence for cutting down trees on Elm Street to make an entrance for his gasoline station.

Now he is grey and rotund. But he still sells gasoline, and lots of it. His prices are below other dealers in town and his business is brisk.

Not Even Close

In fact, much of the city's business is conducted at his gasoline station while the telephone in the mayor's office jingles impatiently.

The 53-year-old mayor, who was born near Kensington, P.E.I., made one prediction when he was elected again that was away off. But everyone is glad of it. Bossy said the tax rate probably would hit $70 per $1,000 assessed valuation. He wasn't even close. The assessors recently announced the 1950 rate would be $56.40.

That is a jump of $4.40 over last year but below the 1948 rate of $67.

Massachusetts state tax commissioner Henry F. Long, who knows quite a bit about taxes, said it is an excellent rate—"well developed and thoroughly reflective."

There is something reminiscent of Bossy's early rows with the school committee in his current term. In his younger days, Gillis once climbed in a second-floor window of a new high school to make an inspection when the school committee refused to give him a key.

Now pending is a legal case Gillis brought on himself: a suit of the school committee and teachers to force him to restore a $49,224 school budget cut.

"Go The Limit"

Bossy isn't backing down. His orders to city solicitor T. Francis Kelleher are: "go the limit." He wants the school personnel to go back to a 1949 scale.

The mayor has permitted the school teachers to receive their pay at the 1949 rate without prejudicing the suit pending. If the court orders the money restored, the increases voted by the school committee will go into effect.

When Gillis was elected in December he made some remarks about tearing the police department apart. But even here there appears to be a truce.

Taken Off Payroll

City Marshal James E. Sullivan refused Bossy's order to shake up the police force. The mayor retaliated by striking Sullivan's name from the payroll.

Sullivan continued to work without pay—until he had to go to the hospital with ulcers.

"I don't want to bother a sick man," said Gillis, as he permitted the marshal to draw the 10-weeks back pay due him.

The marshal is back on the job now. He still hasn't made a single transfer the mayor asked. Gillis is doing something about eliminating pollution from the Merrimac River, a move appreciated by all citizens of this old seaport. An application has been made for federal funds to inquire into the feasibility of a local sewage treatment works.

Predict Vancouver Major Open Port

VANCOUVER, July 20 (CP) — Continuation of the Korean war may result in Vancouver becoming the only major "open port" on the Pacific coast, shipping men said Wednesday night.

This will result, they said, if United States soastal shipping centres continue busy with transports loading supplies for the war zone.

Commercial traffic must stand aside for such loading and Vancouver, which so far is not exporting supplies to the scene of the conflict, would become the logical port for freighters of overseas countries.

Prisoner Recaptured

NORANDA, Que., July 20 — (CP). — Gaston Plante, 24, on Wednesday was captured on the highway near here 48 hours after he broke out of the Amos, Que., jail. Plante, awaiting transfer to the Montreal Penitentiary where he was to serve a two-year term for breaking and entering escaped from the jail by scaling an 18-foot wall.

Hold Out In Monastery

MONTREAL, July 20 (CP).— Three Montreal Franciscan priests who went to Korea earlier in the year, were reported Wednesday to be holding out in the monastery at Taegu, scene of some of the hottest fighting. Officials of the Roman Catholic order here identified the trio as Fathers Hector Daoust, A. Roy, and R. Bellerose.

LEAVE HIDING—Pong Che Yue, 24, right, and Young Wan Yee, 22, centre, stowaways from North Korea who escaped custody shortly before they were scheduled to be deported two and a half months ago, are shown with Vancouver reporter Pat Keatley to whom they surrendered last week-end. The pair said they had decided to surrender in the hope they can convince Canadian authorities they should be allowed to remain in Canada.

Red Conquest Unfinished Educator Says

TORONTO, July 20 — Because communism has as its objective the enslavement of the world, there is no reason to assume the limits of Red conquest have been reached. This was the opinion of Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, president of Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S.

Wednesday at the second assembly of the Canadian Baptist Federation, Dr. Kirkconnell spoke of the gradual but rapid world conspiracy of communism which he said, is embittering and muddying the national life of every country. The day when world peace can be achieved by co-operation between Russia and the democratic countries is as far off as ever, he declared.

"We have seen human freedom stamped out by murder, torture and exile in Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia," he said. "We have also seen Red armies, equipped by Moscow and officered by Moscow-trained staffs, overrun China. And now we see them make a well-planned attack on South Korea."

The result of all this, Dr. Kirkconnell asserted, has been the increase of the slave empire of Stalin from 180 million to 600 million.

Leaves Gulf

Conquest has left a gulf between nations and classes and races, he said. And it is only through Christianity that this abyss can be bridged.

"It is only where there is a common spiritual basis of elevation to the will of God that there can be any effective and permanent fellowship between nations," Dr. Kirkconnell said. "Any union of peoples without Christ as the integrating force is bound to fail."

He said many well-intentioned men had striven for international unity on a non-spiritual basis. "However," he added, "during the past five years we have seen the United Nations exploited for purposes of mendacious propaganda and for frustration of its basic ideals."

History, he said, has shown many instances of people striving for unity. But, despite earnest efforts Christianity has again and again brought, not peace, but the sword. "The human heart has seldom known a force more dangerous and devastating than religious hatred," he said.

The World Council of Churches despite its imperfections, is a trend toward integration and union of the peoples of the world. But, he continued, some religious denominations are honestly concerned about joining the council.

Dr. Boyer Released After Jailed As Spy

MONTREAL, July 20 — (CP) —Dr. Raymond Boyer, sentenced to two years in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary for his part in the Russian spy ring, has been released, it was learned Wednesday.

The wealthy 41-year-old chemist and former McGill University scientist, went to prison in December, 1948, after he lost an appeal to the supreme court.

Dr. Boyer, who did work during the war on RDX, a new explosive at that time, was arrested following the 1946 royal commission probe into the spy ring.

Too Old For Tennis

SOLLIDEN, Sweden —(CP) — King Gustav of Sweden may be too old for tennis, his favorite sport, but the 92-year-old monarch still loves the outdoors. Soon after arriving at his summer residence on the island of Oland he spent some time on the palace croquet grounds.

ESCORTED BY AGENTS of the US Federal Bureau of Investigation, Julius Rosenberg (centre), 32-year-old New York City engineer and former employee of US Army Signal Corps, is taken into the Federal Building in Manhattan for questioning in connection with the leak of atom bomb secrets to the Russians during World War II. He is said to have collaborated in the ring of agents in which Dr. Klaus Fuchs, top British atomic scientist figured prominently. Fuchs is now serving a prison sentence in England. Rosenberg's bail was fixed at $100,000.

Not One Soldier Given In Answer To Lie's Plea

By FRANCIS W. CARPENTER

LAKE SUCCESS, July 20 (AP) —United Nations forces fighting in Korea are growing slowly, but no combat troops have been formally pledged so far to join United States troops on the battlefield.

UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie appealed last Friday to 52 of the 59 UN members for all help they could give. To date, he has not been pledged one soldier. Britain alone appears on the verge of committting troops, although there has been no definite decision yet.

No formal replies have been received, but decisions must be made on the highest governmental levels, and the process takes time, UN officials say.

Some Talk

There has been talk of an international brigade, but the UN made it clear volunteers must work through their home governments and not with the UN itself.

Nationalist China offered early in the war to fly 33,000 trained combat soldiers, complete with equipment, to Korea, but the U.S. shied away.

The U.S. and the UN have told Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek to take it up with Gen. Douglas MacArthur direct. The U.S. is said to fear Communist Chinese troops will join the North Koreans if Chiang's men line up beside the South Koreans.

Prospective aid shapes up roughly along this line, on the basis of reports received at UN headquarters:

Britain is said to be considering sending troops.

Australia shows signs of sending more warships or planes.

Canada is reported ready to turn over a squadron of transport planes.

France has decided today to send the 1,969-ton sloop La Grandiere, now on duty in the Far East.

Norway is reported to have offered shipping, which would be useful in ferrying troops and supplies.

Nicaragua is ready to supply an armed force. So far, the UN has not heard of it officially.

Indian Days Of Old West Recalled Near Banff, Alta.

BANFF, Alta., — (CP) — A throwback to the early days of the west, Banff Indian days will unfold July 20-23 before thousands of visitors thronging this mountain resort as they have done since 1889.

Indian tribes — Stonys, Cree, Blackfoot, Saracee and others, will parade through Banff streets. They will wear eagle-featured headdress and richly beaded deerskin garments, riding horses decked in traditional Indian style. With the braves will be the squaws and papooses.

The three-day program will include trials of skill, folk dances and ancient rites.

Banff Indian days originated in 1889 when a summer flood stranded four C.P.R. trains and their 600 passengers at the town.

The isolated group needed entertainment. So Tom Wilson, the man who discovered Lake Louise, went to the Indians camped on the flats at the base of cascade mountain and organized horse races for the braves. The train passengers loved the show.

Well-fed, the Indians also were pleased. They returned the following year for more races. Since then Indian days has been the highlight of the summer season at Banff.

Sure Iran Won't Become Another Korean Incident

TEHRAN, July 20 — (AP) — Iran will not be another Korea.

That's the opinion of seasoned observers thoroughly familiar with the situation in this oil-rich country south of the Caspian Sea, which has a 2,000-mile common border with the U.S.S.R.

These informants argue Iran is in danger of invasion from the north only if Russia decides on all-out war.

A blitz through Iran to sieze the great oil fields on the Persion Gulf—a vital strategic prize—then might be in order But these observers express belief the Soviet could not justify — even with twisted propaganda — any local aggression.

Unlike north and south Korea, the present Iranian-Soviet border has been unchanged for years.

Groups Too Small

There are some small groups now in Russia who might conceivably form the nucleus of a "people's front liberation army." Observers say these are too small, however, to matter much.

The Russians now have under their protection a number of Kurds from Iraq. Some of the Kurds (wild tribesmen) have demanded in the past a Kurdish Republic in northwest Iran, Northern Iraq and Syria and part of Turkey.

Immediately after the last war the Russians attempted to foster a Kurdish peoples Republic, but it collapsed after a few months.

Russia also controls refugees of the short-lived Azerbaijan people's republic, set up about the same time in Irans Azerbaijan province.

Strong Iranian resistance, backed by the United States and the United Nations, forced the Communist leaders there to flee.

Incidents Few

Irans border has been remarkably clear of "shooting" incidents for the last six months although tension still exists in Iran's northern provinces.

Both the Soviet and Iran maintain strong border garrisons. Every now and then there are reports of Soviet troop movements.

The Soviet opend an exchange of notes with Iran several months ago complaining about Iranian planes for aerial photography in northern Iran in connection with oil exploration.

Iran has replied it considers its search for oil purely an internal matter. It made a big concession to the Russian protest, however, by backing down on plans for aerial photography in "regions contiguous to the land frontiers of the USSR."

...Here's Economy!

NEW MIL-KO makes FOUR QUARTS of nourishing skim milk for about 8¢ a quart!

IN DRINKING

Use MIL-KO for all your drinking. Use it on your cereals too. To make nourishing skim milk just add water. The flavor is improved if made-up milk is left in the refrigerator over night and served cold. MIL-KO is fresh sweet milk from which the moisture and fat have been removed.

IN COOKING

In making soups, sauces, custards, etc., use the made-up milk. Or you can mix the MIL-KO with the dry ingredients. Remember, one cup of MIL-KO and one quart of water makes one quart of nutritious non-fat milk. MIL-KO has all the Calcium and other valuable Minerals, Proteins, Riboflavin and Vitamin B Complex normally found in whole milk. Nourishing but non-fattening.

IN BAKING

In making biscuits, bread, cakes, cookies, pancakes, etc., use the made-up milk, or for every cup of milk required, use 4 tablespoons of MIL-KO and one cup of water, sifting the MIL-KO with the dry ingredients and adding the water at time recipe calls for milk.

One package of MIL-KO will make four quarts of delicious skim milk for about 8 cents a quart! Get some at your grocer's today!

British Public Worried Over Defence Preparations

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

LONDON — (CP) — The gravity of the international situation with its ever-present menace of a third world war is causing growing concern in many quarters about Britain's own defences.

The questions being asked are similar to those posed during the critical period that preceded Hitler's march into Poland in September, 1939.

Qualified authorities have been telling an anxious public that the Communist aggression in Korea is unlikely to plunge the present generation into another major war. But the man-in-the-street has not forgotten the shattering let-down of Neville Chamberlain's "peace in our time" assurance before the German blitzkrieg engulfed Europe more than 10 years ago. The average Briton wants to be sure the government, in consultation with other units of the commonwealth, is ready to meet the challenge of aggression and that her armed strength is equal to her commitments.

The Conservative Daily Mail, leading the campaign for aggressive preparedness, recalls the devastation of a blasted Britain from 1940 onwards because the country was inadequately armed in 1939.

Wasting Efforts?

"Two world wars," the paper says, "should have taught us the peril of allowing our armed forces to run down. But has it? Enormous sums are being spent on defence, but are they being laid out to the best advantage?"

In the case of need, it asks, could Britain field a well-trained, highly - mechanized force, supplied with modern weapons and equipment?

"If the answer is 'no'—as we believe it to be—the government should take every possible step to make it 'yes.' They should act at once, even though it means more money for arms and less for false teeth."

The public has heard much about collective security and the North Atlantic Alliance as deterrents to potential aggressors. And the taxpayer has been told that £780,000,000 ($2,418,000,000) would be required this year to meet the needs of the Army Navy and Air Force.

Atomic Bomb Spectre

But in the background looms the spectre of the atom and hydrogen bombs and other new weapons that have increased man's power of destruction to an extent that stuns the imagination.

The average citizen has reason to believe that Britain and her allies have an edge in the atomic armaments race. However, he knows that Russia has made progress in this field — more rapid than at one time seemed likely.

Some authorities state there is no certainty that the new weapons will ever be used should war come. They point to the example of gas and germ warfare that could have been employed with deadly effects in the Second World War.

Meanwhile, a recruiting campaign has been under way for volunteers in the older-age groups to serve as a home defence force. They are being trained by experts who went to Hiroshima and Nagasaki to study the effects of the atom bombs on these Japanese cities and the people who lived in them. The call was for a minimum force of 150,000 but fewer than 40,000 have enrolled to date.

The government has been taken to task for lack of aggressiveness in furthering this phase of the defence program. Its critics charge that the public has been given no information about air-raid shelters or other protection against atomic or rocket missiles, about dispersal and evacuation or signals to be adopted to warn the populace of danger.

Similar complaints were heard during the tense months that preceded the outbreak of the last war.

Claiming there is far too much "hush-hush" in dealing with defence preparation generally, opposition members in the House of Commons have wage a persistent campaign for a secret session of Parliament to discuss the situation. The pleas have been rejected by the government on the grounds that such discussion, without wartime controls, might endanger national security.

Parsons Protest Ban Of Misfits

LONDON — (CP) — Parsons protested against a proposal to remove "misfits" from their parishes by compulsion, if necessary.

A report to a special church conference suggested that if a priest who was "a misfit" an oddity, lazy or worse" hampered his parish, the only solution was a compulsory move.

The Rev. J. A. G. Ainley demurred. He told the house of clergy of the church assembly, meeting at Westminster, that he hopes the time will never come when the Christian ministry will be brought down to the "level of a city company."

"Is a man to go to his bishop and say he has lost the sense of his vocation? Is the Bishop to go to the man? Or is the church council to tell the Vicar?"

No action was taken after the chairman noted that the proposal had merely been "received, not approved."

Build Streets Before Issuing Building Permits

"This will set the pattern for the future," said Ald. Doug Miller this week as the board of works was discussing, prior to approving, the terms of agreement by which Cobourg Lumber Company may get permission to proceed with their multiple housing project west of High St.

The council's approval was recommended in a motion by Ald. E. C. Braund and Ald. A. B. Burrows.

The main purpose of the council's action is to transfer a large part of the financial responsibility for sub-divisional developments from the city and the ratepayers to the promoters, and to avoid some of the additions to the debenture debt in recent years.

As a condition to receiving a building permit—Cobourg Lumber was reported to be planning 50 houses this year, in two groups of 25 each—the owner of the sub-division is required to construct and install the following services:

Grading of all streets in the sub-division to the required width; to put in storm culverts at street intersections; to construct sanitary sewers with individual house connections to the street line.

The terms as drafted by City Engineer Chalmers assign to the city such other services as: water mains and connections by arrangement with the Utilities Commission; construction of crushed gravel roadway 28' wide with oiled surface.

The owners shall complete all grading before any building permits are issued.

That obviously means that a new street in a sub-division has to be finished before a permit for any house is issuable.

The owner shall complete sanitary sewers before houses are occupied.

The owner (of the sub-division) shall deposit with the city clerk a petition under the local improvement act requesting the construction of an oiled crushed gravel roadway.

Must Make Deposit

The owner shall deposit with the city such monies as are required to construct and install these services and works, and to pay such fees as are required by the city before requiring the approval of the said plan by the Minister.

The city shall be entitled to a fee of 5 per cent for engineering services and supervision of these works, which are to be done according to the specifications of the City Engineer.

The city will not complete the gravelling and oiling of any street until 90 per cent of its houses have completed roofs.

"The owner shall notify every purchaser of any land within the sub-division of all the services which have been provided for such purchasers by the owner; and of all the services being provided by the city under the Local Improvement Act, the cost of which will be charged to the abutting property."

In the preamble to the agreement, there is the clause "whereas the owner in undertaking to deposit with the city such monies as are required to pay in cash for all such local improvements before requiring the approval of the said plan of sub-division to be granted."

It is understood that cash or bond would be accepted. The street grading, sewer construction and culverts at street intersections are to be built by the owner. In the past the city has done this work, borrowed the money from the bank for progress payment, and finally issued debentures to cover the cost of the work.

As pointed out in council discussions, the ratepayers were financing substantial costs of sub-divisional projects which the owners of them should be assuming.

Mayor Swanston said he understood that Cobourg Lumber Co. was quite agreeable to the conditions of the agreement. They are the first creators of a sub-division to whom the new agreement is being applied. Heretofore, the demand for housing placed the council under pressure for immediate action. Within the last year the tempo of building has slightly diminished, with the result that the question of financing sub-division improvements was tackled.

"They know now that they have to pay for it," said Mayor Swanston. "Before, the whole city was paying for it."

Ald. J. A. Dewart remarked that the city would still have to pay 40 per cent of the cost of local improvements such as street grading and sewer construction. His estimate was about $154 a lot instead of the previous average of $384.

It was also commented that an effect of the change in financing services would be an addition of about $150 to the cost of the average house.

For the work done and paid for by the owners of sub-divisions the cost will be passed on to the purchaser. He will know exactly what he has to pay, immediately and eventually, when he is buying. In recent discussions of the council it was said that some purchasers of houses in the past were not informed about frontage charges, for city work done under the Local Improvement Act, until the first tax bills came.

Double Number Women Pilots In Five Years-U.S.

Women are making definite headway in aviation. Recent figures from the US Civil Aeronautics Administration show nearly 10,000 women pilots, of whom 8,115 hold private pilot certificates, 1,561 hold commercial ratings and two airline transport pilot ratings. In July, 1945, only 5,122 women held pilot certificates. Private licenses were held by 4,166 and 956 held commercial ratings.

Other air ratings held by women in the 1949 tally included 1,811 air-traffic-control operators, 1,221 ground instructors, 400 parachute technicians, 47 mechanics, 16 glider pilots and 4 dispatchers. Women hold approximately 20 pe rcent. of all the air traffic control operator and parachute technician certificates now on record.

A new international altitude record for light airplanes was set on March 21, by Mrs. Anna Luisa Branger, cultural attache of the Venezuelan Embassy in Washington, who flew her Piper Cub Special at 24,504 feet.

Anna Cameron Stalked By Naughty Hoax

Peterborough Summer Theatregoers will be sorry to know that Miss Anna Cameron is making her only appearance here this season in this week's play "For Love or Money."

Miss Cameron has demonstrated her ability as an actress to the full in the hard-bitten, "other women" roles she has portrayed here, and she longs to have a part in which she could be the "good egg," just as she really is when off-stage: a thoroughly likeable girl whose favorite pastime is going to the theatre and the ballet, and adding the program to her collection.

She also seems to be the victim of an embarrassing hoax, or followed by some naughty little gremlins, for she has all too often been put to flight from the stage by losing a part of her costume or make-up. Last year while doing "Importance of Being Earnest" here, she found her false hair lying under a chair on stage and in another play her false eyelashes dropped off.

Much worse were her experiences in Ottawa while playing with the Canadian Repertory Theatre last winter. After two lines of "Voice of the Turtle," which she also played in Peterborough, the skirt of her two-piece dress dropped to the floor. The following week in "Little Foxes" the same thing happened with another skirt and a week later she had a similar disaster. However, she must have covered up gracefully for a member of the audience on all three occasions thought it was a part of the play and that repetition was robbing the act of comedy. The hoax has been stalking her since Hart House Theatre days when she once lost her petticoat on the stage.

This actress is anxious to be a producer, too, and in 1949 she entered "Another Part of the Forest" in the central Ontario Drama League and the show won the award. She has plans to go to England next March and intends to look into the theatre situation as rumor has it that Canadians find it comparatively easy to get work since they can be cast in American parts while Americans have to be cast in their own country and sent over.

Flexible Jewelry Enhances Stones Is Creative Trend

Jewelry that moves with the wearer is being created in a new trend to make precious stones appear even more beautiful.

Nadja Buckley, New York designer, says that her present work emphasizes the delicate and the flexible. Just returned from a three month stay in Europe, she is translating the latest trends in clothes to jewelry.

"Women love to have motion in their fine white jewelry pieces when they move," Miss Buckley declared. "Diamonds set in a flexible manner in precious white metals like palladium are more flashing and brilliant than those gems set into stiff metal pieces."

Miss Buckley is now displaying illustrations of this new trend. One a bouquet of violets with each little flower loose and flexible, is scented with essence of violet by a secret process. Miss Buckley used specially cut amethysts for petals and emeralds for leaves, with diamonds at the centre of the flowers.

Another flexible creation is a gleaming necklace in palladium, sculptured in individual baguette shapes, with diamonds sprinkled throughout. Two, four or six of these soft, modelled bands may be worn in the necklace.

An exact imitation of the mulberry bloom and branch, with soft dangles made of many rondels of precious metal, was also styled by Miss Buckley for a graceful, moving effect.

Palladium, she explained, is favored from the designer's standpoint for its easy workability, and from the wearer's viewpoint because of its ability to hold stones securely. "We like to have jewelry that moves," she said, "but we are careful to set the gems so they won't be lost."

Boychyn-Stewart

Centreville Presbyterian Church was scene on Saturday of the wedding of Betty Adelle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart of Stewart Hall, to Michael Boychyn, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Boychyn of Whitby. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Walter Patterson and the wedding music was played by Mrs. A. Muspratt.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an afternoon dress of rosebud pink crepe with Chantilly lace jacket and a matching hat and she carried an arm bouquet of white gladioli with blue ribbon cascades. Bridesmaid Miss Ina Law of Whitby wore a turquoise blue lace dress and matching hat and carried pink gladioli.

The bride's brother Mr Donald Stewart of Belleville was groomsman.

After a wedding trip in the Muskoka district the couple will live in Toronto.

MRS. WILLIAM BRODIE WIGMORE signs the register after her marriage Saturday in Deseronto United Church, with Mr. Wigmore looking on. She is the former Shirley June Boyce, graduate of Peterborough Normal School, and until recently a member of the city public school staff. She will live in London where the groom is a theology student at the University of Western Ontario.

Bd. of Health Family Happy In House With Baby Clinic

Probably no family has ever got as great a thrill out of moving house as the city Board of Health staff has in its recent removal to the former Turner house on the corner of Water and McDonnel Sts. behind the Public Library.

From desperately cramped quarters on the second floor of the city building, the department has set up a spacous suite of offices complete with baby clinic.

The growth of the department has run parallel with the city's expansion and for some two years, had out-grown the small office space in the city building.

The staff are not the only people to benefit from the move. Mothers bringing their children to the clinic on Friday afternoons are as happy about the new quarters as Dr. R. A. Kelly, MOH and his staff. The clinic, which is now held in the former J. J. Turner home, was previously held in the building on the east side of Water St at the corner of Brock St.

Decorated Own Offices

Things are not quit ship-shape yet but the desks and filing cabinets are in. Various members of the staff have worked on their own offices to get them into order and Dr. Kelly's bright room has attractive green walls with red drapes, which he and his wife decorated.

R. M. MacPherson, sanitary inspector, has an attractive office on the second floor, Dr. Harold Worton has his office across the hall and Miss Gene Clarke, superintendent of nurses, has moved into one of the large front rooms. Another room on the same floor accommodates seven public health nurses.

District Weddings Reach July Peak

In the past several years it has been noted that July is surpassing June in the number of marriages and there will be no exeeption in 1950. This coming Saturday, July 22, will probably be the peak date of the year with about 30 couples making their vows in the district during the day.

Out-of-town church weddings scheduled include the following:

At St. Andrew's United Church, Westwood, at seven-thirty o'clock of Marion Jean, daughter of R. J. Lancaster of Peterborough, and the late Mrs. Lancaster, to Mr. Wilbert Graham, son of Mrs. Percy Graham and the late Mr. Graham of Birdsall. Miss Lancaster just recently resigned her position on the staff of PCVS.

In Lakefield United Church at two o'clock of Gertrude Althea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Wellie Dunford, to Myles Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Huddlestone, all of Lakefield.

Of Miss Merle Evelyn Moncrief, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Moncrief, Fowler's Corners, to Conrad Austin Dafoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dafoe, Peterborough, in Lakevale Presbyterian Church at two o'clock.

In Marmora at St. Andrew's United Church, of Mabel Ellenore Bateman of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bateman of Marmora, to Norman Walter Gawley, son of Mrs. W. M. Gawley of Peterborough at three o'clock.

At Oshawa of Lillian Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David McCann of Oshawa, to Mr. Ward William James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. James, Peterborough, at two o'clock.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McMullen of Janetville will be setting for the wedding of their daughter Marian Ada to Mr. William Donald Edmunds, son of Mrs. Ross Edmunds and the late Mr. Edmunds of Millbrook.

Fall Hat Designs Unusual As Ever

PARIS, July 20 (AP)—Narrow little toques and shallow cloche hats, worn straight on the head or even tilted over the forehead, were displayed yesterday in a fall hat show by French modiste Maud Roser.

Many had things resembling dented chimney pots rising from their crowns. Others had brims that hugged the crown and jutted out in front to form a shovel-like peak. This last variety was tied to the head with thick cord or ribbon.

Another style shown by Roser had a high crown, squashed down to nearly fit the head and tucked into a narrow peak in front.

She uses a lot of feather trimming and makes whole toques of grey, white or shell-pink feathers tipped with gold lacquer.

The most unusual trimming was a white-feathered bird perched on a snow-covered branch which speared an olive-green felt toque.

A SCHOOLBOY TERM

ILFRACOMBE, England (CP) A schoolboy here described the color bar as "red petrol"—a rationing device used to distinguish between commercial and private gasoline.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION

Technical education projects to the value of £10,000,000 ($31,000,000 have been approved and are under construction in Britain.

PRAY FOR HOUSES

BLOXWICH, Staffordshire, England —(CP)— Rev. R. S. Huntley believes prayer will help the housing shortage. He urged couples to pray regularly for housing authorities.

London Express Service.

"If it used to cost a penny to go half a mile in ten minutes and it now costs 2½d. to go a quarter of a mile in 20 minutes, how soon are we going to be both bankrupt and motionless?"

"Will one of you boys find out from Butch how much it's goin' to work out in increased footage if we substitute 'Russian-sponsored Communist, North Koreans for 'Japanese' throughout?"

Murray-Deacon Wedding

Beautifully decorated with snapdragon, delphinium and hydrangea, Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday at 10 a.m. when Rita Elizabeth Deacon, daughter of Mrs. Harold Deacon, of Marmora, and the late Mr. Deacon, became the bride of Joseph Murray, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Murray.

The marriage was performed and the nuptial mass celebrated by the Rev. J. A. O'Neill. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Hugh Brady. Mrs. James McGrath sang Schubert's "Ave Maria" and the Very Rev. H. J. Farrell, former pastor, sang "Panis Angelicus," and the choir rendered the hymn "O Sacred Heart."

Given in marriage by her uncle Mr. Harry Dunlay, the bride was gowned in lime green nylon marquisette over orchid taffeta, with matching headdress. She carried a bouquet of white roses and mauve sweet peas.

Miss Mary Murray of New York sister of the bridegroom, wore a gown of yellow organdy over taffeta, with milan hat and carried a bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. Little Sharon Baker of Pembroke, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, quaintly dressed in yellow and mauve with hoop skirt, and wearing a poke bonnet. She carried a nose gay of roses and sweet peas.

Mr. James McGrath, cousin of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Forrest Dennis and Floyd Loveless.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, and Mrs. Deacon received in a gown of black and pink crepe, with matching hat and accessories.

Later the bride and groom left for a trip to Quebec, the bride wearing a brown silk ensemble with matching hat and accessories. On their return they will reside in Marmora.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out about 2 pints of bile juice into your digestive tract every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the digestive tract. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those mild, gentle Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills, 35¢ at any druggists.

Engaged Couple Haggles Who Should Pay for What

DEAR MISS DIX: Will you please settle this argument between an engaged couple. The man maintains that they should pool their savings in order to defray all expenses of the honeymoon and setting up their new home, the balance to be deposited in a bank under a joint account. The girl contends that she should only buy household necessities, such as linens, lamps, dishes, etc., the balance of her money to be left in her own personal account. The man contends that inasmuch as he pays all expense of pleasure and entertainment, he should be reimbursed by his future wife and have her donate her life's savings to the Great Cause. His expenses before marriage amount to far more than the woman's. He pays for the furniture, which costs more than the linens, etc. The girl asserts that she will not divulge the amount of her savings to her husband and will keep it in her personal account.

X. Y. Z.

Dorothy Dix

ANSWER: Is this the attitude of modern young people toward marriage? I'm asking you. For frankly, it makes a sentimental old-timer, such as I am, shudder.

Can't Be Much In Love

It does not seem to me that a couple can be very much in love who haggle over who-should-pay-for-what in setting up their first home. Nor that they have any faith in each other if neither one can trust the other to do the generous thing. I should say that they are thinking more of their pocketbooks than they are of their hearts and that there was small chance of happiness for a husband and wife who are trying to drive hard bargains with each other and each striving to get the best of the transaction.

But, of course, if you feel that finance cuts more figure than romance in marriage, then you are very wise to settle the money problem before you get married. Furnishing the house has always been the man's responsibility as he is supposed to be the head of it, and the common usage is for the bride to supply only the household linens and such small articles as she chooses. But this presupposes the old-fashioned marriage in which the lovebirds were more concerned in building their nests than they were in holding out on each other.

As a general thing, a joint checking account is a good way for a husband and wife to keep their money, but perhaps each one of you had better hold on to your own if you believe your prospective husband or wife to be capable of grafting.

DEAR MISS DIX: My sister-in-law and I are having a dispute as to who should take care of an old father and mother who are not capable of taking care of themselves. There are five children in the family, two sons and three daughters, all married and all the husbands working. Please give us your point of view.

ANXIOUS.

ANSWER: The five children should take care of their old parents in rotation. Each should do his or her share. It is just as much the duty of one child as it is of the other.

I do not think that anything is more contemptible and meaner than the way in which some children duck all of their responsibility toward their old fathers and mothers and pass the buck to some sister or brother. Yet you see this happen every day, and Father and Mother are wished off on some one son or daughter while the others wash their hands of them.

Now nearly all old people are trying to live with. They are cranky. They have peculiar little ways. They are bossy and critical. They tell the same stories over and over again. They interfere in the way you raise the children and how you run your house. This gets on the stoutest nerves if you have it day in and day out, year after year.

But those who are unwilling to do their duty toward their old parents may well remember that before many years they also will be old, and will be knocking at their children's door. And they will not wish their children to begrudge them a place by the fire and a seat at their tables.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Should we as a nation have a uniform marriage and divorce law?

—V. E. C.

ANSWER: I think so. It seems incredible that in a country as civilized and intelligent as ours that we should have a crazy patchwork of laws that makes it possible for people to be legally married in one state and bigamists in another, and that makes their children legitimate in one place and illegitimate in another.

Of Interest to Women

THREE-YEAR-OLD LORAINE ARNOLD, of Granby, Que., places her hand confidently in the hand of her big, hero-brother, Yvan, five, to pose for the photographer, for she knows that Yvan rescued her from death in a swamp over the week-end and that nothing much can happen to her with him around. Loraine fell into the swamp and sank into the ooze up to her neck. Yvan seized her by the hair and managed to free her.

SAVES DRIVER'S LIFE

BLACKBURN, England (CP)—A small child signalled for truck driver James Longden to stop—and so saved his life. Drums of gasoline in the truck were blazing. Longden put out the flames with a borrowed garden hose.

IODE Committee Opens Rug Drive

TORONTO,—(CP)—Mrs. W. R. Walton Jr., of Oakville, has been appointed chairman of a committee to raise money for the Queen Mary carpet, recently purchased by the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire, it was announced by the I.O.D.E. executive.

The I.O.D.E.'s bid of $100,000 was accepted by Queen Mary for her hand-some carpet which took eight years to complete.

Mrs. John H. Chipman, national president of the I.O.D.E. says the carpet will be displayed at the Canadian National Exhibition here and then sent on a tour of Canadian cities. She said the order hopes to raise the money by charging an admission fee for viewing the carpet.

The carpet was donated by the Queen as a means of helping close the dollar gap, with the stipulation that when purchased it will be hung in a public place.

What's Right?

You are with your husband and two small children when you meet an acquaintance that only you know.

WRONG: Introduce your husband but don't include the children in the introduction.

RIGHT: Always introduce your children to strangers so that they will feel part of the group and learn early to meet people easily.

A FEW HOMEY FACTS FOR THE HOMESEEKER

IF considering a Home, why build in the City at all when you can centrally locate in Omemee within commuting distance to "work markets" of both cities. If work fails in one, you find it perhaps in the other. One has to take a bus or car to get to work anyway these days. Omemee offers low taxes; better values in land and better community living, and less congestion.

BUT why build anyway? You know you can buy $10,000 in value in an old home for $5,000 or less, and get $3,000 in value in a new home for $8,000—and the lumber market has just gone up again.

SO why waste money? You know a house built 20 to 25 years ago will be here 100 years from now. Where will many of the newer homes be in 25 years. In the next few years, Omemee will be the Heart of Lindsay and Peterborough.

THEN—a word about Home Possibilities when you buy a home. If that home has as well, unusual possibilities for a Business besides just a home: if it has ample yard space—spacious grounds for expansion and business side lines, you have something to develop and enlarge as a Business for yourself or family — and certainly your property has a better resale value. These are, indeed, things to consider when buying a home.

SURE—we have something to sell. We have a selection of good homes in Omemee: Brick Veneered, well located Homes, each with definite Business Possibilities that can be developed. Homes that will develop into greater value. Again we predict — Omemee jammed in between two thriving cities is bound to be the better.

Magistrate Gets Fight Picture Blow-by-Blow

"Let's have a blow-by-blow account of this," requested Magistrate W. R. Philp, K.C. today, hearing the story of an alleged asault near the Pines Pavilion at Chemong.

The charge of assault, laid against Frank Heard and Clinton English, both of Chemong, was dismissed. They were charged with assaulting Jack Higgins, also of Chemong.

Higgins testified he was assaulted by the two youths near the dance hall, after they had accused him of being "a spy."

"Clinton English called me a lot of names, and said I was no use to nobody and that he was going to beat my brains in. He said if I had a brain, I'd eat it," Higgins said. "I was just walking around the pavilion and saw English talking to my sister and another girl. I said hello and went right on."

Donald Epps, of Chemong, who witnessed the fight, said it was "fair." He said Higgins struck the first blow, but after that the fight was pretty even.

Epps told court he saw Higgins and Frank Heard fighting, and after they stopped, Higgins "stripped to the waist and flexed his muscles." Epps demonstrated in the box by expanding his chest and bending his arms.

"Then the manager of the dance hall came out and said it was a job for the provosts, so we took off," Epps added.

Magistrate Philp decided there was not sufficient evidence for a conviction.

Garson Sees Force Only Way In Korea

PRESQU'ILE POINT, Ont., July 20 (CP)—Force, which the United Nations has been reluctant to use to settle world disputes, is the only constructive way to peace in the Korean crisis, Justice Minister Garson said yesterday. He spoke to members of the Northumberland and South Hastings Liberal Associations at a picnic.

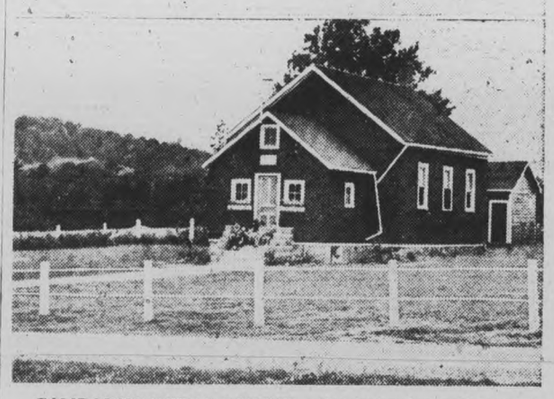
Mr. Garson, who flew from a cabinet meeting in Ottawa in the morning to speak to the group, returned by air to the capital Wednesday night.

"Appeasement nearly brought us to the brink of ruin before," Mr. Garson said, "and this time, when faced with naked aggression, the United Nations had employed force to protect the victims of aggression."

He said that the only alternative method open to the U.N. and President Truman—that of letting totalitarian countries take over free nations—was practically useless as a method of control.

"The free countries," he added, "have learned the hard way. If they do not stand together, they run the great hazard of falling one by one."

FIGHTS BAN — Marguerite Higgins, above, war correspondent in Korea for the New York Herald Tribune, has protested an order by Gen. Walton H. Walker to leave the battle front and return to Tokyo. General Walker thinks the combat area is no place for a woman, except Army nurses. Miss Higgins' newspaper backed up her protest, declaring that she had filed some of the best reporting to come out of the Korean fighting.



CAMBORNE RURAL SCHOOL, situated a few miles north of Cobourg, has come first in the province wide competition for school ground improvement. Twenty schools competed but the Camborne school, which is taught by Mrs. Edwin Lacey, captured the fancy of the judges. This attractively painted school house, LOWER, is set in beautifully kept, park-like grounds. The school board was responsible for the actual improvements to the building, but the grounds and fence, also the flag pole, were the result of hard work by teacher, pupils and residents of the village. The school last spring. TOP, was a forlorne-looking structure in its bedraggled appearing school grounds. It needed something done about it very urgently and so the busy folk of the school section got to work.

By PHILIP DEANE

With the 34th Infantry Regiment, Kongju sector, Korea, July 16—I was the only pressman with the American forces in Kongju sector when the Communists cut off the 34th Regiment, one of two regiments manning a 70-mile front. Using infiltration tactics, the North Koreans pushed the American forces 20 miles in one day. I was with the rearguard platoon of the rearguard company of the rearguard battalion and had to stay till all the other troops had got safely through the Communist ring.

Here is the story:

Two under-strength American regiments composed of teen-age GI's held a 70-mile front for three days, falling back only when the classic Communist tactics of infiltration left them with no communication lines. The story of this action which resulted in the loss of the big natural defence line of the Kum River is the story of this whole war, and demonstrates again that beyond a certain point a line can be too thin to hold.

Communists infiltrated through all day with the refugees and "peaceful" peasants we let through in the daytime, picked up rifles from bushes and murdered us at night.

Major Waide Heritage, divisional surgeon of the 24th Division, wanted to go to the front to see how his boys of the Medical Corps were getting along coping with a heavy batch of casualties. He took us along, showing me on the way the excellent dispositions for taking care of the wounded. He drove me on the road from Taejon to Kongju along the River Kum. He and his driver were completely unconcerned at the shrapnel from Communist guns that was fliving around, though the major kept looking at the refugees muttering: "Letting those bastards through is sheer suicide. I bet each pack contains at least a pistol."

I felt uncomfortable as I looked at the thousands of stalwart young Koreans of military bearing passing us on the road with the refugees. They mingled with old men and women, but they marched with heads high and arms swinging, and they were the only ones smiling. "We should shoot them all," the major said. "They're the ones that shoot our boys in the back at night. We let them through in front of our eyes and tonight we shall hear that the Communists infiltrated behind our lines."

As the shell fire got thicker we came upon an advanced aid station under Lieut. Parker Pratt, who looked as if he would pass out on his feet any minute. "They blew up our aid station from under us near Kongju, Sir," he told the major: "They fired three salvoes in it, and the boys had just brought in six wounded from the firing line. Those kids had acted so cheerful, feeling their troubles were over now they were in the hands of the 'medics'."

For two miles we didn't meet a soul until we came upon a tough sandy-haired Lieutenant called Macarver, a Canadian now a U.S. citizen. We had not seen him as he was in a ditch listening to his radio.

"Where do you jokers think you are going?" he asked. "Unless you're aiming to desert I wouldn't move further."

36 Men For Three Miles

Lieutenant Macarver commanded the third platoon of K Company, the 34th Infantry Regiment, and he was responsible for a front three miles wide—with only 36 men under his orders.

Major Heritage and I joined the Lieutenant in the ditch and shared the tin of fruit salad he was eating when he was not busy dooging shrapnel. "I would go back now," Macarver said. "We're the rearguard platoon of the rearguard company of the rearguard regiment in this here shooting war and any minute now we might have to greet some 'gooks'".

"I have to see the other aid stations," Major Heritage said.

"Can I stay with you, Lieutenant," I asked Macarver. "Sure, but don't say I didn't warn you."

As the Major drove away, a report came over the radio that two squads of "gooks" (American nicknames for Koreans) had infiltrated into our area and the third platoon was ordered to fight them and bring back at least two for "the old man." The Lieutenant asked me to stay in the company command post, but I asked to be allowed to accompany the boys and Macarver said, "Well, we're so goddam short of men out here that we can sure use an extra mug. But you better take along something more substantial than your Rolleiflex (camera.)

Thus I was given an M rifle and a helmet and made a private in the United States Army before leaving for the patrol during which we captured a "gook" absolutely similar to those harmless-looking peasants that we kept passing during the morning. "It was all in the day's work," Lieut. Macarver said.

The third platoon of K Company, the 34th Infantry Regiment, after two weeks in the firing line, after two nights of reconnaissance patrol in enemy territory, had to go out and meet two squads of North Koreans infiltrating through our lines.

I followed Sergeant Richard Coulder of Morgantown, West Virginia, who was in charge of the two squads detailed for this. He spread us out in single diagonal file as we started combing the valley. We walked knee-deep in paddy fields, with human manure sloshing into our shoes. We were completely without cover as we were detailed to patrol the bottom of the valley and we knew the Communists held the hills. Some bullets pinged overhead, but luckily the Korean guerrillas are notorious bad shots and no one was hit.

Overhead, Mustangs (fighter planes) and jets were flying out continuosly and a small reconnaissance plane circled the enemy positions, occasionally drawing anti-aircraft fire and directing the fighters. On the hills to the left and right we could see white forms hopping from bush to bush. We knew they were watching us, probably radioing our movements, but not one of our weapons could reach them, so we walked on.

Gerald Nelson, a freckle-faced kid from Halma, Minnesota, said: "Say, chief, couldn't you find an easier way to turn a buck (dollar), or do you enjoy this kind of smell?"

With an occasional bullet whizzing overhead, the squelching muck of the paddy fields in my shoes and leeches sucking at my ankles for all they were worth, I thought that I would rather be a banker; but even then I wasn't sure because I would not then have had the privilege of meeting these boys: Gerald Nelson, who did not shave yet and who ate half the Lieutenant's rations because he was always hungry, and who complained that the card he had sent his mother on Mother's Day had taken weeks to arrive; Charles Lee from Maysville, Kentucky, who carried the platoon radio and acted through the fire as if he were back home fiddling with his home-made transmitter; and Wayne Parsons from Jenkins, also in Kentucky, who kept asking the Lieutenant's permisison to kill a couple of suckling pigs for a barbecue (outdoor feast) after the action.

Raised Highway Impedes Lakefield Drives

LAKEFIELD, July 20 (ENS)—Lakefield property owners and the Department of Highways seem to have reached agreement on what to do about the raised section of Highway 28 that runs through the north end of the village.

To bring the driveways of residents who border on the highway up to the new level the Department is prepared to put in fill and crushed rock. The banks will be earthed and then seeded with grass to prevent erosion.

The difficulty arose when this spring the Department raised the level of Highway 28, forming part of the north end of Queen St. Besides the two-foot raise there are ridges of earth and gravel along the roadside.

Protest Mutiny

Wednesday night a group of protesting property owners attended a meeting called by the Lakefield council and talked the problem over with W. Anderson, Port Hope, Department of Highways engineer.

They explained they had difficulty getting into their own driveways from the highway and that their property had been substantially depreciated.

J. R. Wainwright, a retired engineer himself and one of the protesting property owners, suggested a retaining wall on the highway to hold back the erosion of dirt and gravel.

Mr. Anderson said this could not be done. The shoulders of the road would not be finished until after the hard surface had been put on. Rock has already been crushed, however, and the property owners were assured this would be put on as soon as possible.

The alternative to the rock-fill-and-seeding offer was that the Department would remove the highway surface altogether and let Lakefield assume full responsibility for that stretch of No. 28.

Members of Lakefield council at the meeting were J. Arthur Kingdon, chairman of roads, Reeve W. C. Grant and village councillors K. Jakins and L. Fraser.

Property owners present included Mr. Wainwright, H. Abbott, T. Last, A. B. White, E. White and L. Quackenbush.

East Cleveland Kiwanis Guests

About 15 members and guests of the East Cleveland Kiwanis Club attended the Peterborough Kiwanis Club dinner meeting today at the Empress Hotel.

The Clevelanders are holidaying at Burleigh Falls where some of them are taking their first try at fishing. Others have been coming to this district for their holidays for many years to catch their fish.

The visiting Kiwanians said the hospitality they had received in Canada had been tops. They extended an invitation to the Peterborough to take part in inter-club meeting in Cleveland some Sunday in the late summer or early fall.

Man On Drunk Charge Queries Adjournment

When Crown Counsel John Bradshaw asked for a month's adjournment in the case of Howard Fairfield of Omemee, charged with drunkenness, Fairfield said he didn't want an adjournment.

"It's only a drunk charge," he said. "That's too long, and I'd like a month to pay my fine."

Deputy Chief John Naples explained to Fairfield that the adjournment would mean he would be allowed to go for a month.

"You mean I can go out?" Fairfield asked.

"Yes," said Magistrate Philp. "Will you consent now to the adjournment?"

"Yes."

"Thank you very much," said his worship.

"Royal" Weddings

TOKYO —(CP)— A group of Japanese Princes have started a marriage agency known as the "pure peace club." Club members are found mates for as low as $1.55 and at wedding ceremonies couples are dressed in robes borrowed from the Imperial household.

A STITCH IN TIME—This is the Betsy Ross story of 1950. Employees of the Annin Company, flag-makers in New York, push through new copies of the light blue and white United Nations emblem to be rushed to General MacArthur for use in Korea. The UN's own flag supply was nearly exhausted when authorization was given to General MacArthur to fly the world banner in the anti-Red campaign in Korea.

Scot Makes Success Of Writing For Living

ST. ANDREWS, NB —(CP)— David Walker is a Scot who chose the difficult role of writing for a living in Canada. He is succeeding.

Since he settled down in this quiet resort town two years ago, the slightly built, 39-year-old former British army officer has had two books published.

"The Storm and the Silence," a parallel of a white stag and a murder, both hunted by man, and "Geordie," a simple story also set in Scotland, received favorable reviews. Several of his short stories have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, Saturday Evening Post, Esquire and Harper's Bazarr.

The author now is on a two-month trip by river steamship, through Great Slave Lake and up the Mackenzie River to Aklavik, to learn about the north.

He first came to Canada before the Second World War as aide-de-camp to the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, who as John Buchan, was widely known as a novelist and essayist.

The latter's love of wild life is also evident in David Walker's books.

Married Canadian

While military aide to the governor-general, he married Miss Willa Magee, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Alan A. Magee, Montreal, in 1939. They have three sons. After war broke out he returned to Scotland to join his old regiment, the Black Watch, was captured at Dunkerque in 1940 and spent the rest of the war in German prison camps.

On returning to Britain he was made a lieutenant-colonel and staff member of the British Staff Military College at Camberley, England. After Lord Wavell, then Viceroy of India, requested his services as comptroller, he went to India in 1946 with the rank of major. Following Lord Wavell's return to England, Maj. Walker served two months under Lord Louis Mountbatten before retiring from the army.

Mr. Walker says he always had an urge to write. He gathered a wealth of material in Scotland, at school in England, during his army service and in prison camps. Born in Fife, Scotland, of Scot-Irish parentage, he joined the Black Watch when about 20 and was stationed in India, the Sudan and the Red Sea hills.

The desire to write grew stronger during the long days in prison camp, and Mr. Walker, with his family, find the quiet atmosphere here a helpful factor in realizing his ambition.

Father Freed of Charge Boy Tossed Out Window

NEW YORK, July 20 (AP) — Eight-year-old Donald Conway, his left leg encased in a plaster cast, was lifted to a felony court bench beside Magistrate Frederick L. Strong Wednesday.

His father, Martin, 39, stood before the bench. Suddenly Donald waved and smiled.

"At whom are you waving?" Magistrate Strong asked. "At my daddy," said Donald.

Then Martin Conway, accused of throwing his son out a second story window last July 3, began to cry.

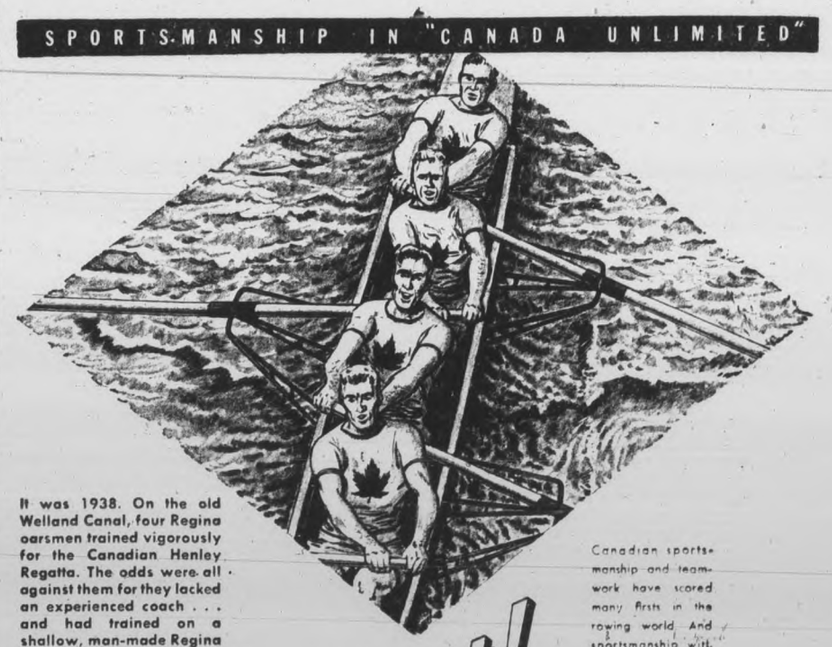
"How did you hurt your foot?" Assistant District Attorney Paul F. Reilly asked Donald.

"I fell out the window," the boy said. "My daddy was asleep." When the boy was picked up from the sidewalk police said the yuongster told them his father got angry at him and threw him out.

After other witnesses failed to produce evidence substantiating the charge, the magistrate dismissed the felonious assault charge. Then he turned to Conway and said:

"There were only two humans in that room. But God also was there. If you did throw your son from that window you will pay for it in the end."

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"



It was 1938. On the old Welland Canal, four Regina oarsmen trained vigorously for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The odds were all against them for they lacked an experienced coach . . . and had trained on a shallow, man-made Regina Lake during the great Prairie drought.

On the Henley's first day the quartet scored an upset by winning the junior four-oared event. The experts goggled . . . but the best was yet to come. Showing the Regatta's finest burst of speed, in the senior fours the westerners outstroked champion oarsmen from Canada and the U.S., and walked away with the prized Dominion championship.

Canadian sportsmanship and teamwork have scored many firsts in the rowing world. And sportsmanship with teamwork helps you too, in work and play. Together they keep your scope for opportunity in Canada unlimited.

806 New Clubs Formed By Lions

CHICAGO, July 20 — Herbert C. Petry, Jr., Carizzo Springs, Texas, is the new president of The International Association of Lions Clubs, (Lions International). He was elected by unanimous vote at the 33rd annual convention of the Association which closed at the Chicago Stadium today. Petry succeeds Walter C. Fisher, Queenston, Ontario.

The convention concluded one of the most successful years in the history of Lions International, according to the report made by Melvin Jones, Chicago, Illinois, Secretary - General and founder of the Association. He reported the addition of 806 new Lions Clubs and 21,415 men to the roster of the Association during the twelve-months period ended June 30, 1950, for a total of 8,055 clubs and 402,841 members. He stated also that during the fiscal year Lions Clubs were established in two additional countries: England and Denmark. Lions International, he added, is the largest, strongest and most active service club organization in the world, with Lions in 28 countries on five continents.

Petry, in accepting the presidency, said: "My home is down near the border of two great nations, and those of us who live so close to the people of another country know that there are no great differences between the people of Mexico and those of the United States. We learn their language and their customs; they learn our language and our customs, and together we are learning to live with each other. This is equally true of the northern border. The Lions of the northern states are carrying along identical work with the wonderful Canadian Lions across the border, at all times maintaining an aggressive movement to make friends with their neighbors. The Canadian Lions are likewise maintaining this aggressive movement to make friends with us. And why shouldn't this be the object of all Lions in our twenty-eight nations throughout the world!"

Wins Speed Derby Boy 15 Now Dying

TORONTO, July 20 — (CP) — A 15-year-old Hamilton boy is in Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto with an incurable disease which is slowly destroying his red blood cells.

Just one month after he had been crowned champion of the Hamilton speed box derby, Robert Lemmon was stricken with acute leukemia.

Continuous blood transfusions are being given the boy.

He will be treated with two new drugs, acth and cortisone, in an effort to stave off the disease for which doctors have found no cure yet.

Crime Doesn't Pay

WINNIPEG—(CP) — Morality Inspector Peter Cafferty, looking back over years of fighting vice in Winnipeg, said recently that prostitution was at its lowest ebb in the city's history, gambling was dwindling and "we haven't had one complaint about bookies or touts at this year's race meetings."

Quebec Villages Found Dupes Of Communists

QUEBEC, July 20 (CP)—Two or three dozen Quebec Roman Catholic villages have become dupes in the Communist game of peace propaganda.

They have been startled to find themselves publicized as supporters of the "Stockholm Resolution" calling for a ban on atomic weapons as part of a "world peace appeal."

The mayors and councillors of the little rural settlements with little or no investigation signed petitions mailed to them and asking for their support for a purported peace movement.

Now their newspaper editorials tell them the Stockholm congress of last March and its peace move were Communist-directed.

A list of towns and villages issued by "Le Conseil de Quebec Pour La Paix" (Quebec Council for Peace) and describing them as official endorsers of a growing peace movement covers 28 Quebec counties.

"Stern Warning"

A mimeographed statement with the list says that as a result of developments in Korea, the peace petitions are a "serious and stern warning" to the Canadian government against involvement in a third world war.

Village councillors have been shocked to hear that the province's Ligue Du Sacre Coeur (League of the Sacred Heart) says they endorsed a "Communist petition."

The league will endeavor to counteract the Stockholm petition. It is circulating among its 200,000 members and to municipal councils a counter-petition asking for:

1. A ban on use of the mails for Communist propaganda;
2. Immediate end of the Korean war by United Nations signatories guilty of "inhuman disobedience";
3. Liberation of Cardinal Mindszenty and 6,000 priests and nuns from Communist concentration camps;
4. A holy year crusade of prayer and penance;
5. An end to Canadian relations with Communist countries since there are no diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

The girls said they enjoyed the fancy clothes of civilization but are anxious to dig into some good Eskimo food again.

Rush Chlorine Supply To London Plants

LONDON, Ont. July 20—(CP)—Emergency stocks of chlorine were rushed from Cornwall to London Wednesday as city officials said the supply at sewage treatment plants here was sufficient to last to nightfall only. The shortage resulted from a strike at the Windsor plant of Canadian Industries Limited.

Roy Robertson, engineer assisting in charge of city sewers, said emergency supplies would reach the city later today and tomorrow.

Religious Freedom

KARACHI—(CP)—The Pakistan government has instructed all educational institutions in centrally administered areas that "every person is absolutely free to study and practice his own religion, and no one can be obliged to study or observe the practices of any religion but his own."

Churchill Raps Defence State

LONDON, July 20 (Reuters)—Winston Churchill, in a clash with Defence Minister Shinwell in the House of Commons Wednesday alleged Britain was being "shamefully let down" over defence.

Shinwell had declined to give any further information about Britain's defences when questioned by Brig. Terence Clarke, Conservative.

Churchill asked if he would make some answer to this question in a defence debate next week.

Shinwell replied that if there were a debate he would do his best "to satisfy the natural coriosity of Mr. Churchill."

Churchill retorted, amid a burst of opposition cheers, "it is not natural curiosity to try to know to what extent one's country is being shamefully let down"

Shinwell said Churchill had no right to make such allegations until the government had presented the facts.

Earlier Air Minister Arthur Henderson told questioners that radar defences are being modernized and extended.

BATTERED TROOPS BLOCK RED ADVANCE

Recruiting Opened By Claxton

Anxious To Boost Fighting Strength Of Three Services

OTTAWA, July 21 — (CP) —Defence Minister Claxton launched a recruiting drive for the armed forces Thursday night as Canada began stepping up her defence program in the light of Communist aggression in Korea.

The forces need an additional 6,000 to 8,000 men to bring their front-line units up to strength. The minister issued his enlistment call in a 15-minute radio address over the two country-wide networks of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and most private radio stations.

Solicitor-General Hugues LaPointe made a similar appeal over the CB's French network.

The accelerated defence program, said Mr. Claxton, "doesn't mean that we expect another war.' But by being in as good a state of preparation as possible "we will be doing our part to prevent war."

The minister said these things are planned for the forces:

Navy—with three Canadian destroyers—Athabascan, Sioux and Cayuga — now nearing Korean waters to join in the Far East fighting, the navy will commission the destroyers Crescent and Crusader on the west coast. (Naval officials have also disclosed that the destroyer Nootka will be ready for commissioning in about two or three weeks.) Naval ships now in service will be brought to full fighting strength.

Army — units of the brigade group—the Princess Patricias, the Lord Strathconas, the Royal Canadian Regiment and Royal 22nd —will be brought to full strength.

Double Production

Air force—No. 426 Thunderbird Squadron will leave Montreal "in the next day or two" to throw eight to 10 North Star aircraft into the Korean air lift although it will not take part in actual fighting. Men for technical trades, especially radar, will be enlisted and a number of "especially fit young men between 18 and 21" will be recruited for aircrew. In addition production of the F-86 and CF-100 jet fighters will be doubled.

Fisherman Nets Sub Not Fish

SAINT [illegible] (CP). — George Tiner, 62, started to pull up one of his lobster traps—but it was a submarine that appeared.

The trap now is lying on the ocean floor off Chance Point Harbor near here, and "as far as I am concerned, it can stay there," the startled lobster fisherman said Thursday.

He said the submarine appeared in dense fog and then crash-dived almost immediately. A naval intelligence officer at Halifax said United States submarines are on exercises off here but none was reported in the Chance Harbor area.

Customers Chose Cars Then Gang Stole Them

NEW YORK, July 21 (CP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation says it has put out of business an auto theft ring which supplied its "customers" with the particular kind of cars they wanted. Ralph Pepin, 25, of Montreal, was among five men arrested, the FBI said Thursday.

The Bureau said more than 50 automobiles were stolen here during the past year, resulting in a loss to owners of more than $100,000.

The ring had "salesmen," the FBI said, who took "orders" on the east coast for desired models, while other gang members stole them.

The average selling price was $900 per car, bringing a "profit" to the ring of about $45,000 for the year, the FBI said.

Russians Put On Good Behaviour Front

Drop Moves To Annoy Western Lands During Cominform Talks

BERLIN, July 21 (AP)—The Russians appeared today to be putting on a "good behavior" front in Berlin for this week's Communist rally, being attended by high Cominform members from farm and wide.

Allied and West German officials noted:

1. Autoban traffic at Helmstedt is being let through to Berlin and toward the west at a stepped-up pact. Slow-down tactics imposed last week have been stopped.

2. East German officials agreed today on a "basis for discussion" with West Berflin on resumption of electric power, cut off July 1.

3. The Russians notified the Air Safety Centre in advance of fighter plane flights between Dallgow and Brandenburg, over the western edges of Berlin Thursday night. Lately some flights have been observed that were not posted in the four-power centre.

Meanwhile, the Socialist Unity (Communist) party rally entered its second day without any clue to the purpose behind the visit of the highest-ranking Communists ever to visit Berlin.

The delegates from the Cominform countries attended the party causus this morning only as observers. The East Berlin controlled press concentrated its attention on the German party activities without hinting at any major conclave on international questions such as the Korean war or the thorny Yugoslav Tito problem.

The Cominform members are virtually inaccessible, guarded by East German "people's police" as they move from hotel to party meetings and back.

The East government made fanfare out of the official opening of the first post-war steel furnace in Brandenburg at the Siemens-Martin plant. Officials reported to the party rally the furnace would pour out steel "for peace."

The Cominform bosses yesterday heard East Germany's munist president, Wilhelm Pieck, tell a party rally that his people would fight beside Russia in any new world war.

Riot Squads Guarding Belgian Cities

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 21—(AP) — Strong security forces were mobilized in Brussels and other Belgian cities today against possible anti-Leopold demonstrations on the eve of the former Monarch's return.

With Belgium celebrating her national independence today, patriotic fervor may run high among the King's supporters and opponents.

Although the government announced Thursday night that Leopold presumably will not return until tomorrow, Interior Minister Albert De Vleeschauwer —himself an ardent Leopold supporter—was taking no chances.

Brussels' 11,000-man police force was reinforced by squads of black-helmeted National Gendarmes from outside the city. These strong-arm men of the Belgian Internal Security Forces are armed and trained for riot duty.

As the day's ceremonies began with a Te Deum in the Cathedral, Socialist leaders met to discuss proposed widespread strikes to protest the Belgian Monarch's return.

Big Parade

A military parade of 5,000 troops was scheduled this afternoon. Anti-Leopold Socialists had been urged to demonstrate at the parade. The Communists also told their followers to turn out.

The Socialist newspaper Le Peuple fired the opening shot of the campaign of continued defiance against Leopold by running on its front pages wartime pictures of the King chatting with German Generals.

One of the reasons for Leopold's unpopularity in many circles was his surrender to the Germans in 1940 after 18 days of fighting.

In almost all political circles the opinion prevailed that Leopold would return only temporarily to delegate his powers to his son, 19-year-old Crown Prince Baudouin. The King had offered an effort to solve the long crisis over his return.

Deny Bevin Change

LONDON, July 21 (Reuters)—A fresh crop of rumors that Prime Minister Attlee intends to replace Ernest Bevin as Foreign Secretary was authoritatively denied today. These continuing rumors appear to disregard the fact that Bevin is one of the big three of the Labor Government and party, with an immense following in the Labor and trade union movement.

Predict Rising Meat Prices Will Dip In Few Weeks

By The Canadian Press

A steady rise in meat prices during the last several months is hitting the housewife's budget. However, the rise will end temporarily in the next few weeks with a normal dip, packers said today The increase —in most cities about 20s a pound for the better cuts of beef—has caused a drop in the demand and turned housewives to substitutes.

The price boost is attributed to the United States market which has taken all exports since the emrago on shipment of Canadian beef and cattle was lifted in August, 1948.

The American market has absorbed 91. per cent more Canadian beef cattle and imported 9,000,000 more pounds of dressed meat than last year.

A meat marketing official said that after a seasonal drop the rise in meat prices likely will be resumed as demand from the U.S. mounts. The tense international situation may also contribute to a rise. War fears tend to increase the price of commodities such as grains which, in turn, brings higher prices for cattle.

Won't Stock Cuts

The drop in demand in Montreal has caused some butchers there to stop stocking higher-priced cuts of beef and lamb. Porterhouse steaks cost $1.20 a pound in Montreal this week, an increase of 25 cents from the price last January.

Pork prices also have been affected but the rise has not been as sharp as for beef. The average increase for pork products, such as sausage, shoulder, loin and breakfast bacon, has been about 10 cents a pound since January.

The present price for sausage ranges from a high of 55 cents a pound in Moncton to 47 cents in Vancouver where the increase in the last six months has been only two cents.

The sharpest beef-price increase was in Toronto. An official of a large grocery chain said porterhouse and sirloin steak cuts were selling for 99 cents a pound, an increase of 30 cents in six months. Rump roast cuts are 92 cents a pound, up 21 cents, and prime rib roast 72 cents a pound, up 15 cents.

Planes Hurrying For New Job

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP)—The RCAF's No. 426 Transport Squadron was gathering in its flock of North Stars from the reaches of the world today while operations experts met in Ottawa to lay final plans for its movement into the trans-Pacific airlift for Korea.

Defence Minister Claxton said Thursday night the squadron will leave in the next day or so.

One of the four-engined giants with a crew of 20—ground and air—was beating its way home from a three-week training flight that took it as far as Cairo. It was in Trinidad today and due back at the home base at Dorval airport, near Montreal, tomorrow.

Other North Stars have flown down from the northland, from Goose Bay and the Yukon in gathering up the loose ends of their regular transport runs that now will be interrupted.

At RCAF headquarters, Wing Cmdr. C. H. Mussells, squadron chief, and other operations experts were due back from Washington today with details of plans to fit the squadron into the United Nations airlift from the Pacific coast to Japan.

Says Thirsty Blondes Emptied Pocket Book

CHICAGO, July 21 (AP) — A [illegible]-year-old youth who came to Chicago with $4,200 two weeks ago was in jail and broke today and blamed his financial condition on hungry, thirsty blondes.

"Everywhere I went," said Robert E. Dernbach, Jr., of North Bergen, NJ, "I ran into a blonde." "The blondes wanted champagne and the champagne called for steak dinners—"

Dernbach was in court Thursday on a charge of defrauding an innkeeper—a $73 bil lat a hotel. A hearing was set for July 27.

Many nightclub bartenders believed the juvenile man-about-town was a millionaire.

Italian Quads Die

CATANZARO, Italy, July 21—(Reuters)—The second set of quads born to an Italian peasant woman here in two years, died Thursday within 27 hours of birth.

Ragtime Kid Of "Shooting Of Dan McGrew" Hartley Claude Myrick Dies In Seattle

SEATTLE, July 20—(AP)—The ragtime kid is dead.

Hartley Claude Myrick, Sr., 65, the "kid that handled the music box" in Robert Service's famous poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," died in a hospital after a long illness.

Myrick, a Seattle resident since 1916, was a Sourdough of the Yukon gold rush at the age of 13 and played the first piano ever brought to Skagway.

Myrick frequently recounted how in 1907, at the age of 17, he was playing the piano in Whitehorse, Yukon, where "a bunch of the boys were whooping it up in the Malemute saloon."

Service, who made his name as a poet during the Yukon gold rush days, has told how the shouting and music in the place inspired the first line of his poem. Later he built up the verses with the story of a shooting.

The nicknam of "The Ragtime Kid" stuck to Myrick the rest of his years. He did well in business here until the 1929 crash, then later re-established himself.

Pleads Guilty To Espionage

PHILADELPHIA, July 21 (AP) —Harry Gold pleaded guilty to espionage charges Thursday and was committed to prison to await sentencing.

He could receive the death penalty for turning over U.S. atomic secrets to Russia, but that is considered unlikely.

The stubby research chemist, an unmarried 39-year-oid Philadelphian, admitted he acted as go-between in delivering secrets to Dr. Klaus Fuchs, German-born British scientist and an admitted spy.

U.S. District Judge James McGranery delayed sentencing until an investigation of Gold's background is completed. Court sources said the inquiry may last until September. The judge asked U.S. Attorney Gerald Gleeson to have the government make a recommendation on the sentence.

Gold was the first of four U.S. citizens to be accused of delivering secrets to the Russians. The others, Alfred Dean Slack, 44, Syracuse, N. Y., David Greenglass, 28, and Julius Rosenberg, 32, both of New York, have not yet pleaded to government charges.

Negro Troops Drive Enemy From Yechon

Send Relief Column To Try Rescue Of General Dean

TOKYO, July 22 — Saturday)—(AP) — The battered United States 24th Division was reported holding high ground southeast of burning Taejon early today, blocking the advance of the North Korean Communist forces.

Field dispatches said the Communists failed to follow up aggressively their conquest of Taejon which fell after a fierce two-day battle.

(Allied troops Friday began an offensive on Korea's east coast against Communist-held Yongdok after the big guns of two cruisers, one British, one American, softened up the town, said a Reuters field dispatch by Roy Mccartney.

(Yongdok is 25 miles north of Pohang where the United States 1st Cavalry Division landed a few days ago.

(Before the smoke of fires started by the sea bombardment had drifted away, the soldiers went into the attack, Macartney said. But a U.S. Eighth Army spokesman did not disclose whether they were South Korean or American troops.)

Retake Yechon

United States Negro troops drove North Korean Communists out of Yechon and accupied that rail and highway city. It was the first sizable American ground victory in the Korean war.

The Negro troops captured Yechon after a 16-hour battle which began Thursday afternoon and ended shortly after dawn today. U.S. casualties were light. The extent of enemy losses was unknown.

Yechon is 60 miles northeast of Taejon and 55 miles north of Taegu.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters did not issue its usual midnight communique on the Korean fighting, saying, "there has been no change in the situation."

Use U.S. Markings

Soldier and airmen reports after the bitter Taejon battle said the Reds used four tanks with American white-star markings in sneak attacks. All four were reported knocked out, two each by the infantry and air force.

Complete Embargo On Goods To Korea

OTTAWA, July 21 —(CP)—A complete embargo on the shipment of all goods to North Korea is expected to be announced shortly, it was learned today.

The decision to tighten the clamps on movement of all goods to the Communists is expected to follow the action of the United States, which a few days ago announced a similar decision.

Canada now exercises control on shipments through the export permit act, which allows the movement of goods not considered strategic. The new decision will allow no goods of any kind to be shipped to the aggressor nation.

Hannam Urges Groups To Study Controls

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP)—The threat of war is "sufficiently great" to indicate the need for a commission to study the proper use and balance of economic controls required in a full national emergency, H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said today.

He gave this personal view in a statement in which he recalled that "one of the greatest weaknesses" of Second World War controls "was the lack of balance between industries when over-all price control went into effect."

"The first two years of war created an unbalance which was unfair to some, particulraly agriculture," he said.

Face Manslaughter

LONDON, Ont., July 21—(CP)—A 19-year-old Exeter woman has been charged with manslaughter in connection with a five-car collision three miles north of nearby Arva July 14 in which one man was killed and seven others injured. Mrs. Joan Butterfield, driver of one of the five cars, appeared in court today and was releas ed on $2,000 property bail. She was remanded until July 25.

Dean's Soldiers Hope General To Escape Trap

By WILLIAM R. MOORE

A U.S. COMMAND POST IN KOREA, July 21 (AP)—Fellow soldiers today held firm hope that Maj.-Gen. William F. Dean, unreported nearly 24 hours in the thick of the Taejon fighting, "will get out."

But fear for his safety grew by the hour. The front-line fighting commander of the United States 24th Infantry Division was last reported leading a bazooka team fighting off North Korean tanks.

Dean's staff tried to reassure themselves with this declaration:

"The general can take care of himself. He may have to walk, but he'll get out!"

The Communist tanks moved on Taejon at dawn Thursday. They circled around and around the American command post, firing as they went.

Cpl. Ralph Vargason said he last saw Dean "running a bazooka (rocket launcher) team just before the roof fell in.

"He was doing a damned good job of it too. I saw him holding a bazooka shell in each hand. And after our guys knocked out that tank I saw him walk up and measure the bore of an enemy tank while it was still on fire. He said it was a .75."

Another story of Dean's heroism under fire came from Pte. Alfred Vessels, 18, Stanton, Tex., who told how teen-age American soldiers fought and knocked out Red tanks under Dean's personal leadership.

Dean had a record of fearless fighting. Both in the Second World War and in the Korean war he exposed himself to enemy fire to lead his men.

Delayed Nine Hours By Train Derailment

TRURO, N.S., July 21 (CP) — The Canadian National Railways express Scotian, Halifax-bound from Montreal, was delayed nine hours at nearby Debert Thursday night by the derailment of another train.

Three cars of a ballast train left the rails and 1½ miles of track were damaged. Cause of the accident, believed to be a de[illegible] was being investigated by CNR officials.

Want To Join Fight

MADRID, Spain, July 21 (AP) —The United States embassy in Madrid and consulates elsewhere in Spain are being besieged by Spanish Nationals who want to volunteer for war service in Korea. The biggest wave of volunteers apparently came after a rumor said the U.S. is paying 30,000 pesetas $(1,200) each to skilled technicians for service with the American Armed Forces.

Steel Workers Prepared Strike For Demands Union Head Tells Industry

4,000 Workers Refuse To Compromise On 40-Hour Work Week, Charge Company Using Unfair Practices

SYDNEY, N.S., July 21.—(CP)—Ed Corbett, Sydney president of United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.-C.C.L.), told a Conciliation Board Thurslay, "If we have to strike, we will strike" to support contract demands from Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation. He said there would be no compromise in the 4,000-member union's request for a 40-hour week with the same pay now in effect for a 44-hour week. Basic hourly wage is $1.04.

"I make the definite charge that in my opinion certain tactics used by the company . . . are a return to the old British Empire Steel tactics," said the union chief. Officials of Empire Steel —forerunners of Dosco — once threatened the workers that they "couldn't stand the gaff" and grass will grow in the streets of Sydney."

The Board—in its third day of conciliation—was also told Thursday the union's demands would cost Dosco $1,288,212 a year. W. H Jost, company counsel, said the sum is more than Dosco can afford.

Offers Renewal

Dosco has offered a renewal of the present contract. Company spokesmen said a reduction in wages would be more in keeping with conditions than an increase.

Mr. Corbett said "I wish to repeat that no man wants a strike but if that is necessary we will strike."

He said the union had hoped for the same procedure as head been used in Ontario, where a conciliation officer brought together the president of Algoma Steel Corporation and the union president on a contract question.

No New Coast Guard Set Up In Canada

OTTAWA, July 21—(CP)—The Government, banning any special new coast guard for Canada, today announced that the R.C.A.F. is going to co-ordinate "a general marine search and rescue system" that will be able to call on more than 200 Government-operated ships already in service.

Defence Minister Claxton and Transport Minister Chevrier issued a joint statement applying to facilities for life-saving at sea on both coasts. It indicated no steps to build new ship but rather action to weave those now available into a co-ordinated system.

Flock Across Border To Get Scarce Items

FORT ERIE, July 21 (CP)—Retail grocers along the Niagara frontier said today hundreds of Americans have been flocking to stores on this side of the river buying goods "scarce" in the United States, such as sugar, coffee, canned meat and fish. Dealers attributed the rush to shortage brought on by hoarding which the Korean war scare has provoked in the U.S.

Some dealers today commenced to limit sales of hard-to-get goods, so Canadian customers will have their proper share.

Winnipeg Star Gives Up Show Of Lifetime To Care For Sick Husband In New York

LONDON, July 21 (CP)—Winnipeg's Iva Withers turned her back today on what she called the "show of a lifetime" to care for her ailing husband in New York.

A spokesman for the Drury Lane Theatre announced that the youthful Canadian lyric soprano has definitely decided to give up her star part in the London production of "Carousel," which has been playing to capacity houses.

Her successor will be Laverne Burden of Cleveland, O., a former child prodigy at piano. The Drury Lane announcement said Miss Withers who was born in Rivers, Man., will make her final appearance a week from Saturday. Spokesmen said she is retiring from the cast for personal reasons.

In an interview two weeks ago, Miss Withers said that her husband, Kazimir Fokitch, was "very ill" in New York with a shoulder injury. She wanted to look after him, but she hated people to think she was "quitting."

Windsor UAW Turns Back On Communism

WINDSOR, July 21—(CP)—A stand against Communism in Canada and Korea was announced today by Local 195 United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.).

The declaration by the 11,000-member union, largest U.A.W. local in Canada, was given "heavy" endorsation at a membership meeting here last night, a Union statement said.

The statement of policy:

1. Gave "whole-hearted" support to the United Nations' Korean policy.

2. Urged "stripping the mask" from the Communist party "masquerading as an honest labor organization."

3. Commended the action of U.A.W. Local 600 at the Ford Motor Company in River Rouge, Mich., which demanded non-Communist affidavits from its officers.

4. Condemned the Canadian Labor-Progressive (Communist) party for "sabotaging our drive for our reasonable and legitimate goals."

News Blackout On 3 Destroyers

OTAWA, July 21 — (CP) — Navy intelligence today placed a news blackout on further movements of Canada's three Korea-bound destroyers until Gen. MacArthur, United Nations commander, directs otherwise.

The warships were due Thursday at Kwajalein, United States naval base a week's sailing time from Japan.

A naval spokesman said today intelligence takes the attitude that since there is a blackout on movements of American warships in that area it should also be applied to the Canadian craft.

He disclosed that 200 men were added to the complements of the three ships shortly before they sailed.

Charwoman Discovers $40,000, Can't Sleep

SYRACUSE, N.Y., July 21 — (AP)—Mrs. Mary Sakowski, an $18-a-week cleaning woman, called the First Trust and Deposit Co. Thursday and asked officers to come get their $40,000.

Mrs. Sakowski explained that she found the money on the bank floor while sweeping Wednesday night and took it home for safe keeping.

New at the job, Mrs. Sakowski said she was scared and did not know what to do with such a sum of money. "I couldn't sleep all night,' she said. A bank spokesman said Mrs. Sakowski would get a reward.

French Transport Reported Aground

PARIS, July 21 (AP) — A French troop transport with 490 persons aboard ran aground on Thursday night off Cap Hafoun, Italian Somaliland.

A radio message received here said the passengers were being taken off.

The 12,130-ton ship, the Doba, served on the run between Saigon, Indo-China, and Oran, Algeria.

In adition to the passengers, mostly soldiers, the ship has a normal crew of 50.

Say Jobless Reduced During June

15,800 Drop Noted In Unemployed, Need Skilled Men

OTTAWA, July 21 — (CP) —Registered unemployed in Canada dropped from 220,400 to 204,600 in the two weeks from June 15 to June 29, the Labor Department reported on Thursday.

The 15,800 drop in registration at National Employment Service offices reflected increased seasonal activity in construction, agriculture and transportation, and a heavy demand for many Canadian products in the United States.

By regions, the number of registered unemployed at June: (June 15 total in brackets):

Newfoundland 16,900 (19,400), Maritimes 23,600 (27,700) Quebec 62,500 (68,100), Ontario 48,200 (49,300), Prairies 28,300 (30,800), Pacific region 25,100 (25,100).

Skilled Help Scarce

As employment in construction and agriculture moved steadily upward, experienced farm help remained scarce in many sections of eastern Canada, and a shortage of skilled construction tradesmen continued, particularly in the larger centres.

The substantial increase in exports to the United States, said the department, helped maintain high employment in industries such as metal mining and pulp and paper. A larger summer cut of pulpwood logs resulted in increased woods employment in both the Maritimes and Quebec.

Employment also increased in some heavy iron and steel plants in Quebec, though many employees of leather and rubber plants were still working short-time. The department forecast that in Newfoundland the cod fishery will equal that of last year, while employment in pulp cutting may exceed the levels it attained before last year's slump.

Employment has increased in the heavy iron and steel plants of Quebec, while in Ontario construction and agriculture are both experiencing a shortage of workers.

Senate Backs Truman Plan

WASHINGTON, July 21 (CP)—The United States Senate armed services committee voted unanimously today to take all restrictions off the size of the armed forces and lengthen all enlistments one year.

The armed services committee of the House of Representatives also voted, 18 to 1, to keep all personnel in service for a year after their enlistments expire. It still was considering the request of President Truman to lift ceilings on size of the armed forces.

Representatives Harry Towe (Rep. N.J.) cast the only vote against extending military service.

If full Congressional approval is granted, President Truman could extend for one year the terms of volunteers now in the army, air force, navy and marines until next July 9. That is when the present draft or selective service act expires. As the act now stands, men aged 19 to 25 inclusive can be called for 21 months' duty.

Six Institutes Visit Stanwood

HAVELOCK, July 21 (ENS) — Belmont Women's Institute visited the Stanwood branch on Wednesday when other Institutes attending were Springbrook, Petherick's Corners, East and West Seymour.

Mrs. Robert Lyle of Stanwood presided for the program to which each branch contributed selections that included vocal solos, vocal duets, musical numbers and readings.

Those taking part from the Belmont Institute were Joan McGowan, who gave a guitar solo and Mrs. G. Wright of Blairton Station, who sang.

The meeting was held in the basement of the Stanwood church where the home Institute also sponsored a supper, and a sale of fancy goods, home baking and plants. More than 100 women attended.

Prices Dip Slightly On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, July 21—(CP)—Prices dipped slightly over a broad list of market leaders in trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Turnover slowed and mild pressure appeared following three days of strong advances. Volume for the first three hours was 683,000 shares.

Losses were held to fractions in Industrials. Winnipeg Electric, a strong gainer yesterday, dipped a point at 35½. Scarfe paint was down ¾ at a new low of 13¼.

Western oils showed the widest losses. Foothills dropped 30 cents at $4.50. Royalite lost ¼ at 11¾.

Base metals, strong gainers in recent sessions; showed a handful of small losses in key stocks. Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel, and Quemont eased fractionally while Waite Amulet and Steep Rock pushed higher.

Leading Junior Gold producers showed losses ranging up to 15 cents.

Search To Minden Gets 3 Suspects, Woman Tied Up

After a police drag-net extending to Dorset and Minden, three men have been arrested by Huntsville provincial police on suspicion of having robbed Mrs. Roy Phillips of $25 Wednesday night and then tied her to a tree. Details of the arrests are not available.

Mrs. Phillips, wife of a Huntsville taxi operator, was asked by a young man to take him to the summer cottage of a friend. When they reached a secluded spot about six miles south of the town he whipped out a revolver and ordered her to stop.

Apparently it was a pre-arranged holdup because another man, also armed, came into the woods with a length of clothes-line. About $25 was taken from her wallet and she was then tied to a tree.

'Yell, We'll Shoot'

"If you yell you'll get shot," warned the man who had hired the taxi.

Mrs. Phillips managed to free herself and phoned the police from the nearby farm of Mrs. Coleman Arnold.

An intensive police search throughout the night failed to locate the men. Provincial Constables A. R. Edwards and Gordon Langton of Minden chased a speeding car going south on Highway 35 when they sighted it just south of Dorset, but the car was too fast and pulled away from the police cruiser.

Another Hold-up Attempt

About the same time three men tried to hold up the Gortmeyer Garage, Dwight, but the proprietor forced them to flee when he called to his son to bring a rifle.

The trio reportedly fled in the direction of Algonquin Park.

Late Thursday afternoon the two constables found an abandoned and wrecked car in the bushes near Partridge Lake. It had apparently failed to make a curve in the road and had plowed into the bush and stopped against some rocks.

It is believed to be the suspects' car. The taxi was found intact some time after the holdup on the main highway.

The three unidentified men were taken into custody Thursday afternoon and are being questioned.

Superior numbers of Communist tanks, infantrymen and guerrillas won control of Taejon after two days of fierce and costly attack.

But that victory cost them at least 12 tanks—all knocked out by the new U.S. 3.5-inch rocket-launcher—and others damaged.

Late in the day, they had failed to launch an expected attack on strong new U.S. defence positions in hills four miles southeast of Taejon. Apparently, said Associated Press field correspondent William R. Moore, the Reds "are without tanks now" and are awaiting new armor..

The whereabouts of Maj.-Gen. William F. Dean, commander of the 24th Infantry Division, still was not known at a U.S. command post. Dean, last seen in the thick of battle Thursday night passing ammunition to a bazooka team, personally led attacks against Communist tank columns.

Guns Trace Guerrillas

Friday morning, less than 12 hours after Taejon was given up, American artillery was trained on mountains where bands of Reds were reported [illegible]

Presumably, the Reds were beginning to repeat their familiar pattern: strike around the flank of the American front at supporting positions in the rear.

However, Moore reported, no new attack had been launched by late Friday.

It will take time, he said, for the Reds to bring in new armor. The Americans destroyed bridges, tunnels, rail lines and highways as they withdrew.

Disrupt Rail Lines

And the Far East air forces, in a communique, indicated new tanks may require some time getting to the Taejon area. It said a 500-ton B-29 bombing of Seoul Sunday had damaged rail yards and lines so heavily as to "prevent rail movements to the southern battle lines for some time."

A relief column was trying to reach Taejon to rescue the missing Gen. Dean. Late reports were that the column was unable to break through to the city whose normal population is about 150,000.

The General's Korean interpreter slipped through the North Korean encirclement shortly before dawn today, reaching the American lines. He said Dean fought like any of his officers and men through Thursday's grim battle, directing the deployment of bazookas and rocket-launchers to fight Communist tanks and also helping to evacuate the wounded.

MacArthur said the loss of Taejon has "no special significance" from the military point of view. Advanced American headquarters and the provisional government of South Korea had moved from the city several days ago.

The new U.S. front on higher ground is a better location for fighting a delaying action, MacArthur said in a communique.

Heavy Infiltration

The United Nations commander said "heavy infiltration tactics by guerrillas who outflanked the American army units, and coordinating infantry-tank assaults forced the withdrawal."

A spokesman at Eighth Army headquarters in Korea said the withdrawal was "planned. . . and not a precipitous flight."

Have Bad Weather

Bad weather hampered allied air action, but more than 100 sorties were flown. U.S. jets shot down two Yak-9 fighters near Taejon. Three Red planes were knocked down there yesterday.

Superforts roamed again over North Korea and dropped more than 160 tons of high explosives on five major targets—airfields and bridges.

Yak planes attacked Superforts near Seoul but were driven off by the bombers' gunners. Two of the American planes were damaged in the Seoul area, but both returned safely.

The Far East air forces reported that Superfortresses have brought rail traffic through Seoul almost to a standstill.

Detailed analysis of reconnaissance photographs shows heavy damage to repair and assembly shops and a sharply reduced Communist ability "to replace their rapidly decreasing supply of rolling stock."

In flat, open country southwest of Taejon, the Reds were reported building for a drive at the American flank. They were at Nonsan, 20 miles southwest of Taejon, but MacArthur said air force tactical attacks probably can "prevent this envelopment from becoming a serious threat."

Order Two Play In Edmonton

TORONTO, July 21 (CP)—Al Anderson, manager of Edmonton Eskimos, said in a statement issued here today that Earl Valiquette and Jackie Stewart "must play in Edmonton or quit football entirely."

The statement, released by the Eskimos' eastern representative, included a get-here-fast-or-else ultimatum to the two players.

Although they have signed with Edmonton, both still are claimed by Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four Union.

Anderson said Valiquette and Stewart must be in Edmonton by midnight next Tuesday "or they will be fined $50 on Wednesday, $100 on Thursday and the amount will accordingly double each succeeding day, deductible from their contracts."

(In Hamilton yesterday, Tiger-Cat officials said Valiquette and Stewart definitely would play for them. Lawyers had advised the Hamilton club that it had prior claim on the services of both players.)

Fewer Food Parcels Going To Britain

LONDON, July 21 (CP)—The stream of food parcels, which since the war has helped relieve austerity-ridden larders in Britain, is begining to dry up.

General post office records for the first five months of 1950 show that 2,710,000 parcels were received from overseas well-wishers, an average of 542,000 a month. This was a sharp drop from last year when the average monthly total was 1,105,000. For Canada the five-month volume of parcel dropped to 400000 from more than 1,000,000.

RCAF Recruiting Office Swamped By Calls

MONTREAL, July 21—(CP)—The RCAF recruiting office here has been "swamped" by telephone calls from ex-air crew members seeking information about re-enlistment, Flt. Lt. E. J. Sourisseau, officer in charge, said today.

He said a steady stream of applicants have appeared at the office in person since Korean hostilities began. Army and navy recruiting office reported that application for enlistment have doubled.

Dancers Flee Stinging Fumes

CORNWALL, July 21 (CP) — Ammonia fumes from a ruptured gas cylinder drove 2,000 dancers from Cornwall Community Arena last night and ended a Lions Club dance featuring Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians.

Police believe a gate crasher, attempting to gain entry through the compressor room of the arena's ice making plant, stepped on a pipe from an ammonia cylinder and broke it off releasing clouds of choking fumes.

There was no panic as the arena was evacuated.

Discover Chemical Against Radiation

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP) —A chemical called 'Thiourea" apparently gives mice some protection against radiation death, two University of Delaware scientists reported today

They offered no comment as to whether the chemical might protect humans against atomic bomb rays.

The chemical used by doctors G. Limperos and W. A. Mosher is a bitter substance related to Urea. They offered the theory that the compound works by protecting certain vital constituents of body cells.

U.S. Forces Not Expecting To Use A-Bomb

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP) —The United States armed forces for purely military reasons, take a dim view of suggestions that use of the atomic bomb might quickly end the Korean War.

Military officials question whether the A-bomb could produce results in Korea — where there are few good targets for a mass-destruction weapon—sufficient to justify dipping into the US atomic arsenal which is limited in size.

To make profitable such use of a weapon so expensive in terms of material, manpower and money would require that thousands or tens of thousands of the enemy troops be concentrated in an area a mile or less in radius.

Such concentrations of North Korean troops do not exist. At the front, they are deployed along a straggling line. There are no ports where masses of their men and equipment might pile up. At some points there are rail or highway junctions, but North Korean troops flow through these points rather than congest in large numbers.

Even if it were decided to use atomic bombs against enemy forces deployed at the battle zone the terrain would pose a stiff problem.

The front—like almost all of Korea—is mountainous country, with ridges and valleys cutting across the landscape. The effect of an atomic bomb is drastically reduced by such terrain because the ridges shield areas from the blast.

Jr. Farmers Start Safety Project

ROSENEATH, July 21 (ENS)—Professor Kitching of OAC, Guelph, spoke to Alnwick Junior Farmers about the care of farm machinery Wednesday at their preliminary meeting in the safe driving of farm equipment project.

The meeting was in the large agricultural hall which accommodated farm machinery for demonstration supplied by the Retail Dealers' Association. The president, Reginald Timlin, presided.

After his talk, the professor conducted a questionaire on safe driving of farm equipment.

Next meeting will be held at Baltimore on July 29, when a tractor driving contest will be open to contestants from Northumberland county.

A later contest will be held at Baltimore on August 4, when contestants from Durham and Northumberland will compete in tractor driving.

Cancel Field Meet High Pressure Sales

MONTREAL, July 21 (CP) — "High pressure methods" of ticket selling have forced the Montreal Police Amateur Athletic Association to forego its annual track and field meet for the first time in 53 years, MPAAA officials said today.

Montreal police also will not participate in inter-city meets at Toronto, Hamilton and Detroit as in previous years

Detective Sgt. Armand Morin said today that the MPAAA has agreed with city and police authorities that some policemen are using "high pressure methods" to sell advance tickets, and has decided to refrain from staging a 54th annual tournament.

"We were afraid that some policemen were using the idea, 'buy a ticket or get a ticket'," Morin said

Would Double Paper Output Says Eubanks

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP)—Sam B. Eubanks, executive vice-president of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO), Thursday urged government assistance to increase United States newsprint production to at least double the present output.

A minimum of 1,000,000 tons of new production is required to meet the needs, he said.

Eubanks testified before a House of Representatives judicial sub-committee, which Thursday wound up nearly a month-long investigation on the newsprint industry.

Saying there is "ample evidence" that the industry fixes prices and exercises monopoly control over output of the paper used in printing newspapers, the Guild official contended:

The newsprint "monopoly" is creating a newspaper monopoly through enforced mergers and suspensions stemming from the "excessive cost burden" of newsprint.

"Relief can be obtained only by considerably increased production," he said.

2,000 Enjoy Liberals' Picnic At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, July 21 — (ENS)—A crowd of about 2,000 attended the picnic sponsored by the Northumberland and South Hastings Liberal Association at Presqu'ile Point on Wednesday afternoon.

One bus and about 30 cars were required to transport the number who attended from Campbellford. The picnic catered to the children and there were free treats for all. Ice cream, pop and hot dogs in amazing quantities soon disappeared once the youngsters took over.

Guest speakers of the evening were the Hon. Stuart Garson, who flew from Ottawa to Trenton; Senator Billy Fraser, Dr. F. G. Robertson, MP, Frank Follwell, MP, and Mr. Thompson, MP, Hastings South.

There were two ball games, one between Trenton and Cobourg which Cobourg took 4 to 3, and a girls' softball game between Trenton and Grafton. Trenton took this one 8 to 1.

A feature of the evening was a banquet in the Presquile Hotel, at which 30 guests sat down. The three representatives from Campbellford who had special invitations were George Braham, Mrs. Peter MacMillan and Mrs. Sam Bibby.

Campbellford received the congratulations of the association in making such a good showing for the event. The town exceeded its quota in both prizes and donations towards the cost of the event.

George Braham, said he was proud of the support he had received from local business men of all political beliefs.

Later in the evening, the guests enjoyed dancing in the Pavilion at the Point.

Asks For Pen Term But Gets Reformatory

WINDSOR, July 21 — (CP) — Juanita West, of Sutton, was sentenced Thursday to an indefinite term of not more than two years in jail on two charges of theft.

The woman, with a long record of convictions, begged for a penitentiary term at Kingston when she appeared in court Tuesday. She said previous jail sentences had not been enough to affect reformation.

Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan told her Thursday he couldn't send her to penitentiary, but by giving her an indefinite sentence she could be kept in reformatory for any period up to two years less a day.

Colonial Plan Well On Way

LONDON, July 21 — (Reuters) —Britain, after two years, is more than one-quarter through a £50,000,000 ($155,000,000) plan to enrich the Colonial Empire.

The second annual report of the Colonial Development Corporation, covering the period to December 31, was made public today. It said capital now committed is £14,204,423 in 28 different undertakings. These range from the provision of electricity in Malaya to the planting of bananas in Honduras and large-scale refrigeration-plant developments in the Falkland Islands.

The corporation recorded its drive to grow more meat, rice, fruit, and coco; to build houses and factories; to process fish; to develop salt production; to catch seals; to mine gold; to produce hemp, copra, cement and orange juice.

More projects are under investigation. If all are accepted, they will number 52, involving capital development totalling £50,000,000.

The report says that last year products worth $454,421 were marketed. Only the prospect of "an eventual high rate of earning" would compensate for the large risks and expenses of the present unproductive period.

Hospital Governor Samuel Jacobs Dies

MONTREAL, July 21 (CP) — Samuel William Jacobs, 80, a governor of the Cornwall General Hospital and a resident of Cornwall and Montreal, died here Thursday.

Born in Loch Garry, Ont., he was educated in Lancaster, Ont., later working in Montreal, Coaticook, Que., and Cornwall where he owned a store.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters and a sister, all of Montreal.

Funeral service will be held in suburban Westmount Saturday.

75 Acres Wooded Property Added To Children's Lodge

COBOURG, July 21—(ENE)—The Illahee Lodge committee, which provided summer holidays for sick children from Toronto, has acquired 75 acres of beautiful wooded property in Hamilton Twp., four miles from the lodge. The property which is in the vicinity of Sykes' woods, has been acquired from Thomas Harris. A wide stream runs through the property and the location is one of great scenic beauty. Purpose of the land is to augment the holdings of Illahee Lodge so as to provide greater facilities for the work being done by the lodge.

Every summer since 1946, 150 children have been coming in groups every three weeks for a stay at Illahee Lodge. These youngsters suffer from diabetes, chest and heart conditions, and the change from the city air helps them fight the effects of the diseases with which they are afflicted. The girls like the beach at Lake Ontario, which is at the foot of the Illahee Lodge property, but boys want something in the nature of a swimming hole. Some of them never have got any closer to the real thing than a picture of the old swimmin' hole. Some have never known the thrill of watching a bobbing cork on the surface of a creek.

The committee accordingly was delighted when it became possible to purchase such a spot, only about four miles from the lodge.

Fishing and Swimming

On Thursday the station wagon hauled groups of happy boys with their fishing rods and worms to the new property where they had a wonderful time fishing and swimming. The creek wanders through shady woods and into bright, cleared spaces, and in one of these open spaces the stream has been dammed up and a good sized swimming pool has been the result.

The Kinsmen Clubs of Toronto finances Illahee Lodge.

Asks Constable To State House

HALIFAX, July 21 (CP) — A Halifax police constable got an invitation to the New Hampshire state house Thursday and the governor of the state got off scot free on a parking violation.

It happened this way: Governor Sherman Adams touring the province parked his car in a restricted spot in front of Province House.

The constable placed a ticket in the windshield—not an ordinary one but a "tourist ticket" telling the car owner he had violated the law but that it would be overlooked as he was a visitor.

Governor Adams came along. "Anytime you're in New Hampshire and get a parking ticket, come up and see me at the state house" he told the constable. "I'll fix the ticket for you."

Suing Wife

LOS ANGELES, July 21—(AP) —Jonas Kares, 68, wants $565 a month alimony from his wife, Sophie. Kares filed a separate maintenance suit against her Thursday and complained she left him Jan. 9, 1949, and took with her title to property worth more than $300,000.

Ball Park Opened

CAMPBELLFORD, July 21 — (ENS)—A large crowd was on hand at the new ball diamond in Warkworth on Wednesday evening to witness a baseball tournament to officially open the field. The first game between Warkworth and Campbellford saw the Campbellford boys bow in defeat by a score of 5-3. Hastings took the second game from Wooler by a 17 to 5 count, and went on to take the last tilt with a 9-7 score.

Opening ceremonies took place in Wooler on Thursday evening, when a good-sized crowd witnessed the game between Wooler and Frankford. The Air Force Band from Trenton station was in attendance to keep the crowd entertained.

Riggs Alimony Battle

LOS ANGELES, July 21. — (AP).—Bobby Riggs' wife asserts the tennis pro is worth $100,000 and earns $50,000 to $60,000 a year. Riggs, 32, in a hearing Thursday on her petition for $1,500 temporary alimony, testified he earned $33,920 last year and paid out $26,191 expenses. Riggs added his wife, Kay, who is suing him for divorce, is "young, attractive, intelligent and likeable" and capable of supporting herself. They have two children.

Defence Staffs Get Screening

OTTAWA, July 21—(CP)—An official of Canadian Commercial Corporation — the government agency which places defence contracts—confirmed Thursday that the corporation is given the names of all employees working on secret defence orders.

The corporation then turns the names over to the RCMP for investigation.

"This is a regular procedure," the official said, commenting on a Toronto dispatch which said several employees of a Toronto factory working on defence contracts had been dismissed after security screenings.

Both the Canadian Commercial Corporation and the RCMP declined comment. An RCMP official, however, said the force had been carrying out security screenings in various government and associated departments for some time.

Certain Americans Not Hardest Workers

LONDON, July 21 (AP)—Ten British Labor leaders who visited the United States debunked today the idea that Americans work harder than Britons.

"Except in a few isolated cases," they reported, they found no evidence to support the theory, which had been put out by a few of the several British management-labor missions which have visited the United States in the last year.

Like most of the earlier missions, the labor group found that Americans produced more per man-day primarily because usually they have more and better machinery and better planned plants.

Industry In Peterborough County

The figures are a little out of date, being for 1948, but reliable statistics always lag behind the events on which they are based. At any rate, the 1948 figures on industry in the Kawartha zone, as published in the 1950 Annual Economic Survey of the Ontario Bureau of Statistics, show the size of local industry. In Peterborough County 12,938 people were employed by 445 employers in some form of commerce or industry. They earned $28,285,744 during the year. Most were engaged in manufacturing: 10,667 working in 173 big and little plants, earning $24,235,197. The next largest group were in some form of service work: 890 of them. "Trade" followed, with 492 persons so employed. Next came communication, storage and transportation, employing 275 workers. Mining (four establishments) engaged 128 persons and paid them wages amounting to $302,631.

* * *

It is interesting to compare the industrial payrolls in neighbouring counties. Here is a table of selected figures:

TOTAL INDUSTRY

County	Employers	Payroll	Employees
Peterborough	445	$28,285,744	12,938
Hastings	682	16,481,886	9,820
Durham	251	6,978,787	3,447
Northumberland	293	4,829,817	2,552
Victoria	318	3,364,516	2,390

* * *

In that year there were 15,378 households in Peterborough County, 19,126 in Hastings, 8,338 in Durham, 9,941 in Northumberland, and 7,655 in Victoria county. These figures include farm households. By comparing them with our table on industry, it will be seen that Peterborough as a county unit is the most industrial of the group, for from only 15,378 households in the entire county, 12,938 wage-earners were engaged in manufacturing or some form of commerce. On the other hand, Victoria county with 7,655 households had only 2,390 of its people working in industry.

* * *

The comparison to point out the industrial character of Peterborough life, with its neighbouring counties, may be made thus: In Peterborough county two-thirds of the households were in centres with more than 1,000 people; in Hastings slightly more than half; in Durham, Northumberland and Victoria counties considerably more than half the households were in villages of less than 1,000 or in the county altogether.

* * *

This immediate district is important industrially, but, as any eye can see, the county is not industrialized. Most of the factories and commerce are centred in Peterborough city. It is not inappropriate to remark, too, that neither is most of the county agricultural (unlike Durham). Only a small southern corner of this county is really first rate farm land. Most of the rest is lake and bush and rock, at this season vastly appreciated and valuable.

Death Of Carl Van Doren

The death of Carl Van Doren robs the literary world of the U.S.A. of a widely respected and loved figure. As a teacher, editor and critic, Van Doren was successful and influential. His scholarship was of the broadly humanist variety, his taste was catholic rather than severe, and he was granted an admirable common sense which made it impossible for him to be deceived by fads or by glittering triviality. He was himself an excellent writer, and his biographical work on Benjamin Franklin is among the best things of its kind in American writing. His autobiography, Three Worlds, is a fine study of the development of a scholarly mind in a young man with the best sort of American background. Mr. Van Doren was also known as a leader in liberal political thought.

His finest work, however, was done as a teacher and writer who sought to show his students that literature is a living and continuing thing, and that the literature of one's own time must be considered in the light of what has gone before. In this phase of his work he was able to do much to interest the young people of his country in their own contemporary writers. He was able to present such figures as Sinclair Lewis and James Branch Cabell to young Americans as men of importance, and men with a place in the main stream of literature in English.

Canada needs a man of Van Doren's stature to call the attention of the young to our native literature, and to give our native writers a great critic to write for. A really fine critic, like Van Doren, can call forth the best in many writers, who write in the hope that they will please him, and who know that he will understand their work, and give it just appreciation. Carl Van Doren did much to encourage and strengthen the native voice of the U.S.A., and in that respect he served his country well in an extremely difficult capacity. Such men are rare, and as yet Canada has not been able to bring one forth and keep him within her borders.

Put Away Childish Things

A man's car is, to some extent, his castle, and we suppose that he can do in it pretty much as he pleases. But when a man's castle whizzes along a busy street or a highway, public safety demands that he should have the clearest possible view of the traffic. He canot command such a view if his windshield is ornamented with one or more jiggling mascots, wobbling birdies, bounding dollies or palsied monkeys. And if he is so devoted to these ornaments that he puts them on his rear window as well, he has gone too far, and should be recalled to reason.

The Saskatoon Star Phoenix has protested against what it calls "swaying doodads." The Financial Post strikes out at what it describes as "windshield puppet-shows." We are glad to add our voice to theirs. If a man likes toys, let him enrich his house with toys to his heart's content. But when he becomes a motorist, let him put away childish things.

The Hoarders Are At It Again

There is no sign, as yet, that the Korean campaign will develop into a major war, but governments are taking their precautions. Some private citizens are also taking their precautions, and are laying in stores of whatever they think might be scarce if the war did spread. Everybody remembers those people to whom, in the recent war, the greatest of all calamities was the shortage of sugar. How eagerly they sought it; how rapturously they greeted any happening which made it possible for them to get a bit more than other people; how piteously they bewailed the shortage even when, because of their fierce pursuit of the commodity, they had as much of it as they could use!

To be provident and forehanded is a virtue. But one cannot admire the spirit of these people who, at the first sniff of conflict, seek to cram their cupboards with provisions in the hope of overreaching their neighbours. They merely hasten the imposition of controls.

Men For The Arms

The Canadian Government has issued a call to arms. The purpose is to bring authorized military establishments up to fighting strength, to give units now little more than skeletons, the full strength to man their weapons. There is nothing grandiose in this. Canada is not being urged into an armed camp. As the Cold War passes into torrid zones and Canada's external commitments mount, it is the part of caution to pace her defence organizations with them.

Canada is not sending ground forces to Korea. It is not sending fighter planes. It has approved the U.S. action under U.N., in Korea. It has, as a member of U.N. supported the Securtiy Council and sanctioned its decision to intrude in the Korean peninsular war. Until there is such a thing as a true United Nations army, what virtue is there in putting Canadians into the Korean field? To do so would smack of snatched heroics, a bite off the crust of whatever glory or praise belongs to the United States forces. Korea is not the place, and now is not the time, for that sort of army.

The recruiting campaign so speedily set under way by Ottawa need not alarm. It is of healthy, not frightening proportions.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A U.S. investigator, after long experiment in a laboratory for the purpose, has proved that you cannot beat slot machines. Once more science dashes panting in the rear of common sense.

The aldermen of Victoria, B.C., are pondering a bylaw which would make them exempt from parking-meter charges. To virtually all lawgivers there comes that intoxicating moment when they seek to raise themselves above the law.

Life magazine trumpets: "It might be a surprise to most Americans and to all Europeans to learn that a higher percentage of U.S. Negroes than of all Britons go to college." If all colleges were precisely equal in their educative power, this comparison might carry more weight.

End of Sicilian Banditry?

by
Cecil Sprigge
from Rome

THE shooting of the bandit Salvatore Giuliano at Castelvetrano in Western Sicily shortly before dawn on July 5th marks much more than the end of the life of a particularly determined criminal. It may be remembered as the end of an era in the social and political life of the largest island of the Mediterranean, an era which opened with the Allied landings of Summer 1943.

✧ ✧ ✧

GIULIANO'S end, at the hands of a small police squad commanded by the grizzled veteran Colonel Luca, who has had an adventurous past in Asia Minor and other distant fields, came in the middle of a mass trial of twenty-seven of his lieutenants and accomplices in the mainland city of Viterbo, near Rome. Clan loyalties and intimidation would have been certain to silence the mouths of accused and witnesses if the trial had taken place in Sicily. These influences indeed reached as far as Viterbo, for most of the eight principal accused (the rest were rustic catspaws) flatly denied, in open court, all the statements they had made to the police and the examining magistrates, telling an identical story of evidence extracted from them by torture at the hands of a police sergeant named Pasquale.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE particular subject of the Viterbo trial is the slaughter which took place on May Day 1947 at Portella, in the province of Palermo. Shots were fired from a hillside at about 5,000 people collected at that locality to celebrate the labour festival. Eleven of the crowd were killed and others wounded. One of the accused, Terranova, has given evidence that Giuliano had laid a plot for twenty heavily-armed men to break into the crowd from two sides, kidnap Senator Li Causi, the Sicilian Communist leader, and some other parliamentarians, who were billed to address the meeting, and to hold a summary "trial" ending in the execution of these notables. However, Terranova, who was to command one of the two bandit squads, says that he himself defaulted, leaving Giuliano with only twelve men who at Giuliano's orders merely fired into the crowd and made their escape. This story is substantially confirmed by a ten-page statement which reached the Court a few days ago from Giuliano himself. Giuliano said, however, that he gave orders to fire close above the heads of the crowd, and that the deaths had deeply grieved him.

✧ ✧ ✧

ALL this makes little enough sense outside the peculiar atmosphere of Sicily. Even an acquaintance with Chicago gansterism, itself largely of South Italian origin, hardly gives a clue to how a 27-year-old peasant should become and remain for several years a figure of terror and to some extent of admiration for an island nation of four millions; how he should in this period have been responsible for the killing of about a hundred policemen, the kidnapping for ransom of dukes, parliamentarians, and bankers, and should have engaged in his last year the exclusive attention of a highly-picked force of a thousand mainland carabineers led by carefully-chosen officers. Or even if all this is said not to be without a parallel in American annals, what surely is unique is that Giuliano, in this period, not infrequently addressed highflown patriotic proclamations to the people, which he caused to be printed in newspapers; that he indignantly protested that it was impossible for him to be an enemy of the people since he was their appointed leader; while in his last communication, to the Court of Viterbo, he compared himself to Napoleon and demanded recognition as a 'pure hero".

✧ ✧ ✧

THE background to Giuliano might well be explored backwards for many hundred years. But it is enough to know that through long centuries of Greek, Roman, Saracen, Spanish and Italian rule Sicily evolved one of the tightest systems of underground self-government known in history. The structure of this was in recent centuries provided by the Mafia, or "honoured society" with its unwritten task of withstanding the types of justice imposed by kings and governments, and imposing the standards handed down the generations by people of influence, usually people somewhat below the glittering surface of aristocratic society. In 1922 by dint of military operations, Mussolini claimed to have rooted out the Mafia in its special strongholds to the east of Palermo. Hundreds of "mafiosi" were shipped off to confinement in small islands. New cliques, partly composed of "mafiosi" who were sufficiently flexible partly of new men, established a system of Fascist domination in the island. As Mussolini's plans fell to ruin, an overwhelming majority of the men of substance turned against Fascism, which was often identified with Italian rule. And these men of substance must undoubtedly have included old Mafia chieftains. The Allied landings were welcomed by Separatist demonstrations, and the men who pressed their services on Allied Military Government were largely Separatist. At the beginning of this period Mussolino was still in power in Italy, warring against the Allies. Later, the Badoglio Government in South Italy was without any means of making its voice heard in Sicily. Allied troops and Government officers were withdrawn from Sicily after the liberation of Rome, but for two years the attachment of Sicily to Italy was most tenuous, and there was a large and vocal movement for breaking it altogether.

✧ ✧ ✧

A KIND of Sicilian partisan movement had been favoured by the American Special Services at the beginning of the campaign. This movement, swollen by refugees and young adventurers of all sorts, took on the appellation EVIS, initials standing for "Army of Sicilian Independence". It came to group itself around a politician, Mr. Finocchiaro - Aprile, who endeavoured to procure a hearing at the early sessions of UNO for a scheme for Sicilian participation in a Mediterranean Federation, that is, for a release from Italian sovereignty. Early in 1946 the Italian Government felt strong enough to imprison Finocchiaro-Aprile, though on release he was elected to the Rome Parliament, where he tried to argue that he had never sought more than a mild Home Rule.

✧ ✧ ✧

POLITICAL men in Sicily saw the change in the wind and cut their connections with the Evis. This body had increasingly resolved itself into a group of outlaw bands. An extraordinary ascendancy was gained among youths by Salvatore Giuliano, a young man from Montelepre in the wild western outskirts of Palermo. He had enrolled after trouble with the police over a minor black-marketing offence. He brought with him a large connection from the Montelepre district. At a certain moment it appears that Giuliano received, from leaders who were now resolved to cut their open ties with the outlaws, a kind of ceremonial investiture as Commander-In-Chief of the Evis. It is in this light that he regarded himself as an authorized national leader against oppression, his fights with the police as actions of war, and his kidnappings and blackmails as legitimate levies for public purposes. He seems to have expected to come fully into his own in a third world war, and Korea may have cheered his last days. The very conspicuous sums won in this way were spent not upon dissipations but on financing exploits, paying legal expenses, supporting the families of followers in distress, and even giving subsidies to the families of the victims of his gang The Mafia, as such, may have had nothing to do with Giuliano, but his methods were in the Mafia tradition on its fiercer side.

COLONEL Luca told me, when I visited his headquarters outside Palermo some months ago, that Giuliano was by no means the worst of the bandits. Cucinella, now on trial at Viterbo, was much worse, he said. The gallant Colonel has been promoted General "for special merit". He has got the better of Giuliano not, in the main, by armed operations, but by policy He showed himself fearlessly in the danger area in the Palermo Hills, and gradualy won the people to think that he was a better friend and protector than Giuliano. He even spoke not without sympathy of the fate and outlook of the bandits. There is, therefore, some hope that his work may prove to more durable than that of the once celebrated Prefect Mori who gained honours by supposedly extirpating the Mafia in 1928 but was later discredited by Mussolini himself.

✧ ✧ ✧

ACCORDING to Communist theory the Giuliano gang, the Mafia, the Separatists, and even the local Christian Democratic party are all bound to one another by guilty secrets. In fact, Sicily seethes with "undergrounds" of many descriptions, and the degree to which the Mafia now exists—as it certainly once did—as an organisation with a hierarchy, is much disputed. On Communist lips the word has become just a term of abuse for the people who rally round the landowners to oppose Communist-led land invasions. Sicily's social problems are today as far from solution as they have ever been, and the cold war waged for centuries between official Law and the code of the land will not suddenly cease (it persists, to some extent, even in Continental Italy). But the particular conjuncture which allowed a bandit to consider himself to be the political spokesman of his people is unlikely to recur.

A BRITISH OPINION

Look Out! Salome's After John's Head Again!

Letters To The Editor

PETERBOROUGH MOTORISTS UNFAIR TO PEDESTRIANS

Sir: The pedestrian in Peterborough is invited, indeed ordered, by prominent signs on traffic lights to "cross with the green light". Being a newcomer to this city, and being a person who always does what signs tell me to, I unknowingly took my life in my hands and tried to cross with the green light. It is unfortunate that my green light and the cars' green light are one and the same. Cars turn right, cars turn left, they sneak around corners on red lights, and all this with complete disregard for the life or limb of those forced to rely on their feet for locomotion. When I say "complete disregard" I mean just that.

It has been my experience in most cities that while the rules of the game are the same, the drivers usually give the pedestrians an even chance to get out of the way. Not so in Peterborough. It is horrifying to see a car rushing upon you with rather a gain in speed than a slackening when it is obvious that the driver sees you in his path and cares not one whit.

When this happened the first time, I put it down to one driver's peculiar attitude. However, this has happened so often that I am sure some lunch hour when I am hungry and weakened from a long morning's work, I either won't see the approaching car or will not have the strength to leap out of the way, and don't you believe for one moment that there will be a screeching of brakes to save me; there will merely be fiendish laughter and some Peterborough motorist will be able to paint another little man on the side of his car.

It might help if someone could point out to the local motorist that the pedestrian is as much a part of the traffic bylaw, as is a ten ton truck, and I should like him to accord me as much respect.

CUELTY TO ANIMALS

Sir: I am writing to express my deepest sympathy for those animals who have been so cruelly neglected, (I believe for the third time) as reported by your paper, and I would like to know why the man is allowed to keep animals? Surely, a jail sentence might have brought the man to his senses; fines have not done any good in that respect, and as for the man being too old for a jail term, lots of people older than he have gone to jail. Jail is really too good for a man that is so inhuman in the treatment of animals. The Humane Society have done their best and if those with more authority do not support them, then there is no hope for the animals, or much use for a Humane Society. This particular individual should have an examination to inquire into his mentality.

Yours,
A LOVER OF ANIMALS.

CONDUCT AT BAND CONCERTS

Sir: May I use the medium of your columns to express my appreciation to the Peterborough Citizens' Band for the very delightful concert presented in King Edward Park on Tuesday evening. Let us hope that the meagre attendance will not discourage further attempts for our benefit.

In view of the number of very young hoodlums, whose main excuse for being present seemed purely for the purpose of annoying the bandsmen and raising a general hullabaloo, I would suggest that in future there be more supervision, or that they be asked to stay out of earshot.

Then too, it is scarcely the time and place for friends and neighbours to catch up on their visiting, and distract the listening public with loud and incessant conversations.

Perhaps if the Recreation Commission could see fit to favour us more regularly with the enjoyable privilege of anticipating these events, we could gradually educate ourselves to listen quietly and gain the full benefit of good music undiluted by the discordant note of chatter, punctuated by staccato shrieks.

Thanking you, I am
Yours truly
ONE MUSIC LOVER.

It's A Privilege

(Regina Leader-Post)

It apparently is becoming an annual chore for Provincial Treasurer Fines to take Saskatchewan's hotelmen to task for the shortcomings of those who, it is claimed, are more interested in making money out of selling beer than in providing good accommodation for the travelling public. In his address to the convention of the Hotels Association of Saskatchewan, Mr. Fines dwelt with added emphasis on the recurring annual theme. He contended that operating a beer parlour licence was a privilege and not a right, a privilege which could be taken away from the hotels if it were abused.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side. And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee withersoever thou goest.

And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead. (Matt. 8: 18-22.)

✧ ✧

Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. (Col. 3: 2-4.)

✧ ✧

For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. (Rom. 8: 6.)

They Were Never Short of These

(Financial Post)

There was one thing the British were never short of during the war and the years that have followed. That was official forms.

For almost every transaction there was something to be filled out, always in duplicate and often a great deal more. It is estimated that housewives had to clip and present no less than 68 billion food coupons since rationing began. These were collected and tabulated by the retail merchants, who in addition were required to fill in and send to the Government no less than 20 million official forms every year.

Now with the end of a good deal of rationing this enormous amount of "paper-work" is beginning to disappear and consumers and merchants are heaving a sigh of relief. But the bureaucrats are yielding ground reluctantly. To them filling in forms and reporting this and that is a sort of religion. They don't seem to realize that the average man thinks otherwise, looks on this sort of thing as largely red tape and a sheer waste of time especially when the war has been over five years and production is in full blast again.

Up in Scotland the other day a Canadian wanted a travelling bag. The price was steep and the merchant was asked if the overseas visitor couldn't get this minus the heavy purchase tax. He could, said the storekeeper in Aberdeen, but it would mean filling in a great batch of forms, sending to London and waiting weeks for a refund. For his part he wasn't interested. He would rather go broke than bother. To the bureaucrat that sort of businessman was a dangerous individual. To the Canadian he seemed like a very normal human being.

Watch Effects Of Defence On Housing Plan

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

OTTAWA, July 21 — (CP) — Government officials are going to watch closely the effect of the accelerated defense programs of Canada and United States in this country's housing construction program.

An official of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said Thursday that a slowing down of the home-building boom in United States could mean a reduction in lumber purchases in Canada.

This would ease the lumber situation in Canada. Heavy U.S. demand for Canadian lumber has sent lumber prices soaring recently and caused shortages in various Canadian cities.

But a better lumber supply might be offset by a shortage of other building materials. Increased use of steel on defense could cause a shortage of such things as bathtubs and furnaces.

Too Early To Tell

The official said it was too early yet to forecast what may happen in coming months. The corporation plans to obtain complete information on President Truman's new orders to the Federal Housing and Veterans' Administration.

Mr. Truman ordered the two administrations Tuesday to demand higher down payments and to cut down on building programs generally in order to provide more building materials for defense purposes. He also recommended that Congress authorize more controls to curb expansion of privately financed real estate credit.

The official here said he did not think any similar action was planned by the Canadian Government.

About 96,000 homes were built under government and private enterprise sponsorship last year. It had been expected a similar number would be built this year, but so far home construction has been spotty.

London's Coat Of Arms Phony After 95 Years

LONDON, Ont., July 21 (CP). London's 95-year-old coat of arms is a phony.

The design affixed to millions of letters, notices, proclamations, and debenture bonds has the legal status of the one adorning Confederate dollars.

It all goes back to a lapse on the part of councillors of 1855, perpetuated over the years by successors. No by-law to confirm the arms was ever passed and won't be for at least two weeks. City Clerk R. H. Cooper, who discovered the situation, told the Mayor who asked him to draft a by-law for the Council meeting of August 7, to officially establish the coat-of-arms as London's.

QUEBEC, July 21 — (CP). — L'Union des Electeurs, Quebec Social Credit organization, announced Thursday it has sent a telegram to Prime Minister St. Laurent declaring itself "firmly opposed" to any dispatch of Canadian troops to Korea. The Union said it has asked for Canadian neutrality in all conflicts between foreign countries.

Held For Intimidation

GODERICH, July 21 (CP). — J. V. Haughey of Toronto was remanded for two weeks on renewed bail by Magistrate D. E. Holmes Thursday. He is held on charges of intimidating two members of the Canadian Seamen's Union while trying to collect dues and assaulting one of them.

World Teachers Discuss Salary Levels

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP) — Teachers from around the world today turned attention to the level of salaries in their profession.

Up for discussion at the week-long gathering of the world organization of the teaching profession are the reports of section meetings on public relations and teachers' salaries.

Later today the 150-odd delegates representing 2,000,000 teachers from more than 25 countries were to resume a study of education and peace that Thursday sparked a prolonged discussion on United Nations problems.

The U.N. discussion was highlighted by pleas from a U.S. delegate for a United Nations' police force and from an Indian delegate for the inclusion of Communist China in U.N. assembles.

Dr. Willard E. Givens of Washington, executive secretary of the U.S. National Education Association said the U.N. must have power to back up its orders — promptly and vigorously—if it is to get very far.

H. S. S. Lawrence of India said all countries including Communist China should be represented in the U.N. The world teachers should help stress that the U.N. is not meant for a mere majority of nations.

The WOTP committee on education and peace approved a recommendation that the organization work towards appointment of a permanent representative at the U.N. and also recommend that teachers exchange text books as a check for accuracy in history and geography.

Begin New Life

TILLSONBURG, July 21 (CP) —When Mr. and Mrs. Willis D'Eon returned from their honeymoon Thursday the groom did not carry the bride across the threshold of their new home in traditional style. Both bride and bridegroom were in wheel chairs. Paralyzed from the waist down, and destined to wheel chairs for life, they met in a Toronto hospital.

NATURE UNSPOILED

YOURS TO PROTECT

The GOLDFINCH is the common "canary" we see all-year round. The male is solid yellow, with black cap, wings and tail. The yellow warbler is all yellow. In winter he's much duller in color. He lives on seeds, beetles and insects, and should be protected.

East City Gets Neat One To Tie For 2nd

East City moved into a second-place tie with UEW by beating the latter team 9-5 at the Bowl last night in a snappy City Softball League struggle. A five-run splash on walks, errors and one hit in the fourth frame clinched matters as UE lapsed for the one inning. Otherwise, it was a fast, tight tilt with Ken Hall giving but eight hits as Lefty Doris allowed just one more. The East Citizens proved better opportunists to gain the duke, finishing strong with three markers on bunched blows in the eighth heat.

Al Cournyea led the winners at bat with two for three, while Doris helped his cause with two triples in four tries and Red Sullivan had a double in two chances. Curry also doubling. Jim Conlin of UE had a triple and single in four, and Hall two singles in four appearances. Legrow got two for five, and White a two-baser. Neat catches were made by Cornwall and Doris.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

You would think with the lawn bowling season at its height that there would be plenty of bowling news; but believe us, it is scarce, and we are having a hard time writing this column. Now, don't misunderstand us on that last statement—we are all right, but what is bothering us is the lack of news.

We know some of our boys were over at Port Perry Wednesday, but we have no report. We also know that some of our bowlers were down at Port Hope on the half-holiday, but again no report. However, we are getting there.

Here's a piece of news that came to us about 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Down at Beleville on Tuesday playing in the ladies' trebles tournament, the local ladies brought everything home but the clubhouse—they just took first, second and third, not bad; and all three game winners:

First—Mrs. L. Riley, Mrs. J. Arnold, Mrs. W. Hepburn, skip.

Second—Mrs. H. Beatty, Mrs. L. Bearne, Mrs. F. Staunton, skip.

Third—Mrs. H. Wilson, Mrs. R. Dyer, Mrs. C. Renaud, skip.

Do you believe this: The Federal Personnel Manual carried this revealing sentence: "The death of an employee automatically ends his employment."

We have been asked to make this announcement—the entries for the provincial play-offs — singles, doubles and rinks close this evening. See A. Black.

Tonight we have men's trebles —draw from the board—7:30 p.m.

The winning pairs on Wednesday evening were: Mrs. T. Owens and G. Spence; Mrs. P. Moore and H. Taylor; Mrs. J. Adams and S. Wildman.

The secretary has a very important notice posted on the blackboard. Read it.

Southenders Win

Southenders edged East City 5-4 in another neat juvenile baseball encounter at Riverside last night, putting southend one up in their schedule. The winners got but four hits off Murdock in eight innings and one off Batchelor, while the losers had only three safeties off Dorrfis, who fanned nine. Murdock whiffed a dozen and Batchelor two. The losers had the tying run on third in the ninth when the last batter fanned. No one got more than one safe blow. Teams:

Southend—Jensen cf, Jones 3b, Young c, Douglas ss, Ginn lf, Buckton 1b, Anderson 2b, Brioux rf, Dorris p.

Mutuals Take 12-3 Win Over Orphans

Mutuals pounded out a 12-3 men's softball decision over Orphans at the Bowl last night, their 15 hits including triples by Dalton, Foster and Leether, as Bob Greenlaw and Crowe conked doubles. The Orphans hit fairly well, too, to get 10 hits, two of them doubles by Bill Lewis, with Grafstein and Crowley also good for two-base blows. Crowe led the winners at bat with three for four, as Dalton had three in five tries. Pryde, Foster and Leether also had two hits. Lewis led the losers with three in five as Riches got two for four.

Each side used two twirlers, Burt Harrison giving away in the sixth for Arn Riches on Orphans' mound. Bob Greenlaw started for Mutuals but went to first later on as Howie Dalton took the slab in the sixth, and the latter looked good in his first pitching job of the season, giving but three hits up as he fanned four. Each team reeled off one double-play.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

The Mounties always get their man, 'tis said, and one suspects that the Mimico Mounties have this as a motto, also, in OLA senior "A" competition. In any case, they play a right rugged checking game as fans will see again in Miller Bowl tonight. But they are meeting a husky and scrappy Peterborough pack, presently in second place and determined to hold that spot at all costs. Other clubs around this strong circuit have a healthy respect for the Petes this season, and well they might, as the locals are playing fine lacrosse. Crowd-pleasing contests and really drawing the customers once more.

* * * * * *

Fresh from a victory over Dovers, the New Toronto nine will be on deck at Riverside tomorrow aft at three. Playing the Petes a Viaduct Major League ball game, an important one as these two battle it out for third place in the hot race. New Toronto lost but one at home to Ed Murphy's men this semester and they didn't like that reverse, so they'll try hard to even the score on local terrain. No announcement as yet on the starting Petes' pitcher—could be any one of four, with possibly Ed Whitehill ready for this one. Swell ball is being served up in the loop now and the game should draw a hefty gallery.

Guess We Lose A Hat

Must be about four years ago when Dr. Art Johnston bet us a new hat that the Memorial Centre would never be built. He was disappointed when the Morrow Park site fell through, while we were more interested in seeing a central site. However, the Doc bet a chapeau it would be postponed indefinitely and we'd never live to see the completed job. Looked like a cinch of a bet to us and we snapped it up. How could we lose? But as the years roll on with not even a site selected yet—and no action apparent even on that aspect—we're beginning to think we'd better toss away our battered lid and buy a new one. We doubt now if we'll ever win that one.

Ed Feigner, pitcher extraordinary, and his four-man softball team plays Tip Tops at the CNE on Aug. 25. The "king and his court" use four players against a regular team and win most of their games 'gainst topnotch opposition. Feigner is a trick artist of a twirler, and hails from Richland, Wash. This odd outfit has a few open dates around Aug. 25 and will play any all-star squad in the province. If interested, write G. N. Duthie, CNE sports director, Toronto, at once. The OASA will sanction such exhibitions. Johnny Russelle will have a local team in the CNE tourney once more.

Schedule Almost Over

Two snappy jousts run of at the Bowl last night by the men softballers as the schedule nears a windup. Mutuals had too much power for the Orphans to win 12-3, while East City hustled all the way to earn a 9-5 verdict over UEW, and these two teams are now tied for second spot. They'll settle it in the second game Saturday night, Orphans playing Mutuals again. That will wind up the schedule and there'll be a two-week layoff ere semi-finals start betwixt East City and UEW. Meantime, Harold Dormer will put these Orphans in shape to go into junior OASA playdowns: Bigford, Doris, Hall, Riches and Ash as pitchers, Griffin and McGrath catching, infielders Evans, Grafstein, Pammett, Thompson and Casey, with outfielders Floyd, Wyatt and Leo Sullivan. They'll play exhibitions with Mutuals next Tuesday and Thursday nights at 8.30.

A bunch of first-class senior "B" hockeyists in this city —provincial champs in '49 and finalists last spring — are seeking a sponsor. The Legionnaires will no longer carry that name but the players plan to operate again, on their own if necessary. A meeting will be held by them next week to talk things oer. There has been some talk of Cherney's taking over the squad, but that's in the air as yet. And a suggestion was made yesterday that the IOOF might be interested in running both this senior "B" and the present Triple Links junior "B" teams. It's a thought, anyway, to mull over in the warm weather. The Peterborough Hockey Club will again operate a senior "B" club when artificial ice returns to Civic Arena.

Lown Pitches Montreal To 6-5 Victory

By The Associated Press.

The pitching of Omar (Turk) Lown, strong-armed righthander of Montreal Royals, is one of the top surprises of the International League season.

Lown won only one game and lost seven for Royals last year before he was shipped to Fort Worth of the Texas League where he starred, winning eight and losing one.

His fine showing at Fort Worth earned him another crack with Royals and he has gone through brilliantly.

Lown turned in his ninth victory of the season Thursday night as he pitched the Royals to a 6-5 victory over the league-leading Rochester Red Wings.

Russ Derry was Lown's chief irritant, driving home all of Rochester's runs on a single and grand-slam homer.

Remain Ahead

Despite the defeat the Wings remained 2½ games ahead of the runner-up Baltimore Orioles, who lost 12-10 to Jersey City Giants.

Bill Voiselle made his first start for Springfield a successful one as he pitched the Cubs to a 4-2 10-inning victory over Syracuse Chiefs.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Bisons split a twin bill, the Bisons grabbing the opener 4-3 and the Leafs the finale 5-4.

Bob Wellman singled home the winning run in the opener in the seventh. The Leafs wrapped up the second game with a four-run blast in the third that was featured by Alex Grabowski's three-run double.

Petes Tied For Third In Viaduct Ball Loop

The Petes and New Toronto are tied in third place in the Viaduct Baseball League standing, as of July 19, with 11 wins and nine defeats each, two and a half games behind the second-place Toronto Aces, with Oshawa leading the pack. Following is the official standing on July 19 as issued by Jack Leslie of Toronto:

Oshawa	26	19	7
Aces	21	14	7
Petes	20	11	9
New Toronto	20	11	9
Dovers	23	6	17
Staffords	23	6	17

Surely Not That!

HAVELOCK, July 21 (ENS)—Norwood girls won an exhibition softball affair over Havelock here Wednesday by the extraordinary score of 57-3. Someone must have kept count of the runs. Teams:

Norwood — E. Hall, B. Andrews, M. Shoup, S. Rusaw, R. Richardson, L. Stackhouse, L. Hie, E. Fleming, R. Baskin, H. Wilfred, F. Hogg, E. Gill, V. Baker.

Havelock — V. Green, A. McIntyre, H. Oliver, B. Brooks, S. Wight, J. Graham, E. Forsyth, R. Brooks, E. Graham, J. Wight.

Cincinnati Hands Lacing To Brooks In Twin Bill

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Shades of 1914. Can Luke Sewell perform a miracle at Cincinnati?

You have to stretch a point to call seventh-place Cincinnati, 11½ games out of first, a pennant factor. But you can tip your hat to Sewell for the Red revival. The man who led the St. Louis Browns to their only pennant doesn't quit.

Last by 17 lengths June 24 the Reds may not qualify as the 1950 miracle team but they sure are the Dodger-killers. If Branch Rickey muffs the pennant, he can blame Cincy.

The sizzling Reds polished off the ambitious Brooks Thursday night in both ends of a twilight-night doubleheader, 3-1 and 6-2. That made it eight of 11 over the Dodgers this season and 19 wins in their last 25 starts. Or, if you prefer, 21 of 29.

Kenny Raffensberger's cunning control stuff silenced the Brooks in the opener despite Don Newcombe's five-hitter. Then Ewell (the Whip) Blackwell struck out nine in a sizzling night performance. Neither Cincy pitcher walked a man all night.

Ted Kluszewski was the big man of the first game. His first-inning single drove in one of two Cincy runs and his 17th homer in the sixth added the last.

Three Games Behind

As a result, the Dodgers are three full games behind St. Louis and Cincy is only a half-game behind the sixth-place New York Giants.

While Cincinnati lowered the boom on Brooklyn, New York Giants bounced back to smother St. Louis 13-3. The loss didn't cost the Cardinals the lead but narrowed their advantage over Boston and Philadelphia to a single game.

The rained-out Braves didn't have a chance to gain and the Phillies missed their opportunity bowing to Pittsburgh, 10-8, in a slugfest that lasted almost three hours. Ted Beard, Gus Bell and Danny O'Connell each had three hits in the 16-hit attack.

The most important series of the American League season, so far, starts tonight at Yankee Stadium when Detroit opens a three-game set with New York. The Yankees, winning 11 of their last 14, have narrowed the Tigers' lead to 2½ games.

Probable Lineup

With Joe DiMaggio back in centre field, Manager Casey Stengel will lead off with Vic Raschi against the Tigers' Ted Gray. Red Rolfe probably will use Hal Newhouser.

The clubs are all even in 10 meetings, with the Yanks holding a slim 3-2 bulge at the stadium.

Everybody closed in on the Tigers Thursday when they lost to Boston, 6-5, in 11 innings. The runner-up New York Yankees, not scheduled to play, gained a half game. Cleveland and Boston each picked up a full game. Dom DiMaggio's double off Art Houtteman scored Billy Goodman with the winning Red Sox run to cap an uphill struggle.

Sam Zoldak and Bob Kennedy teamed up on Philadelphia for Cleveland's 3-2 victory in 11 innings. As a result the Tribe is only 4½ games back of Detroit. Kennedy tied the score with a homer off Alex Kellner after two were out in the ninth. Zoldak, who replaced Steve Gromek in the seventh, shut out the A's with two hits the rest of the way.

Rain postponed the scheduled night game between Chicago and Washington. It also washed out the daytime game in the National between Boston and Chicago.

Say Mawhinney Looks Good In Golf Tourney

By W. R. WHEATLEY.

SASKATOON GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB, July 21 (CP) —The golfwise who insist on watching medal scores in match play competition handed out a free tip today: keep your eyes on Bill Mawhinney.

There was sound reasoning behind it. In the five rounds played in the Canadian amateur golf championship, the Vancouver Quilchena star hasn't had a bad one. He shot sub-par golf Thursday in the quarter-finals.

The speculation was that Mawhinney will be the finalist Saturday against Nick Weslock, of Windsor.

Weslock has been a consistent winner by good margins too.

At the same time, the school that laughs off medal scores pointed to the accomplishments of Jerry Kesselring of Kitchener, and Vern Mohs of Edmonton. They wouldn't be in the semi-finals, it was argued, unless they had something.

The four had enough Thursday to bang out victories in high winds and enter the semi-finals—all for the first time.

Leaves No Doubt

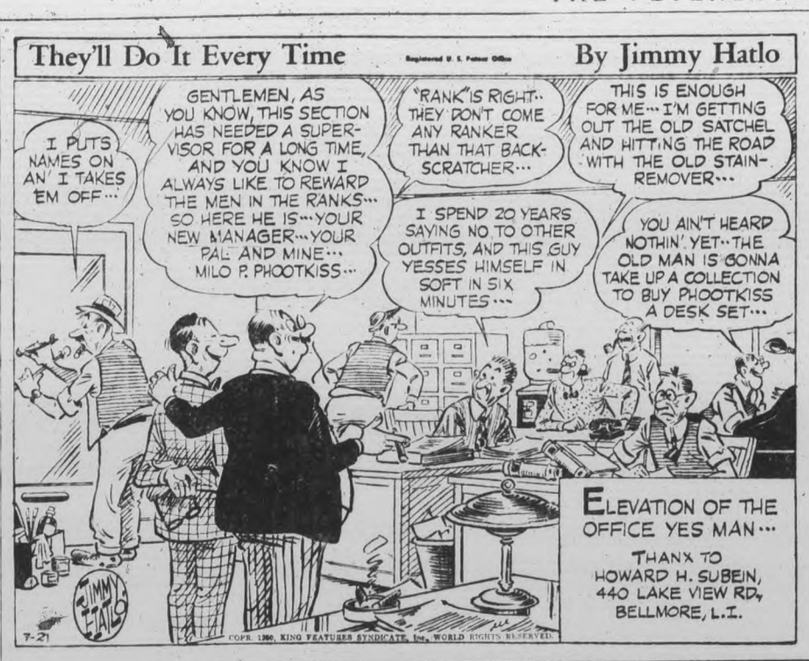
Mawhinney shot a brilliant two under par to defeat Don Doe of Granby, Que., 5 and 4. There was never any doubt of the outcome after Doe dropped four of the first five holes.

Weslock fired an even par, as the reckoning goes, in disposing of Hugh Morrison of Vancouver. He allowed Morrison to take only one hole.

On the other hand, Kesselring was reported "a little over par" but his 4 and 2 win over Allan Boes of Winnipeg was no mean accomplishment for the 21-year-old Kitchener boy.

Mohs, long a veteran in tournament play, capitalized on the mistakes of Bob Hall of Montreal to win 2 and 1, with the closest margin of the day. Hall had a brief one-hole lead and although he later squared the match he couldn't keep pace with Mohs' steady play.

The battle between Mawhinney and Kesselring is viewed as the tidbit match. Both are former Canadian junior champions. If Mohs defeats Weslock it will rank as the greatest upset of the tournament.



Truman Officials Discuss Price-Wage Controls

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP) —The possibility of price-wage controls in the United States was discussed today by Truman administration officials. Congressmen also demanded action to take the profits out of the Korean war.

Most of these demands came in the form of proposals for early enactment of an excess profits tax aimed at profiteering.

But one administration official who declined to be quoted by name told a reporter that unless there is a drop in rapidly-increasing prices, controls of that nature may not be far away.

President Truman left the road open in his Wednesday message to Congress to call later for such curbs on the U.S. economy but they were omitted from the administration's defence production bill.

Some Republicans complained that the powers requested by the President are too broad. Some Democrats said they don't want Congress to vote authority in the bill for the government to go into competition with private business.

Meantime, the government — disturbed by increases in prices and evidence of consumer hoarding — is working on a report to convince the public it need not fear food shortages because of the Korean war.

Saturday Report

The report, being drafted by the Agriculture Department, will be made public Saturday night.

Repeated official assurances that food supplies are plentiful were said by officials to have slowed down, but not stopped, the heavy consumer buying of sugar, canned goods and other non-perishable foods.

The report is expected to say that, on the basis of present conditions, there is no valid reason for a higher general level of food prices during the next six months.

Prices of some foods, it will say, should go down in the fall—particularly meats. Supplies of wheat for flour and bakery products are 30 or 40 per cent above anticipated market demands. Feed grain supplies are ample to maintain production of meats, milk and poultry products at a higher level than now. World sugar production is setting a record this year and much of the extra supply is in areas close to the United States.

Steel Allocation

The Control Bill now before Congress would provide for allocation of steel and other materials to defence plants if necessary, power to limit production of civilian goods; restoration of consumer credit controls; and government authority to "transport, store, process and refine" materials.

Senator Paul Douglas (Dem.-Ill.), a memebr of the key Senate Banking Committee which will begin hearings on the Control Bill Monday, told a reporter he thinks the best way of avoiding price controls is to clap increased taxes on those who might be tempted to profiteer.

It is estimated that an excess profits tax of the style used in the Second World War would raise $8,000,000,000. Truman already has said he will ask $10,000,000,000 extra spending money and there is talk of an additional $5,000,000,000 to arm anti-Communist countries.

The theory behind an excess profits tax is that, by taking all of a corporations profits beyond a normal return, the incentive to make a lot of money is weakened.

Speedy approval seemed on the way for two military measures—to take all statutory limits off the size of the armed forces and to hold all men in uniform an extra 12 months.

Royal Garden Party

LONDON, July 21 — (AP) — The King and Queen entertained 6,000 guests at a royal garden party Thursday. It was the second of two informal gatherings at Buckingham Palace. The only disappointment to the guests was the non-appearance of Princess Margaret, who was confined to the palace with a cold.

"I think I'll have good movement in the arm and be able to play in six weeks," he said.

But his doctors, orthopedic surgeon Joseph Shortell and Joseph McCarthy, club physician, are doubtful if Ted can return again this season.

Another track record tumbled at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto Thursday when Castle Brook owned by Louis Mack, of Hamilton, did 1.16 2-5 for five furlongs.

Castle Brook a three-year-old gelding sired by Miller Brook, paid $15.75 in establishing the new track mark in the third race.

Most popular winner of the day for the crowd was J. L. Van, which won the seventh race for J. L. Waples of Midland. The fans backed J. L. Van heavily and he obliged by making every post [illegible] Keith Waples took his to the front immediately and he paid $4.10.

Best price of the day was provided by Sir Peter L., owned by Dr. V. H. Logheed of Dundalk, Ont., which won the fourth and paid $49.10.

Prince Ali Khan has named a horse after his wife, movie actress Rita Hayworth.

He registered "Rita" with the Jockey Club in London Thursday as the name of a bay filly foal.

"Rita" is by Souverain out of Solace II.

England's batting again failed miserably against the West Indies on a feather-bed pitch when the third test cricket match began in Nottingham, England, Thursday.

England scored 223 runs in the first innings. The West Indies replied with 77 for one wicket. That was the score at the close of play.

Heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles will defend his title in Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 15 in a 15-round bout with Freddie Beshore, promoter Dewey Michaels of the Fairview Athletic Club said on Thursday night.

A seven-under par 65 that flowed from his smoothly-working putter Thursday gave Jim Ferrier, 35-year-old San Francisco professional, the lead at the end of the first 18 holes in the St. Paul $15,000 open golf tournament.

One stroke behind Ferrier with a 66 was Skee Riegel, Tulsa, Okla. pro.

Two Toronto junior baseball players will sign contracts with the Brooklyn Dodgers organization for next year, scout Dick Fischer announced Thursday at the close of the annual three-day tryout camp conducted by the Dodgers at Welland.

Fischer said the pair—pitcher Moe Galand and catcher Stan Shaldon of Toronto Peter Pans—will report next spring to Dodgers' Sheboygan, Wisc., farm team, a class "D" club in the Wisconsin State League.

Slo-Mo-Shun Makes Impressive Showing

DETROIT, July 21, (AP)—The world's fastest speedboat, Slo-Mo-Shun IV, looked today like an impressive contender for the Gold Cup in the race classic on the Detroit River Saturday.

Slo-Mo-Shun IV became the third boat to qualify Thursday for the race. Some observers had questioned her ability to take the sharp turns on the river course. But she did it under wraps and qualified with an average speed of 87.42 miles an hour.

The craft, owned by Stanley Sayres, Seattle automobile executive, posted a world record of 160.3235 miles an hour for a measured mile on Lake Washington a month ago.

Her pilot, Ted Jones, a Boeing Airplane engineer, estimated he hit a top mark of 140 m.p.h. on the straightaways in the nine-mile qualifier.

Adjourn Negotiations

WINDSOR, July 21 (CP) — Negotiations were adjourned Thursday until Monday between officers of Canadian Industries Limited and United Automobile Workers (CIO), as the strike of 50 CIL office workers in Windsor ended its second week.

The volume of Canada's production now is about 75 per cent higher than in 1939.

Give Jet a Name

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP)—Canada's sleek, powerful jet fighter —the CF-100—has been named "The Canuck." Defence Minister Claxton announced the new name for the long-range, all-weather fighter during a radio broadcast Thursday night.

Noor To Leave California

INGLEWOOD, Calif., July 21 (AP)—Noor, the Irish horse who just 10 months ago started a phenomenal racing career in California, bids farewell to the State Saturday at Hollywood Park.

The dark streak goes postward in the mile and one quarter $50,000 American handicap, wind-up stake on Hollywood's summer meeting. He faces two formidable obstacles.

One is a stubborn little grey fighter from the Argentine, Miche. The other is a top-heavy impost of 132 pounds, the most he's ever been asked to carry.

There'll be a couple of other challengers in the field, maybe [illegible] Silver Creek Ranch's Dharan, Frank Frankel's Frankly, and possibly Clifford Mooers' Old Rockport, or E. O. Stice's On Trust.

Noor, racing under the silks of the late Charles S. Howard and once again ridden by veteran Johnny Longden, spots Miche 20 pounds.

Night Must Fall Noted Play Of Subtle Terror

An ususualy spine-tingling thriller, "Night Must Fall" is being presented by the Peterborough Summer Theatre next week opening at the Queen Mary Auditorium Monday night. This play, one of Emlyn Williams most famous, will make even the toughest skin tingle.

Oxford-educated Welsh Emlyn Williams is among Britain's most able actors and men of the theatre. His play Night Must Fall, thrilling drama though it is, is far from being a run-of-the-mill thriller. Its characterization is subtly conceived, there is a remarkable lyricism to the atmosphere, and a goodly bit of sheer psychological terror. Danny, the hero and villain at the same time, is a significant stage creation. The play has had long runs in London and New York, and, as a film, was one of the most successful of its year.

Catherine Proctor portrays Mrs. Bransom, a chronic invalide who rules those in her house with an iron hand. Bill Hutt is cast as the charming and sinister Danny who enters the lives of Mrs. Bransom and her secretary-niece, Olivia. Blonde Charmion King, who played self surrounded by an evil she cannot understand. This play is different in tone and theme from anything the Summer Theatre has presented as yet this season.

Following "Night Must Fall" will be Leslie Howard's heart-warming farce, "Elizabeth Sleeps Out", in place of "Edward My Son" which was originally scheduled. This play was written by Mr. Howard for himself several seasons ago, and proved to be a great success both in London and New York.

New Play Named

Robertson Davies' new play, 'At My Hearts Core", will be played for the first time the week of August 28th This play is of intimate interest to Peterborough theatre goers, for it concerns the first settlers of this city and has been written specially for Peterborough's centennial summer.

Want Our Planes

BONN, Germany, July 21 (AP) —A West German official said Thursday his government will ask the Allies to let Germans build and fly their civil aircraft again. Allied control of civil aviation is a means of preventing German rearmament.

Dissolve 2 Groups

TOKYO, July 21—(AP)—Japan's attorney-general today ordered dissolved two Communist groups in Tokyo—both charged with criticizing the occupation and taking part in terroristic acts. Eighteen officers of the two groups were purged from public life.

CANUCK IN FAR EAST — David Streit, 19-year-old Canadian who ate his way into the United States Army, is one of the few Canadians who may see action in the Korean War. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Streit of Kitchener, Ont., said the last letter she received from him was written from Japan. Two years ago Streit went on an eating spree to reach minimum weight requirements when told he was too light.

Hot Rod Autos On Way Out Now

VANCOUVER, —(CP) — Hot rod autos—long the bane of Vancouver police and pedestrians — are on the way out. And it's all due to the hot-rod drivers themselves.

The demise of the souped-up jalopies came with the birth of genuine speedway racing and eager participation in the sport by many of the one-time terrors of public highways.

Since the legitimate racing started several months ago, police say they have nearly forgotten the hot rod menace. "I guess the boys have seen the light," commented one police official.

Thirty-five former jalopy jockeys form the membership of the B. C. Roadster Racing Association, which stages twice-weekly races before crowds at a new speedway in suburban Burnaby.

Racing a total of 15 supercharged old model automobiles, members ranging from 19 to 25 years satisfy the speed mania without hazarding public safety.

The public is also protected by an association rule prohibiting members racing on public roads. An offense brings automatic suspension. So far the rule has not been broken.

Across Canada

Saskatchewan Quite Frank On Condition of Highways

By JACK SCOTT.

MOOSE JAW, Sask. — We are in a nine dollar room of Moose Jaw's Grant Hotel tonight, looking down on the town's neon-lit main street, on which every second establishment seems to be a billiard hall, and I'm afraid that the morale of our expedition is scraping bottom.

Earlier, over dinner we had a formal meeting with the full quorum in attendance, and discussed the pros and cons of the question: "Is it worthwhile to keep on going?"

It took a pretty black day to get us down to that essential question. It was that kind of a day.

As chairman, I opened this glum session with a resume of certain well-established facts.

"Well, girls," I said, "We had better face it. The roads are even worse than we'd expected they'd be. It doesn't look as if they're going to get any better. The trailer just can't stand up to them, as we found out today to our sorrow.

"We are having such a time getting from place to place we just aren't discovering the country the way we hoped we would. Should we call it off? Or sneak down through the States to get around the prairies? Or should we carry on this way?"

Brown Eyes took the stand in defense of the original plans. "This is supposed to be a report on a Canadian trailer trip, good or bad," she pointed out. "It's no picnic now, but we've had some good times and it's all been interesting and I think we ought to press on."

We didn't bother to put it to a vote. Just got out the maps and figured our next jump eastward.

The trouble against today was roads. Or what the Saskatchewan government laughingly refers to as roads.

Before we left Medicine Hat I'd been reading a report on this province by Cecil Carnes, an American travel writer whose book, "You Must See Canada" is worth reading.

Carnes had been surprised to find that Saskatchewan is brutally frank about its highways. A Tourist Bureau official he questioned said firmly, 'In most cases, if it has rained, you can't drive over them." Carnes' own word, after looking them over, was simply, "atrocious."

I was remembering his description when we left Alberta behind. The road from Medicine Hat is black top until the provincial border. The border is marked by a modest sign saying, "Welcome to Saskatchewan." Before you can say a mental "thank you" a washboard gravel surface starts to give you a rivet-gun jolting.

After a few teeth-chattering miles of this highway—good old Trans-Canada Highway No. 1—we came upon one of the inevitable detours. It looked like a country lane and when we turned into it we saw it leading through the rippling grain field for 20 or 30 miles ahead. "Right into the sky", as Judy put it.

It had been raining in these parts. This foolish little road was like milk chocolate that's been sitting in the sun. In ten minutes the trailer was larded with mud.

Occasionally we'd come to a dip and plunge with a prayer through a small lake of sepia water.

The car and trailer slithered from one slick side to the other. Only luck kept it from the deep gumbo on either side. Two trucks hadn't been as lucky. They were buried down to their running boards in goo. The drivers sat patiently in their cabs, smoking cigarettes, waiting for help.

There must have been 40 miles of this torture. When we squirted out of it finally, 20 miles from Moose Jaw, we'd lost our last stubborn faith in Canadian roads.

Ten miles farther along the trailer's right hand tire blew out. Before I could get it under control our travelling home was in the ditch, leaning at a perilous angle, and with all that mud on it, looking a pretty sorrowful sight.

I'd been expecting something like this right along. Our rig has been taking some severe punishment from old No. 1. On a hard surface she glides along beautifully, but on the kind of road that girds our proud dominion she takes a brutal beating clearly not anticipated by the manufacturers.

We unhitched the car, drove into town and picked up a mechanic and a jack that would lift baby up. Turned out that not only the heavy tire and "puncture-proof" tube were shot to pieces, but the wheel itself was squashed beyond repair.

They towed her into town and squeezed her through the door of a garage and tonight there's a mechanic, at time-and-a-half, trying to get her back into shape again. It's the first time in two months that we've been out of our "home" and although the kids are delighted with a hotel room and the magic of room service, we're getting just a little tired of facing a new crisis every time we move.

I am still hopeful that we can get this away from being a road report and into something a little more entertaining and hope you will bear with us. We will get to the other side if we have to haul the thing by our teeth.

Cement Supplies In Peterborough Envy Of Others

Peterborough is doing well for building supplies in comparison with some other Ontario centres. Builders in Sudbury are experiencing a crippling shortage of cement which has created the worst situation in building since the war, but in Peterborough supplies are as plentiful as they have been at any time in the past five years.

In Sudbury, the most acute shortage to strike the construction industry since the war is holding up builders this month and no relief appears to be in sight.

Peterborough builders are experiencing no such difficulty, although they say the supplies have been far from good ever since the war. Work is progessing this month according to schedule though and no difficulty is anticipated.

City Engineer W. B. McMullen of Sudbury says that enough cement would be available for the city's large projects, including a $300,000 railway underpass, the $1,000,000 civic arena and the main highway into Sudbury from the east.

Both contractors and suppliers blame the shortage on an unanticipated 20 per cent building boom throughout Canada this year.

Two Tourists See Man Go Over Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, NY, July 20 — (AP). — Two tourists said today they saw a man about 65 or 70 years old, swept over Niagara Falls. They told police they saw him wading in the water near Prospect Point. Within seconds he was carried off his feet and over the Falls. They said he was wearing a dark suit and had white or grey hair.

He is the second man in 48 hours to go over the American cataract. Tuesday an unidentified man, apparently between 30 and 35, was swept over the Falls. Neither body has been recovered.

Seek Missing Gun

TORONTO, July 21 (CP)—Police and lifesavers will use powerful magnets today in the Humber River in an attempt to locate the gun with which Harry Hertzman, Bloor Street haberdasher, was slugged in a holdup attempt July 7. William E. McBride, 20, of Toronto, was arrested Thursday on charges of assaulting and attempting to rob the haberdasher

Applications Doubled

EDMONTON, July 21 (CP)—Applications for enlistment in the Canadian army, many prompted by the Korean war, have more than doubled in Alberta and British Columbia since June 1, a spokesman for western command said Thursday.

Granted Remand

TORONTO, July 21. (CP) — John Robertson, 29, charged with the murder of cab driver Keith Hunter, 31, Thursday was remanded to July 28 when he appeared for preliminary hearing. Hunter was stabbed to death June 28 after a fight over a card game.

ELEPHANTS—Tons of them, and pretty girls too, will be here in Peterborough on Monday when the big Dailey Brothers five-ring railroad Circus presents two performances at the Exhibition Grounds. The Dailey show is the world's only five-ring circus, travels on a special train of 25 double-length railroad cars, and exhibits in the world's longest circus tent. Star feature of the big show this year is the famed Hugo Zachinni, the human cannon-ball, who is shot from a monster cannon across the wide expanse of the huge circus canvas arena. Performance are scheduled for 3 and 8 p.m.

Court Precedent May Be Set Up

MONTREAL, July 21. (CP)—A court precedent may be set in Quebec province today. Judge-in-Chief Edouard Archambault was to rule on the admissibility of tape recordings as evidence in the conspiracy trial of two suspended provincial police officers and a former member of the force.

The judge will listen to the recordings in a private room with the three accused, the man who made the recordings, and their lawyers.

The trio is charged with conspirining to commit three bank robberies and inciting other persons to help in two others.

Contained on the tape are supposed to be conversations between Charles-Emile Poliquin, 28, chief crown witness, and the three accused — Detective Lieut. Marcel Patenaude, head of the Provincial Police's crack hold-up squad; his assistant, Sgt. Gaston Archambault; and Paul Hervieux, dismissed detective on the force. The two officers have been suspended pending the outcome of their trial.

Poloquin is awaiting trial at St. Hyacinthe on a charge of robbing the St. Hugues, Que., sub-branch of the Banque Canadienne Nationale of $3,000 last December.

The recorded talks, Poliquin claims, had to do with the planning of the holdups and "splitting" the loot.

BUSY BRITONS

There now are 22,250,000 people at work in Britain—22,000 more than at the end of 1949.

Ghost Tram Runs Through Cornwall

CORNWALL, — (CP) — This eastern Ontario city gave up its street railway system two years ago, reverting to trolley buses. But a "ghost" tram still rattles through the streets on occasion.

Moreover, death of the trolley in Cornwall has given birth to Canada's only fraternal association of its kind—the Cornwall Street Railway Society. It has members in Ottawa and Montreal and eventually hopes to acquire members from coast to coast.

The society, headed by John Derochie, formerly of Cornwall but now employed in Montreal, is dedicated to the preservation of interest in the electric streetcar as a mode of transportation

Its prized possession—an ancient street-car donated by the Cornwall Street Railway, Light and Power Company — recently came in for an overhaul when President Derochie and other society members descended on it with paintbrushes and dolled up the exterior. The society, founded several months ago, plans special outings in August and September.

Members will take the museum piece for a ride on rails still left behind on some of the city's streets.

Take 140 Million To Clean Out Pollution

TORONTO, July 21 — (CP) — Elimination of pollution by sewage and industrial wastes on both sides of the Great Lakes would cost $140,000,000, Premier Frost of Ontario said Thursday.

He based his estimate on investigations by the International Joint Commission.

Mr. Frost said conferences had been held with industries and the federal governments to seek ways of cutting down pollution. All were co-operating to try to reduce wastes.

Movie Column

Deplores Stars Dressing Like Ranchmen

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, July 21 (AP) —Sidney Blackmer, back for another fling at the movies, today took a slam at the male stars who dress like "ranch hands"

"That is one of the biggest changes I noticed about Hollywood since I've been back," said the stage and screen veteran "And I think it's deplorable

"Back in the old days, Rudolph Valentino was never seen out of character. He always dressed and acted the role of the romantic star John Barrymore, John Gilbert and others dressed immaculately.

"But what do you see now? The actors walk around in public in blue jeans, with their shirts hanging out."

Blackmer, well pressed and nattily attired, just closed in "Come Back, Little Sheba," in which he was named Broadway's outstanding actor of the year He is playing in "The Hero" and has several other deals cooking.

Touch And Go

It has been touch and go with Blackmer and Hollywood for more than two decades. Fortune has often touched him but he always ends up going back to Broadway. He told about one instance:

"I was up for a fat contract at M.G.M. I had done several tests and Irving Thalberg wanted me to sign. I was married to Lenore Ulric at the time and I called her up in New York to tell her about it.

" 'You can't bury me in that forsaken place,' she said. 'You can either have the contract or a wife; you can't have both.'

"So I turned the contract down and flew to New York. Ulric and I started fighting the minute I got off the plane and it ended up in a divorce. Oh yes, the guy who got the contract that was intended for me was a young fellow playing locally in 'The Last Mile'—Clark Gable."

Get Heavy Haul

WINDSOR, July 21 (CP) — Burglars took a heavy haul of money from a Windsor store early Thursday. The store owner, Theodore Chaptiany, said the loot included $25 in pennies, $30 in United States coins and $20 in other change.

Injured By Thieves

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP) — Joseph Joreczek, 28, is in critical condition in hospital with a fractured skull suffered when he was severely beaten and robbed early Thursday in nearby Woodroffe. Police said they are holding James Willmott, 21, and Clifford Todd, 23, both of Ottawa.

WI Plans Visit City Factories

SELWYN, July 21 (ENS). — Selwyn Women's Institute is planning a visit to factories in Peterborough in place of the August meeting.

Thirteen members and one visitor were present at the July meeting on Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews when it was decided to sell tickets on the Institute quilt.

Mrs. E. Blewett, president, reported that safety signs at Selwyn and the schools will be put up, in the near future.

Mrs. Andrews, convener for historical research, gave many interesting facts in her talk about Selwyn and vicinity in the early days, at the time when there were two blacksmith shops, a hotel, shoemaker shop, store and post office, and three churches.

Mrs. Reg. McConkey conducted a contest on Smith Township.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

Vancouver Island Millworker Inherits Castle And Fortune

DUNCAN, BC, July 21 (CP).—There will be no housing problem for Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Fergusson-Pollock if they wish to return to Scotland.

Mr. Fergusson-Pollock reported Thursday he has inherited a Scottish estate near Glasgow, which includes an 80-room castle, a 40-room country home, and a six-figure fortune.

The estate comes to him with the death of his 81-year-old aunt, Miss Jane Dunlop Fergusson-Pollock, at Pinmore House, Pinwherry, Girvan, Ayrshire.

A veteran of the RCAF in the Second World War, Mr. Fergusson-Pollock has been working in district sawmills, but for many years he was a seafarer, holding master mariner's papers. He came to Caanda in infancy and has lived in British Columbia nearly all his life.

The estate includes the historic Pollock Castle, Newton-Mearns, Renfrewshire, and considerable acreage, tilled by tenant farmers.

It was in 1028 that Fitzgerald de Polock entered Renfrewshire from Normandy and established the line. Last titled member of the family, Sir Hew Crawford-Pollock, who left no male heir, died in 1885.

"I hope this won't mean the loss of our old friends," said Mrs. Fergusson-Pollock. "I don't think we'll be leaving Duncan for good. We just want to go on living a happy, normal sort of Canadian life with our friends."

Introduce Ban On Swearing

SUDBURY, July 21—(CP)—A full-fledged campaign against swearing is under way in Northern Ontario.

French-language posters urging readers not to curse adorn fence-posts, filling stations, hotel lobbies and stores across the north. The campaign, instituted by the Roman Catholic Church, is an attempt by French-Canadian residents to clean up their daily speech.

It was started as a result of recent church pastoral letters deploring the widespread use of bad language.

The campaign takes a practical approach; it stresses the uselessness and vulgarity of swearing rather than its sinfulness.

One sign, translated, reads: "Swearing is vulgar. It always gives scandal. It settles no problems. It turns nothing to profit."

Residents say the campaign also appears to be cleaning up the speech-habits of the English-speaking population.

Charge Dismissed

A charge of indecent assault against Reginald Harran, 75 Hunter St. E., was dismissed by Magistrate W. R. Philp, who found there was insufficient evidence for a conviction.

Cattle Prices Weaken During Week

TORONTO, July 21 — (CP).— Cattle prices opened steady to strong but weakened at the close this week at the Ontario Stockyards, the Dominion Marketing Service reported today.

Calves, hogs, sheep and lambs were unchanged.

Cattle receipts of 6,481 head were 1,300 fewer than for the same week a year ago. Included in the supply were 1,000 stockers. Opening trade was active, with prices steady to strong. Closing trade eased off and hard clearance was made at slightly reducer prices.

Some plain killers and stockers were unsold. Top for choice weighty steers was $31.25-$31.50 cwt. Other weighty steers sold from $30 to $25 cwt. Medium to good light steers were $28-$29:50 with choice up to $30.50. Medium to good heifers were $27-$29. Good cows sold at $22.50 to $23.50. Canners and cutters were $15-$18. Good heavy bulls sold higher at $24-$25.50. Fed yearlings were mostly $28-$32.

Stockers moved slowly at $25-$27 for best quality with common to medium stockers at $19-$24.50.

Calves totalled 2,234 head. Prices were unchanged at $28-$29 for choice vealers. Common to medium vealers were $18-$27. Grass calves for slaughter sold at $16-$16.50.

Hogs were 2,880 head. Prices settled steady at $31.50 for Grade A, with sows at $22 dressed.

Sheep and lambs receipts were 1,204 head. Good ewes and wethers sold at $32.50-$33 cwt. Bucks were at the usual $1 cwt. discount. Good light sheep sold at $13-$15 and cull sheep downward to $7.

Use Truman Message For Red War Scare

MOSCOW, July 21.—(AP). — Moscow's press and radio gave top play today to President Truman's message to Congress and declared it proved the United States is laying the groundwork for a Third World War.

The report, carried in a Tass dispatch from Washington, said "Truman admits the United States is strengthning its preparations for war, both in Europe and on the American continent."

"In his message," Tass said, "Truman tries to picture United States' aggression in Korea as 'a peace mission of the U.S.A.'"

Welcome Imports

BUENOS AIRES, July 21 (AP) —Argentina opened the doors wide for essential imports from abroad Thursday. The Central Bank reversed a policy in effect for more than two years sharply restricting imports due to limited supplies of foreign currencies

FAMOUS CARPET — This is the $100,000 carpet that Queen Mary took eight years to make, shown on its arrival at Toronto's Malton Airport from New York. The Queen Mother offered the carpet for sale to help the British dollar shortage and the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire plans a drive to raise at least $100,000 for it from the Canadian people. The carpet will be displayed at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto in August and later in the National Art Gallery at Ottawa.

Scottish Clans Still Feud Maclean Chief Fans Fight

NEW YORK, July 21. (CP)— The chief of the Clan Maclean arrived in New York Thursday on his way to a clan gathering in Nova Scotia, uttering feuding words about the Campbells.

Sir Charles Hector Maclean said the Maclean-Campbell feud which began in the mid-18th century has not ended.

"I'd think twice before I'd employ a Campbell on my estate," he said. Maclean added, however, that he is a friend of the Duke of Argyle, leader of the Clan Campbell.

The 34-year-old Maclean, a retired major in the Scots Guards, lives in historic Duart Castle on the Isle of Mull. He is going to Washington and is scheduled to fly to Sydney, NS, Aug. 5, before the opening of the clan gathering Aug. 9-14.

He arrived aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth. Among other passengers was Senator Salter Hayden of Toronto, returning from a business trip in England and France.

Enlarging on the Maclean-Campbell feud, Sir Charles said the Campbells, about 1745, "took the wrong side and fought against Scotland," aligning themselves against Bonnie Prince Charlie.

Union Wants Ban

TORONTO, July 21 — (CP).— The United Steelworkers (CIO) Thursday asked Revenue Minister McCann to prevent the Continental Can Company from importing cans from its parent company in the United States. The union, on strike at three plants in the Toronto district, said it feared the company would replace its stalled Canadian production with imports from the US.

Dies Of Injuries

Shifting Troops

TEHERAN, Iran, July 21— (AP)—Reports of "minor Soviet troop movements" north of Astra on the Russo-Iranian border have been received by the Iranian general staff, reliable informants said today. Astra is in northeast Azerbaijan province. The general staff is understood to look on the movements as a normal shift of border garrisons.

Revoke Licenses

WASHINGTON, July 21 (AP) —The Commerce Department on Thursday revoked all existing licences to ship United States goods to Communist China. The department said it acted to carry out the current policy of barring exports of strategic materials to the general area of military operations in the Far East.

Says Hoarders May Guess Wrong Articles

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Wall Street Journal carries a bit of advice worth considering. It says: "Don't watch the old rat holes."

It is warning against running here and there, trying to protect yourself in the future by guarding against exactly the same things that happened in the past. It says in part:

A handful of people have rushed out to buy automobile tires. They were scarce in the last war. Remember? Some housewives have hurried to the grocery to lay in a supply of sugar. Recall the rationing? And a few women, we're told, have been buying up some extra nylons.

There has been a rush by some people to put in orders for new automobiles. Yet if passenger car production were cut back 25 per cent from today's level we could still have 6,000,000 new ones a year, second only to this year's prospective output record . . .

Must Be Amusing

To sugar growers in Cuba and Peru it must seem amusing; they're trying to dig out from under surpluses. Tire makers already are saying: "Don't get excited; look at all the synthetic we can produce . . ."

What must be remembered is that our economic machine has undergone some evolutions in the past decade. In 1942 we were very short of tankers to carry oil; but now there's a surplus of them.

Steel capacity is more than a fifth larger than 10 years ago. Thousands of miles of pipelines have been built to improve internal transportation. And for a decade almost every kind of industry has been adding to its plant capacity . . .

Meantime, those people trying to assess the economic affects might try this: Don't watch only the old rat holes. You're more likely to find him coming out of a new one.

Vote For Strike

TORONTO, July 21. (CP)—The Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators (AFL-TLC) Thursday night voted to strike Tuesday unless their demands for a 20-cent-an-hour wage increase are granted. A meeting of the 1,200-member union rejected a conciliation offer of 10 cents. The union had asked for an increase of 20 cents —to bring the rate to $1.55 an hour—retroactive to May 1.

Try Experiment In Practical Understanding In Austria

By G. K. HODENFIELD

MONDSEE, Austria, July 21— (AP) — A practical experiment in international understanding is underway here on the shores of the Mondsee (lake of the moon), where 70 delegates from 21 countries are attending Unesco's first international seminar on adult education.

Countries in the Soviet sphere are boycotting the seminar, although officials here refuse to discuss it. Two Czech girls, however, are on staff as interpreters.

For six weeks, ending next weekend the delegates are living together, working together and playing together in their democratic, self-governing community in a lakeside hotel.

The delegates do not listen to a prescribed series of lectures nor do they study a set program. Rather, they pool their experiences to provide a picture of adult education around the world.

Director of the seminar is Dr. Sven Bjorklund, dean and founder of the Stockholm peoples university and one of the outstanding figures in Scandinavian education.

Working directly under him are four assistants, each in charge of a particular group. They are: Jean le Veugle of France, organization and administration; Dr. Shepherd L. Witman of Cleveland, Ohio, intellectual and scientific training; Dr R. Alex Sim of Canada, economic and social training, and Dr. Giovanni Calo of Italy, approach to the arts—the educational use of leisure.

Creating Disturbance

TILLSONBURG, July 21 (CP) —Police answered a call reporting a stabbing here Thursday night and found Raymond Wilson, 43, of Windsor lying near No. 3 highway just outside town. As they reached him, Dick Summers, (an Indian) of no address plunged into the nearby Otter River. Wilson, suffering a fractured ankle and a cut face was taken to hospital. Summers was pulled from the river and arrested. Both men are charged with creating a disturbance.

Union Launches A Test Case

GALT, July 21—(CP)—The United Steelworkers (CIO-CCL) Thursday launched what may prove to be a test case to determine whether employers may dismiss striking employees.

The union asked Labor Minister Daley for permission to prosecute the Canadian Brass where the union went on strike to back up demands for a wage increase.

Employees of the firm were handed their unemployment insurance cards which the union said was equivalent to dismissal.

The strike was called after a conciliation board recommended an increase of five cents an hour. The company offered wage increases of from 2½ to five cents an hour to some employees.

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP) — Twenty-eight people were left homeless Thursday night by a $50,000 fire that damaged a large Bank Street business and apartment block. No one was injured. Damaged were Lepage's Bakery at 369 Bank Street, Powell's drug store at 365 Bank Street and the Seymour tobacconist shop, together with three large apartments above the business premises.

Even when dried indoors... EVEN WITHOUT RINSING

Surf gives you Sweeter Washes

...whiter, brighter to look at!
...fresh-air-sweet to smell!

Surf contains an amazing detergent which not only gets out every trace of dirt and grease . . . but every hint of "dirty clothes" odor, too.

Your Surf-clean clothes are really doubly clean. Dazzling white, rainbow bright—and sunshiny sweet to smell. There's never a trace of sour, "musty" odor, even when you dry them indoors.

What's more—you don't even have to rinse those Surf-clean clothes.

Here's why: The detergent in Surf has the magic power of grabbing the dirt and holding it in the wash water. When you wring out the water, you wring the dirt out with it—and every hint of "dirty clothes" odor, too!

When you don't rinse, Surf's purifying action continues to keep clothes sweeter longer. So, if you prefer to rinse, add a little Surf to the rinse water.

Use Surf for EVERYTHING

Surf gives you rich, long-lasting suds, that do 3 times the work of ordinary soaps, in hardest water. Use it in the washing machine for your heavy wash. For lingerie and stockings, too.

All the Surf your grocer has now, in the same familiar blue box, is "no-rinse" Surf—especially developed to save you time and work.

Once you discover Surf you'll say it's the one and only suds for you.

"ORDINARY" CLEAN

betrays the fact that remnants of dirt still cling. Rinsing won't get rid of this . . . but Surf does!

SURF CLEAN

Even without rinsing, Surf removes every last trace of dirt and of odor, too! That's why it gets your clothes so white, so bright, so wonderfully sweet to smell!

A Lever Product

If it's Surf-clean, it's really clean... EVEN WITHOUT RINSING

First Patients Be Admitted Hospital Aug. 2

First admissions of patients to the new Civic Hospital will commence on August 2 or 3 according to discussion which took place at a meeting of the Board of Governors on Thursday. Those are the days scheduled for removing patients in the obstetrical department and other departments will follow.

The entire removal is expected to take about two weeks and during that time hospital admissions will continue as normal, new patients going direct to the new building and those who are expected to remain in hospital only a few days after the removal starts, will continue as patients in the old hospital until their discharge.

There is still a good deal to be done before the first moving day and one of the most pressing needs is for progress in the work of getting the driveway and paths to the building ready. Ian F. McRae, chairman of the property committee, said there would have to be a speed-up if the approaches were going to be ready.

MAIN ST. TOPICS

CLEAR BUS CORNER

Space occupied by buses at the Simcoe St. side of the intersection on George St. have been moved easterly one bus length to increase vision for motorists on Simcoe St. of traffic from the north on George St.

CHARGE DISMISSED

A charge of illegal possession of liquor against Ted Robert Rosebush of Chandos township, was dismissed today by Magistrate R. B. Baxter of Port Hope. Evidence revealed that two cases of beer found in Rosebush's auto were his father's.

COLLECT $392

Collections for the past half-week from city parking meters totalled $392.51. Today officers are totting up the second half's take and have found so far, nine dimes, four washers, two metal punchings, one slot machine token and more than a dozen bent pennies.

Plan Open House At Civic Hospital

"Open house" at the new Civic Hospital will be held on Saturday and Sunday, July 29 and 30 when, between the hours of 2 p.m. and 5 p.m., the public will be admitted for inspection of the entire building.

The Board of Governors decided Thursday to invite the citizens of Peterborough and district to visit the hospital at those times, less than a week before patients are admitted.

Pedestrian Hit By Motorcycle

Norman Powers, 58, of 708 Water St., suffered cuts and shock Thursday night when he was hit by a motorcycle driven by Gerald Tully, 667 Chamberlain St.

Powers told police he was crossing George St. at Brock St. and that he thought he had time to cross before the motorcycle came along. He said the motorcycle was going very fast.

Mr. Powers suffered cuts to the right side of his head, both wrists and the left leg. He was treated by Dr. C. F. Cahill.

Suburban Smith Township Has New $11,857 Pumper

Smith township's suburban area Fire Truck Pumper No. 2 was accepted by Fire Chief Noble Hicks and his deputies on Monday and by Thursday evening had had its sixth workout. This $11,857 piece of modern equipment is almost a twin model of the pumper that was put into operation at Bridgenorth a week previously with the exception of having a dual purpose axle which will drive it through snow and mud conditions with equal ease.

The three-ton vehicle carries 1,000 feet each of 1½ and 2½ inch canvas hose, 150 feet of one inch booster hose and another attachment from the portable auxiliary unit. Each nozzle will produce a straight water stream or fog blanket at the twist of the wrist.

Cost of the new pumper, after applying the 35 per cent Provincial grant, is being [illegible] mill addition to suburban Smith township assessment for the current year. There is also an additional provincial grant of 25 per cent applicable each year to maintenance costs.

Protects Suburban Area

Property owners on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd township lines and on Highway 28 as far north as the Maples turn, are being offered protection for $6 per year for a ten-year term. Members of the fire brigade are already canvassing for this purpose.

It is understood that the Smith Township Council is issuing debentures at the present time to pay the initial cost of the equipment.

Unlike Bridgenorth, which has erected a community-built fire hall, plans are underway to rent a suitable building from Deputy-Chief John Driscoll. Plans have not been fully completed but it is hoped that some arrangement whereby the building, day and night watchman service, light and heat, can be leased for a cost of $1,000 a year. Until then, the pumper is being kept at Don Massey's garage at Langdon and Water Sts., and the telephone number in case of emergencies is 23238.

Firefighters Instructed

Fire brigade officers have been attending classes and demonstrations at the Peterborough Fire Department. Chief Hicks said he wished to express thanks on behalf of his crew for the valuable instruction received to date.

The brigade roster, which will be held to about 20 men, includes the following at the present time: Noble Hicks, chief, John Driscoll, deputy-chief, Orville Deyell, Harold Haigh and Murray Belch, captains, Lockie Longhurst, Roy Hancock, Don Ireland, Murray and Boyd Pollock, Don Massey, Grant Lytle, William, Norman and Sidney Brown, Clare Fairbairn, Cecil Northey, Lloyd Edwards, Ward Weaver, Lawrence Smith and Ernest Burton.

No Inverlea Swim

Inverlea will be closed to swimming this weekend. The yearly task of inspecting the Quaker Oats Co. dam goes on Saturday and Sunday, and the water will be lowered about eight feet.

Last year, the whole dam was refaced, and the company wants to check to see how it has stood up. The screening which protects the turbines from logs, etc., must also be inspected for holes.

[illegible] flumes will be removed to accomplish the eight-foot drop in water.

Swindle Pair Said Operating

A religious program collection swindle is being worked in Peterborough, according to evidence brought to light today.

Two men are around the city collecting money for "The Sacred Heart Radio Program". There is a radio program of this name broadcasting from Toronto, but enquiries revealed that the League of the Sacred Heart which sponsors the program has sent no one to Peterborough to make collections to support the program.

A victim of the swindle gave $5 to the men and got an official looking receipt from them. He explained one of them phoned him, saying that Father Walsh, who heads the program, was in the city, and he was helping the priest raise money.

The men then drove to the victim's home in a new model car and collected his contribution.

The contributor then became suspicious and checked up with Monsignor P. P. Butler at St. Peter's Cathedral. Monsignor Butler told him there was no such collecting being made officially and certainly Father Walsh was not in the city.

The pair apparently are working a very smooth swindle. On the bottom of the receipt is written, "Please make all cheques payable to Sacred Heart Radio Program".

The "representative's" signature is unreadable.

Not Crown's Job, City Who Will Prosecute

"It's not the responsibility of Crown Attorney Bradshaw to prosecute in cases under the city by-law fixing the hours for selling gasoline," Mayor Swanston said this morning in reporting to the Property Committee members a conversation this week with Chief Thompson.

"I understand there are several cases pending, and the Chief asked me what we were going to do about it," His Worship said. "I am simply passing the information on. I understand that City Solicitor Huycke said he hadn't time to take those cases. So, it is a question of what the Council wants to do."

The decision of the Property Committee today simply turned the question over to the Legal Committee, "and let Ald. Sands deal with it. This is not a property matter."

The by-law which was passed by the Council a year or two ago determining the hours during which gasoline could be sold by retail service station and garage men has stirred up contention within their ranks since it was adopted.

Recent reports have been to the effect that several of the service station men, who declined to join the association of dealers in applying to the Council for the regulation, are objecting that some of the association members are not scrupulous in observing it.

Solicitor No Time Gas Bylaw Breakers?

Merchants Deny Rumors Sugar Hoarding

Wild rumors of sugar hoarding exploded like a bubble when put to a test in a city-wide survey of stores today.

Store managers and owners in all parts of the city all shook their heads and said they had seen no sign of hoarding or excessive buying.

Manager of one of the downtown chain stores said "Only normal orders are going out. If there's a basket of cherries in an order then there's five pounds of sugar to go with it."

Only one store owner, in the southend, told of one instance of what may have been excessive buying. A farmer came in and wanted three or four hundredweights of sugar. At that time, ther was only one hundredweight in the store. He bought that.

Farmers normally buy their sugar by the hundredweight.

There was plenty of evidence housewives had busily started their canning for the winter, but no more than in other years.

Plenty Of Talk

One store owner said people had been talking about hoarding, but concrete evidence of it was missing.

Another shop manager thought buying was a little heavier than usual because of rumors of price increases.

But as far as housewives laying up a stock of sugar or panic buying, it just didn't exist as far as the store managers were concerned.

'UE Double Talk' Says Morton

"Typical UE double talk," is the comment of John G. Morton, president of Local 524, International Union of Electrical Workers (CIO-CCL), on the pledge of loyalty to Canada and the United Nations made Wednesday by Local 524, United Electrical Workers.

The flareup between the rival electrical unions at the CGE plant has its source in the position of the two on the Korean war. For some time now UE publications and the Canadian district office have been plugging the "ban the A-bomb petition" and the "peace campaign."

This was stepped up at the outbreak of the Korean war and brought the the charge of following the Communist line not only from the IUE but from a large section of the UE's own rank-and-file as well.

Suspend Action

To counter this charge the Stewards' council of Local 524 decided on July 12 to take no further action on the peace petition at the present time.

Wednesday a carefully-worded statement was given to the Examiner and Thursday it was reprinted on a UE leaflet to be distributed to the membership.

In part it said: "We, the executive and stewards of Local 524, fully support the stand of our government and the United Nations in their efforts to maintain peace throughout the world."

It was this that drew Morton's fire.

"This statement is a fine example of how the UE have fooled workers for years; while they say one thing it is quite obvious they mean something else," he said.

Morton declared that there is a close tie-up between the UE and the Communist party and [illegible] Russia even if Canada were attacked.

Toronto Woman Hurt Car And Truck Collide

A Toronto woman was slightly injured late Thursday afternoon when the car in which she was a passenger collided with a truck at the 6th line of Smith and the Buckhorn road.

Mrs. B. Neskel, 65, was treated in St. Joseph's Hospital for minor knee and head injuries. Her daughter, Mrs. Myer Cherney, Brock St., was driving the car west on the 6th line, which connects Lakefield and Bridgenorth, when she was in collision with a southbound panel truck driven by Maxwell Swan, Munroe Ave.

Neither vehicle was seriously damaged and Mrs. Neskel was the only one injured. She was attended in hospital by Dr. W. S. Fitzpatrick and later allowed to leave.

Also in the car were Mrs. Cherney's two daughters—Evelyn, 7, and Stephanie, 3. They were shaken up but not hurt.

Provincial Constable J. G. Healey investigated.

Honest John walked into a downtown restaurant today and told the proprietor, "I didn't pay my bill last night; I walked out before I remembered, so I'll settle with you now."

125 Parking Meters Ordered For Market Square Expect Revenue $10,000 Yr.

Revenue from the individual meters to be set up on the market square is estimated at $100 a year. Plans are pointing to 125 meters, which have been ordered, with the removal of the broad central cement walk. At that rate the city should receive around $10,000 a year. That prospect was mentioned today at a meeting of the property committee of the council, with Ald. E. C. Braund presiding, and Aldermen Dodds, Waddell, Burrows and Mayor Swanston present.

Transfer of the outdoor market was recently proposed to the council in a special parking accommodation report.

The committee named Mayor Swanston, Aldermen Braund and Dodds and City Engineer-Chalmers to arrange for laying out a new market place on the west side of George St., opposite the wharf. The property is owned by the city.

Tables will have to be moved to that location, to be stored either at Miller Bowl or in one of the buildings in the city yard on the north side of Townsend St. Ground will be levelled, and ordinary vending accommodation will be provided.

Proceeding to other recommendations for additional down-town parking space, it was proposed that the double roughcast house on the west side of Aylmer St. be demolished, and that this lot south of the fire hall be equipped with meters.

This recommendation to the council directs that the tenants of the double house owned by the city on Aylmer St. be informed of the council's intentions of converting the property into a place for public parking. This lot was bought some years ago by the city from Harold A. Morrow.

A minor proposal suggests that all receipts from meters be placed in a special account under the control of the property committee, "so that we will know the net returns." That motion by Ald. Burrows was seconded by Mayor Swanston.

Purchase of meters will be charged against that account, together with any other necessary expenses of metered parking.

Rental of property on Aylmer St., west side, south of King St., another proposal in the special parking report, was deferred for the present.

"You can park on that street now without charge," said Ald. Waddell, "and also along King St. If the street space is not used now, certainly the metered space off the street south of King would not be used.

"The special parking committee was taking a longer view of the problem. They did the job they were asked to do, but we don't have to act on it in every particular."

Ald. Braund remarked that if the postal-customs building is erected on Charlotte St., "that will make a difference in this parking problem."

"We can wait and see how the public responds to the extra parking space south of the fire hall," said Mayor Swanston.

Swimming Club Scores Hit In Water Drama

Peterborough Ornamental Swimming Club presented on Thursday evening the Fantasia, "In a Chinese Aqua Garden," to a capacity crowd of more than 800 people at the Lions Club Community Swimming Pool.

Made up of synchronized and ornamental swimming, this water drama was the story of a Chinese Princess, Lotus Blossom who is betrothed to a Chinese Prince, Sing Love, but has disappeared. Ambasadors are sent to different countries to find the missing princess. After an intensive search, the princess is found and the final act of the drama is the wedding scene which united two of the great families of China.

With this water drama, the Peterborough Swimming Club chalked up another success. Using this delightful fantasy as a story background, they successfully executed synchronized swimming displays that have won them fame both in this country and the United States.

Taking part in the drama were: Norma Grant, June Storey, Mary Rutherford, Iris Reilly, Jean Millard, Isobel Crary, Shirley Moldaver, Maureen Finn, Beverley Rumary, Norma Delany, Mary Dorset, Joan Lynch, Joan Monk, Sall Hartman, Denise Doubt, Nancy Doubt, Anne Gray, Marie Stone, Betty Mather, Joan Coombes and Sally Weise.

One of the highlights of the evening was a diving exhibition by Evelyn Buchanan, Canadian Women's Diving Champion.

The commentary for the drama was read by Alex Sinclair.

An enjoyable band concert was presented by the Peterborough Citizen's Band during the half hour preceding the water drama.

County Farm Notes

By HARRY THEOBALD

Peterborough District Grain On The Eve Of The Harvest Looks Big And Uniform Crop — Jas. T. Brown Of Newcastle Estimating His Registered Beaver Oats At 100 Bushels To The Acre — Test Rod Rows Maturing On Robt. Armstrong Farm, Cavan — First Wheat Cut By Binder Near Lakefield This Week.

James Elliott of the soils department of O.A.C. rates a field of Cornel wheat on the farm of David McIntyre, Otonabee "as one of the best I've seen this season".

"There was a field on the Chapman farm near Queensville in York that I think I would put first, and next to that would be the McIntyre Cornell. There are so many good fields of wheat this year, that I hesitate to name a second one. Any way, it is just giving my impressions."

Mr. Elliott has been visiting farms in six counties around Peterborough, including Northumberland, Victoria and Durham, observing and enquiring about agricultural practice as it is actually carried on

"Mr. McIntyre sowed last fall both Dawson's Golden Chaff and Cornell. This field of Cornell that looked so good is well drained and early land. He used fertilizer on it, but not to any special extent. I wouldn't say that it was fertilizer alone that accounted for the condition of this field and the quality of the crop. The land was in good shape and it is good winter wheat soil."

Mr. Elliott is enquiring into general phases of soils, crops and pastures, consulting and advising where conversations led into those channels.

"I found Peterborough farmers co-operative and easily approachable. Most questions were about pastures. Farmers are pretty well settled in their grain practice. There were only a few questions about wheat and oats.

What to do with old pasture fields that have run out? That is foremost in the concern of many farmers in this section. Pasture is our most important crop, and naturally it is a top ranking concern to farmers who are trying to improve their property and get more production."

Mr. Elliott said it involved considerable cost. He mentioned a Peterborough farmer who had bought land at $30 an acre and it would cost him at least another $30 an acre to put it into a real good pasture crop.

"I think the day is passed when it was easy to get a 100-acre ranch and turn 35 head of beef cattle on to it. A lot of it has been overrun with mullein, daisies, bladder campion, blue devil and other weeds. Even the native grasses have been crowded out to a large extent. That is one reason why so much attention has been turning to reclaiming pastures. You might call it rejuvenation.

Mr. Elliott has been accompanied on recent rounds by either F. C. Paterson, or his assistant Robert Bell.

"There is quite an increase in the planting of grain or husking corn this year. At the Elmer Milburn farm in Smith, Don Milburn pointed out two sections of corn planting that differed only in the quantity of fertilizer that was used. It was the same field, same rotation and cultivation. A good average crop is coming along on the part that was treated with 125 lbs. to the acre of 3-18-9 fertilizer. The other part you would say was real good, a darker and richer green and about 10 inches higher in growth. On that field the quantity of the same fertilizer was 175 lbs. to the acre.

The corn crop is looking good. Warmth and moisture in the last two weeks have made a big difference. I don't hesitate side-dressing with ammoniam nitrate when the corn is about knee high. That is about where it is today in most fields. Bert Armstrong of Otonabee used 100 lbs to the acre last year, and he is convinced that accounted for his big crop. He estimated the yeild at more than 100 bushels to the acre. This year he intends to put on the side-dressing again. He may have already done so."

Incidentally, Stewart Dawson reported that the top-dressing of the Cornell wheat field that was applied early in the spring by W. W. Dawson, appears to have produced material results, as relayed through Mr. Bell.

"There is more grain corn than ever grown in Peterborough district this year," Mr. Bell said. "The nitrogen fills out the cobs in the husking corn, and gives more growth to silage corn."

As to the effect of the fertilizer top dressing on the strength of the wheat stalk, Mr. Elliott suggested that definite information would have to wait for more detailed experiments

"I think it is a question of balance. Too much nitrate would certainly show in the stalk but with a good balance of fertilizer I think the whole plant would show decided improvement."

"In the husking corn counties of western Ontario such as Elgin they have special equipment for applying the ammoniam nitrate six inches from the corn row," Mr. Elliott said. "Practice in this section is partly by grain drill with the shoes or discs removed. Some farmers use cyclone seeders. Hybrid corn has such vigorous root systems that they will take up the nitrate although it is spread between rows. About 100 lbs. to the acre is usual practice. Experience has shown that husking corn increases up to 20 bus. to the acre with the nitrogen application."

STUART BOWMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

The biggest heads of registered Cornell wheat seen by Stuart A. Bowman, inspector for the plant products division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, in his recent rural rounds, are on the farm of James T. Brown, near Newcastle.

Mr. Brown and Garnet Rickard obtained some of the registered seed distributed last year, and it was sown on the Brown place.

"It is exceptionally well headed," Mr. Bowman said yesterday, "and the yield should be well above average. By the way, Mr. Brown has an outstanding crop of Beaver oats. One field of ten acres, sown to registered Beaver, looks like 100 bushels to the acre. He says he will be disappointed if that is not the average for that field. Another one of fourteen acres, also registered seed, should do better than 75 bushels to the acre.

Both his oats and barley are extra good, but there is some smut in several varieties of barley. Montcalm is not one of them."

Mr. Bowman reports that the registered Cornell grown by Robert Armstrong is also well headed and should produce better than average. His test rod rows of grain have also reached the interesting stage, and should be seen by farmers who are interested.

Possibly F. C. Paterson and Ed Summers, agricultural representative in Durham, may arrange for a joint visit to the Armstrong farm in the near future.

EGG PRICES HIGHER

An advance in the price of eggs this week, with the prospect of continuing firmly to the end of the year, is a turn in the market that was expected by established poultrymen who held aloof from the flurry of flock liquidation last winter. They even weathered the period two months ago of comparatively low prices and high feed costs.

Adhering to a policy of culling their flocks and keeping production up around 70 per cent, their position has presently shown considerable improvement. Sales of chicks early last winter dropped 40 per cent with some of the big hatcheries, and the recent volume of egg production is something like 25 per cent less than a year ago. These are factors, combined with the high meat prices, that have strengthened the egg market, earlier than usual.

WHEAT CLUB HARVEST

R. E. Bell reports that the inspection and samples of grain for the Winter Wheat Club was begun Thursday. Of the 13 member fields only one is Dawson's Golden Chaff, on a Cavan farm, and it has done notably well.

"We got around to eight fields Thursday. They were fine stands. I can't compare them with other years, but I think that on the whole it must be about the best this district has produced. The grain is plump and uniform. There was no winter killing.

Probably, farmers had more time last year to spend on their fall cultivation and seeding."

CALF CLUB MEETING

East Peterborough calf club is meeting at the farm of Stewart Nelson, east of Keene, Wednesday July 26, at 7:30 p.m. This is the fourth of the series of meetings arranged by R. E. Bell for the young club members.

JERSEY CATTLE RECORDS

Crescent Standard Aim Dairymaid of the Jersey herd of W. F. Batty & Son, Brooklin, completed in June a record of 10,601 lbs. of milk and 592 lbs. fat in 304 days, as reported by the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club. It was the highest in the counties of Ontario, Durham and Peterborough.

Sangragor Jester's Penelope, a senior four-year-old, owned by R. S. Staples & Sons, Cavan township, produced in 365 days 10,439 lbs. milk and 515 lbs. fat. She is a daughter of the Staples former herd sire, Edgeley Standard Jester's Pride.

In the herd of F. C. H. Bent & Son, Omemee, Bentleigh Roxie Rose Marie has a junior four-year-old record in 365 days of 9,829 lbs. milk and 497 lbs. of fat. The senior herd sire is Graham Farm Pride.

Rudolph P. Stenger & Son, Enniskillen, recently had five cows finish records, led by Enniskillen Dream Carol, junior three-year-old with 7,421 lbs. milk and 468 lbs. of fat in 329 days. Its test was 6.31 per cent.

FIRST WHEAT CUT

R. E. Bell, assistant agricultural representative, reports the earliest harvesting of wheat that he has seen in this area was on a farm near Lakefield. It was cut by a binder on well drained soil and in a field that lays favorably for early ripening. A few farmers in the county, Mr. Bell says, have already been plowing sod to get it in shape for sowing winter wheat.

$300 IN HAY PRIZES

In taking off this season's hay crop, farmers of the district are probably keeping in mind the $300 in prizes offered by the Peterborough Exhibition for the best bales of hay shown here in August.

First prize is $100; second $50; 3rd $30; followed by twelve prizes of $10 each.

Exhibits must be delivered at the Exhibition park by August 22. This project is an innovation of the directors to stimulate interest in the production and cutting of better hay. Baling has become so general that the competition for the best bales is fair to everyone. The exhibits become the property of the Exhibition. Judges will be from the staff of OAC.

The time to win that $100 or $50 prize is right now at the height of the season.

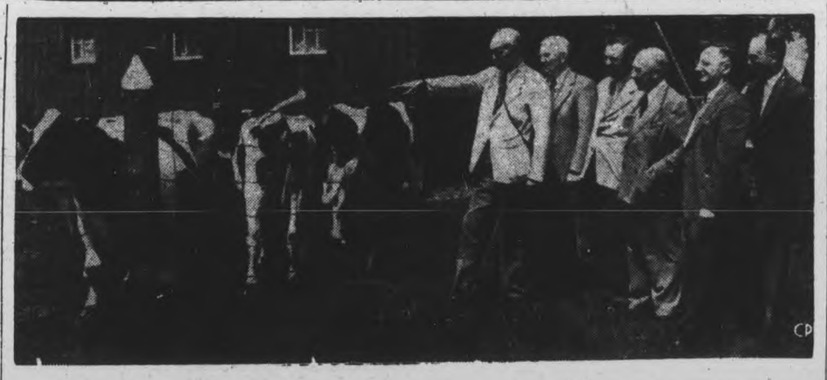
EVERY FARMER A CHEMIST

Whether he realizes it or not, every Canadian farmer is a chemist. In his feilds and barns he supervises one of the greatest chemical processes—that of producing food for his fellow men.

Meat, grain, vegetables, fruit and milk are the products of the farmer's work with sun and rain, with seed and tools, and the chemical elements of the soil. These last are of vast importance to him since their presence or absence may determine the success or failure of his crops.

If he is conscientious about his vocation and wishes to prosper, a farmer should know the chemistry of his soil. He should know, for example, that nitrogen, phosphorus and pottassium are chemical elements which are food for plants when present in proper form and amounts in soil. Since plants are not mobile, food must be brought to them and placed where they can reach it. Keeping the soil so that it can act like an efficient chemical plant requires application of plant food in manure and fertilizers, maintaining organic matter and proper tillage for good soil structure.

Commercial fertilizers are sources of the plant foods, nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium. Farmers know them as nitrogen, phosphate and potash derived from common materials such as ammonium sulphate, superphosphate and muriate of potash or mixtures of these.



ONCE-OVER FOR BETSY — United Kingdom agricultural scientists pause at the Canadian government's experimental farm in Ottawa to give herd of holsteins a quick once-over. On a cross-country tour of Canada's rural scene, they have expressed amazement at the richness and variety of Canadian agricultural growth. Sir William Ogg, who heads the party, is third from right.

12-YEAR-OLD GIRL AVERTS TRAGEDY AT RAILWAY CROSSING

Joan Stusyk, of Ville St. Pierre, Montreal, pushes mother from train tracks in nick of time

1. Young Mrs. Stusyk and her 12-year old daughter Joan had been shopping in town. They stepped off the Montreal Tramways Lachine car in Ville St. Pierre and started to walk across the tracks towards their home on the north side of the crossing. Little did they realize the near-tragic adventure that lay ahead.

2. The two were on the west-bound track when the scream of a whistle pierced the air. They had been chatting as they walked and, because of this and the traffic noise, they had not noticed the speedy approach of the train — now only a few short yards away! With a sudden terror in her heart, Mrs. Stusyk seemed unable to move. She stood frozen in her steps!

3. Little Joan was not affected in the same way. Thinking and acting with amazing speed, she gave her mother a push and at the same time threw herself clear of the rails. When the train stopped, both were found to be safe, suffering only slight injuries from their fall to the ground. We are proud to present Joan Stusyk with THE DOW AWARD.

THE Dow AWARD

THE DOW AWARD is a citation presented for acts of outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Canadian daily newspapers, selects Award winners from recommendations made by a nationally known news organization.

Works Overtime For Year To Earn Passage

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP). — Sheila Wiseman, 18, of Burnt Oak, Edgeware, Middlesex, England, is a persistent Canadian immigrant.

She worked 67 hours a week for a year to raise enough money to pay her passage to Canada and now is enroute here aboard the liner Ascania, the United Kingdom Information Office said today in a press statement.

Just before she sailed from Liverpool, Sheila said: "Each evening for a year I put in four or five hours as attendant at a movie theatre—on top of a full day's work in a radio factory. That way I was able to save £100 ($310) in 12 months."

Sheila said she first decided to go and live in Canada when she was 15. She applied to Hendon, Middlesex, magistrates for permission to sail without her father's consent. The permission was refused. Sheila tried again one year later and was again refused. Now she is coming to Canada with her father's consent.

The young immigrant did not indicate where she planned to live in Canada.

What's Right?

A girl doesn't want a date with a young man who telephones to ask her for one.

WRONG: She is abrupt in her refusal, thinking that he might as well know she doesn't intend to date him.

RIGHT: She turns down the invitation graciously, rather than hurt his feelings.

NO SALARY

There was no salary attached to the office of British Prime Minister until 1937, and the holder usually combined with it some other appointment, which carried a salary.

BLOAT RELIEF

Mild cases of bloat in cattle can frequently be relieved by placing a stick crosswis in the animal's mouth to stimulate bleching.

Declares 8 Out of 10 Women Have Lost Figures In 1950

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK — (AP) — The world is out of shape today—and so are more than eight out of 10 women.

This melancholy statistic isn't based on one man's roving observation. It comes from the Corset and Brassiere Association of America.

"Of the 55,000,000 U.S. women above the age of 15, at least 85 per cent are overweight, or lack symmetry in the vicinity of bosoms, waist or hips," said Fletcher D. Dodge, Executive Vice President of the association.

What depresses me about this estimate is that Fletcher doesn't even include the women with jut jaws, knobby knees, bowed legs, suitcase feet, or blacksmith's biceps.

No, all he surveys is the corset zone. To correct nature's errors in this area, women in 1950 will spend $400,000,000 or more for girdles, pantie girdles, brassieres, bandeaux, corsets, corselettes, falsies and garter belts.

Always Something Wrong

Every year about this time fletcher reviews the status of the American feminine shape. He is a stern critic and invariably finds something wrong with it.

Here, girls, is his prediction to the fashionable for this autumn:

"An even slimmer, narrower hipline. . .waistline slightly less indented. . .bustline more softly rounded."

Helping Nature

"More and more women will be wearing them," Dodge said flatly. "As one designer in the foundation garment industry points out, 'women are no longer abashed to admit they've helped nature along a bit. Falsies have come into their own."

Fletcher says the American woman has grown taller and wider-hipped in the last five years, but that she still prefers the same shape that has been popular for the last half century.

Here is his latest breakdown of the composite American woman:

Height—5 feet 3 inches; weight—133 pounds; bust—35½ inches; waist—29 inches; hips—38 inches.

And, a bit gleefully it seems, Fletcher added still another dismal fact:

"Of 1,661 women measured in a department of agriculture study, only 126 qualified as 'the perfect 36.'"

Despite their reported gain in hip width, most American women appear to be more concerned with bosom problems.

"Brassiere output has quadrupled since 1927, increasing from 25,000,000 to about 100,000,000," said Dodge. They will account for about $188,000,000 of the $400,000,00 spent for all types of foundation garments."

Due Ceremony at Airport As IODE Receives Carpet

Lieut.-Governor Lawson headed a delegation of representative citizens when the Queen Mary carpet, which is ultimately to belong to the Canadian people, was formally received into Canada at Malton airport Wednesday.

In the reception room were national IODE President, Mrs. J. H. Chipman, Toronto, and chief officers of the order which has undertaken to sponsor a drive to raise $100,000 to help the British dollar situation. Reception delegation also included provincial and civic representatives and officers of some other women's organizations.

Provincial police accompanied IODE officers into the plane when it landed and assisted in bringing down the stairway the aluminum cylinder containing the carpet upon which Queen Mary worked for eight years. They also assisted in opening up the carpet, an unscheduled part of the reception ceremony, at request of Toronto press photographers.

"No organization is better fitted to bring this rug into Canada and be its custodians than the IODE" said Mr. Lawson, in congratulating the order upon its historic effort. "The people of Canada are looking forward to seeing it," he said.

Correcting an impression that the IODE had purchased the rug, Mrs. Chipman said: "The IODE has not purchased the rug. The rug has not yet been paid for. We are opening—in fact we have opened — a Queen Mary Carpet Fund to which we hope every Canadian will contribute and in that way become part owners.

"In making the $100,000 bid we were speaking for the people of Canada, trusting that they by their contributions will bring the amount up to at least $100,000," she explained. "This sum, if realized, and anything above that amount which may be contributed [illegible] Queen Mary herself," she said.

"The IODE is extremely proud and pleased to have been the means of bringing the carpet to the Dominion," said Mrs. Chipman.

The carpet, she explained, will go first to the Canadian National Exhibition, after which it will be hung in the National Gallery, with expectation it will be loaned for exhibition purposes to galleries and other suitable places throughout Canada.

Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr., chairman of the Queen Mary Carpet Committee Fund and IODE national vice-president, and Mrs. Ryland H. New, also on the committee and member of the national committee, flew to New York to receive the carpet at La Guardia airport from Sir Francis Evans, British consul-general and accompanied it back to Malton.

A box of red roses, sent by Mrs. T. C. Morgan, New York State president of the IODE, to Mrs. Chipman, was also flown with the carpet.

City Clergymen To Be Busy With July 22 Rites

Clergymen of this city have a busy day ahead since a record number of couples have chosen this Saturday to be married. The increased number is largely due to the holiday shut-down in several large factories.

St. John's Anglican church is to be setting for the rites at one o'clock of Shirley Westall, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Westall, Robinson St., and Rodney Kilborn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kilborn, George St.

In St. Andrew's United Church at two o'clock Pauline Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Hillier, Murray St., will wed William Albert Bradley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Bradley, Adeline St.

The Rev. C. G. Boyd will officiate as Olive Elnora, elder daughter of Mr. John Varcoe of Campbellford, weds Harold Wesley Carnrite, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. James Carnrite of Trent River.

At nine o'clock in Sacred Heart Church, Cecile Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Chenier, Wilson Ave. and Donald Lavern Heffernan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heffernan, will pledge nuptial vows.

George Street United Church is to be setting at two o'clock for the marriage of Elda Eileen, daughter of Mrs. W. G. Hewitt, Water St., to Andrew Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy.

Miss Marguerite Todd, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Todd of Lakefield, is to wed Sidney Wilford Parsons, son of Mrs C. Hilker and the late Mr. R. Parsons of Hespeler, in Knox United Church at two o'clock.

In Mark St. United Church at two o'clock Anna Belle, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnston, will become the bride of Everett Melville Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Wood of Keene.

The Rev. E. W. Rowland is to perform the marriage of Myrtle May Kellett of Peterborough and Leslie Earl Dewar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Dewar.

The wedding of June Elizabeth Crouthers to James Douglas Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs George Smith of Peterborough is to take place at St. Luke's Anglican Church at two o'clock.

In St. James United Church at three o'clock Miss Jean Curtis, daughter of Mrs. W. J. Sweeney and the late Arthur Curtis, will wed Duncan A. McCallum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McCallum.

Another wedding at George St. United Church will be that of Florence Irene Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Murray of Somerville, Mass., to Albert Tanton Mills, son of Mrs. Benjamin Mills of Peterborough.

DOROTHY DIX

College Education a Waste If Girl Has No Intellect

DEAR MISS DIX: I have the best husband in the world and five daughters of whom I am naturally proud, but we are in very moderate circumstances and I have been in ill health for over a year with a nervous breakdown. Here is my problem:

Dorothy Dix

My oldest girl, who is 16, graduates from high school this term. What about a college education? Of course we want to do the best we can for our children, but shall we struggle along, denying ourselves everything we possibly can and sacrificing the comforts of the whole family, in order to send our girls to college?

MRS. B

ANSWER: I think that whether a girl should be sent to college depends entirely upon her personality. Upon her looks, her disposition, her character, and most of all upon the sort of brain she has and what her ambitions are.

Not all girls are college material. Plenty of them are bright and clever and liberally endowed with good, hard horse sense, but they haven't book sense. They have no intention whatever of following any learned career, and it is a waste of time and money to send them to college.

Can Be Hindrance

Also, it is a waste of time and money to send to college the girl who has more glamor than grey matter, and who was predestined by Nature for marriage. College is a hindrance and not a help to her, because it diminishes her chances of marriage by keeping her out of the running during the years when her good looks are at their peak. Nor are these drawbacks compensated for by what the girl learns in college, for only in rare cases does a college education "take" on her.

But, on the other hand, if a girl is markedly intellectual, and particularly if she craves an education, she should be sent to college if possible.

I do not think that there is anything more pathetic than the superstitious reverence the great majority of people have for a college education. They have a blind and misguided belief that if they can only send their girls and boys off to college they will secure to them fame and fortune. They actually believe that a college degree is some sort of magic that will unlock every door of opportunity to its fortunate possessor and enable them to stroll through to prosperity.

So we have the pitiable spectacle of poor old fathers and mothers making every possible sacrifice to send boys and girls to college who are just having a grand old fling and a four years' loaf, and who will come home with nothing but a college yell and maybe a sweater with a letter on it and a swelled head, and the feeling that they are far superior to their parents and their surroundings.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: We have been discussing platonic friendship without being able to come to any conclusion on the matter. Do you believe that such a relationship is possible between men and women?

ANSWER: Among the young who are overly sex-conscious, platonic friendship is rare. Perhaps impossible. It is seldom that a boy and girl can be closely associated together without their falling in love or thinking they are in love.

But among older men and women there are many cases of a beautiful and altruistic friendship that has in it no touch of romanticism or desire. The man and woman find each other congenial and all the more interesting because one brings a man's point of view and the other a woman's point of view to every subject. The woman gives the man what he craves in sympathy and understanding, and the woman leans upon the man's strength and finds solace in his protection. They give zest to each other's lives. They are the best of comrades and companions, but neither one wants to marry the other.

Very likely while they love each other as friends, they would hate each other as husbands and wives. They realize that they find each other's little peculiarities amusing taken in small quantities, but if they had to be fed on them every day they would be unendurable. Perhaps they each lack physical attraction for the other, but that does not interfere with their friendship as it would with married life.

DEAR MISS DIX: At what age should an adopted child be told of his adoption?

M. M. N.

ANSWER: Before he is old enough to understand what it means. Then the idea that you are not his real parents will carry with it no sting, nor bitterness, nor disillusion. Two years of age is not too young to accustom the child to the knowledge that you are his foster-parents, and that while other children are born to their parents you selected him because you especially wanted him.

THE LOST IS FOUND

SWANSEA, Wales —(CP)— Thirteen years ago Mrs. Lilian Hopkins lost a pearl ear-ring in her garden. Recently she saw a glint in the grass; there was her pearl ear-ring.

You'll make Jam to be PROUD of this way...

1 Jam-making is easy, quick, SURE with CERTO Crystals . . . the pectin product in Crystals form that helps all fruits to jell perfectly.

2 You boil ONE MINUTE only with CERTO Crystals . . . that saves ⅔ the time needed for old-fashioned, long-boil recipes.

This Easy Recipe gives SURE Results

RASPBERRY JAM

4½ cups prepared fruit
6 cups sugar
1 package CERTO Crystals

Crush 2¼ lbs. fully ripe berries. Measure into large saucepan. Measure sugar into bowl; set aside. Place saucepan over high heat. Add CERTO Crystals; stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. Stir in sugar at once and boil hard ONE MINUTE stirring constantly. Remove from heat, skim, ladle and paraffin quickly. Makes about 10 glasses.

3 The short boil does not dull the lovely, natural color or spoil the fresh-fruit taste . . . they stay right in your jam.

4 With CERTO Crystals you average 50% more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit . . . 10 glasses instead of about 6.

5 TESTED RECIPES IN EVERY PACKAGE . . . a different one for each fruit. Follow the simple directions EXACTLY for SURE results.

Stock your pantry now with delicious, sparkling jams and jellies. You get CERTO Crystals at your grocer's.

Finds Keeping Food Fresh Headache For Bachelor Girl

By KAY REX

OTTAWA, July 21 – (CP) — Keeping food fresh is about the biggest hot-weather headache there is—particularly for the girl who lives alone in a small flat or apartment and with nothing between her and the temperature but an ice-box.

About the only way to avoid heavy food wastage is to buy in as small quantities as possible.

Even this doesn't prevent butter from melting away, milk from going sour, when the ice disappears hours before the next delivery is due.

It may be possible to save enough milk for the mornihg coffee by putting the bottle in a sauce-pan of cold water over night.

However—to play safe— it's a good idea to keep a supply of condensed milk on hand.

In any case milk should be taken into the house as soon after delivery as possible and the bottle and cap should be washed in cold running water before opening or putting away.

Keep Covered

The milk also should be kept covered as it readily absorbs odors from other foods and it should be returned to the ice-box as soon as the amount needed has been removed.

Fruits such as berries, cherries and plums should be placed on the ice without washing and as soon as received from the market.

Fresh uncooked meat should be removed immediately from the wrapping paper, wiped with a damp cloth, placed on a platter, then covered with waxed paper.

Eggs should be stored in the ice-boxed in a wire basket. To keep whites after eggs have been broken and separated, place them in a glass jar, cover and keep cool.

Egg yolks should be covered with water or milk and placed in a covered jar.

The tendency of lettuce to brown at the edges may be reduced by keeping it wrapped in a damp towel until used.

Use Sour Milk

Never throw out sour milk as it can be mighty useful in making tea-biscuits and even in cornmeal muffins.

Cornmeal muffins — Ingredients: one egg (beaten); one cup sour milk and one-half teaspoon each of soda and salt; one-quarter teaspoon cream of tartar; 1½ cups corn meal; two teaspoons hot grease.

Beat well and pour into heated greased muffin-pans and bake in a quick oven.

1 Pair of Nylons For UK Girls Year

LONDON—(CP)— Britain is producing nylon stockings at the rate of a pair a year for every woman in the country.

Soon it will be up to two a year.

Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, told the House of Commons production is six times what it was early in 1949. Output now is 1,000,000 pairs a week.

Supplies of nylons for stocking-hungry British women are expected to be doubled within the next six months.

A board of trade spokesman warned that this does not necessarily mean a "flood" of extra nylons. But retailers would get "a few extra pairs" in their allocation. Next time there's a nylon sale, the queues probably will be longer, and fewer customers will be disappointed.

Travel Facilities Astonish New Immigrants

MONTREAL — (CP) — Slim, grey-haired Yadsie Urbanowicz who says she was a displaced person before the phrase was coined, is the port of Montreal's good samaritan when it comes to giving new Canadian a helping hand.

Miss Urbanowicz is the port's traveller's aid counsellor responsible for guiding newcomers bewildered by the strange language and customs of a new country. Most of the time it means explaining that things are taken care of.

"Europeans are overwhelmed by Canadian facilities, rather than by the lack of them," she says. "Usually they find their fears about travelling are groundless."

Experienced in handling everything from the approval of a stuffed armadillo by customs officers to the provision of room and meals, to stranded travellers, Miss Urbanowicz speaks 14 languages. Born in Leningrad she came to Canada in 1928.

When she retires, Miss Urbanowicz intends to continue in her work.

"When I retire, I'd like to buy a trailer and stay around the port providing coffee and sandwiches to travellers," she says. "The port hasn't got around to doing it since I've been here and I guess it won't have done anything by then."

*Irium is the registered trade mark for purified alkyl sulphate

The Truth About Tooth Decay

Science has proved that much of the decay that makes cavities is caused by acid-producing bacteria . . . formed by tiny food particles which remain on the teeth after eating.

To prevent acid-producing bacteria from attacking the teeth, keep your teeth clean by brushing them immediately after meals.

Pepsodent with Irium gives you the greatest cleansing action you can get. Thus the surest way to fight tooth decay is to use Pepsodent immediately after eating. Pepsodent gives you the cleanest teeth and when teeth are cleanest they are safest from decay.

PEPSODENT gives the WHITEST teeth

6—In Memoriams

GRAY—In memory of my dear brother, William Henry Gray, who passed away suddenly one year ago today.
Only a memory of bygone days,
And a sigh for a face unseen,
But a constant feeling that God alone
Knows just what should have been.
—Ever remembered by his sister Caroline and niece Elsie.

REYNOLDS— In loving memory of Mrs. Albert Reynolds who passed away two years ago today.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just, to the end of her days,
Sincere and true in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Ever remembered by son Herbert, and Daughter-in-law Ethel, and granddaughters Beverely and Joan.

REYNOLDS — In loving memory of Mrs. Albert Reynolds who passed away two years ago to-day.
But some sweet day we'll meet again,
Beyond the toil and strife
And clasp each other's hand once more.
In Heaven, that happy life.
—Ever remembered by Husband Albert.

WELLS—In loving memory of a beloved husband and father, Frank A. Wells, who passed away July 23, 1948.
God saw what was before him,
And what he had to bear,
So smiling down upon him
He took him in His care.
So tears in our eyes do not glisten,
And our faces are not always sad,
There is never a night or a morning
But we think of the husband and dad we had.
—Sadly missed by wife May, daughter Frances, son-in-law Bill and grandchildren Gail and David.

24—Business Opportunities

A FEW HOMEY FACTS FOR THE HOMESEEKER

IF considering a Home, why build in the City at all when you can centrally locate in Omemee within commuting distance to "work markets" of both cities. If work fails in one, you find it perhaps in the other. One has to take a bus or car to get to work anyway these days. Omemee offers low taxes; better values in land and better community living, and less congestion.

BUT why build anyway? You know an old home for $5,000 or less, and get $3,000 in value in a new home for $8,000—and the lumber market has just gone up again.

SO why waste money? You know a house built 20 to 25 years ago will be here 100 years from now. Where will many of the newer homes be in 25 years. In the next few years, Omemee will be the Heart of Lindsay and Peterborough.

THEN—a word about Home Possibilities when you buy a home. If that home has as well, unusual possibilities for a Business besides just a home; if it has ample yard space—spacious grounds for expansion and business side lines, you have something to develop and enlarge as a Business for yourself or family — and certainly your property has a better resale value. These are, indeed, things to consider when buying a home.

SURE—we have something to sell. We have a selection of good homes in Omemee: Brick Veneered, well located Homes, each with definite Business Possibilities that can be developed. Homes that will develop into greater value. Again we predict — Omemee jammed in between two thriving cities is bound to be the better.

Court Refuses To Accept 'Tire Blew' Idea

Gerald Bleeker, Park St., was today convicted of careless driving by Magistrate R. B. Baxter and fined $25 and 24.50 costs.

The charge arose out of an accident June 30 on Highway 28 a few miles north of Apsley. Bleeker, who was driving north, told court he had a blow-out and the car went out of control on the wet pavement.

Aubrey Tyson, whose car Bleeker hit, testified that Bleeker said after the accident that the tire "must have blown." Tyson said Bleeker did not claim the blown tire as the cause of the accident.

Magistrate Baxter said he did not believe that Bleeker's tire blew before the accident.

Provincial Constable Bert Howden said he believed the point of impact was about three feet east of the west edge of the road. Bleeker's car travelled along the shoulder for 110 feet after the accident, finally striking a tree and a wire fence.

Tyson said that Bleeker's auto left the east side of the road when it was about 50 feet away and turned toward his car. He said it didn't look as though the car had gone out of control.

Customs Plans Delivery Service

OTTAWA, July 21 — (CP) — Revenue Minister McCann announced Thursday that beginning Aug. 1 postal packages and parcels imported by private individuals in Toronto will be delivered to the home where the duty and taxes payable will be collected.

A similar system has been in effect in Montreal since last April.

At present, Toronto residents must go to local customs offices to claim imported parcels and to pay the duty and taxes.

Dr. McCann said that if the new service proves as effective in Toronto as it has in Montreal it probably will be extended to other centres.

To qualify for home delivery, goods must be addressed to a private individual and be of a value of less than $100. They must consist of merchandise not subject to emergency exchange consevation regulations or other import restrictions, such as those contained in the Food and Drug Act and other federal legislation.

Grand Lodge Elects Officers

TORONTO, July 21. — New grand senior warden of the Grand Lodge, AF and AM, is L. A. Simpson of Toronto, elected yesterday at the organization's 95th annual communication.

B. A. Wilson of Barrie is grand junior warden, G. S. Scovell of Toronto is grand chaplain and A. D. Read of Niagara Falls is grand registrar.

Grand Master J. P. Maher of Toronto, the deputy grand master, grand treasurer and grand secretary were elected last year for two-year terms.

Elected to the board of general purposes were: J. A. Hearn and J. R. Rumball of Toronto, B. F. Nott of North Bay, G. F. Clark of Hamilton and W. D. Love of London.

Appointed to the board of general purposes were: Bishop W. L. Wright of Sault Ste. Marie, H. S. Johnston of Lindsay, E. A. Miller of London, R. B. Bow of Fort Williams, [illegible] of Toronto, [illegible] of Hamilton, Harry S. Ewing of Wooler was elected district deputy grand master of Peterborough district and Walter J. Nobes, secretary of Peterborough district during the past year, was named a grand senior deacon.

Willis Stewart Funeral At His Tyrone Home

ROSENEATH, July 21 (ENS) —The funeral service of the late Willis Stewart of Tyrone was held at his residence on Thursday.

The Rev. H. Cresswell, pastor of Tyrone United Church, conducted the service at the house and the Rev. Arthur Luffman, pastor of Centreton United Church officiated at the committal service. Burial was in Centreton Cemetery.

Pallbearers were three nephews, Charles Brown and Allan Brown, Peterborough; Russell Stewart, Centreton; two stepsons, Dawson Timlin and James Timlin Roseneath, and Charles Carruthers of Bowmanville.

Blow Up Train

A U.S. AIR BASE IN KOREA, July 21 (AP)—American Mustangs bombed and blew up a United States ammunition train in the Taejon railway yards today—to prevent it falling into Red hands. Capt. H. Orange Lodge To Put Flowers In Cemeteries

Members of the Watchtower Loyal True Blues, 515, will hold their decoration day in Little Lake Cemetery Sunday.

Rev. T. H. Birch of the Bethel Baptist Church will conduct the ceremony.

Lodge members will meet at their chapel. After the Little Lake Cemetery ceremony they will travel to Zion Cemetery on the Keene road where they will place flowers on the grave of a former member there.

The committee in charge of the ceremony are Mrs. G. Martin, Victor Sedgwick, R. Williams and D. Graham.

Warned To Get License, Crown Incensed

Operator of a Peterborough delivery service, Cal Nichols, 965 High St., was warned by Magistrate R. B. Baxter today to get a public commercial vehicle license.

Nichols faced a charge of carrying furniture without having such a license, but the charge was dismissed when a receipt was produced showing Nichols was owner of the furniture.

Crown Attorney Bradshaw said "I would suggest the accused get a license, because he can't get away with this dodge of having some one scribble out a receipt showing Nichols has bought the furniture, and then sell the furniture back when he gets to his destination."

The information against Nichols, it was pointed out by defence counsel John Corkery, was laid under the Commercial Vehicles Act, repealed in 1949, and replaced by the Public Commercial Vehicles Act.

Court was adjourned for five minutes while Provincial Constable Ray Pollard re-laid the information under the proper act.

Magistrate Baxter asked Nichols where he lived. Nichols said he lived in Peterborough, and His Worship said: "You may have been a bit confused and started off in the wrong direction for home."

Constable Pollard arrested Nichols on Highway 7 with a load of furniture. Nichols' truck was travelling east from Peterborough.

Spend $14 Week For 6 Food Items

OTTAWA, July 21 (CP)—The Canadian Federation of Agriculture estimated today that the average Canadian family spends $14.01 a week for six major food items in the weekly diet — eggs, butter, milk, cheese, beef and pork.

It did not take into account other dinner-table staples, such as bread, vegetables, fruits and preserves.

The $14.01 spent weekly, the national farm organization suggested, is an increase of only 45 cents over the family's $13.56-a-week food budget last year. This, it felt, indicated the average Canadian family was "as well-fed today at little or no greater cost than was the case a year ago."

The Bureau of Statistics, in its latest report of the official cost-of-living index, placed the food sub-index at June 1 at 209 against 160.5 a year ago—a jump of 48.5 points. During May alone, the index climbed from 204.6 to 209 points on rising meat prices.

The 400-000-member Federation said it had made the survey for the Canadian Association of Consumers which has received [illegible] daily [illegible] of high meat prices.

The $14.01-a-week estmate for five persons covers the total cost for the consumption of 5.4 pounds of beef, 5.7 pounds of pork, 16 quarts of milk, 3.2 pounds of butter, one-half pound of cheese and two dozen eggs.

30,000 Lions Head For Home

CHICAGO, July 21 — (AP) — Lions—30,000 of them from 28 countries—roared a sentimental "Auld Lang Syne" Thursday and headed home from their 33rd annual international convention.

Before ending the conclave, they elected new officers and chose Atlantic City, N.J., as the site of their next get-together.

A 35-year-old Texas lawyer, Herbert C. Perry, Jr., of Carrizo Springs, was named to head the world's largest men's service organization, for the coming year. He succeeds Walter C. Fisher, of Queenston, Ont.

He and the other two top officers were raised a step from their previous offices, without opposition. The only contest was for third vice-president, won by S. A. Dodge, of Detroit. He defeated A. Blee Dredge, of Springfield, O. By custom, officers advance a step each year to the eventual presidency.

The new first vice-president is Harold P. Nuter, of Camden, N.J., and second vice-president Edgar M. Elbert, of Chicago.

Dollar Parity Urged Kept For Emergency

MONTREAL, July 21 (CP) — Revaluation of the Canadian dollar to parity with the United States dollar might prove premature but much can be said for a flexible rate responsive to changing conditions, the Bank of Montreal suggests today in its latest business review.

The review, comparing Canadian merchandise trade for the first five months of 1950 and 1949, notes an "almost spectacular" reduction of Canada's adverse trade balance with the United States and its surplus in trade with the United Kingdom.

That gives cause for satisfaction, the review says. But the progress toward balance in overseas trade was largely effected by reducing exports to traditionally important markets.

The bank says a higher value for Canada's dollar would probably have little or no effect on the volume of Canadian goods moving to the U.S. but could be expected to reduce exports overseas.

Other Side

On the other hand, a return to parity would automatically cut the price of all other currencies to the Canadian importer.

"The immediate consequence, therefore, could be an increase in imports from both dollar and sterling areas, a deterioration in our already rather precariously-poised, over-all balance of international payments and, conceivably, an increased reliance on import controls as contrasted with the present relxation of these barriers to trade."

The bank says that import costs are a major factor in the domestic price level although not the only factor. Parity would immediately cut import costs but they would again advance if prices in other countries continued to rise.

Full protection against a long upturn in foreign prices might even mean placing the Canadian dollar at a premium in terms of U.S. funds.

The review said such a policy hardly fits the reality of Canada's trading position. It would seem wise to hold the return to parity in reserve, as an emergency measure for use if external prices rise acutely and if it can be done without seriously damaging external trade.

It may well be, the statement concludes, that thought now should be given to the international monetary fund permitting any member a measure of day-to-day flexibility in exchange rates to allow corrective forces to work automatically.

Pledge No Strikes

LOS ANGELES, July 21. — (AP).—In recognition of "our duty to our brothers abroad," the independent union of petroleum workers has wired to President Truman its pledge for no strikes for the duration of the Korean emergency.

OBITUARIES

J. A. BRYCE

James Archibald Bryce, Peterborough, died here today in hospital after a long illness. He was aged 84.

Born in Keene, Mr. Bryce was a building contractor there when a young man but he came to Peterborough many years ago and was for 35 years Easter Ontario representative of the Pedlar People Ltd., Oshawa.

Most of his life was spent in Peterborough and he was a member of St. Andrew's United church.

Son of the late Andrew Bryce and Mary Elmhirst, Mr. Bryce married Margaret McIntyre, who died in 1949. He leaves three daughters, Mrs. J. S. Henderson (Mary) of R.R. 7, Peterboroughg; Mrs. I. T. Lilico (Edith)of 515 Hunter St., and Mrs. N. A. Moore (Jean) of Agincourt, Ont. His sister is Miss Margaret Jean Bryce of Keene.

The funeral will be on Saturday at 3.30 p.m. at the Comstock funeral home and burial will be in Keene cemetery.

MRS. JAMES PAKENHAM.

Mrs. Mary Eliza Pakenham, widow of the late James Pakenham, 134 Douro St., died Thursday in St. Joseph's Hospital in her 85th year.

A native of Percy township she was the daughter of James Owens and the former Margaret McCormick, both deceased.

She has lived in Peterborough for the past 50 years. Her husband predeceased her in 1935. Mrs. Pakenham was a member of St. Luke's Anglican Church.

Mrs. Pakenham is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. S. Hill (Margaret), and Miss Jean Pakenham, both of Peterborough; and a sister Mrs. Charles Benor of Campbellford.

The funeral service will be held Saturday at 2:30 p.m. at the Comstock Funeral Home, Rev. Walter Gilling of St. Luke's Anglican Church officiating. Burial will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

Potent New Salve Aids Some Cancers

PARIS, July 21 (AP)—A potent new salve has made some breast cancers disappear, Dr. Hanes Littre of Heidelberg, Germany, reported today.

The salve is a new chemical, a kin of the drug Colchicine, made from the autumn crocus plant. The new cousin of Colchicine is 10 times more potent, Lettre told the fifth international cancer research congress, which closes today.

Some breast cancers treated with the new drug disappeared and had not returned three years later, Dr. Lettre said. But because they still might return, they could not be considered cured.

The new drug, N-methyl-Colchisamade, stops cancer cells from dividing or reproducing if it catches them at the middle phase of this activity, he explained.

Laboratory studies have showed the drug is not effective if it reaches living cells before or after that critical time.

Nursing Registry Needs Money Appeal Made To Hospitals

The community nursing registery is in danger of closing because it is running at a deficit, Dr. S. Y. Walsh and Dr. D. Whyte told the Board of Governors of Civic Hospital on Thursday. The doctors attended the board meeting as representatives of the registery to ask for financial support from the board.

Dr. Walsh, as [illegible] said it was felt the registery was of so great a benefit to the hospital that it ought to pay an annual sum towards its operation. That applied to both hospitals, he said, and both were being approached.

Although the hospitals were not obligated to supply private duty nurses for patients, it had been the custom for them to do so, Dr. Walsh said. Before the registery was formed two years ago, highly paid hospital staff often spent many hours a day on the telephone trying to get nurses. But the registery had eliminated that work.

60 Nurses Enrolled

There was now an enrollment of 60 nurses available for private duty nursing and all that was needed was to call the registery when one was required. If the registery said there were no nurses, then it was known that there was no nurse in the city available, and that was all there was to it.

Sometimes the argument had been advanced that the registery was the business of the doctors and nurses, and it was said that they should pay for it, Dr. Whyte said. The doctors paid a fee of $60 a year and the nurses paid $20. While some doctors got a great deal out of the service, others did not use it, but supported it because they felt the registery was necessary to the community.

Dr. Whyte said the doctors did not feel they would be justified in paying more towards the registry, and so unless help was forthcoming from somewhere, it would close at the end of the year. He did not think the doctors would allow it to fold up before then.

Benefit to Hospital

Dr. Walsh stressed that the registry was of such a benefit to the hospital that it should receive financial support from the board. [illegible] no registry, the old system would be reverted to whereby hours were spent on the telephone by members of the staff trying to obtain nurses. Or perhaps the hospital would find it necessary to set up a special staff for this work.

Dr. Walsh said the resitry was set up two years ago at the request of the two hospitals of the city. There were 26 similar organizations throughout Ontario.

The registry provided a telephone service for the doctors. It was a benefit to the community because nurses coming into Peterborough were screend, their credentials gone into and there was no way in which a nurse could be called to serve unless she was fully qualified.

The registry was used by the police when they wanted a doctor in a hurry, and sometimes by shops when a person had fainted.

A Hospital Service

It had been the custom for years throughout this country that when the patient in hospital needed a nurse, the hospital did its best to get a nurse. Now they just had to call the registry.

After stating their case, the two doctors left the meeting, and the board read a letter from Sister M. Gonzaga, secretary of the registry, stating that Civic Hospital was being asked for $400 a year and St. Joseph's for $200.

The board decdied to write to other civic hospitals in Ontario to enquire what support they gave to their registries. It was also decided to obtain details of the registry's 1949 figures and 1950 budget.

Acceptance Of Pictures Worries Hospital's Board Of Governors

Generosity often leads to embarrassment and in view of the unstinted support which residents in the Peterborough district and elsewhere have given to the Board of Governors of the Civic Hospital for the new building, it is an amazing feat for the undertaking to have progressed so far without some delicate situation arising.

This was the happy case until Thursday, when the board came up against a poser.

How Many Can Be Handled?

Needless to say, the board continues to be overwhelmingly grateful for the many donations which are still pouring in but when a third picture was offered for hanging in the hospital, the governors started asking themselves just what the capacity for hanging pictures would be.

Two had previously been accepted gratefully but when the third offer was made—the subject being Toronto harbor—some one brought up the question of where would the pictures be placed, how many more would be offered and would the day come when saturation point had been exceeded before anyone realized it.

Another question was, would the board be justified in accepting pictures without obtaining some reliable opinion before entering into a moral obligation to hang them in the building, of which not only the governors themselves, but the citizens of Peterborough are more than a little proud.

It wasn't that the picture of Toronto harbor wasn't wanted—it had not been viewed yet—but before pictures were accepted wouldn't it be better to look the hospital over and plan some sort of policy for hanging pictures. And someone who knew something about pictures ought to be consulted.

Once pictures were accepted, there was more or less a moral obligation to hang them and so they ought to be seen first.

Poor Art Critics

The group of men sitting round the table in the superintendent's new office on Thursday evening revealed themselves as men sadly lacking in any kind of judgment which they would be willing to support in the face of the community, so far as pictures were concerned. Perhaps they were all being discreetly modest — they were certainly unwilling to assume responsibility for either accepting or rejecting any pictures without the advice of someone better qualified to know.

Several times the whole problem was nearly pushed onto the shoulders of the property committee but Chairman Ian McRae wasn't having any of it. The really grave responsibilities which he has shouldered during the planning and building of the new hospital have been nothing to compare with the dreaded task making so delicate a choice.

Finally what seemed to be the only plausible solution was arrived at. The board will accept the picture, subject to its suitability, to be decided at some future date and in the meantime, the property committee will take stock of the situation and decide where pictures could be accommodated.

The picture has been offered by Mrs. Alfred Dunford of Lakefield and it was with genuine appreciation that the board received the offer. The discussion of the board's policy was one of general principle and a desire to arrive at some method of ensuring that all pictures accepted would be able to be used.

Their Shoes Off, Their Feet Bleeding, Young GI's Found Lying Exhausted In Middle of Korean Battle Road

By PHILIP DEANE.
(Special to The Examiner and London Observer).

KONGJU SECTOR, Korea, July 16 (Delayed).—Late in the evening of Friday, July 14, I was again with the third platoon of K Company, 34th Regiment in the Kongju sector when sniping started from the hills surrounding our position. We unlimbered our rifles and answered the fire.

Sergeant Coulder fired far fewer shots than any of the others, but he only fired when he could see the tell-tale flash of a guerrilla rifle. I lay on the ground near him, using a rifle and trying to copy his coolness; but when so many bullets are flying around you feel like firing as fast as you can and you go through a bandolier of cartridges before you know it.

When the firing ceased Sergeant Coulder reported that he had seen me get a "gook" who had come quite near, and the platoon commander, Lieutenant Macarver made me an honorary private, first class, of the platoon promising to promote me if and when I gave grounds for promotion. Meanwhile, he assigned me the job of "public relations officer" of the platoon.

A jeep load of ammunition passed, on its way to supply troops on our left supporting the 63rd Artillery Battalion. A company had pulled out of the fighting before the signal was given and North Koreans in G.I. uniforms had crossed in strength at Mong Myon. The 63rd had been cut off and its men had retreated blowing up the breeches of their guns with grenades. Two companies were trapped and had taken to the hills to get out of Communist clutches.

"Here's a good story for you, chief," said Sergeant Coulder, and thus challenged I had to go with the jeep. I asked the driver's name but he was too busy doing over 50 mph over an atrocious road and he didn't appear to hear me. We got to M Company and everybody kept tiptoeing around in the dark not bothering to answer my questions until someone told me to keep quiet if I didn't want to get killed."

The jeep was loaded with bazookas and ammunition by silent men who worked fast but noiselessly. Two wounded unable to walk were also loaded and the jeep left, tearing down the road through bursts of mortar shells.

The road was untenable so we made for a hill and dispersed, moving along carefully. In the ominous quiet of the night the most prominent sound was not that of firing but the persistent song of crickets which seemed to mount to high-pitched intensity as one listened carefully for the tell-tale click of a rifle safety catch or other noises that might indicate the presence of guerrillas.

Wounded

Just to make sure of getting us the Communists, who knew we were making for the south, kept firing mortar shells with proximity fuses over us. Shrapnel kept coming down and that's when I was hit. I felt a searing pain in my left shoulder and my hand came away wet when I put it there to investigate.

At first it did not hurt, but soon the wound was warm and I had to give myself an injection of morphia from the small pack I had been given before leaving for the front. The morphia dulled the pain and all other sensations, and the remainder of that night's walk became a hazy mixture of walking, firing, handling a rifle, and walking.

I remember tying my own wound while running quickly for fear of being left behind. I remember seeing shadows moving and not daring to fire first in case these were our own boys.

I remember hearing some of the men shouting, "Sergeant, Sergeant, which way?" and then further shouts as guerrillas and North Korean troops fired at the voices.

After running away all night with the boys of M Company I reached the road and met up again with the third platoon of K Company of the 34th Infantry Regiment. The boys were glum and yet they smiled a greeting.

I joined them on an ammunition lorry that was bringing up the rear of a retreating convoy just behind a tank. At every bridge we crossed the engineers made us get out of the lorry and blow up the bridge; then we drove like hell to catch up with the convoy. The tank always waited for us within easy range, so as to give us support when needed.

We did not talk much, not bothering even to answer snipers' fire, although we were sitting on a ton of high explosives. The men slept in the most fantastic position, head on a can of explosives, feet on someone else's head, impervious to bumps and bullets. The engineers were slaphappy from too much blowing up and they used twice as much explosives as were needed for the job. The result was a series of spectacular pyrotechnics always accompanied by mad shouts of joy.

Exhausted On Road

Every few yards on the road we passed American soldiers lying asleep in the middle of the road, their shoes off, their feet bleeding, unable to wake up because they had reached the point where exhaustion brings oblivion. We loaded them all on the truck, making them stand, packing them tight, so they would not fall, loading them on fenders, on the hood, even on each other, and still they slept, waking only to mumble something incoherently.

And so we went on through the night for I don't know how long, stopping, unloading the sleeping youngsters, blowing up a bridge, loading up again, and rushing at fifty miles an hours in an overloaded truck whose springs bumped alarmingly and whose engines gasped as the driver asked it to do the impossible. I wish I knew the name of the makers to advertise that wonderful vehicle which saved our lives that Friday night.

And then at last we were through. We had reached the point where there were cars to shuttle us back and forth, and where the "medics" (MEDICAL CORPS) in need of medical attention themselves— were ready to administer to the needs of the beaten youngsters that were brought in.

We were taken to Regimental Headquarters, where the wounded had their wounds attended to. Those with serious wounds were patched up as best the doctors could, then put in ambulances, shot full of morphia so as not to feel the agony of the bumpy road, and sent back to base hospital for urgent operations.

Suddenly I knew it was all over with me. I leaned against the wall of the bug-ridden Korean house that served as a dispensary, and I was dead to the world.

West Berlin Revolt Red Demand

Say Western Allies Have No Right In Occupation Plan

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

BERLIN, July 22— (AP) — While the Kremlin's Cominform emissary applauded, East Germany's Communist chancellor urged the people of Allied-occupied West Germany today to open resistance against the policies of the western occupying powers.

The call to revolt was made by Otto Grotewohl in one of the most inflammatory anti - American speeches ever delivered in this four-power city.

Grotewohl addessed the second day's session o the third annual convention of the Socialist Unity (Communist) party in the Russian sector.

He charged that the United States, Britain and France had forfeited their right to remain in Germany because they "violated the Potsdam agreement and ended four-power government." (The official western view is that Russia bears this responsibility).

Don't Have To Obey

"'Nobody in West Germany is legally obligated any longer to obey the orders of the occupying powers," Grotewohl said. "Therein lies the justice of the national resistance (a Communist front movement) because it is a resistance against an illegal situation in which the western allies are exercising might instead of right."

He demanded the withdrawal of the western occupation armies, charging they are now "merely interventional armies." Grotewohl however, said nothing about the 20-division Russian occupation army here—which is larger than all the western forces in Germany.

In the audience of 4,000 applauding delegates was Mikhail A. Suslov, secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Kremlin's chief delegate to the Cominform.

INTERNATIONAL HANDSHAKE — President of the World Organization of the Teaching Profession, Dr. W. F. Russell of New York welcomes Senora Ana Rosa de Bilbao la Vieja, a Bolivian delegate to the fourth assembly at Ottawa. Marcelino Bautista of the Phillipines and Kita Lehtinan of Finland look on. Some 200 teachers from more than 25 countries attended the convention.

$50,000 Fire Sweeps Dairy

RAMORE, Ont., July 22—(CP)—A fire swept through the Ideal Creamery Friday causing $50,000 damage and forcing Mrs. Mona Bastien, 25, to jump 15 feet to the ground to escape the flames.

Mrs. Bastien, alone in an upstairs apartment occupied by the family, jumped when the fire and smoke cut off her attempt to leave by a stairway. She was bruised about the arms and legs and suffered from shock.

Her husband and two other children Albert, 3, and Claudette, 5, were outside when the fire started. One-year-old Diane was sleeping in her carriage on the verandah at the top of the stairs leading to the living quarters.

Prompt action by 10-year-old Vivienne Levlievre of Kirkland Lake who was visiting the families saved the life of Diane. She was playing with the two older children and saw flames coming out of the creamery door. She rushed up the stairs and brought the carriage down. She barely reached the ground with it when the stairs collapsed.

French Communists Leaving In Droves

PARIS, July 22 — (AP)—The interior ministry said today a large number of French Communists within the las few days have been asking passports for trips to iron curtain countries.

Officials refused to give any figures, but French papers said 80 Communist deputies had asked passports for themselves and their families. Most are seeking to go to Czechoslovakia.

The interior ministry refused to comment on press reports that international tension is the explanation for what one paper termed the "flight' 'of the Communists.

Armed Forces Swamped With Recruits

OTTAWA, July 22—(CP)—Canadians continued to throng recruiting stations through the country today as the Dominion's newly-announced economic sanctions against North Korean Reds went into effect.

The three armed forces, seeking to boost their strength by 6,000 to 8,000 men, reported a marked increase in recruiting applicants.

The response to the Navy's call was so heavy that it was forced to issued a special directive to recruiting officers.

Needing less than 1,000 men, naval authorities Friday ordered enlistment of 148 men in the next month—three times the current intake rate—and arranged for the first draft of 74 new sailors to reach the big Cornwallis training base near Digby, N.S., Aug. 7. A second draft will arrive a week later.

Both the R.C.A.F. and Navy said their reservists, all veterans, were signifying willingness to serve again if needed.

The United States left government officials "surprised and puzzled" by rejecting a second Canadian air-lift offer under which two or three four-engined Canadian Pacific Airlines planes would have been used on the long haul.

The forces began clamping a security blackout on their key plans and movements. The Navy said it plans no further statements from Ottawa on the movement of its three Korea-bound destroyers until Gen. MacArthur, United Nations Commander, rules otherwise. The Army indicated little would be said publicly about disposition of anti-aircraft guns and units. Defence sources remained close-mouthed on activities and defences at such bases as the Big Chalk River atomic plant and the Suffield, Alta., bacteriological and chemical warfare station.

Italy Boosts Defence

ROME, July 22— (AP)—Premier Alcide de Gasperi's government was reported ready today to add $88,000,000 to the country's defence budget to increase the army to treaty limits. According to published reports, Friday's cabinet meeting approved Defence Minister Randolfo Pacciardi's plans for increasing the army's effectives from 175,000 to 250,000, the limit set by the Italian peace treaty.

3 Bandits Escape Cordon After Daring Bank Holdup

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., July 22—(CP)—Two armed bandits—, darkness their accomplice, apparently slipped Friday night with their $9,000 bank robbery loot from the police cordoned golf course they made a hideout. A third bandit who participated in the payroll robbery Friday afternoon at a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia at adjoining Maillardville escaped on foot immediately after the raid and also was at large.

Maillardville is 15 miles east of Vancouver and the 180-acre Vancouver Golf and Country Club whose wooded gullies were the scene of the manhunt, lies near the mill settlement.

Police armed with long-range rifles and aided by bloodhounds were rushed to the greens after between $50 and $60 was discovered on the fairway where the two bandits had abandoned a stolen getaway car.

Divided Loot

Police said they believe the money was dropped as the pair attempted to divide the loot "on the run."

One of the holdup men carried a machine-gun. The others carried what were described as sawed-off shotguns. Time of the holdup was minutes before the bank's 3 p.m. closing time.

Four customers and four clerks were forced to lie on the floor by the gunmen, two of whom used grease smears on their faces as a wierd disguise.

Of the $9,000 taken, $6,000 was a hotel payroll.

Nels McIntyre of Maillardville lost his car to the bandits when they ran from the bank. He told police they pushed him aside, climbed into the vehicle "and I was in no position to argue."

The stolen car pulled slowly away, leaving one of the trio standing on the road. He fled down a lane, somehow escaping detection.

With police at their heels, the two abandoned the car near the town and fled for the bushes. Police said they found a hat belonging to one of the gunmen in the car and obtained "plenty of fingerprints."

Files Damage Suit

MIAMI, Fla., July 22—(AP)—A man who says he built the first United States Army "Jeep" is suing Esquire magazine for $200,000 because, he adds, it gave credit for the jeep to another. R. S. Evans, an automobile dealer, filed the damage action in court Friday.

Fire Constable Over Conduct

TORONTO, July 22 (CP)—Attorney-General Porter Friday announced dismissal of Constable Gordon A. Anderson of the North Bay detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police for "unbecoming conduct."

He said that Anderson, suspended June 21 following a complaint by a North Bay hotel proprietor, was fired Friday by the Provincial Cabinet on the recommendation of Police Commissioner W. H. Stringer.

William Noyes, operator of the Algonquin Hotel in North Bay, complained of Anderson's conduct the night of June 17. Testimony at an inquiry held by Commissioner Stringer was that the policeman, under the influence of liquor, got into an argument with Noyes. Details were not disclosed.

He was convicted of discreditable conduct by acting in a disorderly manner.

Civil Servants May Join TLC

TORONTO, July 22 (CP)—The Ontario Civil Service Association will hold a secret ballot of its 10,300 members to see if they wish to affiliate with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Don G. McMaster, secretary of the association, made the announcement Friday after a meeting of the association council. The meeting was called to discuss the refusal of Premier Frost of Ontario to permit Mr. McMaster to take part in wage talks because he is not a civil servant.

The executive of the association resigned after Premier Frost made his stand known. All resignations were accepted by the council but new officers will not be chosen until after a council meeting in September.

Mr. McMaster said 50 branches of the association in Ontario will vote on the question of affiliating with the TLC. He said: "It would be a straight affiliation. . . not a matter of forming a labor union."

Believes Engineering Skill Can Halt Red River Floods

OTTAWA, July 22—(CP)—Engineering skill, in the opinion of Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, can devise safeguards to prevent a repitition of this year's disastrous Red River floods.

In an interview Friday after a three-day meeting of the International Joint Commission, Gen. McNaughton refuted any suggestion that the flood menace can not be controlled.

But he warned it will not be easy to control the river, which this spring sent flood waters boiling over hundreds of square miles of rich Manitoba farm land and inundated large sections of Winnipeg as well as many small towns and villages.

"I believe we can give the protection that is needed, but there is no one set of measures that will do the job," said Gen. McNaughton, chairman of the Canadian section of the Commission. "What we have to investigate now is a combination of measures that will bring safety to the peoples of this region."

In a prepared statement, Gen. McNaughton said the Commission will also give further study" to a report dealing with the long-proposed harnessing of the tides in Passamquoddy Bay off New Brunswick for power purposes.

Reports of the Commission on pollution investigations of St. Clair Lake, St. Clair and Detroit Rivers, the St. Mary River between Lake Huron and Lake Superior and the Niagara River had reached an advanced stage. They would be forwarded to the Canadian and United States governments in the very near future."

Joint Rescue Service For Lakes, Coasts

OTTAWA, July 22 — (CP). — A joint air-sea search and rescue service will be provided by Canada to help safeguard ships on the Great Lakes and plying the high seas near Canada's East and West coasts.

The scheme, announced Friday in a joint statement by Defence Minister Claxton and Transport Minister Chevrier, will be under direction of the RCAF, which already has a smooth-functioning aerial search and rescue set-up.

Besides its own rescue facilities, the Air Force will be able to call on more than 200 government-operated ships.

The unique rescue scheme is the government's answer to requests from various quarters in recent years for a Canadian coast-guard service similar to that operated by the United States.

Have No Confirmation From Navy Heads On St. John's Story

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., July 22 —(CP—The first report of Russian submarine activity off the Canadian Atlantic coast was carried today in the Weekly Sunday Herald here.

A newspage story quoted a foreign trawler captain as saying he spotted a black-hulled undersea craft on the Grand Banks last week and its construction indicated it was Russian.

At Halifax a naval spokesman said: "Owing to security regulations I can't make any comment."

Other Reports

The Herald report came on the heels of reports from the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick coasts of an unidentified sub operating in those waters.

The sub off the Grand Banks surfaced 100 yards from the trawler and remained on the surface for 10 minutes before diving.

The paper quoted the captain as saying it was of Russian construction and pointed out there were no British or American submarines reported in the area at the time.

"As Russia has the only large submarine fleet outside the United States and United Kingdom, it is a matter of speculation as to whether the submarine was Russian. If indeed the sub was Russian it is impossible to say what she was doing so far from her home base. Certainly in view of the serious situation in Korea anything that Russia might have in mind for this side of the Atlantic would not be to the advantage of North America."

Gets Fright

Here is the full story from the Herald:

"A foreign captain of a trawler fishing off the Newfoundland Grand Banks received the fright of his life last week when a crew member reported that a submarine had surfaced off the stern.

"The captain discovered to his amazement that the report was correct. And a large black submarine with no markings had surfaced less than 100 yards from the vessel. The sub remained surfaced for over 10 minutes, then dived.

"The trawler captain got the impression that from the type of construction it was a Russian sub although it is possible for just about any submarine to camouflage its construction to make it look like that of another nationality.

Brotherly Greetings Sent To Korean Reds

BERLIN, July 22(— (AP)—An East German Communist convention today sent "brotherly fighting greetings" and congratulations to the North Korean government.

Some 4,000 delegates to the third annual rally of the Socialist Unity (Communist) party noisily approved "congratulations to the Korean freedom fighters in their struggle against shameful American intervention."

The third day of the party rally was again marked by the presence of high-ranking Communists from all the Cominform countries.

BULLETIN

TAIPEI, Formosa — (AP) — Chinese Communists tonight began shelling Quemoy Island, off the mainland port of Amoy, tonight in evident preparation for an assault on the Nationalist blockade base.

OWEN SOUND, (CP).—Police said today they have tracked two criminally insane murderers to the North Saubie Beach area, a summer resort about 20 miles west of here. Melville Wilkie, 40, and George H. Woodcox, 35, of Haliburton who escaped July 13 from the Ontario Hospital at Penetanguishene, were flushed from a bushland hideout Friday night.

A Slight Mistake!

KANSAS CITY, Kas., July 22—(AP)—Pat Hanlon, 31, received a cheque for $900,650 in payment for a $650 note he sold a bank. He called the bank and said he would return the cheque Friday. An official said the $900,000 mistake was due to failure of a cheque-writing machine.

King Leopold Returns, Well Guarded

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 22 —(AP)—King Leopold III came from exile today and immediately called on all Belgians to avoid further bitter struggle.

The country has been split down the middle by his insistence upon returning to the throne he left 10 years ago after surrendering to the Germans.

Less than five hours after Leopold landed on Belgian soil, the two main opposition parties—the Socialists and the Liberals—demanded that he abdicate. But in his radio address to the country a short time later, the king gave no indication as to whether he intends to quit in favor of his son, Prince Baudouin, who came home with him.

There was not one cheer, nor one single handclap as the monarch landed at heavily-guarded Haren military airport. Only a handful of early risers, besides the 8,000 military guards, were present.

Crown demonstrations by violently anti-Leopold Socialists did not materialize, possibly because the time of his arrival was such a secret.

Plans Conference

Leopold has scheduled a conference with his cabinet this afternoon at his palace in Laeken. News of his future plans probably will be announced then.

Last April the King offered to turn over the throne, at least temporarily, to the Crown Prince if he were allowed to return briefly to Belgium.

Leopold sped from the airport to his country palace at suburban Laeken in a wild race. The King's car, flying the Royal Standard, was in the midst of an armed cavalcade including four armored cars and 17 truckloads of heavily-armed gendarmes.

Mounted gendarmes with drawn swords, foot troops, air force trucks and radio cars gave the whole area the appearance of a military camp.

Czechs Sentence 'Spies' At Trial

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, July 22—(AP)—Two men were reported today to have been sentenced to death and 14 other persons to long prison terms in a spy trial in Liberec, Northern Bohemia.

The sentences were pronounced by a state court holding its hearing in a park pavilion, a court source said.

Five of those convicted were sentenced to life imprisonment. The other terms ranged from 15 to 25 years.

The group had been accused of spying for an unspecified foreign power and of plotting to overthrow the Communist-led government of Czechoslovakia.

New York Civilian Defence Put On Rush Order Basis

NEW YORK, July 22—(AP)—New York is getting its guard up. Spurred by war signs, officials have put civilian defence preparations on a rush-order basis.

The hastened program is statewide, but the emphasis is on New York city, considered the focal point of danger in any atom-bomb attack.

Broad plans are being mapped to try to safeguard the sprawling Metropolitan area's 14,000,000 inhabitants in event of an emergency.

Most of the activity in civil defence machinery has come since the Korean outbreak.

Installed last week as head of the State's Civil Defence Commission was Gen. Lucius D. Clay, former United States military commander in Germany.

Key state and city officials have been enlisted in the multiple effort to provide ample warning of any threatened raid, stave it off if possible, and repair the damage if it comes.

Here is the progress report to date:

1. Through the State, 618 air raid observation posts have been established on hilltops and high buildings at eight-mile intervals. Manned by 14,000 volunteers, the posts are linked by telephone to four flight-charting centres which, in turn, would alert endangered communities.

2. The State Health Department has trained 93 specialists in treating atom-bomb casualties. Within the next two months, the training is to be passed on to State nurses and 15,000 private doctors.

3. Clay says a plan is being worked out to evacuate New York residents to safer areas if necessary.

Vast Red Pincer Movement Dims Good News Of Two Victories For U.S.

Shattered Division At Taejon Facing New Communist Threat; Fresh U.S. Troops Push Beyond Yongdok

TOKYO, July 22—(CP)—United States and South Korean troops drove the North Koreans from two strategic towns in Eastern and Central Korea but fell back on the western Taejon front today before one arm of a vast Communist pincer movement. Americans and South Koreans took over the ruins of Yongdok Friday under cover of heavy Alied naval gunfire. The town is on the east coast 25 miles north of the First Calvary Division beachhead at Pohang. It was reported destroyed by British and American naval guns Wednesday.

Negro troops of the 25th infantry division and South Koreans routed the invaders from Yechon in Central Korea Friday after 16 hours of artillery attack and house-to-house fighting.

Yechon is 50 miles inland and in line with the northern arm of a Red pincer aimed at cutting the U.S. rail supply line from the southeastern port of Pusan. Pusan supplies the U.S. 24th infantry division fighting the holding war on the Taejon front.

Northern Pincer

The northern point of this pincer army appears to be at Mungyong, 20 miles northwest of newly-recaptured Yechon. There the tank-led 15th Red division was reported gathering reinforcements for a drive south of Kumchon, on the Pusan-Taejon railroad 40 miles southeast of Taejon.

The southern arm of the Communist pincer is formed by two columns striking southwest of Taejon.

Gen. MacArthur said one of these moved 16 miles from Kumje south to Chongup and the other advanced in a parallel line 20 miles from Chonju to Imsil.

The points of the southern arm, at Chonup and Imsil, are 50 and 60 miles southwest of Taejon.

Pressure Greatest

The hinge of the pincer drive is Red-held Taejon. The pressure there is greatest. U.S. troops gave up Taejon Thursday after two days of heavy attack from overwhelmingly numbers of Red armor, infantrymen and guerrillas. They withdrew a short distance to hills southeast.

The Americans made further withdrawals to better neutral defence Friday, MacArthur said. The South Korean first corps on the American right plank had backed up in the same direction at the same time.

AP correspondent Leif Erickson said Communist forces were active Saturday near new American positions southeast of Taejon, but there was no penetration of the American and South Korean lines.

A navy communique announced the recapture of Yongdok but did not identfy the U.S. troops in the action and made no mention of ground fighting.

An Eighth Army headquarters spokesman told Erickson that the troops who entered Yongdok had pushed a short distance northward of the Tow to favorable terrain.

There was still no word of the whereabouts of Maj.-Gen. William Dean, commander of the 24th Division.

Canada Ready To Start 2nd Atomic Pile

OTTAWA, July 22—(CP)—A start on Canada's second radioactive pile—the key to atomic energy research and production—may be only a few months off.

Its construction at the Chalk River project would not only consolidate but extend Canada's lead in one vital field of atomic development. Its importance in any new war would be great.

Chalk River's scientists and engineers were reported in official circles today to be on the verge of licking the main physical obstacle barring the way to its construction—agreement on the pile's design.

They predicted that specifications, estimates of costs and proposed designs of the pile or reactor would be placed before the government within the next month or so.

Have One Desire

The work has been dominated by one main desire— to make the second pile as spectacular a success as the first, built by Canada under a wartime agreement with the United States and Britain.

Korea and its implications have wiped away virtually all doubt that Cabinet will give favorable and probably quick considerations to the proposition.

The purpose of the pile, as is that of the present one, would be peaceful research. But both could be switched over to war purposes if necessary.

Expect U.S. Army Top Two Million

WASHINGTON, July 22 (AP) —The number of Americans in uniform probably will climb over 2,000,000 within the next few months.

The United States armed forces have indicated as much to the House of Representatives armed services committee—which, like its senate counterpart, voted Friday to throw out the 2,005,882-man ceiling on military strength previously set by Congress. That ceiling compares with a present forces strength of about 1,458,000.

To build toward the higher figure, all the services except the air force have announced they are calling up reserves.

The air force has indicated it won't order up any reserves for a week or so, but Col. Harland Parks told the house committee the air arm would like authority to draft veterans of the Second World War if it fails to fill its manpower needs through volunteers and reserves.

Navy's Top Admirals Discuss Pacific Fleet

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 22—(AP)—A deployment of the Pacific fleet to support Gen. MacArthur's operations in Korea and at the same time strengthen the United States submarine and air defences was under consideration of the navy's top admirals today.

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations and Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, headed the conferees.

The subject of their discussions was disclosed Friday by Sherman who told a press conference that assignment of fleet units to support the Korean campaign is "one of the principal assignments of the fleet."

Ball Park Lights Turned On At Wooler Park

HASTINGS, July 22 (ENS) — Crowds filled Wooler fair ground on Friday evening at the opening of the new lighted park.

The RCAF band from Trenton station gave a concert which was followed by remarks by the Hon. W. A. Goodfellow and Dr. F. G. Robertson, M.P.

Warden Bruce Jandrew officially turned on the lights, and made way for the feature attraction, a regular TVL game between Frankford, the league leaders, and Wooler, the current cellar dwellers.

Big Barney McCall was on the mound for Wooler, opposed by Dan Rogers, formerly of Stirling, now on the Frankford roster. It was Wooler all the way, as after bowling Frankford over 1, 2, 3, they piled up a lead of three coming out on th big end of a runs and were never headed, 12-4 count.

Frankford fought back but Barney was in rare form taking out 11 on strikeouts and giving up but four scattered hits.

Lefty Austin, league president and Wooler manager, who has been the big push behind the venture, had the honors of hitting the first home run in the park, a long drive to centre field.

The win puts Wooler, just half a game behind Campbellford, who are at present holding down fourth spot.

Shipped Apples Not Inspected

COBOURG, July 22 (ENS) — Charged with shipping apples across the Ontario-Quebec border without an inspection beforehand, Joe Persofsky of Colborne was fined $25 and costs in court Friday. The shipment was from Colborne to Montreal. A charge of shipping apples from Picton that had not been inspected, was withdrawn.

Henry Williamson of Oshawa, was sentenced to one day in jail on a dangerous driving charge and $10 and costs for having liquor in an illegal place. Williamson was involved in an accident last weekend near Morrish Church, west of Port Hope. Provincial Constable C. Meadows of Cobourg testified that he had found a bottle of wine and a part bottle of whiskey, along with eight empty beer bottles in Williamson's car. Williamson smelled of liquor, the constable said.

The accused said that he had been out fishing and that the accident occurred when a car ahead with no taillight loomed up. The wine, he told the court, had been hidden in the car by himself because his mother was opposed to wine. He said he had had some liquor while out fishing and this explained the part bottle of whiskey. As far as the empties were concerned, he had found them in a bush and was taking them home to Oshawa to cash them in.

New Barracks Cost 2 Million

OTTAWA, July 22 (CP).—The Defense Department called Friday for tenders for new army and air force barracks to accommodate thousands of recruits expected to join the armed forces over the next few months.

Cost of the new buildings alone was estimated to be more than $2,000,000.

In addition to a series of 250-men barracks blocks, a supplementary program of renovating older service quarters also has been initiated.

Details of the barracks construction program follows:

Barriefield (Kingston) — Barracks block to house army recruits undergoing basic training, $300,000.

Camp Borden—Barracks block for armored corps personnel, $300,000.

Shilo, Man.—Barracks block for Royal Canadian Artillery, $300,000.

Chilliwack, B. C.—Barracks block to house new reinforcements for Canada's Airborne Corps, $300,000.

Fort Nelson, B. C.—Barracks block to house additional RCAF personnel.

Pearson Suggests Resolution Be Mailed

OTTAWA, July 22 (CP) — A nine member delegation of the Canadian Peace Congress, led by Dr. James Endicott, arrived in Ottawa Friday to hammer at External Affairs Minister Pearson's door with another petition. They found nobody home.

Mr. Pearson, on holidays, left a message suggesting the congress send its resolutions by mail.

The congress was urging that Canada withdraw from the Korean war and support Soviet efforts to admit Red China to the United Nations.

"However no British or American markings were on the sub and as the trawler had no ship to shore radio it was impossible to report seeing the sub to the authorities until the ship returned to port.

Investigating Report

At Ottawa a Royal Canadian Navy official said the reports are being investigated but results of inquiries are not yet known.

"There is no information at the moment to indicate these reports are true," he added.

Jane's Fighting Ships, in its 1950 edition, said about 360 Russian subs are believed to exist including former German tonnage.

The construction of subs is of special priority in the USSR. Many of the newer craft are high-speed ships equipped with the "snorkel" device which enables them to remain under water for weeks at a time without surfacing.

British and American subs, using snorkel, during the last year have recorded submersions of about four weeks without surfacing.

Aiming At 1,000

Jane's says that under the current Russian ship-building program the Soviets hope to have 1,000 subs completed by 1950-51, of which 400 were to be in the Far East, 300 in the Baltic and the remainder in the White and Black Seas.

With the outbreak of war in Korea, Russian subs have been reported operating from Siberian bases in the China Seas and the Sea of Japan. The U.S. Seventh Fleet, in convoying an American task force for the amphibious landing at Pohang on the east cost of South Korea Tuesday, reported Russian subs were in waters near Formosa.

There has been little or no verification by American authorities of many reports of Russian subs operating off the U.S. west coast within the last year.

Find No Airport U.S. Visitors Land At Toronto

Several American guests at Oak Orchard, who had flown north in their own planes, had to land at Toronto and Oshawa, and completed their trips by other accommodation.

Mr. Don Sawhill, president of Mercer Tube Company, Sharon, Pa., had to land his twin-engine Beechcraft in Toronto, and then had one of the Imperial Oil Company's seaplanes set him down at Gannon's Narrows.

Mr. Daniel Kelly, executive vice-president of the Electric Auto Lite Co., Toledo, O., was forced to ground at Oshawa, and motored from there to Buckhorn Lake. These instances were recently mentioned as evidence of the increasing need of airport facilities near Peterborough.

Three Peterborough Centennial medals will be awarded by the Horticultural Society at their flower show next month at the Exhibition.

One will be for the best decorative display in the open classes, another for the outstanding exhibit in cut flowers and potted plants.

The society has conducted its annual lawn and garden competition. In the industrial class it set up two sections instead of one. Larger factories of the city were grouped in one, and the smaller places of business in the other.

West Indies Hopes Dashed

NOTTINGHAM, England, July 22—(Reuters)—West Indies hopes of batting through the third day of the cricket test match and compiling a huge score were dashed this morning when a fine spell of bowling by Alex Bedser and keen fielding accounted for the remaining seven wickets in 80 minutes for the addition of 79 runs.

The West Indies innings closed at 558, which gave them first innings lead of 335 over England who, by lunch, had tallied eight runs for no wickets in their second innings.

During their first innings in reply to England's 223 the West Indies batsmen broke the following records:

The West Indies total was the highest test total by either side in England.

Frank Worrell's 261 was the highest test score ever made at Trent Bridge grounds here.

Worrell made the highest score by a batsman for either side in the series in England.

Want To Know Formosa Stand

LONDON, July 22 (AP)—Four members of the House of Commons called on Britain today to make clear what position she would take if Russia and the United States ever go to war over the Chinese Nationalist stronghold of Formosa.

The four—a Conservative, two Labor members and a Liberal — made their request in a letter to The Times. They described Britain's present attitude as "obscure" although they noted the government has said it would not aid American forces ordered to neutralize the Chinese Nationalist stronghold.

Outlining how a major war could break out, the four said any American action against a possible attack by Red China on Formosa might be regarded as aggression by the Peiping government.

Then, they said, the Chinese Communists could call on Russia for help under the terms of the mutual aid treaty between the two countries and a third world war might be under way.

Accident Victim Reported Progressing

The condition of Gerald Byers, 21, 27 Park St., injured Thursday morning in a car accident north of Downeyville, is "fairly good" today.

He is in Civic Hospital with broken ribs and other injuries.

His brother Don, 16, sustained some facial cuts at the time but was allowed to go home after treatment by Dr. G. W. Earle of Omemee.

The accident occurred when the northbound car failed to make a turn on the Omemee-Dunsford county road, a mile north of Downeyville.

Gerald Byers told police he was blinded by the headlights of an approaching car and crowded too far over on his own side of the road. The Byers car crashed into a road grader and a large pile of sand, receiving about $800 damage.

Wants One Korea

WASHINGTON, July 22 (AP) —Senator Robert Taft (Rep O.) wants United States forces to capture enough of Communist North Korea "so that a unified Korea may be set up" "Personally, I should think we would have to march right on over the 38th parallel at at least occupy the southern part of North Korea," Taft, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, said in a statement made available Friday.

Funeral Service At Swift Current

NORWOOD, July 22—(ENS)— The funeral of the late Mrs. A. M. Thistlethwaite took place recently at Knox United Church, Swift Current, Sask., followed by burial in the Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Mrs. Thistlethwaite was born in Norwood August 16, 1878, the fifth daughter of the late Samuel and Ann Scott. She was married February 28, 1906, to Andrew M. Thistlethwaite, also of Norwood.

They farmed in Ontario until March, 1909, when they moved west to the Stewart Valley district, where they successfully farmed until about ten years ago. Then they retired owing to the failing health of Mrs. Thistlethwaite, and built a home in the hamlet of Stewart Valley where they have lived ever since.

Mrs. Thistlethwaite tok an active part in Sunday school work. She leaves her husband, three sons and 2 daughters: Ashworth and Lloyd, of Stewart Valley; Ralph of Swift Current; Anna Jean (Mrs. R. Anderson) and Dorothy (Mrs. M. Halverson), of Gull Lake, all with their families and 13 grandchildren were present at the funeral.

Also four sisters and two brothers survive: Mrs. William Stillman, Oshawa, Ont.; Mrs. Lewis Elmhirst, Hastings, Ont.; Mr. Samuel Scott, Norwood; Mrs. Jennie Stewart, Swift Current, Sask.; Mrs. Mary King and William Scott, of Stewart Valley, Sask.

A service was conducted at Warren's funeral home by the United Church student minister of Stewart Valley, Mr. D. Cook, for the immediate family, before going to the church where the service was conducted by a family friend, the Rev. Baatke, of Saskatoon, assisted by Mr. Cook, who read the scripture. Mr. Baatke based the text of his remarks from Isiah 40, 1-2. Hymns sung by the congregation were: "Rock of Ages" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." Solos were by Mrs. C. A. Lett, of Swift Current, "Saved by Grace" Mrs. Ronald Nesbitt, of Dummer, Sask., "After"; Mr. Baatke, "I Won't Have to Cross Jordon Alone"; and at the graveside, the Rev. and Mrs. Baatke sang "The City Four Square." The scripture reading and hymns and solos had been previously selected by Mrs. Thistlethwate.

Pall bearers were all neighbors: A. F. Knapper, J. Bay, Thomas McConnell, Edwin Stephens, R. Drummond and J. B. Campbell.

The large crowd and many beautiful flowers bore testimony of the love and respect of many relatives and friends. Mrs. Thistlethwaite had been in failing health for more than ten years. In May, 1947, she had the misfortune to fall and break her hip and since that time she has been helpless and mostly bedridden. Mr. Thistlethwaite has constantly been at her side.

Relatives from a distance attending the funeral were: her brother-in-law, Harry Nesbitt; nephew, Ronald, and Mrs. Nesbitt and son, Robbie of Dummer, Sask.

Argentine Gov't Halts Meat For Great Britain

BUENOS AIRES, July 22 — (Reuters)—The Argentine Government Friday ordered meat-packing houses to suspend all shipments to Britain.

The Anglo-Argentine five-year meat agreement entered its second year July 1 with prices to be paid unsettled.

At one time it was feared negotiations would be broken off then, but Argentina announced she had 10,000 tons ready for shipment which were sent while talks continued.

Argentine authorities said they could charge $273 a ton, but the British mission said it would only pay $252. Loading went ahead as neither side would take responsibility for another rupture in the meat relations between the two countries.

Thorny Problem

Trade between Britain and the Argentine has been a thorny problem since the signing of the Andes Agreement in February, 1938. That was followed by the five-year agreement that began in July last year, a reciprocal arrangement under which each country agreed to buy $436,000,000 of goods from the other.

Britain sold oil and bought principally meat.

An announcement said Argentine acted Friday because "the British Ministry of Food should agree to pay $273 a ton. The measure is effective from noon Friday and therefore the meat packers will send no more meat."

Canada Tells UN Troops Are Out

OTTAWA, July 22 (CP). — United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie was officially informed Friday that Canada is unable at this stage to send ground troops to Korea.

The External Affairs Department announced that Mr Lie was also informed that the government is willing to consider Canadian participation "in a United Nations force for service in Korea should a decision to that effect be taken by the Security Council."

Canada's formal reply to Mr. Lie's call to 52 nations for combat support in Korea was delivered to him at Lake Success by John Holmes, head of the Canadian delegation.

It was based largely on the statement by Prime Minister St. Laurent on Wednesday. It gave formal notice to U.N. that Canada is turning over a squadron of transport planes for the Korean airlift.

The department released the letter Mr. Holmes delivered. It said that in accordance with Mr. Lie's own suggestion, detailed arrangements for use of the transport squadron would be made with the unified U.N. command.

Mr. Lie's attention was drawn to the fact that "Canada is taking immediate steps for strengthening and increasing its armed forces," one reason being it membership in U.N.

CAMBRAI, France, July 22— (AP)—A tornado ripped through this northern industrial area late Friday, killing six and possibly eight persons and injuring scores. One estimate of the number injured ran as high as 200. About 300 persons were left homeless. Damage to buildings and crops exceeded a billion francs ($2,850,000).

Get Nasty Deal

SPOKANE, July 22 (AP)—Notices of eviction or rent increase have been handed to wives and families of at least six Spokane air force base fliers who were ordered to the Pacific, Mayor Arthur Meehan says. "If they continue at this rate I'll recommend that rent control be put back into effect," he said.

Of Villain Who Robbed Marmora Band and PO

MARMORA, July 21—(ENS)— Usually when war buddies get together in a Legion hall the conversation drifts to wartime experiences or present day Legion activities. A departure from this was noted as some first world war veterans sat at their table in the Marmora Legion Hall one night recently.

The building served as a private bank at the beginning of this century, owned by A. W. Carscallen.

"Did you hear of the time when this bank was robbed?" asked one of the trio at the table. The elder of his companions then gave the following account of the robbery and its interesting sequel.

Somewhere around the year 1900, two men forced entry into the bank, blew up the safe and departed with a smaller sum of money than they expected to find. They then visited Norwood and robbed the post office. The postmaster at that time was the late J. B. Pearce. His son Charles was operating a grocery store at Havelock at the junction of No. 7 Highway and Old Havelock road.

The idea occurred to the father that the thieves would endeavour to get away on the early morning CPR train as it halted at Havelock so he advised the son to keep a lookout around the station property. Some time before the arrival of the train, a man was seen carrying a grip and acting suspiciously.

When the train pulled in the Norwood postmaster was there. He noticed this man still carrying the grip, mounting a car on the opposite side to the platform and giving a sideways look as he was about to enter the door. This added more to the postmaster's supicions, so he hurriedly got on the car, and while the stranger was still in the doorway, grabbed him by the neck and lifted him off his feet.

The man did not relax his hold of the grip and later, when overpowered through the help of other men, mentioned that he had dropped the grip, neither he or his captor would have survived an explosion which which have wrecked the car. Inside the grip was a goodly quantity of nitroglycerine.

The man was placed in gaol in Peterborough, later to escape, but was captured while endeavouring to get into the States. The narrator of this story never learned what befell the other man implicated in the robberies.

Teachers' Group Would Defend Their Liberties

OTTAWA, July 22—(CP)—Election of officers and a heavy list of resolutions faced delegates representing 2,000,000 teachers from around the world at today's closing session of the Fourth Assembly of the world organization of the teaching profession.

The week-long gathering, attended by about 150 delegates from more than 25 countries, will end Sunday with an address by W. F. Russell of New York city, W.O.P.T. president.

The W.O.P.T. Secretary-General, W. G. Carr of Washington Friday night urged the organization to set as one of its major goals the defence of teachers' and children's liberties throughout the world.

Political Angle

"If our international teachers organization is to be effective, I venture to say that it will have to deal with issues which have political implications," said Dr. Carr.

W.O.P.T. "must shake itself loose from the crippling superstition that teachers organizations should never . . . engage in anything that has the faintest touch of political significance to it."

Dr. Carr said another practical goal would be to develop better national organizations of teachers.

"The plain truth is that there are not much more than half a dozen reasonably effective national teachers organizations in the world today."

By BOB HATTON

That house has all the blinds drawn. There's a pile of newspapers laying on the verandah. Four quarts of milk is more than one day's supply for a house that size.

A housebreaker walks along a street and picks out the houses that are obviously deserted. Then he decides which one of many is likely to yield some worthwhile loot.

Rest Is Simple

When he picks one out, the rest is simple. He waits until darkness, walks around to the back, breaks a pane of glass, reaches in and unlocks the window, opens it and hoists himself in.

He walks around trying drawers and desks, teapots and all the other places he has found money before. From time to time he may light a match to help him find his way about the unfamiliar house.

In one drawer he picks up a bit of loose change and maybe a couple of bills. In another he finds two or three rings or a watch. In a cupboard he may find a couple of bottles of whisky. If he's lucky, his loot may be much more.

When the owners of the house come back from their holidays, they find their valuables gone And they are surprised.

They don't realize they invited robbery just as much as if they put a sign on the front of their house saying: "Gone on vacation, come in and ransack at your leisure."

The chances are the victims of the robbery didn't get around to letting the police know they would be away and their house should be checked from time to time. Or, having notified the police, they thought they had done everything there was to do.

Little In Peterborough

This year there has very little housebreaking in Peterborough, Chief Constable John Thompson reported.

The reason for this may be that the city's residents are being a little more careful when they leave their homes to go on vacation. Or it may be that city police picked up most of the would-be housebreakers during the winter and early spring.

Starting about November Peterborough was struck by an epidemic of robberies of houses. With little or nothing to go on, constables and detectives carefully gathered bits and pieces of information until they began to have some pretty accurate ideas of whom the thieves were.

Then one by one they caught them. At one point they cleared up about 25 unsolved thefts when they picked up a gang of juveniles late in the winter.

Invitations To Burglar

However, there is no doubt a few simple precautions can cut down the chances of your house being broken into. No burglar will go near a house where he thinks there may be someone inside.

All the blinds drawn in the windows of a house are a sure sign there is no one living inside Verandah chairs turned over and leaned against a wall is another good indication the owners are away.

A few days collection of The Examiner and several bottles of milk on the verandah are sure-fire signs. Closed windows on a hot day is another good sign. Lawns that have been left uncut for a couple of weeks are another signpost. A bunch of letters sticking out of a mailbox is unmistable evidence

Anything that points to the house being empty is an invitation card to the alert housebreaker.

Some Precautions

When you leave on your holidays, you had better find some way of rubbing out these invitations.

Have the post office hold your mail until you return. Ask a neighbour to cut your lawn and you can do the same for him when he's away. You might even ask a neighbour to open your windows from time to time to air the house out.

Make sure the paper boy and the milkman know you are going to be away. Another thing which leaves the door open to an unguarded house is leaving the inside door of the milk chute open.

Usualy the milk chute is beside the back door. And it is no trick for a man to reach through the milk chute and undo a lock on the door. This is a lot easier for the breakin artist than cracking a pane of glass which might be heard by a neighbour.

In most cases it's up to the residents themselves whether their valuables remain where they belong—in their homes, or line the pockets of some housebreaker

Using Palace For Important Visitors To UK

By SIDNEY TAYLOR

LONDON, July 22 (Reuters)—Hampton Court Palace, where King Henri VIII wooed and won his six wives 400 years ago, is likely to become the government's number one hospitality show place for important overseas visitors.

The government tried out the idea this month with the 50 delegates to the Commonwealth Agricultural Bureau Conference. By special permission of King George VI they were given supper in William III's organery. This is by no means the most attractive room in the palace—it is a long bare narrow hall panelled in dark oak—but it happens to be near the modern kitchens.

The kitchens of Henry VIII's times are far away They are huge and cavernous, with open fireplaces and spits for roasting oxen whole.

The supper had none of the crudities of old England. It was French cooking, but the main dish was capon, a favorite of Henry's until old age, decaying teeth and the wise counsel of his sixth and most successful wife, Katherine Parr, made him take to slops.

Hampton Court is reputed to have two ghosts. Guides swore that Queen Katherine Howard, fifth wife of the monarch, had been reported "down the ages" as having been seen rushing wildly across the haunted gallery, apparently still beseeching Henry to save her from the block.

The other ghost is Mrs. Penn, devoted nurse of the boy King Edward VI, also did not appear.

Markets Bouncing Back Strongly

By FRANK KAPLAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Stock markets chalked up their first gains in a month this week. Prices bounced up strongly over a broad front for the first week since the outbreak of fighting in Korea June 25.

Korea was a signal for a sharp sell-off after a year of almost uninterrupted advance. The selling continued until this week when buyers moved in and pulled the prices steadily upwards.

Caution was still the market watchword but the air appeared to have cleared. Traders made decisions more readily and the advance was orderly.

President Truman's message to Congress Wednesday caused a temporary ripple but the trend resumed before the day was over. So-called "war stocks" attracted attention.

Many investors are getting rid of holdings which they consider would not be good in times of war and switching to companies that might benefit.

Just Waiting

However, the week's recovery movement might turn out to be just the opportunity for which many traders have been waiting. One New York brokerage house comments that a fair recovery might present an ideal opportunity to lighten holdings and then sit back to see which way the Kremlin cat jumps.

As the week drew to a close, the market appeared to be reflecting this sentiment. Trading slowed and leaders had difficulty continuing the advance. There was a slight increase in selling following three successive days of strong advance.

An interesting sidelight on world market movements during the week was the activity of the Tokyo Exchange. Businsse boomed with a record number of shares traded in one session as heavy speculative buying appeared, betting that the Korean fighting would give Japanese industry a chance to make big profits.

Bounce Ahead

The New York market started the week with a continuation of the declines of previous weeks, but bounced ahead strongly on Tuesday for the best gain in two years. Truman's recommendations stalled Wednesday's advance temporarily, but prices resumed the recovery movement and picked up speed Thursday. "War" groups such as rails, steels, chemicals, rubbers, aircrafts and oils paced the advance. Rails again boosted the market yesterday despite appearance of mild selling.

Market value of stocks listed in New York increased by about $4,000,000,000 during the four-day climb. The Associated Press 60-stock average closed yesterday at 74.8, a gain of 3.3 from the previous Friday.

Canadian markets reflected advancing Wall Street. Base metal and oil stocks attracted attention. Golds, generally ignored when industrials are strong, also climbed. In Toronto, the Exchange's index of representative industrial stocks showed a gain of 11.57 over the five days. Base metals climbed 10.87, Western oils 7.12, and golds 4.02.

Volume for the five days was 6,467,000 shares, compared with 7,540,000 shares the previous week.

Plan Build Hospital

WINDSOR, July 22 (CP) — Construction will begin soon on a new factory hospital and employment building for the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited, in Windsor, the company announced Friday. The $175,000 building is expected to be completed late this year.

Newspaperman Dies

AMHERST, N.S., July 22 (CP) —One of the best know newspapermen in the Maritimes, Ronald M. (Scoop) Ross, for more than 30 years news editor of the Amherst Daily News, died here Friday night. He was 55.

Mixup Keeps Growing Still To Have Dock

TORONTO, July 22—(CP)—It all started with an innocent accident.

Last week the ferry Sam McBride, operated by the Toronto Transportation Commission between Toronto's islands and the city, rammed into a dock at Hanlan's Point on one of the islands. Planking and pilings were damaged.

Repair work was begun on the north dock at Hanlan's Point before someone remembered it was the south dock that was damaged, not the north. A little red-faced, officials got that straightened around.

Friday it was revealed the completed repairs made it impossible for the McBride to dock—the new pilings made the dock too narrow.

Repairs are under way.

Film On Mining

HALIFAX, July 22 (CP)—An 800-foot film showing the history of coal mining in Nova Scotia is ready for release, the visual education branch of the Nova Scotia education department announced Friday.

Bulldozer Crash

GOULAIS BAY, Ont., July 22 (CP)—A bulldozer plunged over a 16-foot embankment near here Friday, killing the driver, John H Karalash, a prominent Algoma district lumber operator. Karalash was clearing waste near his mill, 23 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, when he was killed

Asks Quarantine Of Communists

QUEBEC, July 22—(CP)—Premier Duplessis told his weekly press conference Friday there is little the government can do about Communist inspired peace petitions circulating in rural municipalities as long as Communists have the use of the mails. His view, the premier said, was that Communists should be "quarantined."

Mr. Duplessis announced that the new provincial social welfare courts will start work Aug. 16. He also revealed that he had suffered a rib fracture in a highway collision last Sunday night when he was returning from a bridge inauguration ceremony at Arvida, Que.

The 60-year-old premier said he felt as spry as ever and made light of the whole affair.

He commented briefly on the case of provincial policemen now before the courts in Montreal and said that if any guilt is proved "the guilty will be punished as they deserve."

Juvenile Delinquency

The new social welfare courts will be responsible for cases involving juvenile delinquency, care of the indigent and insane, child adoption and family problems. The first courts will be set up in Montreal, Quebec, Three Rivers and Sherbrooke.

Four judges of juvenile courts here and in Montreal will become judges of the courts and four others will be named among whom will be the chief judge.

Premier Duplessis commented on Communism when he was asked if the government knew about the Communist-sponsored pledges being circulated in rural municipalities and signed by a number of mayors.

"If someone has smallpox, his house is quarantined. But Communism is worse than physical smallpox since it attacks the soul.

"Communists should be quarantined. Communists should be treated as enemies of the country and of our democratic institutions."

Good Labor Tactics

VANCOUVER, July 22 (CP)—Canada provides as much machinery for settling labor-management grievances as any country in the world, Angus McInnis CCF member for Vancouver East, said in an interview Friday. Mr. McInnis, just returned from the 33rd annual conference of the International Labor Organization at Geneva, Switzerland, said Canada is far in advance of most countries in labor matters.

Hinting At Increased Taxes

On Thursday this newspaper carried a dispatch from Ottawa in which someone identified only as "a Government official" suggested that Canada's contributions to the war in Korea made an increase in taxes "a real possibility." Our government has has a way of sending out these little feelers before they raise taxes, as a method of sounding out public opinion and perhaps softening up the tax-paying public for the proposed increase.

* * *

On Thursday also we printed an editorial from the Kingston Whig-Standard which gave a good deal of information about where our tax money really goes. Any citizen who was prepared to puzzle over that information for a while must have been amazed by the size of some of our national expenditures and must have wondered if these expenditures are really justified. It was on Thursday, too, that the Toronto Globe and Mail published an editorial in which it pointed out that our Federal Income Tax branch now employs 10,629 people and that their combined salaries use up more than all the taxes collected from 2,012,000 taxpayers in three lowest income categories. To make this clear, let us state it in another way:

Taxes from everybody in Canada earning up to $3,000 a year amount to $26,7[illegible]1,000.

The salaries of the employees of the Income Tax branch amount to $26,924,932.

That means that more than 2,012,000 people in Canada pay taxes simply to pay the salaries of the tax-gatherers.

* * *

If the government really wants to know what the public feels about this situation, we think that we can give the answer: the public thinks that a good deal of money could be saved by decreasing the great army of tax-gatherers. In 1939 they numbered only 1,291. Why are 10,629 people required for the work now? Surely half that number could be made to handle the work if the most efficient methods were employed? The reluctance of governments to fire anybody is well known, but if that reluctance is maintained in the face of common sense it is the government itself which is fired, at last.

* * *

Canadians are proud of the way in which this country has come to the fore during the last decade. Canadians are ready to pay taxes to maintain our new position. But Canadians are sick to death of being fleeced, and of being forced into economies, by a government which is itself unwilling to practice the kind of economy which is familiar to every well-conducted business.

* * *

Raise taxes to support the war in Korea? Well, what about an example of government economy as a starter? If the government would cut its vast staffs, an increase in taxes might not be necesary. When over two million taxpayers are paying simply to support those who collect taxes from the rest, it is time for the government to do some housecleaning, and to stop sending up trial balloons about a rise in taxes.

West Indian Colonies Have Different Trade Bias

Having no rod of gold to rule her colonies in these dollar-short days, Britain is sewing them up in a bag of pounds. The limitations to dollar-trading may not work out too badly for most of the colonies, but when applied to the British West Indies, they hamper their trade and restrict Canadian interests in the B.W.I. The London Times, making a survey of British colonies, remarks that "while it might apear to some that the British West Indies is just another sterling market as far as Canada is concerned, there are many definite factors which support the contention that Canadian-West Indian trade is deserving of special consideration, particularly in the allocation of dollars for the purchase of more Canadian products." This point of view has been consistently put forward by Canadian business and government. It is good that an authoritative voice like the Times is sounding it in the home country.

Canada and the West Indies have a traditional trade. The barrels of cane sugar, bearing West Indian labels, familiar in grocery stores across Canada two and three generations ago attest the traditional aspect of Canadian-West Indian trade. A temporary financial situation in Britain and the sterling area should not be allowed to disrupt this commerce.

To make the commerce feasible, two-way traffic has to be maintained. Canadian steamships importing West Indian goods must have southbound cargoes. Because these are now insufficient the steamships are operating at a loss. In 1947 the British West Indies (Bermuda included) bought 81 million dollars worth of Canadian goods. Because of currency restrictions imposed by Britain, this trade had dropped to 43 millions in 1949. Not only are the B.W.I. being restrained from buying Canadian goods; they are being required to buy most of their essential products in sterling areas which are more expensive and less accessible.

The good-will between Canada and the B.W.I. is worth maintaining and fostering. The B.W.I. depend for tourist trade, refrigerated shipping and the like on the Canadian National Steamship lines. During the war Canada was both provider and protector for the B.W.I. Canadian institutions (such as banks) are established there. Many West Indians come to schools and colleges in Canada, where the same flag flies. There are presently more than 400 West Indian students attending our universities.

As the London Times says: "There are strong under-currents uniting these two countries which enjoy unique trading advantages of geographical proximity with complementary productivity." The British Colonial Office and the Exchequer should not lump the B.W.I. in with, say Nigeria. Special consideration and dollar dispensations are warranted if the link between Canada and the British West Indies is not to rust away.

Out Of This World

This week in Peterborough we have had two demonstrations of the power of the make-believe world to redeem people from the cares and routine of the real world, lift them up for a couple of hours, and set them down again, on George street, relaxed, amused and refreshed. One was a movie: Tight Little Island, an excellent, delightful bit of fantasy, tenderness and nostalgia about a Scottish island with and without its whisky. The other was a light-hearted play at the Summer Theatre on a well-worn stage theme about a lovable, ingenuous girl and a kind, sophisticated man.

The movie audience was transported —a really good movie can do this, and Tight Little Island was first-rate in acting, conception and filming—and its lightness and brightness warm the heart and tickle the memory long after the house lights go up. The play's audience was captured by the live stage creation. The Queen Mary auditorium itself seemed to take life and warmth and joy from the relaxed pleasure and laughter of its audience. One could not help thinking to what a fine community use the school hall was being put, a hall which would otherwise be a cold, empty shell these summer weeks.

Neither movie nor play had any impressive message to give. But they fulfilled the prime function of the stage world, to give delight. And the entertainment was so well given that the magic of art was in it: an illusion of reality transcending reality, a lifting of people out of this world.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Footnote to an Unromantic Age: It is now proposed to use the moon as a dump for dangerous atomic waste.

A medical statistician says that, on the average, the more intelligence a person has, the longer he lives. How does this square with the fact that women, upon the whole, outlive men?

At this time of year, we read, more absenteeism is caused by sunburn than any other cause. Carried far enough, sunburn can even cause absenteeism of skin.

A biologist reports that there are about a million germs on a dollar bill. The way a bill whizzes through our hands, however, we have nothing to fear.

A science note says that it requires sixty-five muscles to frown, and only thirteen to smile. Does this mean that a lot of chronic smilers are just saving themselves work?

A New Zealand clergyman at a Marriage Guidance Council said that a young man is entitled to see his girl at least once without her makeup before he marries her, so that he will be under no illusions about her appearance. Well, in 1516 Sir Thomas More advocated that young men should see their future wives completely naked (in the presence of "some sober matron") for the same reason.

Art In Britain Today

by MICHAEL MIDDLETON

TWO years ago Henry Moore was awarded the prize for the best foreign sculpture at the Venice Biennale. One of the two contemporary artists — the other will be Matthew Smith—to represent Britain in Venice this summer will again be a sculptor, Miss Barbara Hepworth, and her recent exhibition at the Lefevre Gallery, in London thus assumed a rather special importance. Miss Hepworth —who is married to Ben Nicholson, the foremost of our abstract painters — has a good many affinities with Moore. Not only do they come from the same part of the country—from Wakefield in Yorkshire in the North of England—but both have directed all their energies towards direct carving; both have been guided by a sense of natural affinities; both have respected, almost revered the particular block of wood or stone before them, from which they have sought to abstract a self-sufficient ideal. For nearly 20 years, ever since they were fellow-members of the famous 'Unit One' group initiated by Paul Nash in the early 1930's, they have trodden related paths — now closer together, now further apart, but almost always within earshot of one another.

✧ ✧ ✧

BARBARA Hepworth was born in 1903. She studied at Leeds, at the Royal College of Art, and in Italy, where she learnt carving from Ardini. Her first exhibition was held in 1929, and if her sense of direction was as yet still uncertain, her naturalistic treatment of the human figure was nevertheless notable for a quite unusual sense of material and for its simplifications of great compactness. From the beginning she employed the utmost economy in reaching a desired effect. Her aims have varied, however, at different periods, and her work, like that of her husband, has swung backwards and forwards between the poles of 'realism' and the non-figurative. Broadly speaking, the formal elements in her work have received ever greater emphasis with the passing of the years.

✧ ✧ ✧

BETWEEN 1932 and 1934 she experimented with a series of soft, full, organic forms, smoothed and rounded by interchange of influence with Jean Arp and Henry Moore (it was at this time that she first took to incising linear details—a profile or a hand—upon the surface of her simplified figures, a conception which sometimes destroyed the unity of the piece). Then, abruptly, she reached a phase of statements of austere and almost geometric precision. Her titles read Two Forms with Sphere, or Discs in Echelon or just Conicoid.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN the later 1930's, the declivities in Barbara Hepworth's carving grew deeper and deeper, until finally they pierced the ovoid forms altogether. With Moore, she became aware of what amounts to an extra dimension in sculpture. By means of vaulted caves and the mysterious tunnel, she created, not a final statement to be apprehended instantaneously, but a space in which the imagination must move about, sensing the form from the heart and centre outwards as well as on the superficial surface. In this, she feels that landscape affected her deeply, and one might, if one wished, sense traces of the bare, eroded mountain landscapes of Yorkshire, Devon (where now she lives) and Tuscany which move her. With the coming of World War II, and the disappearance of fine quality materials, Miss Hepworth began to enliven her work with interpenetrating planes of string, and with the discreet application of colour—mostly off-whites, pale mustard yellows and grey-blues—to the interior and concave surfaces of her honeycombed 'Helicoids' and 'Conicoids'.

✧ ✧ ✧

THESE innovations lent to her work a new warmth, a new friendliness. Nevertheless, many people continued to find it—especially her upright 'monoliths'—cold and impersonal, with a sense of silent finality about it that was a little intimidating. It was, perhaps, because of the new humanism they revealed, and because they were more immediately aceptable, that an exhibition of 'realistic' drawings by Miss Hepworth some two years ago attracted such tremendous attention and drew praise from many critics. Her previous drawings had taken a geometric and almost crystalline form. Her new ones, of surgeons masked and swathed in white, were made on carefully prepared grounds of oil paint, glazed with colour, and scratched with a palette knife wherever highlights were demanded. The elaborate method led to certain differences of opinion. While the drawings certainly caught something of the semi-religious atmosphere of the operating theatre, it was felt by some that, bereft of their technical trickery, they sidestepped more problems than they overcame.

THE same dichotomy between 'realism' and abstraction was evident in Barbara Hepworth's most recent show, where a large number of nude studies backed sculpture that was often completely non-figurative. Of this apparent contradiction in her aims, the artist has said: 'Working realistically replenishes one's love for life, humanity and the earth. Working abstractly seems to release one's personality and sharpen the perceptions, so that in the observation of life it is the wholeness or inner intention which moves one so profoundly: the components fall into place, the detail is significant of unity'. In some of her recent sculpture—often of an impressive size—she reached, however, an integration of these two sides of her working personality which has often eluded her in the past. In particular, she appeared to have found a solution to the problem of formalizing the human head which was midway between the incised outlines of a decade ago and the mere reduplication of illusionistic form. Women sculptors are not common and Barbara Hepworth is perhaps the only one today with an international reputation. This exhibition showed her at the height of her powers.

✧ ✧ ✧

A RECENT exhibition of the Arts Council in London consisted of tapestries woven in Edinburgh to cartoons by contemporary British artists. Britain can boast some remarkable—if intermittent—achievements in the art of tapestry, notably at Mortlake, Soho and Merton Abbey, and at the beginning of the recent venture two original looms dated 1698 were still in use.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE tapestries were various and not equally successful. A design by Stanley Spencer, for example, entitled The Gardner—entirely admirable in itself—proved to be quite unsuitable for translation into the terms of the new medium. Others, however, led by Graham Sutherland and the young Irish painter, Louis le Brocuy, produced more decorative designs, which were not only exciting in themselves but actually gained by the weavers' adaptation (for the weavers are encouraged to use their own initiative on the basis of the artist's original). Edward Bawden, Cecil Collins, Francis Rose, Michael Rothenstein and Julian Trevelyan were amongst the other artists represented here.

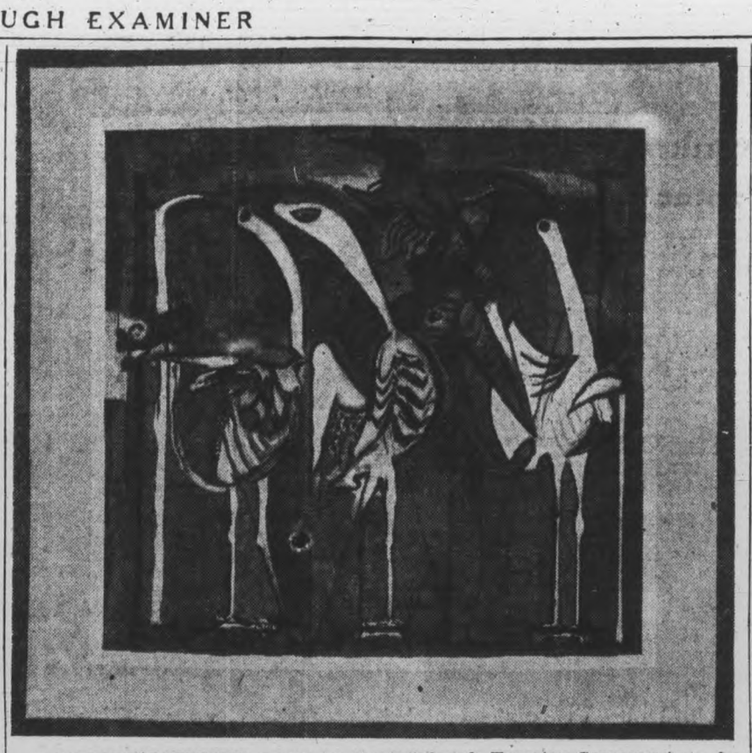
THE most important from a spate of exhibitions has probably been the retrospective collection of work by Fernand Leger at the Tate Gallery. Leger has not been seen much in Britain, so this opportunity (based on his recent exhibition in Paris and enlarged by paintings from British collections) was welcome. Another show of considerable size and interest was that arranged by the Pro Helvetia Foundation and the Arts Council at the New Burlington Galleries of paintings and drawings by Henry Fusell, the renegade Swiss priest who came to London in 1764, was later elected a member of the Royal Academy and eventually became Keeper to that body. The exhibition confirmed the impression that the reputation of the self-styled 'Painter to the Devil' will rest, not upon the leathery alarums of his contrived oilpainting, but upon those sinister drawings of women in fantastic costume—charged as they are with implications of perversion and nightmare. The German post-impressionist, Lovis Corinth, has been seen at Roland, Browse and Delbanco's; at the St. George's Gallery, an interesting collection of expressionist work—mostly, of course, German but with some French and Scandinavian painting for comparison; the young Swiss painter Rolf Durig has held his first show at the Redfern Gallery. Of British contemporaries, Fred Uhlman at the Leicester Galleries achieved some striking effects in spite of, or because of, his half-deliberate naivety; at the Hanover Gallery, two promising young sculptors, Eduardo Poalozzi and William Turnbull, showed experimental work of high interest. Paolozzi in particular seems likely to produce sculpture of considerable originality and his development will be watched with anticipation.



A MODERN TAPESTRY, woven by the Edinburgh Tapestry Company to a design by Graham Sutherland. It is not generally realized that large numbers of tapestries are made today by methods very like those which have been used for the past eight hundred years, and that many of these are strongly modern in design, like the one shown above. (See Third Column).

Not So Rare Old Volumes

(Winnipeg Free Press)

EVERY now and then someone turns up with a hunch that the battered old family Bible in the trunk upstairs, the heirloom with the yellowed pages, archaic type and—above all—the 17th Century imprint, is a treasure some day to be disposed of in the market for countless thousands.

In the vast majority of cases, it could not be sold for a song.

On the rare book market age is only one and by no means the most important criterion of value. Scarcity is a more obvious measuring stick. The highest price ever paid for a volume on this side of the Atlantic was $151,000, the amount realized in 1947 for a copy of the Bay Psalm Book, the first of any significance to be published in what is now the United States. Eleven copies are known but it does not follow that the others are comparable in market value, condition being also a prime factor.

Sometimes values decline with time, even in the absence of depression. Thus Fanshawe: A Tale, the suppressed volume of Nathaniel Hawthorne, sold for $5,800 in 1930; more copies turned up and in the 40's two sold for $375 and $260 respectively.

Most old Bibles have litfle commercial value. The Gutenbergs are exceptional, though according to Associated Press not really rare, numbers being preserved in museums and private collections. In prime condition a Gutenberg may bring $150,000. The first edition of the Scriptures to be published in the New World, Eliot's Indian Bible, (Cambridge: 1661-1663) has sold for $5,000.

Among other old volumes which have brought high prices on the United States rare book market, the following are notable: The Federalist Papers, by Alexander Hamilton, John Jay and James Madison 1788 ($1,500 in the original boards), The Sketch Book of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent, by Washington Irving 1819-20 ($1,500), Poe's Tamerlane and Other Poems, 1827 ($15,500), Prose Romances No. 1, by same author ($1,800), Moby Dick by Herman Melville ($1,000). Anyone with a copy of Johnston Smith's Maggie, A Girl of the Streets on hand has a chance of realizing about $400 on it, although several years ago a signed volume brought $3,700.

But from the standpoint of the collector who pays the money most of the stuff in old trunks is just plain trash.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Another parable spake he unto them: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.... Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls: who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it. (Matt. 13: 33, 45, 46.)

✧ ✧ ✧

I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, and he will guide you into all truth for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come. (John 16: 12, 13.)

✧ ✧ ✧

These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee.... I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.... I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil....

Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.... And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth, Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word. (John 17: 1, 6, 15, 19, 20.)

Artificial Insemination Of Cattle On Increase

(Manchester Guardian)

One in every three registered dairy farmers in England and Wales now use artificial insemination in their herds instead of keeping a bull. Figures showing the spread of this method—expected to be the biggest factor in increasing milk production in the near future—were issued recently by the Milk Marketing Board.

Five years' operations have just been completed by the Board. During the year ended March 31 last there were 55,000 farmer-members of the 23 insemination centres where 500 bulls are kept, and more than 431,000 cows were inseminated. This compares with a membership of 922 farmers and 6,400 cows inseminated during the year ended March, 1946.

There are also private stations operating. At one of these, controlled by the Cambridge University Farm, a "walkie-talkie" system is used. Inseminators are directed by radio from one farm to another.

Thousands of calves produced by artificial insemination are now mature milking cows and show substantial increases in milk yields as compared with their dams. One expert estimate is that within five years the new system will mean an increase of 50,000,000 gallons of milk annually from the same cow population.

A leading Cheshire dairy farmer, Mr. O. W. Hobson, of Nantwich, says: "Ten years ago at least two-thirds of the smaller herds were using inferior bulls, but now, through artificial insemination, they have access to some of the best bulls. The effect on the future of milk production will be tremendous."

Progress of Peterborough: XXVIII

Bad Roads, First Steamers, Large Canal, Lock Projects

By HOWARD PAMMETT. M.A.

Wherever roads and waterways intersected, new communities sprang up in the bush, around the sawmills and gristmills; taverns, stores, churches and schools were built, as thousands of immigrants flocked in to farm and ply their trades. Between 1830 and 1840, the population of Durham and Northumberland counties increased from 14,850 to 40,191, and of the increase, at least 15,000 settled north of Rice and Scugog Lakes. In the years 1831 to 1833, over 10,000 immigrants landed at Cobourg and Port Hope to go north, incidentally bringing a cholera epidemic with them. Travellers journeyed by lakes and streams wherever possible, and when they had to penetrate the forests were loud in their lamentations about the bad roads. The best road in Upper Canada, from Kingston to York, was "only tolerable" to an 1831 visitor. John Huston, Newcastle District Road Surveyor, was given £300 in 1831 to improve the Hope-Emily road, yet six years later Logan, going over it on horseback to Peterborough, wrote "The road was very bad, with numberless ruts." The Ops Colonization Road, branching westward from Emily, was no better; James Kelly built a tavern in 1832 on this road, of which two stone walls are still standing near Reaboro. Port Hope, an incorporated town in 1834, wanted to get the backwoods trade, and in 1839-40 Bletcher began stagelines thence to Peterborough and Lindsay; most passengers and freight continued to go over the Cobourg - Rice Lake - Otonabee route, however, even in winter. Fares were six cents a mile on land and four cents a mile on water.

Picturesque, Bad Roads

Strickland called the Cobourg-Sully road "picturesque but very bad road and in some places positively dangerous." Mrs. Traill went over it in September 1832 in a "light waggon comfortably lined with buffalo robes," mentioning the beautiful scenery. Going north from Peterborough to his land on Lake Kawchewahnook in 1831, following the Smith bank of the river, Strickland found the road cut ten feet wide for three miles, but from there on had to cut his way: "The creeks were unbridged and the swamps uncrosswayed. Every few minutes the axles would catch against the stumps." It took them two days to go ten miles with a wagonload of supplies.

A year later Mrs. Traill jolted over this trail in a rough wagon, noting "unnumerable obstacles in the shape of loose blocks of limestone to say nothing of fallen trees, big roots, mudholes and corduroy bridges. . . . There was no passable road on the Douro side . . . Nothing hardly but an oxcart can travel along the roads, and that with difficulty." The Cobourg paper in 1831 describes the Communication road from Peterborough to Mud (Chemong) Lake as filled with boulders, stumps and other obstructions. £100 was spend in 1832 to improve it, yet in April 1833 Need and a teamster spent a full day going the six miles, and their wagon broke down completely a mile from the lake; they arrived "covered with mud, hungry and exhausted."

Smith ratepayers petitioned Huston in 1836 to help in road-building across the swamps, and this was done soon afterwards. Captain Marryat, visiting the region in 1838, wrote "The roads in this neighborhood are being greatly improved," one project which both speculators and actual settlers approved. Nevertheless, improvements were very gradual until late in the century.

Mrs. Traill described the Sully tavern on Rice Lake in 1832 as a two-roomed cabin where "a motley group of emigrants shared the only available room." They had a breakfast of "fried pork, potatoes and strong tea," after which they boarded the "Pemedash," a small half-decked steamboat without a cabin, carrying a sail as well as paddlewheels, burning cordwood wheih had to be loaded every few miles along the stream.

Its power was too weak to navigate the boat to Peterborough and in any event it ran aground four miles downstream, so that they completed the journey on "a large, unwieldy, flatbottomed scow" (one of those used by Robinson in 1825). The "Pemedash," with the "Northumberland," were the first two steamers on the Otonabee, built about 1830 and making daily trips up the Otonabee. The "Pemedash" was sunk soon after, and raised in 1836 to carry Tory voters down to Sully. In 1838 Rubidge wrote "On Rice Lake two steamers, 'Sir F. Head' and 'Northumberland,' ply in season." On Mud Lake, one of the Robinson scows was fitted in 1833 with an engine and paddle-wheels, to ply up and down the lake; Langton rode on it the same year, saying that this "washtub" broke down or ran aground aften, and that a rowboat could easily keep up with it. From Peterborough to the upper lakes a carrier went three times weekly by boat, as early as 1837, except in winter.

Trent Canal Projected

After much pressure from Hon. T. Stewart and others, the government in 1833 revived the plan to make a navigable water route from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay, as the most direct route to the Northwest. A commission consisting of Bethune, Brown, Hall, Need and McDonell was appointed "to receive plans and execute works necessary to the improvement of the inland waters of the Newcastle District." At once they contracted with Pearse, Dumble and Hoare to built at Bobcaygeon rapids a wooden lock 120 x 28 feet, with a canal 973 feet long, for $8,000; this was finished in 1835, allowing boats to travel Chemong, Buckhorn, Pigeon and Sturgeon Lakes, and the Scugog as far as Purdy's Mills. Need wrote gleefully "From this time I may fairly consider the value of my property quadrupled."

In 1834 a small lock was built to bypass Whitlaw's Rapids just below Peterborouh, and £90,000 spent on the Otonabee and Trent Rivers dredging sandbars. The letters and books of the gentry-writers of the district are full of the over-optimism resulting, as they saw their property and communications improved. A group in Port Hope even began digging a canal to Rice Lake in 1834 to cut in on the trade, but soon stopped when the governmnt refused to aid them. Between 1833 and 1835 N. H. Baird surveyed the whole Kawartha waterway, and estimated that it would cost £495,-515 to complete it for 165 miles, or £195,565 if a short railway were built from Peterborough to Mud Lake to cut off the eastern lakes. With Stewart's influence, a government committee reported favorably, mentioning the 30 townships along the route, the prominent gentry with capital who were settling there, the "continuous forest of white oak, pine and other valuable timber never yet entered upon by lumbermen." In September 1837 the Kawartha gentry met to form the Kawartha Navigation Campany, proposing to build a steamer at Fenelon Falls for £1,500; the same year the government started a dam across the Trent at Crooks' Mills, and in 1838 when the Purdy's Mill dam was rebuilt, a lock was dug alongside. But the rebellion of 1837-38 and following disturbances led to the postponement of all further work for several decades. Anne Langton wrote ruefully in 1841 "Lord Sydenham, I understand, does not patronize water communication, expecting railways to supersede everything."

Big Timber

The lumber trade on the Ottawa reached its peak by 1820 and within a few years had begun on the Trent, which was lined with white pine, oak and elm close to the water. Robert Harrison, an Asphodel pioneer, told how it was cut, made into rafts of square timber loaded with lumber, pipestaves (for West Indian rum barrels), potash and pearlash, and rafted down to Lake Ontario. In 1832 they cut several pieces 120-135 feet long; one tree cut on lot 12, con. 3, was 7½ feet in diameter at the stump, and contained 960 cubic feet of timber; it took 22 span of horses to drag it to the water. In 1835 Need sent two rafts of 50,000 feet of lumber each down the Scugog to Purdy's Mills (whence it was drawn by wagon to the lakefront), and Langton was deep in the timber trade after 1840. Mrs. Traill in 1836 described the lake near her home at Lakefield full of sawlogs. Sawmills by the dozens sprang up after 1840, when the timber trade reached the upper lakes; after a boom period to 1880, Kawartha lumbering has been slowly declining.

The settlers clearing their land now found their timber and ashes profitable if they could get them to a mill or could sell them to a storekeeper, whereas previously they had piled and burned the logs, using the ashes to make soap. Traill, Strickland, Need, and Langton all described logging and building "bees," and every traveller was taken to witness one. Logan in 1837 went to one where 20 men with five yoke of oxen cleared three acres in a day, and Shirreff two years earlier described a "bee" lasting two days "at which 80 gallons of spirits were consumed," but did not mention how this affected the work. When Need's sawmill was completed with the help of neighbors, a bottle of whisky was broken over the ridge.

Oxen, chains, and pikes were used for logging and building. Farm tools were still primitive: Mrs. Traill says they had "two reaping-hooks, several axes, a spade and a couple of hoes, a wooden harrow, and a plough . . The plough is seldom put into the land before the third or fourth year, nor is it required." The first threshing machine came into Asphodel in 1843, and the first hayrake in 1852.

Wages and Prices

Ordinary settlers traded work, to avoid paying wages for hired help, since "hard" currency was very scarce in the district. The gentry hired workers for clearing

Too bad that the Korean War jitters are spoiling the Kawartha holiday for hundreds of our American visitors . It is understandable, of course. Fishing is supposed to be the one sport at which participants wholly relax. But right now it seems to give them time for thoughts of affairs at home and abroad instead of to the enjoyment of nature. "We can't seem to unwind," said my Cleveland neighbour, Kirchner.

I would say to you, Sir, that if fishing is not the antidote, you and your countrymen should take the Blueberry Cure. It's sure fire. Drive up to the waste rock lands at the east end of Stony Lake and, if you are not squeamish, to the top of Blue Mountain and give yourselves over to berry picking.

There's something about the heat waves bouncing off the rocks and the mixing of fresh winds from the green forests far below that is quite restful. And that beautiful aroma of scorched bracken and sparse grasses. The tangy taste of blueberries is at hand for the stooping while you get an eyeful of scenery that is something special.

Blue Mountain is a pear-shaped promontory that rises from the bush surrounded on three sides by wilderness. To the north, rolling Precambrian hills stretch to the horizon. Four hundred feet directly below, Little Mountain Lake is changing shape from the encroaching slime pond of the nepheline mill down the mountain side. But Big Mountain Lake and the Koshabog Lake chain are as beautiful as ever. Small portions of Stony glitter through the tree line to the south. There's air and space up there. And blueberries.

Here is the very spot to get into a reader argument. Are they blueberries or huckleberries? The taste of either is wonderful, so, why get hot about it? There is a variety of Saskatoon berry growing on the Mountain which looks entirely different from either and tastes like wild plum.

It's no trick for a family party to fill some picnic receptical in short order and, upon arriving back at camp, to pick over and boil the berries down to a thin sweet jam. Don't forget to add about a tablespoon of vinegar to each pie portion. Why, it fair makes my mouth watep just to write about it. A few hours of berrying on the badlands with this rich desert to top the evening off, will make you sleep like a babe. Simple thing, this Blueberry cure, and awfully pleasant.

Jaunt On Indian River

Did a very interesting jaunt this week that requires one to be voyageur and mountaineer, equal parts, well mixed. In company with veteran newspaperman Dick Choate, we paddled north from Warsaw on Indian River for about four miles to where the river disappears at the base of a 20-foot limestone escarpment. Object of the expedition was to study the rock formations round about. In some places the river bank rises in limestone ledges a sheer hundred feet from the river bed and at the barrier, the woods are filled with gigantic limestone blocks twisted, cracked, upended and weathered. There are small caves, natural stone bridges and gaping fissures everywhere.

Highlight of the trip was a visit to "The Kettle". It is situated about 70 feet above the river, a vertical rocky funnel, seven feet in diameter at the top, three feet at the bottom and 15 feet deep. Grinding of a hard stone or stones in a riverbed whirlpool centuries ago, wore away this strange formation. We found one of the grinding stones far below under debris and forest slash. The Kettle is a much visited spot and vandals have succeeded in carving their initials all the way down the cone and in breaking large chunks from the parapet. Perhaps it should be restored, but, on second thought, it wouldn't be long before some enterprising soul started a hotdog stand nearby. Let it be hard-to-find.

"Pan" Fishing Fun, Useful Too

The term "pan fishing" is one that re-occurs each year from American tourist fishermen who know the sport of taking small rock bass, sunfish and perch far better than we do. Besides enjoying a grand sport with light line and slender rod, they are practicing a bit of fishing conservation that we could well look into. They are giving game fish a better chance for survival by removing competitors for food. They taste just as good in the frying pan as any other variety.

DLF experts point out that some lakes, like farm pastures, can accommodate only so much stock. By cleaning out the coarse fish, therefore, more food can be provided for game fish. Canadian anglers could assist in keeping fish populations more evenly balanced by trying a serious hand at pan fishing. It is not solely a sport for barefooted boys with can poles and cork bobbers, but one for their elders who want to provide their favourite fishing holes with game fish in future.

No Scoreboard Of Monstrous Fish

The Kawartha Scoreboard didn't run this week for the very simple reason that after a district roundup, there was nothing very spectacular to report. Pickerel fishing all over is good and both black and green bass are putting up a nice show. Aside from the occasional 'lunge story, fishermen are busy throwing back undersized ones, bless 'em. Elias Thompson of Warsaw had a lengthy lunker to show village folks on Tuesday evening; 25 pounds it was and taken at Quarry Lake on Indian River on a small june bug lure. Say what you will, but Clear Lake HAS muskies and the second sizable one reported this season was boated by a member of Hamilton's Good Times Fishing Club, C. H. Davis; it scaled 24 even.

The Peterborough Examiner Centennial supplement came out recently. 40 pages, and by thunder, our great Kawartha heritage of fish and fishing was almost given the blue pencil. Explorer Samuel de Champlain squeezed through with this quote, however: "The river (Otonabee) is very beautiful . . . many good fishing spots full of excellent fish. . . ." Merci, Samuel, you saved the day.

Her eyes the glow-worm lend thee,
The shooting stars attend thee;
And the elves also,
Whose little eyes glow
Like the sparks of fire, befriend thee.

No Will-o'-th'-Wisp mis-light thee,
Nor snake or slow-worm bite thee;
But on, on thy way,
Not making a stay,
Since ghost there's not to affright thee.

Let not the dark thee cumber;
What though the moon does slumber?
The stars of the night
Will lend thee their light,

The Emotional Life of Young Children

FROM A WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW

By Alison Settle

Ed. Note—This is the second of three articles by Alison Settle, based on visits to Child Guidance Clinics and talks with members of their staff. The illustrations are by Haro Hodson. The final article will appear next Saturday.

2—The Child With Food Fads

EMOTIONAL disturbances from which young children often suffer form a problem on which mothers are increasingly seeking guidance. The National Federation of Women's Institutes, who tell me that they are profoundly interested in the subject, find that speakers with proper qualifications to guide parents are in constant demand in the different counties.

One question regularly put to speakers deals with the right way to treat the small child who persistently refuses food. To many mothers the advice usually given in books, to leave the child alone and to remain as unconcerned as possible, seems inapplicable when a child is losing weight.

I consulted Mrs. Lydia James, a trained speaker on child guidance, because she has written some excellent booklets for mothers. She stresses the point that food battles between mother and child tend to occur simultaneously with the struggles of habit training. They occur around the age of twelve to eighteen months, continuing into the third year. And the mother who is most worried is usually the stable, orderly type who dislikes the idea of wasting food on which care and time have been spent.

". . . let the toddler help"

Such a mother may well lose sight of the fact that the small child has a double problem to overcome. Her injunctions to her baby to avoid mess and dirt are often mixed up in the child's mind with mushy foods so often served as baby meals. When the child, quite logically, rejects them, its mother, having no conception of the child's confusion of reasoning, treats refusal to eat as naughtiness. This leaves the child with feelings of resentment and rebellion over what seems to it the mother's unjust and unloving attitude.

At a recent London conference on the mental welfare of the under-fives, several speakers stressed the double strain that this period of development places on toddlers. Habit training causes a constant conflict between what the child prefers and what it is taught is right. At the same time there is pressure from training in table manners, and self-control, the toddler being given directions not to spill, to hold the spoon so and the bowl thus. A small child cannot suddenly acquire these skills and loses confidence when continually told that he is wrong.

The child senses quite clearly the mother's anxiety, when overbusied, to get the meal quickly over and done with, and becomes so emotionally upset over this, alternately so obstinate, that each meal becomes a scene of conflict.

Some experts in child development think that the present system of serving ready-prepared tinned foods is responsible for a distaste for meals, due to boredom, and point the contrast to earlier days when the child in his high chair sat at the family table and was allowed a taste of this and that. Then there was no rigid timetable, a variety of tastes, and also fun and laughter at the table. Now the child is fed alone on ready-strained foods.

Miss Ruth Thomas, on behalf of the National Association of Mental Health, gives this advice to worried parents in reprints of her broadcasts: When a child refuses food, make no comment and have no argument. Leave the child to feed himself as soon as he can exercise enough self-control, neither scolding nor praising, nor yet again adopting a don't-care attitude. But, above all, let the toddler help to prepare the foods, which he will eat, stirring, pouring, and, when able, carrying bowls and plates to and fro.

". . . make no comment"

Only when this self-help system has been tried can it be seen whether a continued indifference to food indicates any serious emotional upset.

Doctor On Nelson's 'Victory' Came With Irish, Stayed

By A. V. D.

Mr. Francis Conin, Royal Navy, was in charge of passengers on board the "Fortitude," transport with Thos. Lavis as master, which embarked from Cove of Cork on the fifth day of May, 1825. (See Pammett's "Progress of Peterborough" No. 14. A naval surgeon was on each transport in complete charge of the emigrants, for instance, Surgeon Reade on the Resolution.)

The transport Fortitude carried 272 Irish immigrants proceeding to Canada to be settled at the expense of His Majesty's government under the superintendence of Mr. Peter Robinson. There were 41 families on the voyage out. Nine men and seven women died; nine children died and eight were born during the voyage.

The Fortitude's passengers came from Cork, Tipperary, Kilkenny, Limerick and Waterford. The family of James Gould settled in Montreal, the others in Peterborough and vicinity.

Before coming to Canada Mr. Francis Conin was a surgeon on Nelson's battleship, the Victory, and after a battle had been won a banquet was always held and the table appointments were given to the officers. On one occasion Dr. Conin received the tablecloth. The writer has seen this very large, beautiful linen cloth, but it has disappeared through the years.

Dr. Conin remained in Peterborough, living in a roughcast house at the southwest corner of Water and Murray Streets, where Dr. Buchanan's house now stands. His daughter, Miss Ann Conin, lived there for many years, a charming Irish lady, quite a personage in the town and beloved by everyone. She was a special friend of the children of the neighbourhood, who were never allowed to go to a fire, the greatest excitement of those days, unless Miss Conin took them, so when the fire bell rang some one hurried off to see if Miss Conin would come, which she generally did, enjoying it as much as the children.

One lovely summer evening, Miss Conin, a devoted churchwoman, started to vespers at St. Peter's, stopping to speak a cheerful word or two to the neighbours on the way. She entered the church, took her seat and quietly slipped away.

A gentleman returning to Peterborough asked for news of his old friend and hearing that she was buried in St. Peter's Cemetery went there and had a stone erected marking her last resting place.

The estate and death of Miss Conin were advertised for a long time principally in the Australian newspapers where a nephew was supposed to have settled, but no one ever appeared and the house finally became the property of Miss Margaret O'Brien who had lived with Miss Conin from the time she was sixteen years old.

Miss O'Brien passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital some years ago. A mahogany table once owned by Miss Conin is still in existence.

Hints On Horticulture

SHRUBS IN COUNTRY:

When planting home grounds in the country it is important that winter's as well as summer's effects be considered, for if there is any time a little warmth and cheer around our habitations is necessary it is during winter. For this reason groupings of evergreens will be found a valuable asset. It is better to plant these in individual groups than to mix them with the deciduous or flowering shrubs. Dwarf evergreens will be found very satisfactory. Good evergreens for this purpose are the savin juniper (Juniperus sabina), the compact aborvitae (Thuya occidentalis compacta), Tom Thumb aborvitae, the Chinese juniper, the Swedish juniper and the Japanese Yew.

Where somewhat taller groupings are desired, as, for instance, when the evergreens are also to serve the purpose of a windbreak, the common arbor vitae (so-called white cedar) and the so-called red cedar (Juniperus virginiana) may be used. These two may attain a height of more than forty feet; more generally, however, thirty feet. The distance apart of the smaller kinds when planted should be about four feet, and of the white and red cedars six to eight feet.

Equally so is it necessary that among the deciduous shrubs, kinds which bear colored twigs, branches or berries should be chosen and grouped for winter's as well as summer's effects. Of these there is a large variety, including such berried plants as Cotoneaster tomentosa, red; Eleagnus or Oleaster, yellow, and the Indian Berry and Snowberry with red and white fruits, respectively. Many of the honeysuckles with orange, black and red berries; Rhamnus frangula, the Buckthorn, black, and Japanese Barberry and variety atropurpurea, red. The plants with colored twigs are too numerous to mention; included, however, are: Viburnum, red, bluish black; Hamamelis virginiana, yellow; cornus sanguinea, Red-stemmed Dogwood, red; Euonymus Americana, Spindle Tree, purple and red; Salix candida depiciens and nigra, The Shrubby Willows, all with purple bark; Salix lucida, reddish brown; Eleagnus longipes and Viburnum tomentosum, The Arrowwood, brown or reddish brown.

Mimico Mounties Get Win In Tight Game With Petes

A picture goal by Kenny Dixon on brother Archie's pass early in the fourth quarter gave Mimico Mounties a 7-6 OLA senior "A" triumph here last night over the second-place Petes. A crowd of close to 2,000 saw a tight, clean contest, with the Petes having no luck around their opponents' net. They drove hard in the fourth quarter in an effort to even it up but couldn't click. The score was 2-1 for the Creighton crew in the first frame and they had a 4-2 margin at the half of a close-checking tussle. Mimico rapped in four straight goals in the third and the best the Petes could do was hit the hemp twice to leave the score sewed up at 6-all going into the fourth. That early tally in close spelled the difference as the sixth-place Mounties played it close to their chests in canny fashion throughout the fourth.

Goalie Good

Goalie Ralph Speck couldn't be blamed as he turned in a whale of an effort. The rest of the squad—minus Lou Vitarelli, Ron Horton, Jack Breakspear and Jim Kinna—worked hard, with Jerry Fitzgerald doing double duty at times, but they were checked hard and closely. Dootch Vitarelli and Arn Dugan were each in on three goals, while Fitzgerald and Joe Nolan got one each, with Don Ashbee and Mick Magee each having an assist. Barney Dundas made his first appearance of the season with the homesters.

Denny Peterson led the victors in scoring with two goals, as one apiece were marked by Jack Williams, Don McPhail, Jimmy MacKay, Archie Dixon and Kenny Dixon. Assists went to big Ed Sandford—of the Boston Bruins—Bill Horwood (he had two), Jack Kapasky, Don McPhail and Archie Dixon. The canny McPhail and Joe Nolan had quite a time of it checking each other throughout, but no harm was done.

Mimico: Goal, Taylor; defence, A. Dixon and Peterson; centre, McPhail; wings, K. Dixon and Kapasky; rover, Horwood; alternates, Sandford, Simpson, Pritchard, Williams, MacKay, Hayes and Rankin.

Petes: Goal, Speck; defence, Fitzgerald and Curtin; centre, R. Breakspear; wings, Magee and Dundas; rover, Nolan; alternates, Creighton, Dugan, Thorpe, D. Vitarelli and Ashbee.

Referees, J. Murphy and L. Vipond.

Summary:

First Quarter
Petes—D. Vitarelli (Magee) 7:38
Mimico—Williams (Sandford) 11:45
Petes—Fitzgerald 14.35
Penalty—Nolan.

Second Quarter
Petes—Nolan 7:09
Petes—Dugan (D. Vitarelli) 10:31
Mimico—McPhail (Horwood) 13.41
No penalties.

Third Quarter
Mimico—Peterson (Kapasky) 2:13
Mimico—MacKay 4:29
Mimico—A. Dixon (McPhail) 5:16
Mimico—Peterson (Horwood) 6:12
Petes—Dugan (Ashbee) 10:06
Petes—D. Vitarelli (Dugan) 14.05
Penalties—Sandford, Thorpe, McPhail.

Fourth Quarter
Mimico—K. Dixon (A. Dixon) 3:30
Penalty—McPhail.

ALL IN VAIN—A three-point scoring effort by Dootch Vitarelli for the Petes was all in vain last night as Mimico Mounties yanked out a 7-6 OLA senior win here in a fine fray. Dugan also was in on three markers.

Softball Began Here At Start Of War

Milf Hardill disputes the claim that softball—or indoor baseball as it was first called—originated in Peterborough after the first world war. He insists that it started in the winter of 1914-15 with a regimental league in the Armouries. And Milf has a medal to prove it.

There were nine teams in it, he says, A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H companies and the bugle band. The league was won that first season by "H" Coy. Milf Hardill was on that team, as were Virgil Carr and Clair Stuart, among others. After enlistment for active service, these and others from the league won a ball title at Barriefield the next year. The game was dormant here during the war and began again right after.

Foresters Win

Foresters pulled out another Civic Softball League victory, taking a 10-7 decision over the Peterborough Lumber Co. crew. They scored two runs each in the first, third and sixth frames, with one in the second and three in the fifth. PLC got two in the third, four next time up, and one in the fifth. D. Tyndall had three hits for the winners, and Dewar hit a homer. Powell and Carpenter each had three safeties for the losers. Teams:

PLC: Garvey, 2b; O. Powell, rf; Carpenter, 3b; Dummitt, c; Minors, cf; Doherty, lf; Dyer P; Payne ss; Davis 1b.

Foresters: Hobson lf; Doughty, c; Collins, 1b; D. Tyndall, ss; Reid, p; Walling, 3b; C. Tyndall, cf; Dewar, cf; Parnell, rf; Daniels, 2b.

Westclox Girls Get Series Over Electrics

Westclox girls defeated CGE 10-4 at the Bowl last night to sweep their best-of-five Girls' Softball League semi-final series in three straight. They played classy, hustling ball all the way to earn it, scoring their runs early and cashing in on some CGE miscues. The latter team battled hard but were outbid. M. Downer pitched a steady brand of ball for the winners, fanning five, while her mates clicked for 14 safe blows.

A. Anderson and J. Hardy led the Clockers at bat with three for five each, and J. Vass had a triple and single. E. Boyce topped the Electrics with three in four attempts, and M. Batley banged out a thhree-bagger. I. Bullock and J. Hardy for Westclox, and T. DeCarlo and M. Batley for CGE stood out in the field. The winners had a double play in the ninth, J. Vass to J. McIntyre to B. Anderson. The game lasted 1.15.

Hastings Victors

WARKWORTH, July 22 (ENS)—The Percy Township Community Centre Board staged a softball tourney here Wednesday with Woolar, Hastings, Campbellford and Warkworth competing. Warkworth won 6-5 over Campbellford, and Hastings won 17-7 over Wooler. The final was a neat struggle with Hastings defeating Warkworth 9-7.

Specially prepared music was supplied by the Warkworth Community Band for the large crowd. About 1,000 people attended to mark the occasion of the wiring of the softball diamond at the park. Ruth Edgar won the lucky door prize with No. 803.

Girls Drawn In Nine

MILLBROOK, July 22 (ENS)—Bethany and Millbrook girls drew 7-7 here Thursday in nine innings. It was a tight tussle all the way with the score see-sawing, but darkness forced it to be called at the end of regulation time. Teams:

Millbrook—N. Richardson lf, M. Guthrie 3b, M. McDowell c, R. Larmer 2b, E. Powell 1b, K. Smith lf, L. Lowery ss, N. Kennedy p, B. Forsyth cf.

Bethany—L. Rowan 3b, D. Ginn rf, C. Rowan 1b, J. Morrow 1b, M. Carr ss, A. Muligan 2b, E. Mantle p, M. Shea c, D. Shea cf.

A Canadian Army cricket team invaded the hallowed turf of Lords six years ago today. Opposed by an MCC eleven that included several English cricket stars, the Dominion soldiers lost by 213 runs. MCC scored 329 for five wickets, declared, the Canadians replying with 116.

Church Softball

The Church Softball League season was completed recently, summer holidays always shortening play for the school and church players. St. George's won the midget championship of the league this season, with St. James the bantam champions, and Mark St. taking the peewee title. St. George's midget also defeated Lakefield 21-4 in a game played in Peterborough.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Each summer the boss drops around and tells us to take a couple of weeks off on vacation, and not wishing to argue the issue with his nibs we take it. So we start tonight after the Saturday sports are wrapped up. Men's and girls' softball will layoff for that period, too, but most of the other games—including lacrosse and baseball—will carry through their schedules. Players will just have to drive in from the lake for games or else weaken the team by their absence. With the big CGE plant shutdown and other shops and stores closed at this time, it seems like half the town is vacationing the final week of July and the first of August.

Guy by the name of Earl Larsen of New Jersey has invented a contraption which helps pitchers develop control. It's a "foolproof umpire", according to the American Magazine—and that name intrigued us. Man and boy we've sailed the seven seas—no, no, that's another story. Man and boy we've watched umpires doing their diabolical stuff and we haven't seen a proved fool, that is a foolproof, one yet. It is quite probable that most of them love their families and dumb animals but by their occupation they are suspect. They are the natural enemy of every redblooded fan everywhere whether or not he paid his way in. 'Tis a sad fact.

* * * * * *

How The Thing Works

However, Larsen's brainchild is a device of two uprights on small wheels, connected by a cross-piece on top and it operates on the principle of the photo-electric cell. Beams across and up and down in the strike zone. A ball going through this zone breaks a beam and it registers on a dummy batter by light bulbs exactly where and at what height the pitch went over the plate. If the ball doesn't hit his zone, there is no registering. And a disgusted hurler wouldn't get much satisfaction beefing away at an umpire which neither hears nor heeds. This ump can't even toss you out of the game. But at least he's sure-fire on strikes, and that is definitely news.

Weather permitting, the men o' Murphy — sometimes known as the Petes—play New Toronto this aft at three in Riverside Park. A Viaduct Major League baseball fixture, and one quite important to both squads. They're battling it out for third spot in the keen scramble as July shuffles toward a close. And the Petes are playing some mighty fine baseball in recent weeks. They rate much bigger crowds ere the floodlights are installed. In fact the lights should have been up some time ago and the fan attendance would have been, too. No knowing the local starting flinger till just before game time, depending on who looks best in the warmup.

* * * * * *

A Mighty Tight Fit, Eh?

The Petes did everything but score in the fourth quarter last night at Miller Bowl, and that was what they needed most. A score. The OLA senior scrap ended 7-6 for Mimico and 'twas a dandy duel. A tough one to drop before a big crowd, but the locals were shorthanded between injuries and holidays. At full strength, the Mounties fought hard and they checked well, too, to hold off a real hot drive late by the Creighton crew. Well, you can't win 'em all, but it's nice to take the home numbers. Arn Dugan and Dootch Vitarelli led the Petes at bat with three point each, and Ralph Speck shone in goal. The rival netter was okay, too. A nifty number, but for that final score.

Girls' and men's softball knock off after tonight for two weeks. Westclox lasses took their semi-final series o'er CGE in three straight and can rest a spell on their laurels. Ashby's are one up on their playoffs with Marines, having won last night—'twas a fine double-header—and they'll have to settle that serial in the second week of August, to see which team tackles Clockers in the finals. This is to put a team into PWSU playdowns. Men's schedule winds up at the Bowl tonight with Orphans vs. Mutuals, and UEW vs. East City. Playoffs don't commence until the second week of August. Peterborough teams in senior "B", intermediate "A", junior "A" and juvenile "A" are drawn once again with Oshawa for OASA playdowns.

Ashby's Up One With Win Over Marines

Ashby's moved one up on Marines in the Girls' Softball League best-of-five semi-final series when they won 7-4 at the Bowl last night over the Outboards. They have a 2-1 edge now in games, and the series will be held up for two weeks holidays. It was a swell scrap last evening with the losers having one more hit in a low-hit scrap and the fielding about even. The tussle was just five minutes over the hour. D. McFadden and E. Whittaker both twirled in fine fashion and their teammates hustled every minute. A five-run drive in the seventh clinched it for Ashby's.

L. Jordan led the winners at bat with two for five, one a two-bagger. E. Mantle was best for Marines with two for two, and B. Ayotte clouted a two-bagger. D. Callan and M. Freeman shone in the field for Ashby's with L. Rowan and M. Behan best for the losers. E. Whittaker deserved a better fate, as she whiffed eight, but her side lapsed a bit in the seventh.

The teams:

Marines—V. Page 3b, S. Wakeford c, B. Ayotte ss, M. Behan 2b, L. Rowan 1b, M. Carr rf, C. Rowan rf, M. Walling lf, E. Mantle lf, M. Hill cf, E. Whittaker p.

Minor Lacrosse

Peterborough juvenile lacrossers took a 15-10 exhibition win over Huntsville here. Brioux got three goals for the winners while Galley, Morrissey, Caravaggie and Farley had two each, with singles counted by Fitzgerald, O'Reilly, Daniels and Fontaine. Galley and Fontaine had two assists, and Caravaggie, Farley, O'Reilly and Fitzgerald had one each. R. Bennett had three goals for the visitors with Mallory and C Bennett having two apiece and Chitcliff, Bruce and Langley one each. The visitors drew six of the 10 penalties. Other local players in the lineup were Hickson, Outwater, Seabrooke, Crough, Robinson and LaPlante.

Shrimps won a 3-2 tadpole tilt over Hurricanes on goals by DeNoble (2) and Pace, the latter and Walling each having an assist. Todd and Stickle scored for the losers. It was 5-3 for the peewee Petes over Lions on goals by Davis (3) and Coombs (2), the latter having an assist, as did O'Neill, while Mountney helped twice. Parry, Reid and Ellis counted for the losers, Trudeau aiding once. Legion midgets edged Kiwanis 5-4 on goals by Scriver (3), Corbett and Curtis, Tarkington having one assist. Kiwanis goals were scored by Bloom and Mullen, at two each, the latter also having two assists in a good show.

Norwood Triumphs

NORWOOD, July 22 (ENS). — Norwood Juniors took a 16-8 win over Havelock in a baseball game here Thursday. Cosgrove suffered a three-stitch cut during the tussle. Teams:

Havelock— Bales ss, Thompson lf, B. Laing 2b, Smith c, Cosgrove 1b, McCabe 3b, Glenn cf, Southward rf, Nobes p, Gonder.

Norwood — E. Spencer ss, B. Spencer 3b, Fredericks p, Kelly c, LaBrash 2b, Aldred rf, Cuthbertson 1b, Scott cf, Millett lf.

Following is the rest of the TVL juvenile baseball shcedule:

July 27—Havelock at Marmora.
July 27—Campbelford at Norwood.
July 31—Marmora at Havelock.
Aug. 3—Marmora at Norwood.

Play-off games, semi-finals and finals, 3 out of 5 series.

League standing: Campbellford first, Marmora second, Norwood and Havelock tied for third.

Keen Civic Contests

Post Office edged Police 10-9 last night, and Kesco nosed out the Bus Drivers 9-7 in two classy Civic Softball League numbers. The Posties finished stronger with 10 runs in the first tnree frames after Police had tallied seven in the third. Bus Drivers got their markers early, too, but Kesco had the power near the finish to overhaul them and carry off the victory. Teams:

Police: Rowe, Traynor, Conlin, Fife, Menzies, Roderique, McGillen, Mesley, Morrow.

Post Office: Hay, Scott, Bryan, Phillips, Harrison, Coombs, Adam, Moore, Loucks, O'Toole.

Kesco: Chenier, Craig, Thompson, Dracup, Hancock, Holland, Smith, O'Reilly, Birchenau.

Bus Drivers: O'Dette, Gordon, Brown, Edmondson, Sage, Parneli, Anderson, Simmons, Clark.

Mize Regains Old Form Yanks Smash Tigers 14-5

By RALPH RODEN,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

The big cat is on the prowl again.

Johnny Mize, who terrorized National League pitching for so many years, is blasting away as of old for the New York Yankees in their American League pennant bid.

Big Jawn, who a short while ago was on the brink of drawing his release, has hit a fantastic .867 for his last four games. He began to purr against St. Louis Tuesday and has banged out 13 hits in 15 trips—including five home runs—since then.

Mize's amazing performance has raised his batting from 119 points from .258 to .377.

Mize ascended the heights of his comeback Friday night as he belted out two homers, a pair of singles and drove in five runs to lead the Yanks to a smashing 14-5 victory over the pace-setting Detroit Tigers in the opener of a vital three-game series at the Yankee Stadium.

Cut Tiger Lead

The overwhelming triumph, witnessed by 62,823 fans, cut the Tigers' lead over the Yanks to 1½ games. The Yanks can assume the lead by winning today and Sunday.

Mize, who took over the fourth slot in the batting order when Joe DiMaggio became ill, was kept in that position against the Tigers. Manager Casey Stengel dropped DiMaggio to fifth. The move paid off as DiMaggio clubbed three singles and a double. It marked the second time since DiMaggio took over the clean-up spot from Lou Gehrig in 1939 that he has batted other than fourth for the Yanks.

Meanwhile, the pennant race in the National League also tightened as Philadelphia Phils tied St Louis Cardinals for the lead.

The Phils, behind the eight-hit pitching of rookie Bubba Church, beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1. Eddie Waitkus scored three of the victors' runs and Dick Sisler drove home two. Ralph Kiner accounted for Pittsburgh's lone run with his 28th homer in the eighth inning.

Drops Decision

St. Louis dropped a 5-4 11-inning decision to the New York Giants. An error by Eddie Miller allowed Alvin Dark to score from third with the winning run.

The third-place Boston Braves remained a game off the pace by dropping a 4-3, 13-inning game to Chicago Cubs. Bill Serena singled home Andy Pafko from second with the payoff run, spoiling Johnny Sain's bid for his 13th victory.

Brooklyn's fourth-place Dodgers moved to within two games of the co-leaders by trouncing Cincinnati Reds, 7-1. Veteran Preacher Roe tamed the Redlegs on eight hits to pick up his 12th victory.

Little Con Marrero prevented Cleveland from gaining ground in the American League chase as he pitched Washington Senators to a 3-2 victory over the third-place Indians.

Boston's powerful Red Sox pounded the St. Louis Browns into the dust, 7-4. Dom DiMaggio and Birdie Tebbets featured Boston's 12-hit attack with home runs.

Philadelphia Athletics edged Chicago White Sox, 7-6, in 10 innings. Sam Chapman singled home the deciding run off Ken Holcombe, fifth Chicago pitcher.

HEAVY FREIGHT — Built at Canadian Vickers for a hydro project in Newfoundland, these huge lengths of penstock were photographed on the Montreal waterfront recently shortly before being loaded aboard the Clarke Steamships freighter Novaport for shipment to Bay Bulls, Nfld. The penstock, which is used to take water into the hydro turbines, averages 6 ft. 11 ins. in diameter and is in lengths of about 30 feet. Those shown are part of a movement which will total 48 lengths.

Long-Time Admirer Speaks In Defence of Lowly Seagull

MOOSE JAW, Sask.—As a long-time admirer of the seagull, species of which we've encountered everywhere on the western leg of our trans-Canada crawl, I feel I must rise to the defence of some maligned gulls in Florida.

Friends of mine (and friends of seagulls, too) have sent me a copy of an editorial from the Fort Lauderdale (Florida) Daily News obviously written by a man who either knows nothing about gulls or has something against this noble bird, perhaps through one of those unpredictable accidents involving gulls.

Anyway, it seems that for many years in St. Augustine, Florida, seagulls have been depending for their food on the scraps and waste thrown overboard from the shrimping fleet.

Recently some new and more productive shrimp fishing grounds were located off Key West. The shrimp fleet deserted St. Augustine for these new grounds and the seagulls left behind (it says here) haven't been able to adjust themselves to the new situation.

They are said to be standing around the shore at St. Augustine looking fretfully out to sea and going hungry.

Why should this prompt an editrial? you ask. Because the Florida writer sees in it the evils of a "welfare state."

If you give people or seagulls something for nothing, the editorial claims, they lose their ability to look after themselves. Give them security (as gulls following a shrimping fleet, or citizens on a government allowance) and they become bums, the editorial says.

"The gulls are starving by the hundreds," it claims, "because their welfare state suddenly disappeared and with it went their ability to fend for themselves."

On Their Own

Now, of course, I don't give a hoot about the political issues involved here, but I sure am hot under the collar about this guy using my birds to make his dubious point.

As anybody who has lived on a seashore knows, the gull is anything but an idle bum, or charity case, living off society and paying nothing for it.

Nobody wanted the scraps and waste thrown overboard from the shrimp boats. If Joe Gull hadn't been around to clean up the mess it would have been right up on St. Augustine's pretty white beaches. A harbor without the seagull would be like a town without a garbage collector.

Furthermore, as any student of sea gulls knows, the big, white bird is probably the most aggressive, imaginative, go-gettingest free enterpriser in the feathered world and would certainly resent being described as "living at the scrap table of false security."

Consider those cleverest of gulls who fly out from New York to do a little business with the Queen Elizabeth. I recall standing on the top deck of the big ship earlier this year as she entered the channel of buoys that lead into the towers of Manhattan and seeing the first of the New Yorker gulls flying out, brief cases under their wings, to get their bundles from Britain.

How these birds know when the big ships will arrive, frequently a mystery to even the Cunard Line, is a constant source of wonder to seafaring men. In a small way those energetic gulls who serviced the St. Augustine shrimp boats were just as resourceful.

I should hastily add, too, that the mere sight of gulls put them in a class deserving of special privileges. Charity cases, indeed! Forsooth, we owe the gull a regular bounty for the pretty picture he makes dipping on the horizen. Only a man stranded in Moose Jaw knows just what that can mean in gladdening the heart.

Just Passing

Needless to say, I have no opportunity at the moment for using my vast scientific ornithological experience on the particular problem in St. Augustine's.

It does occur to me, however, that what this editorial writer assumes to be hungry gulls may be only tourist gulls. Gulls are inveterate wanderers and sightseers. Some gulls with distinguishing features, such as a missing leg, have been recorded as visiting summer resorts for many years in a row.

It may well be, then, that the St. Augustine gulls are just passing through, wait a day or two for the shrimping fleet and then regretfully move on. One gull looks pretty much the same as another to an editorial writer. So the birds he describes as standing in rows "their dark eyes turned prayerfully out to sea," may in rcality be just transients understandably disappointed to find that the old cafeteria service has disappeared.

In any event, the gull never lived who couldn't find a meal by sheer cunning. The editorial writer himself reports that the people of St. Augustine are "trying desperately to save the gulls" by a city-wide effort to round up table scraps and unused popcorn from movies.

Chances are that a bird who can figure out an ocean liner's schedule won't have much difficulty anticipating such a fine, civic seagull picnic.

Why, say, long after that editorial writer has retired on his welfare-state old age pension the St. Augustine seagulls will still be looking after themselves in the same way.

Scientists Get New Machine

OTTAWA, July 22 (CP) — Canadian scientists hope to make a "significant contribution" to international physics by means of a helium liquefying machine installed Friday at the National Research Council's laboratories.

The machine, known as a helium cryostat, liquefies helium at 459 degrees fahrenheit—about 14 times colder than the 32 degrees below zero required to freeze water. It is the first unit of its kind to be installed in Canada.

Dr. Gerhard Herzberg, director of NRC's physics division, said the cryostat would be used extensively in the testing of various metals at low temperatures. It would allow Canada to make significant contributions in this field.

In the intense cold produced by liquid helium ordinary steel becomes as brittle as an egg shell and electric current flows between two terminals without connecting wires.

Range of Research

"That illustrates the range of research now open to physicists here," Dr. Herzberg said.

Up to now, said Dr. Herzberg, URC has been able to produce only very small quantities of liquid helium by an expensive process involving a whole section of pumps and compressors.

"Now our physicists can have unlimited quantities of helium," he said jubilantly.

The cryostat, manufactured by a United States firm at Cambridge, Mass., consists of a large steel cabinet containing a cylinder which produces helium at sub-zero temperatures by a process of alternately compressing and expanding the gas.

David, King Of Israel A Study In Contrasts

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, DD

It is doubtful whether any character in history, king or commoner, ever manifested in his life and character greater and deeper contrasts than those revealed by David, King of Israel.

He is pictured as the courageous shepherd boy, killing the giant Goliath with his stone and sling; as the gentle singer with the harp, in association with "the Psalms of David"; and in incidents of great beauty and magnanimity, which were rich and plentiful in his long and varied career.

In the latter picture of the Shepherd-King the sterner aspects of his life, and the deep sins he committed, are either passed over lightly or ignored. Yet they are there insistently in the full and true picture — the warrior and man of blood, forbidden by that fact to build the temple; the leader of a discontented band in the Cave of Adullam, a sort of ancient Robin Hood; the man of adultery, lured by the beauty of another man's wife; and the virtual murderer, ordering the husband whom he had wronged to be placed in the thick of a battle, where he might be killed, and the adultery covered up.

A dark, very dark, picture might be made, in striking contrast to the usual and conventional portrait of King David. Yet to make it would be to miss the real greatness of the man, and to miss the real truth concerning him. It would be to miss an even greater truth concerning human life — that it is the goodness in men that is more important than the evil in them. Of course, while elements of goodness may mark true greatness in men, their evil doings should be neither condemned or condoned, but seen in their true light.

King David had the attributes of a great man. The crowning attribute of greatness is magnanimity and David manifested it in a high degree. When Saul sought to take his life, and David could easily have killed Saul, he refused to strike him. When a courageous prophet brought home to David the sin of his adultery and the virtual murder of Uriah, instead of angrily punishing the prophet, he humbly acknowledged his wrong-doing. (II Samuel 12: 1-14.)

When three of his mighty men risked their lives to bring him a drink from the well of Bethlehem, he was appalled that a casual offhand wish should have occasioned such dangerous devotion. David viewed the water as the blood of men and he could not drink it, but poured it out as a sacred offering to the Lord. (II Samuel 23:14-17.)

Here, then, is King David, a great warrior, a great sinner, but a man of deep feeling, with great qualities of goodness and humanity; therefore, a good man, and a great King, who built the kingdom of Israel for the first time upon a solid and secure foundation.

Noted Churches Need Large Sums For Restoration Of Buildings

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

LONDON (CP)—Britain's cathedrals confront authorities with a total repair bill of approximately £1,500,000 ($4,650,000).

Yorkminster had a four-ton fall of masonry from one of its towers in 1948. The archbishop opened an appeal for £250,000—and expects to get it.

The spire of Salisbury Cathedral, tallest in Britain, is in scaffolding splints. The top is in a dangerous condition and £30,000 will be spent on its repair. The dean and chapter appealed for £100,000 for general restoration.

Canterbury is one of the most fortunate. An appeal fund of £300,000 raised in 1946, has brought contributions from all parts of the world. Canada and Australia have an organized national contributions fund for this cathedral and Canterbury has about 6,000 subscribers in other countries.

Manchester, Lichfield, Winchester, St. Paul's and many others add to the general cost of restoration. The bells of Worcester Cathedral were silenced last year and will remain mute until two 40-ton pinnacles atop the belltower are made safe.

Other Dangers

All the danger is not confined to towers, spires and belfries. Acute deterioration occurs in decorative gargoyles, finials, crockets, corbels and bosses. Most of these were raised on iron supports which have corroded through the years due to dampness.

During the Victorian era these supports were repaired with iron, lead and copper. Today's restorers will use gunmetal and bronze.

A further problem is the lack of skilled workers. The work must be done under the direction of men who thoroughly understand the masonry of 400 years ago and these old-type masons are on their way out. Those that are left will have to work with the help of apprentices, teaching as they work.

Rising costs in materials and wages present another problem. At one time the estimated repair cost of Canterbury's organ was £5,000. It is now £14,320 Some of the clergy have taken salary cuts to help the appeal funds.

Japanese Bishop Making Australian Tour

By LOUIS L. LECK

SYDNEY — (CP) — Michael H. Yashiro, presiding bishop of Japan, returned here recently after a precedent-shattering preaching tour of Australia.

Bishop Yashiro is the first official visitor from Japan since the end of the war. Only one other Japanese, a woman called to testify at a treason trial, has entered the country.

Popular opinion as well as federal dictate has barred the Japanese from Australia. While the people realize the destiny of the east is tied up with that of Japan, they find it difficult to forget Japanese treatment of Australian prisoners of war.

The federal government agreed, however, to a request made early this year by leading Anglican churchmen that Bishop Yashiro should be allowed to enter Australia.

Record Good

His record is good. He is a devout Christian who did much for European internees and prisoners of war after Pearl Harbor.

Theme of his sermons, which were received with mixed feelings, was that Japan admitted and regretted excesses by Japanese troops during the war and that Australia and other Christian countries should do all they could to Christianize Japan so that such things could not happen again.

Officials think this visit has broken the ice and that a small but steady stream of Japanese officials and traders will be admitted to the Commonwealth under strict control.

FIRE WALKERS

One explanation of the fire-walker's art is that the glowing coals are volcanic rocks, so porous they do not retain the heat although they appear to be white hot.

Swimming Tests Completed By 86 Children

Junior Red Cross Swimming Awards will be presented to 86 children who passed the Canadian Red Cross Society Swimming and Safety Junior Swimming Tests at the Lions Community Swimming Pool on Friday.

Of the 90 children who tried the tests, 75 received A grading, eight, B grading and three, C, Grading. There were only four failures.

"It is wonderful, when you consider that 25 of the children were non-swimmers before they began attending the swimming classes at Lions Poo., July 3," commented Mrs. Pansy Forbes, to the Examiner

Youngest Seven Years

The youngest child to try the test was seven and the oldest 14.

Junior and Intermediate Red Cross Swimming tests will be held at the pool, next Friday morning.

Bread Sales Slumped In Resort Areas

Bread sales in the holiday areas has slumped badly from last year, according to the managers of the bread companies which send drivers out to the cottages and lodges in the lake districts.

One bread company said that business was very bad last week, but has picked up considerably this week.

No one seemed to be too sure of the reason for the drop in bread and cake sales, but many believed the Korean war may have something to do with it.

One company manager said reports of many Americans cancelling their reseravtions had come in. The whole area from Rice Lake to Bancroft and Haliburton was affected.

Another manager had gathered information that the visitors from the United States were here, but they were not buying. He said many tourists come from Ohio where a large proportion of them work in rubber manufacturing companies. These people have been working only about four days a week and consequently don't have the money.

Quite a different reason given was that the weather may have been too cool for local residents who ordinarily live at Chemong Lake and other nearby lakes for known to have moved her family the summer. One woman was back to the city because she said it was just too cold.

York Trading Employees Sign For Union

Employees of York Trading Ltd. are 100 per cent signed up in the Wholesales, Retail and Department Store Workers Union (CIO-CCL), union officials have announced.

They will form part of Local 505, a composite local of about 150, including employees of National Grocers, Wonder Bread, Dominion Stores, as well as local beverage rooms employees.

A. E. Johnston, Peterborough CCL representative said most of the organizing had been done by union members from the local UPWA (packinghouse workers) plants.

The union hopes to eventually get a membership of 1000 among the chain store workers and others who come under the broad scope of its jurisdiction.

York Trading employees will apply for certification almost immediately. National Grocers union members have already applied, as have beverage room employees of the Empress, Windsor and McGillis hotels

Dominion Stores have signed a master contract covering their chain stores in southern Ontario and Wonder Bread also has signed its contract for this year

The Ontario Labor Relations Board will hear the application of Empress beverage room employees on July 31. The Queens and Grand hotels are already certified.

Furnishes Room At Hospital In Memory Of His Parents

The most recent gift for the new Civic Hospital was received by the Board of Governors from as far away as Cincinnati. When John Hornal, hospital superintendent, opened his mail one morning this month he found a letter from Bolton Armstrong, a former Peterborough resident now living in Cincinnati, who stated that he wished to make a donation to the new hospital in memory of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Armstrong, whose home had been in Peterborough.

Mr. Armstrong asked the superintendent for suggestions for a suitable donation and on receiving a list of requirements for the hospital, sent $600, the sum required to furnish a large private room. Mr. Armstrong also promised maintenance for the room.

Other donations received during the past month are: Peterborough Kinettes, $500; Lakefield Women's Institute, $350, $50 having been given previously; Soroptimists Club, lectern for use by the supervisor of the school of nursing in the classroom; Hadassah Chapter, $50, making a total of $500 towards furnishing a room; Women's Auxiliary to the hospital, $1,050 for furnishing the west wing, main floor; Ladies' Bible Class. Gilmour Memorial Church, $50; Balieboro Women's Institute, $50 promised.

Max C. Metherel Succeeds Bowness

A long-service employee and top-flight draftsman, Maxwell C. Metherel was recenly appointed chief draftsman of Peterborough works, to succeed Frank Bowness, now retired. Max has served as assistant chief draftsman for a number of years.

He was first employed in Peterborough works in 1907, but began his continuous service in August, 1910, as a drafting apprentice. Service in the First World War interrupted his work, until he returned to the plant in 1919. He later served as section leader on A/t' machine drafting, and in April, 1927, was appointed assistant chief draftsman.

Ohio Tourist's Spree Lands Her In Jail

An Ohio woman cut herself a small swath of destruction Friday evening and was lodged in police cells after she snapped the post of a verandah and backed into a car in the Grand Hotel yard.

She is Margery E. Ress of Cleveland. Police say she was driving east on Park Hill Rd. and turned into a driveway at 47 Park Hill Rd. In trying to back up, the car hit a verandah post, snapping it off at the base.

Police found five bottles of beer in the car, and said she had been drinking.

In the Grand Hotel yard, a man asked her if she wasn't going to report the accident to the police, after she had backed into another auto.

She said: "If they want me, they can come to Ohio and get me". The man saw her drive down George St., and police chased her that way. However, she was not found until the time of the accident on Park Hill Rd.

Didn't See Stop Light

Two cars were damaged to the tune of $250 Friday evening at George and Sherbrooke streets.

Richard Hunt, 310 Louis St., was driving south on George St., and told police he didn't see the stop light. He drove through and his car hit a car driven by Jack Sadler, 258 Rogers St.

The right side of Sadler's car was smashed in, damage amounting to $200. Damage to Hunt's auto was estimated at $50.

Accept Gadgets For Signalling On Cars, Legal

Owners of the small English cars who may have worried whether their signalling gadgets are legal may rest easy.

Those little lighted arms that pop out when the driver presses a button or pushes a switch in the proper direction have been approved by the Department of Highways.

The Highway Traffic Act calls upon "the driver or operator of a vehicle who is about to turn to "give a signal plainly visible to the driver or operator of . . . other vehicle (s) of the intention to make such movement."

Then it says: "The signal required. . .shall be given either by means of the hand and arm in the manner herein specified or by a mechanical or electrical signal device which has been approved by the Department."

These quotes are taken from the traffic act as amended in 1948. A supplement brought out last year approved the signal arms on British cars.

Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw said today that a civil action could arise from an accident between a n American-type car and a British car.

"The driver (of the American-type car) could say he didn't see it because he wasn't used to mechanical signal arms, and that he'd expected a manual signal," he said. "I can see the possibility of an argument, but I wouldn't say it would be successful

Flashing front and rear lights on large American-type autos are also accepted as legal signals for turning.

TEXTILE HEAD SPEAKS

Sam Baron, Canadian director of the Textiles Workers Union of America (CIO-CCL), will be the guest speaker at the labor day rally of the Peterborough and District Labor Council (CCL). Mr. Baron is also an executive member of the international textile workers organization. The rally—th first sponsored by the new labor council—will be in Riverside Park.

Lock Workers Repudiate Jackson's Stand

More than 50 per cent of the United Electrical Workers union membership in the Peterborough Lock Co., plant have repudiated the stand of C. S. Jackson, Canadian UE president on the Korean war.

That is the information given the Examiner late Friday afternoon.

According to this source 52 per cent of the plant employees, members of local 527, UE had signed a petition by Friday afternoon that reads as follows:

"We the undersigned members of Local 527, UE, do hereby wish it publicly known that we are not in favor of our president, C. S. Jackson's stand on the Korean situation. We also wish it to be known that we are in favor of the action taken by the United Nations."

At its last quarterly district council meeting the UE decided to mobilize its 25,000 members in Canada behind the "ban the A-bomb petition," and the "peace campaign." Many of the UE membership have interpreted this move as a Communist-line action and they have refused to endorse it.

An equally heavy controversy is now progressing among the rank-and-file of Local 524 (CGE works).

5 Departments To Fight Fires

Within a pavement run of nine miles, Peterborough district now has four fire departments. They are Lakefield, Bridgenorth, Smithtown suburb and the city.

Two of them have sprouted out of the city council's "no" to a proposal of continuing fire service beyond its own borders. The council's attitude was simply that the needs of its own community precluded assurance to the suburbs of the measure of protection, paid for through the township councils, which had been given for years.

It was agreed that if the northern suburb set up, a volunteer brigade and equipped it adequately, the city would respond as an auxiliary in any emergency.

Orville Deyell of the Smithtown group said that Ald. T. D. Miller, chairman of the city's fire and light committee, was evidently planning a conference of representatives of the four departments to expand the verbal agreements into more definite understanding.

"We bought standard fire fighting equipment," said Mr. Deyell. "It will fit into any fire fighting emergency. That is, experienced men know exactly how to handle it, from pumper to hose coupling.

The city seemed pretty rough at one stage, but that is now a bygone. I think I can speak for our area in saying we will be willing to co-operate with the other departments."

Peterborough also has the Canadian General Electric Company's department as another standby in the event of serious need. With the training of the Smith and Bridgenorth volunteers that has been going on in the last two months, there are now around 150 experienced firemen available in the area.

No Wild Raspberries

Peterborough housewives who look for their summer supply of raspberries for canning on the wild bushes along roadsides and in wooded plots in the area apparently are going to be disappointed this year.

Pickers who went out looking Friday found no ripe raspberries and little evidence that a crop was coming. There were hardly any green berries in sight.

Say Playground At Brookdale Part Of Bargain

Residents of the Brookdale subdivision at the north end of the city are up in arms over a move which they think may be robbing them of a playground area which they say was promised to them when they bought their homes.

A triangular lot which was understood to be the site of a playground is now the lot of a house which is being built by Gerald W. Joyce, an employee of Sands and Bateman the company which built the subdivision.

Members of the Brookdale Home Owners Association, to which many in the subdivision belong, say they have printed proof in an advertising prospectus that a playground for their children was part of the bargain in which they bought homes in Brookdale.

In a letter to Sands and Bateman, they declare they expect the building company to live up to its promises and threaten a damage suit if the bargain is not fulfilled.

The home owners are also disturbed over rumors that an apartment house is being planned on a site in the subdivision which was originally set aside for stores.

The Association has sought legal advice and are awaiting an answer from Sands and Bateman.

Better Fishing In Kawarthas

Fishing throughout the Kawarthas has been very good this year, much better than last year, or the year before, according to Game Overseer Fred Walton of Lindsay, who has just returned from a trip throughout the whole area. Mr. Walton reports that fishermen in general seem to be very satisfied.

The improvement is attributed to the heavy restocking which has been done over the past several years, and to the rigid law enforcement. One infringement which is being particularly watched is the taking of undersized 'lunge, and legal action is being taken against anyone caught with specimens of this particular fish of less than 30 inches in length, measured from the V of the tail to the tip of the snout. The excuse is sometimes made that the fish are pike, since there is some similarity between the two species, but this excuse is not being accepted since there are no pike in this area.

Train Hits Car Cavan Couple Escape Injury

An elderly farmer and his wife escaped serious injury when their car was hit by a CNR train and driven 102 feet along the track across the Park and McDonnel St intersection.

"I stopped. I didn't know I was on the track. Then the car stalled," Antoine Lalonde, RR 1, Cavan, driver of the car said

Mr. Lalonde received a bruised forehead and his wife an injured ankle, but these were the only injuries they were aware of without being examined by a doctor.

The right front door and frame post of the car were driven in, but the door window, rolled down appeared unbroken. Two baskets of eggs in the back seat were broken and splattered about the car.

Mr. Lalonde was driving north on Park St. He said he was not sure whether the automatic light and bell at the rail crossing were operating. He said he didn't see any red light flashing. But he heard a bell and that made him stop. He didn't realize until too late he had stopped directly across the tracks.

Train engineer Robert Betts of Toronto, said he was on the right side of the train cab and didn't see the car. The train was the regular morning CNR passenger train to Lindsay. Train conductor was C. A. Phelps of New Toronto.

Speed Limit 30 mph To Filtration Plant

Cars travelling north on Water St. near city limits must keep their speed down to 30 miles an hour until they pass the filtration plant dam.

Men from the department of highways moved the 50 miles an hour signs from Langton St. north to the filtration plant dam. Three weeks ago, residents along the highway petitioned the department to move the signs further north.

The petition said that the 50 mile-an-hour limit was dangerous for children.

Corner Stop Signs—Drivers Laugh At 'Em

Pedestrians just haven't a chance in Peterborough. According to all traffic rules and regulations, the pedestrian crossing a street on a green light has the right of way, but what mere human can argue with an automobile making a left or right turn at a 30 mile an hour clip.

The few motorists in the city who do wait for pedestrians to make their way safely across intersections are almost driven to distraction by the impatient and less thoughtful horn-blowing drivers who are lined up behind.

As the situation stands now the only precautionary measures for safetly available to the average pedestrian is a life insurance policy, faith, hope and most important, a pair of good running legs. The old safety rule, "stop, look and listen" has become obsolete in this city of mad motorists.

Pedestrians are beginning to complain about this lack of courtesy shown by motorists making turns at intersections. According to the men in the traffic department at the city hall, the pedestrian does have the right of way, if he is crossing on a green light They also report that it is a matter of courtesy on the part of the motorists to allow pedestrians to make a safe crossing before they turn.

The city police also claim that if motorists would take the time to read the traffic rules and regulations, there would be fewer accidents in the city

They report that motorists don't intentionally break traffic rules out of sheer perversity they just don't know any better. Any motorists who wants to become a careful and conscientious driver can procure these traffic regulations at the Chamber of Commerce.

In addition to ignorance of the rules, the police state that one half of the accidents in the city are due to a combination of driving and drinking. During 1949, 979 major accidents with 75 persons injured are recorded A total of 120 accidents are listed up until May 25, this year.

General Nessin, High in Russian Army Commands Reds in Korean War

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

PARIS—(NEA)—A high ranking Soviet Army oficer named Major General F. A. Nessin is the actual commander-in-chief of the Communist forces now fighting in Korea, according to well-informed Cominform circles in Paris.

General Nessin has long been known in Communist inter-national ranks. Before assuming command in Korea he was chief of the Cominform's widespread network of secret shock troops and commando detachments in Western Europe. Although Mosprimarily a "political" general he is known to be one of Moscow's foremost experts in guerrilla warfare.

General Nessin is at present reported to be in Northern Korea, where he heads a staff of 200 Red Army officers and military experts of the Cominform.

Pro-War Group Wins

The choice of this "political" general as the man to fire the first shot in what might become the prelude to World War III is regarded in Cominform circles as a distinct victory for the pro-war group in the Soviet Politburo.

This group, headed by G. M. Malenkov, Marshall N. A. Bulganin, and M. A. Suslov, believes that time is not on Russia's side — that Russia must strike while the Western Allies are still unprepared. It advocates the immediate "liquidation of the Tito incident" and the seizure of Berlin by the force of arms.

Because of the initial reverses suffered by U.S. troops in Korea, Cominform chief Malenkov's star has lately risen higher in the Politburo ranks.

Rival of Malenkor

A protege of Malenkov, General Nessin received Red Army rank immediately following the death of A. N. Zhdanov. Prior to his recent death at the age of 50, Zhdanov, who headed the Cominform when it broke with Marshal Tito, was widely regarded as Stalin's successor. He was a bitter rival of Malenkov.

Accused of weeding out pro-Zhdanov officers in the Red Army, Nessin became involved in a drawn-out conflict with Gen. D. F. Gasparian, then assistant chief of the Soviet General Staff. But in October, 1949, General Gasparian died under mysterious circumstances.

Despite the intensity of the Korean conflict, the concensus here is that Marshal Tito remains Stalin's No. 1 target. A combined satellite attack on Yugoslavia is believed to be only weeks away. The attack is even likely to take place simultaneously with any consent by Moscow to mediate the Korean conflict.

Bulgarian, Hungarian, Rumanian and Albanian troops are gathering on Yugoslavia's borders. Both Bulgaria and Albania recently charged Yugoslavia with "acts of aggression."

Move Against Tito

At the same time, the Cominform is stepping up its war of nerves against Tito. In nightly broadcasts in dozens of languages the Cominform's entire radio net-work is now accusing Yugoslavia of having become an American military base for an attack against Russia.

I am also reliably informed that French and Italian Communist commando detachments have just been issued orders to establish insurrectionary centers in Southern France and Northern Italy. A massing of Communist military youth organizations has been ordered by the Cominform in these areas.

Ironically enough, the concentration in Southern France is scheduled for the end of August disguised as a youth "Peace Festival." The "festival" is being arranged by the Communist Federation of Democratic Youth.

Meanwhile, there are persistent rumors here and elsewhere in France that the Communists have decided to stage a coup d'etat. This will ostensibly be preceded by a vigorous demand by the French Party for the establishment of a "Government of Democratic Union" in which its two chieftains, Jacques Duclos and Andre Marty, will head the ministries of the Interior and War.

The French Communist Party denies these rumors. It claims that they are being deliberately spread by the newly-formed coalition government in order to find a pretext for outlawing the party.

ACROSS THE EASTERN HEMISPHERE, Communist lighnting, generated in Moscow, touched off war fires now burning in Korea. But Cominform circles say Yugoslavia still is Moscow's No. 1 target; a Soviet lightning stroke there is expected within weeks.

Different Types Of Roofing Can Be Used For Housing

Unless a roof is to be finished with wood shingles, sheathing boards should be laid tightly together and covered with a layer of roofing felt. This is necessary for the application of sheet metal roofing, asphalted felt shingles, slate and asbestos shingles.

Metal roofing is used mostly on roofs which have only a slight pitch as the flat surface of the material permits excellent drainage. Sheet metal should be galvanized copper-bearing sheet steel, copper or aluminum. The sheets should be overlapped at least four inches and all joints "locked" to allow for expansion.

It is important that nails used be of the same material as the metal sheathing.

Asphalt shingles must be laid and nailed in accordance with the manufacturer's directions. If applied correctly, asphalt shingles should give adequate service. They are available in a variety of colors. As the shingles are flexible, care should be taken to ensure that none are torn while being laid.

Roofing slate, which may be of hard burned tile or other suitable material, is an expensive type of finish but will give a lifetime of service. If slate shingles are used they must be laid over a heavy roofing felt.

Rigid asbestos shingles are available in a wide range of colors. As they are composed of asbestos fibre and Portland cement they give added fire protection to the house in addition to long-lasting service. The manufacturer's specifications for laying the shingles must be carefully followed.

Wants Canada As Country Now

NEW YORK, July 22—(CP)—John Turkovic, 20, formerly of Fort William, is being held by immigration officials pending an appeal against his exclusion from the United States after arrival here as a stowaway.

Immigration officials said that Turkovic, who went to Yugoslavia from Canada with his parents two years ago, arrived here June 15 on the freighter Shelburne County after stowing away on the ship at Rouen, France.

He is listed by immigration officials here as a former resident of Canada. He is held at the Ellis Island immigration centre.

In a letter received in Fort William today, Turkovic said he loves Canada and is fighting to return to the Dominion. He said he went to Yugoslavia against his will.

SCA Rejects Quebec Group

EDMONTON, July 22—(CP)—Premier E. C. Manning Friday night said that L'Union Des Electeurs of Quebec, which Friday announced it opposed any dispatch of Canadian troops to Korea, has no connection in any way with the Social Credit Association of Canada. A report from Quebec said it was that province's Social Credit organization.

The Premier of Alberta's Social Credit government said the association is the only official Social Credit group in the federal field. It also is the only representative of the movement in Quebec province.

Mr. Manning said the association, at its meeting last winter in Winnipeg, renounced L'Uunion Des Electeurs as having any connection with it.

The association is in complete agreement with the federal government as far as defence measures are concerned, he added.

$3,000 Gift Made To Guelph College

TORONTO, July 22—(AP)—A $3,000 gift was presented Friday to the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, by the Barley Improvement Association for assistance in malting-barley studies.

Fireplace, Heart of Home Creates Family Life Centre

"A home and fireplace". It's a magic phrase that expresses the very core of good living. Men have fought and died for the things that those words conveys. the importance of "home" is obvious but somehow it's the addition of a "fireside' that brings the completing note of cheer and creates a centre for family life.

So, unless the budget is down to the very, very barest minimum a fireplace we must have. But please may we be spared from the fireplace that smokes or that just refuses to be a harmonious part of the decorative scheme.

Choosing Design and Materials

The choice of designs and materials for the fireplace facing is essentially a matter of assuring harmony with the general character of the room and house For the dignified Georgian you will likely want a combination of wood with brick or tile. Fieldstone is an ideal material for the country home or rustic lodge.

Brick has long been popular for fireplaces but should be handled with restraint, avoiding the heavy treatment which overpowers the living rooms of so many houses built a few years ago. Shale stone and tile are two materials which, despite their diversity, can both be effectively used in modern interiors.

Centre For Furniture Arrangement

Placement of the fireplace should provide for ample unobstructed wall space for furniture on both sides as well as floor area in front. Most of us seem to just naturally gravitate toward the fireside and furniture must be placed accordingly.

Keep the fireplace as free as possible from distraction. It should be out of the line of traffic between rooms. Windows, especially if fairly large, are not good companions flanking the fireplace. They tend to detract from the effect of cozy warmth.

From a construction viewpoint, the requirements of a successful fireplace are few but they must be closely followed to insure success. Let us consider them step by step:

The front hearth, or floor area in front of the fireplace, should be of stone, tile or other durable and fireproof material laid on a bed of concrete. Forming the floor of the fireplace itself, is the back hearth which usually has an ash dump into the pit below.

Clean-Out Pit Great Convenience

Ashes are removed from the pit throught a clean-out door in the basement. In basementless houses it is highly desirable to provide for a clean-out door on the outside if the fireplace is on an exterior wall.

Unless a metal heat circulator, which we will discuss later, is to be used, the fire chamber or walls of the fireplace should be of fire brick laid in fire clay. These surfaces are usually sloped to reflect heat into the room The back wall is often built vertical for the first 12 inches and then slooped forward.

Slightly above the fireplace opening, the damper is installed. The damper consists basically of a metal frame with an adjustable plate which is controlled from the front of the fireplace.

Not only does the damper permit control of the fire burning rate, it also helps to assure a properly proportioned fireplace. Floor drafts can also be reduced and the house made easier to heat by closing the damper when the fireplace is not in use.

Just back of the damper is the horizontal surface known as the smoke shelf. It helps prevent downdrafts from reaching the fire and together with the damper, turns them back up the chimney. Above the damper is the open, triangular shaped area called the smoke chamber which connects the fireplace proper with the flue.

Importance of Flue Lining

While not exactly a part of the fireplace, the flue means much to its eventual success or otherwise. It should be lined and of adequate size to provide the draught to fit the fireplace opening. A fireplace opening up to 34 inches wide by 30 inches high can be safely served by an 8½ inch by 13 inch flue lining, but for larger fireplaces a 13 inch square lining is necessary. Very large fireplaces over 48 inches in width require a 17 inch by 13 inch flue lining.

Metal Fireplace Forms

One of the greatest advances in fireplace construction has been the development of factory-made metal units which allow air to be heated and circulated in a system separate from the direct heat of the fire. They consist basically of a double-walled metal firebox, which forms a heating chamber at the back and sometimes also at the sides of the fire. Cool air enters near the floor level and when heated rises and returns to the room through grilles located at higher levels.

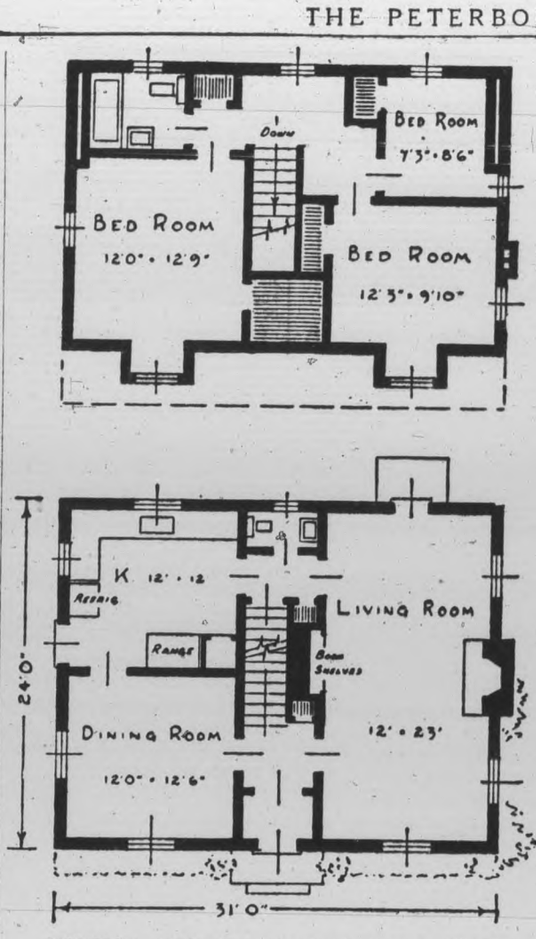
Some heat circulating units also provide for the intake of air through a duct from the outside. Contrary to just thought, these units reduce drafts by making it unnecessary for the fireplace to rely on filtration to provide the volume of air which must always be flowing up the chimney when the fireplace is in operation.

Fireplace recirculating units must not be expected to replace conventional central heating systems but they do materially increase fireplace heating efficiency. They are particularly desirable for summer cottages, hunting lodges and ski cagins.

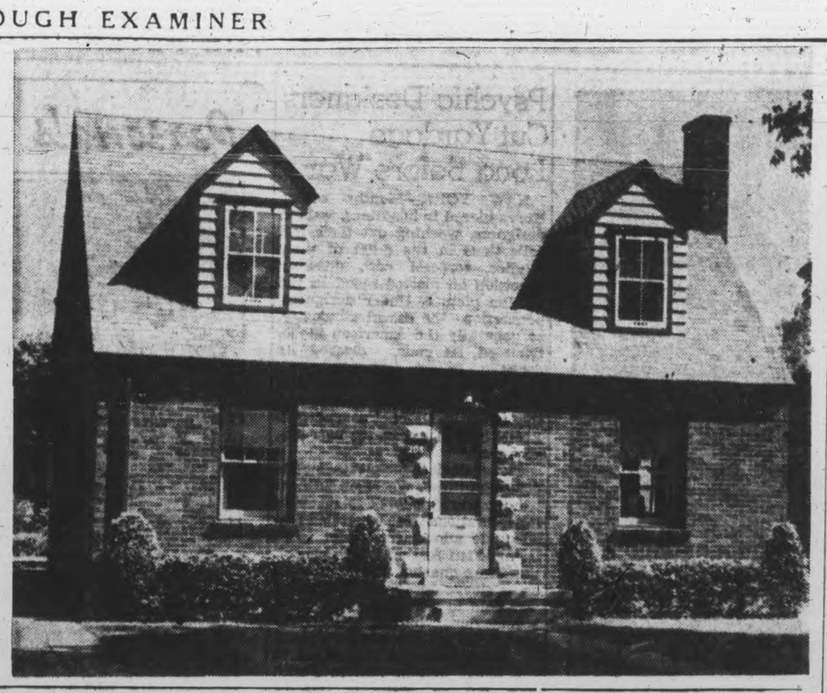
Fireplace Accessories

Andirons to hold the burning wood are characteristic fireplace accessories that have endured from early times. Some old types included hooks from which spits were suspended for use in cooking meats. When coal is burned, a basket with a bottom dump grate is necessary.

Screens are not only a decorative asset but should be considered as a safety essential. They may be one-piece, folding or curtain types.



HOUSE No. 403—Severely simple in proportions and exterior treatment, this small red brick home has much to recommend it. Upkeep is reduced to an absolute minimum, and its compactness spells economy in heating. To prove this, the owner tells us that his stoker-fed furnace uses an average of only five tons of coal each year. Yet every room in the house has at least two exposures. Further, extensive use has been made of dormers which, even when well constructed, tend to increase heat loss. Most unusual for a house of this size is the huge living room with its open fireplace centred on the outside wall. A door leads from this room to the back garden. Both the kitchen and dining room are well proportioned. For further information, write Home Building in Canada, 372 Bay St., Toronto.



Era Of Formality Waning Affecting Dining Room

Whether we like it or not the era of formality in entertaining is waning, which has brought about modifications in house planning. One of the rooms most effected is the dining room.

Since help is almost non-existant and living-costs are high, the "state" dinners of yesteryear have become informal affairs, with the housewife serving buffet suppers. The dining room has thus become a less dignified "family" room, and more and more frequently it is combined with the living room or the kitchen. Many of our best architects believe this combining of areas in the small house is all to the good—it is recognition of our way of life. Actually the "open planning", which is the result of this trend, is as old as the hills. These areas were often combined in the homes of our pioneer ancestors, and in the homes of northern Europeans centuries before.

One of the features of this trend is that it usually brings with it a reduction in the cubage (and therefore the cost) of the house; and calls for the use of dual-purpose furniture thereby cutting the furnishing bill to an appreciable extent.

For those who like a greater degree of privacy during mealtime, and during the clean-up period, a curtain run on a ceiling track can isolate this area. Large folding screens, or translucent flutted glass partitions are also popular for this purpose. Many, of course, will want a completely separate dining room, and this desire can be easily appreciated. Care should be taken, however, that this room is adequate in size to accommodate furniture in keeping with the taste of the owner.

Room Should Attract

By the very nature of its function, the dining room to begin with is flat and plain, with so much bare woodwork in the large expanse of table, buffet, chairs, etc. No matter how lovely the furniture, the very flatness of it is apt to give a dreary impression. Yet the atmosphere of the dining room should be anything but dreary. For at mealtime, when the family gathers, the atmosphere should be bright and festive.

In injecting colour, drama and interest, into your dining room, you must depend almost entirely upon the wall treatment.

Actually, the "doing" of the walls in this room can be fun — for you have very little to take into consideration other than the atmosphere you want to create. The very lack of colourful interest in the furnishings make your wall choice just that much broader.

Be bold, yes, daring in that choice. A colourful, dramatic design in your dining room wallpaper can draw the room together, and give it the sparkle, zest and vitality it needs to set off the polished beauty of the furniture and other decorative objects.

In the dining room, scenic designs can be correctly used to splendid effect. These are not only colourful and interesting, but also give the depth and perspective which a dining room—particularly a small dining room—often needs. Or, in a room where period furniture is used, a more formal stripe paper with a deep, rich pattern to blend with the spirit of the furniture can supply a most satisfying harmony.

Informal Charm

In dining rooms of a more informal character, a lovely effect can be achieved with floral wallpapers in light, bright colours containing gay, vivid designs.

Whatever atmosphere you decide to create, however, and type of paper you feel is necessary to create it, remember this: Avoid all dark, gloomy shades. You'll find any colour you need in bright, rich tones that will give your dining room the aura of cheeriness it requires.

Further interest can be supplied to the dining room by woodwork and ceiling treatment. Give these two vital accessories to your room a new and important appeal by harmonizing them pleasantly with your walls Avoid the ordinary and hackneyed use of ivory or cream for the wood trim, and a non-descript off-white on the ceiling. Select a key colour from the main design of the wallpaper, and paint the woodwork to match this, or tint it lighter or a shade darker. If the predominating colour is red or bronze, or some other shade that is unsuitable for the woodwork, you'll find other interesting highlights in the wallpaper with which woodwork can be matched, harmonized or contrasted.

Self-Reliance Needed Dean Believes

MONTREAL — (CP). — Much of the money spent on education in North America is wasted, says H. N. Fieldhouse, Dean of the Arts and Science Faculty at McGill University.

"Society expects schools and universities to do the work once done in the home—to teach children everything from manners to happy marriage," he said in an interview here.

"This is supposed to be the continent of self reliance, yet more and more people are asking for courses that are advice on how to solve personal problems."

"So many people now want university education that even high schools have been continually lowering their standards.

Social Tag

"Universities are being asked to put on courses that teach people merely tricks of the trade and to dignify these courses by granting a degree. The desire is often for a degree that is merely a label of approval, a social tag."

Dean Fieldhouse likened what is happening to universities to what happened to the middle ages church. People expected too much from it and turned against it when it failed to satisfy all their needs. They forgot the commonsense and understanding the church showed despite its faults. This, he said, may well happen in North America.

CO-EDS' DELIGHT—"Back to college in corduroy" is motto for this fall skirt with huge cuffed pockets.

Psychic Designers Cut Yardage Long Before War

NEW YORK—Months before Korea blazed in headlines, fashion designers, working out their fall collections, in the quiet of their studios, forecast with uncanny precision an alerted mood in the fashion picture. Under designers' persuasion the casual silhouette, so generally the American mode, trimmed its sails, cleared its decks.

It narrowed its line and whittled it thin. The sheath and the tabula silhouette emerged. Every inch of excess yardage disappeared.

Clever devices for pleats, for indicating fullness where no fullness was, appeared. Short cuts or making alterations were suggested and adequate allowances made.

A sudden feeling for the short, the three-quarter, the skin tight or no sleeve developed. Trimming was held to a minimum. A single spectacular button, effectively placed, set off a whole costume.

Even milliners conspired in this mood, topping costumes with hats cut in mannish fashion, "sitting tight" on close coiffures.

Use Special Care To Protect Eyes

A pair of sunglasses doesn't end your summer responsibility to your eyes. Increased hours in the open mean they receive extra exposure to sun glare wind burn and dust. To keep your eyes looking and feeling their best, special care is necessary.

First rule is to keep your hands away from your eyes regardless of how itchy or tired they feel. To relieve this discomfort, it's a good idea to wash your eyes with a mild boric acid solution, either using an eye cup or simply squeezing a few drops into them from a sterile cotton ball moistened wtih the boric water.

These cotton balls are also useful as eye brighteners Saturated with cold boric solution and placed as pads upon closed lids, they soothe and refresh your eyes. This is a good thing to remember if you discover, when dressing for an important evening, that your eyes are work-reddened or dull looking.

There are also make-up tricks you can use to enhance your eyes Take time often to lubricate the fine skin around them. Since this skin is thin and delicate, it shows dryness and tends to wrinkle unless cared for Baby oil is good for this.

Unattractive Hand Simply Lacks Care

If your hands are not attractive, there's a reason. Cause and effect are closely linked. If you have dry, rough hands. If you have, it's because you use hard water, strong soap or bleaches in your household tasks. The skin becomes dried out and the hands are roughened.

Similarly, red hands are the result of a too-frequent use of hot water. Usually women with red hands fail to dry them thoroughly each time they remove them from water.

If your hands are scrawny, it's because you are not eating a balanced diet which includes the protective food you need. They also indicate that you are neglecting the daily use of a rich, protective hand cream.

If your hands are gnarled, you've kept them in hot water too long. You've used strong soaps and disinfectants. Probably you've done gardening and other heavy tasks when your hands were unprotected by gloves

To keep your hands out of hot water as much as possible, learn to use a long-handled dish-mop, a self-wringing wet floor mop always, of course, a clothes wringer. Remember to "glove" your hands in cream before you put them into water Dry your hands as soon as you take them out of water and use a good hand cream immediately.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

"In our city of 50,000," writes a Pennsylvania Canasta enthusiast, "almost every family has invested in Canasta sets, mostly in order to get the printed rules included. In these we read 'the first or initial meld must count 50, 90, or 120' as the case may be. It does not say the plural, 'melds.'"

"Nevertheless, in your articles in our newspaper, we can interpret your comments to mean that the player's first or initial meld may consist of enough different melds to count, 50, 90 or 120. Kindly state plainly, and as promptly as possible, if the first play must include only one meld or if any number of different melds can be made. Don't include a lot of 'ifs' or 'ands' to cause more discussion. Just reply to the question: One meld or any number?"

You are allowed to put down as many different groups of matched cards as you life. For example, you may put down three kings, three queens, and three jacks, as your initial meld, if you need only 50 or 90 points. The answer, in my correspondent's language, would be: Any number of melds is permitted.

The confusion arises from the fact that the word "meld" does not mean merely a group of three cards that you put down at your turn to play. It may also mean all the cards that you put down, even if those happen to include several different groups of matching cards. For example, if you put down three kings, three queens, and three jacks, the whole batch of nine cards can be called a "meld."

I have tried to make this distinction very clear in my books and my newspaper articles. I am sorry that somebody else's printed rules have caused this question to perplex my readers.

Q—Are you allowed to take the discard pile when you have two cards that match the previous discard even though this is your initial meld and even though you have the minimum count without using that meld? For example, suppose you have three aces and a pair of sixes at a time when you need only 50 points for the initial meld. If a six is discarded to you, can you put down the pair of sixes and the three aces and take the discard pile?

A—Yes, you may take the discard pile in this situation. The amount needed for the initial meld is a minimum. You are allowed to meld as much in addition as you like. The pair of natural cards that you use to take the discard pile does not have to be a part of the minimum count; it can be an extra meld.

Q—Are you allowed to use a joker and a pair for an initial meld of 50 points? Somebody said in one of our games that you can't use a joker when you need only 50.

A—There is no truth at all in this. You are allowed to use the joker when you need 50 points in just the same way as at any other time. As a matter of fact, any experienced Canasta player will tell you that you always have two or three jokers to use when you need only 50 points. But when you need 120 points, all the jokers disappear completely from the deck!

"The other night," writes a Houston correspondent, "I had two jacks in my hand (among other cards). The player at my right discarded a jack. I put my two jacks on the table, and then—instead of adding the jack from the pile to the meld on the table—I put the complete discard pile in my hand.

"The opponents said that all of the cards from the discard pile were considered penalty cards. I said that the cards were not really mixed in my hand. They were therefore not penalty cards.

"The opponents insisted that once the cards were in my hand, they were considered mixed with my hand. Were they right? Did they have a right to apply this very severe penalty?"

The cards should be considered mixed as soon as they get into a player's hand, but the severe penalty should not be applied in a case of this kind. This law was meant to penalize a player who picked up the discard pile when it was not at all clear that he had a right to do so.

However, when it is perfectly clear to everybody that you are entitled to the discard pile, no penalty should be applied. I should point out that it does no harm, and often saves a great deal of trouble, if you meld the top card of the discard pile before putting a single card of the pile into your hand.

Some players, realizing that this procedure allows everybody to see the next-to-top card of the discard pile, have a special way of taking the pile. After setting down the cards necessary to take the pile, they remove the pile from the tray and turn it over on the table face down. Then then extract the top card of the pile (which is now the bottom of the pile) and add it to the meld. When the meld has been seen by all players, then they put the rest of the discard pile in their hands

Q—After the cards have all been dealt out, are you supposed to look at the bottom of the deck to see that there are no wild cards there?

A—You are never supposed to look at the bottom of the deck. If a wild card happens to be there that is pertectly all right. It should be allowed to stay there, and nobody should know about it beforehand.

Q—If you touch the discard pile or the stock pile are you required to take whichever pile you touch? If you touch one pile, and then draw from the other pile, what is the penalty?

A—You are required to draw from the pile that you touch first. If you touch one pile and then draw from the other pile, you must replace the card or cards so drawn and make your proper draw from the pile that you touch first.

However, if you have already made an improper draw in this way and mixed one or more cards with your hand, that draw stands In either case (whether you go back and make the proper draw or whether the improper draw stands) your side pays a penalty of 50 points.

WI At Bailieboro Gives First Life Membership

BAILIEBORO, July 22 (ENS) —The first life membership certificate and badge to be given in Bailieboro Women's Institute was presented to Mrs. George Fletcher on Tuesday at the July meeting at the home of Mrs. Wilbert Smith.

Mrs. Ted Gray read the address of appreciation to Mrs. Fletcher for her faithful work as a member for 30 years and as president for 10 years.

The presentation was made by Mrs. R. Kidd.

Following the presentation the guest speaker, Mrs. H. Armstrong of Millbrook, spoke on the origin and work of Women's Institutes. She traced the progress of resolutions begun here and finally reaching the government and bringing about important changes such as the increased exemptions in income tax. Mrs. Jeff Jewison introduced and thanked the speaker.

A solo was sung by Mrs. R. Kidd accompanied by Mrs. H. Smith at the piano.

It was decided to donate an overbed table costing $50 to the new Peterborough Civic Hospital.

Instal Swings

The Institute paid $321 to have six swings installed in the Bailieboro playground.

Plans were made to have a booth on Bailieboro field day, August 7.

Names were taken for the grandmothers' party planned for August 15 on George Fletcher's lawn.

The roll call, "When I joined the Institute," was answered by the 27 members present with Mrs. Nelson Gyatt being the oldest member present, having joined 40 years ago.

Fine For Absence

A fine of five cents for failure to answer the roll call is to be charged at future meetings and the proceeds are to be put into a life membership fund.

Members were given the program schedules for 1950-51

Lunch was served.

Velvet Moves In To Summer Scene

NEW YORK — Velvet and velveteen hats—from caps to cartwheels—pick up the velvet motif of a collar or belt and move straight through the summer fashion picture. Because velvet confines itself to deft and becoming costume touches it as increasingly acceptable for summer wear. After all, why should cotton move into an all-year-round cycle an dvelvets never have a look-in?

Millbrook News

Miss Helen K. Palen, K.C., deputy registrar of Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. McDonald and Mr. Peter Pringle, all of Toronto, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith.

Mrs. A. D. Frank of Niagara Falls and Mrs. F. Mac Grogan and daughters, Norma and Marie of Toronto, are holidaying with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holden and their sister, Mrs. Laurence Winslow.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Payne are spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. R. Monteith of Barry and with friends in Staynor.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Latimer and daughters Elizabeth and Helen, Miss Beth Henthorne and Mr. Arthur Armstrong of Peterborough, were the guests of the latter's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Fallis on Wednesday.

Mr. W. Fred Fallis of Millbrook, his daughter Miss Florence Fallis, and Miss Florence Herd, both of Whitby, and Mrs. Reg. Armstrong of Peterborough, have returned from a motor trip to States.

Slim Dress Lines Take More Taste

NEW YORK.—When Mollie Jarnis pointed out that "it will take more taste, greater selectivity, a surer sense of quality, and better designing to put the right sheath on every woman," she summed up the challenge these new fall collections present. "Full dresses will always have their place in a woman's life," she added, "and I shall probably always make them. But a slim dress is a test to design and to wear."

Being entirely practical, this designer's collection gives deft figure-modeling lines to the sheaths she shows as illustrated in the slant of a tuck, softness around the face, and wide, low revers to break two-piece woollens or satin suits.

Nylon Tulle, Lace Bride's Favorites

NEW YORK—Nylon tulle and Belgian or French laces are greatly in demand for wedding dresses. One satin gown has its open neckline outlined in layers of folded pleated nylon tulle Chantilly-type lace forms the bodice and over-skirt whose edges are of the scalloped lace Long sleeves of nylon tulle can be removed later. The overskirt parts in front over a full underskirt of the nylon tulle, which ends in a yard-long train.

Gilmour News

Husbands and Wives Feel Jealous of Other's Work

A man at head of a big business in which he employs many men once gave orders that the wives of all of the married men must come down to the shop once a month and spend the day watching their husbands work. It was a great idea, and if he had only amended it by requiring the husbands to spend every fourth Tuesday, say, watching their wives work it would have gone a long way toward ironing out the domestic difficulties in many a household.

For there is no other subject in the world over which there are so many family scraps as there is over which one of the high-contracting parties gets the hot end in matrimony. Wives are virtually a unit in believing that husbands' alleged work is mostly play and consists of eating leisurely lunches, listening to good stories and flirting with stenographers, while men are firmly wedded to the theory that wives spend most of their time lolling on couches and reading most of their timeseses

Dorothy Dix

6—In Memoriams

ASHBY — In memory of my father, Wilburt P. Ashby, who died July 22, 1947.
His lovely smile and happy face
Broken link I can never replace.
Sad was the parting, no one can tell,
So sudden on earth the sorrow fell.
Memories are treasures no one can steal,
Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal.
God alone knows how I (daughter Eileen) miss him
As I journey alone down life's lane,
But his voice seems gently calling.

ASHBY—In loving memory of dad Wilbur P. Ashby, who died July 22nd, 1947.
Deep in our hearts a memory is kept
Of one we loved and will never forget,
And though the years may be many or few
We will always be thinking dear Dad of you.
—Always remembered by wife, Mrs W Ashby and family.

BARTON — In loving memory of grandson, Ray Alvin Barton, who was drowned in the Trent on July 27th, 1947.
The call was sudden.
The shock severe.
To lose a grandson we loved so dear
'Tis sweet to know we'll meet again
Where troubles are no more—
And the one we loved so well
Has just gone on before.
—Always remembered by Gran—Mrs W. Ashby and family.

DWYER—Pte. Norman Dwyer, who gave his life in Sicily . . . Seven years have passed son and I still miss you.—Mom still sits in a silent chair. . . .
In loving memory of our dear son Norman Dwyer who passed away July 22, 1943.
His life is a beautiful memory
His death is our silent grief.
He sleeps in God's beautiful garden
In the sunshine of perfect peace.
—Ever remembered by Mother and brother.

FALLS—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Sheldon, who lost his life by drowning six years ago on the 23rd July, 1944.
Memories are treasures no one can steal,
Death leaves a heartache no one can heal;
Loved dearly in life and living yet,
In the hearts of those who can never forget.
—Always remembered by Mother Dad, Sisters and Brothers.

MOSHER—In loving memory of Mrs Alice Mosher, who passed away July 22, 1949.
A loving smile, a heart of gold;
Dearest mother this world could hold
'Tis sad but true, I wonder why
The best are always first to die.
She never failed to do her best,
Her heart was true and tender,
She toiled too hard for those she loved,
And left them to remember.
—Remembered by her daughter Theresa and her husband Raymond.

MOSHIER—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Moshier, who passed away July 22, 1949.
In our dear hearts your memory lingers,
Sweetly tender, fond and true.
There is not a day dear mother,
That we do not think of you.
—Ever remembered by daughter Mrs K. Ellis and family

Find No Room For Laboratory

There is no suitable place in the new Civic Hospital building to accommodate the Provincial Department of Health laboratory, a special committee reported Thursday to the Board of Governors, after considering the matter with Dr. C. B. Waite director of laboratories.

The special committee reported that the space which the architect had considered a possible location for the laboratory was in the basement of the east wing which was not being furnished. This space had been allocated for use in the future as an out patients department but it could be used as a laboratory, he thought.

Dr. Waite said that Dr Barton, director of laboratories for the Provincial Department of Health had said the space was not suitable. The windows were too high and were overcast by a balcony and on one side of the wing there were no windows.

A basement store room was suggested but that also had the same setbacks.

Dr. Waite reported that Dr. Barton had suggested an extension could probably be built on to the present hospital laboratory for a cost of $20,000. The architect, Mr. Craig, said the figure would probably be nearer $40,000.

It was agreed that at present there is no suitable space for the Provincial Department of Health laboratory.

OBITUARIES

MRS. LENA MAY CLAYTON

Mrs. Lena May Clayton, 246 Antrim St., died Friday at her residence after a short illness. She was born in Peterborough, daughter of the late Gerald and Jane Van Norman and has lived here all her life.

She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Ruby Cameron and Miss Margaret Clayton, both of Toronto.

Funeral service will be held Monday at the Belleghem Funeral Home, 190 Hunter St. W., at 2 p.m. The Rev. Charles Boyd will officiate and burial will be at Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. WILLIAM JAMES OUTRAM

A resident of Peterborough for nearly 65 years, Mrs. Helen Outram, Edinburgh St., died early today at the Sculthorp Nursing Home after a six-week illness. She was in her 83rd year.

Mrs. Outram was the former Helen Pugh. She came out to Peterborough from Kent, England, at the age of 18 and married the late Wiliam James Outram, who for many years was a store manager of Matthews Blackwell, later Canada Packers stores.

Mrs. Outram was an active member of George Street United Church.

Left are four sons and two daughters—Howard W. and Edward A. of Peterborough, James of Wilberforce, Walter C. of Lindsay, Mrs. Arthur Emmerson (Ella) of Toronto, and Mrs. L. W. Copp (Eva) of Peterborough. Her husband, Wiliam James Outram, predeceased her.

The funeral will be at the Belleghem Funeral Home, Hunter St., Monday at 3.15 p.m., the Rev. Dr. James Semple of George Street United Church, officiating.

Burial will be in the family plot in Little Lake cemetery.

JOHN CURTAIN HURL

John Curtain Hurl, of Caroline St., Lakefield, died Friday at his home in his 73rd year. Mr. Hurl had been ill since February.

Mr. Hurl was born in Smith township, the son of the late William James Hurl and Margaret Curtain. He was educated at Buckhorn and moved to Lakefield 23 years ago. Mr. Hurl worked as a laborer and for many years was a caretaker at the Lakefield Preparatory School.

He is survived by his wife, the former Sarah Sophia Bullock; four daughters, Mrs. Chalmer Sweeting (Margaret) of Selwyn; Mrs. Ernest Bullock (Edna) of Young's Point; Mrs. Wallace Blewitt (Viola), Smith township; and Mrs. Bert Vaughn (Verna) of Toronto; 2 sons, Donald, at home; Clifford, of Peterborough; seven sisters, Mrs. Lavina Riel, Peterborough; Mrs. W. J. Charlton (Margaret), Lakefield; Mrs. George Rowe (Elizabeth), Peterborough; Mrs Edward Edwards (Delilah), Peterborough; Mrs. John Charlton (Cecile), Peterborough; Mrs. Ernest Chamberlain (Bertha), Yorkton, Sask.; Mrs. E. Dunsford (Lilian), Lakefield, and two brothers, George Samuel Hurl of Galt and Joseph Stanley Hurl of Buffalo, Alberta. He had 21 grandchildren.

The funeral service will be held Monday at 2.30 p.m. at the Anderson Funeral Home, Lakefield. Rev. W. B. Day, of the Church of the Rock, Burleigh, officiating. Burial will be in Ray's cemetery, Lakefield.

PASS MEDICAL COUNCIL

Two district men were successful in passing Canadian Medical Council spring examinations, it was announced today. These examinations permit successful candidates to practice medicine in any Canadian province. The two are John Arthur Deyell, Lindsay, and William Frederick Jacobs, Grafton. They were two of 589 successful in the exams.

Weslock Enters Golf Final With B.C. Man

By W. R. WHEATLEY

SASKATOON GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB, July 22 (CP)—Anyone who has carefully figured his ticket for today's Canadian amateur golf final may well toss it to the prairie winds.

Based on Friday's semi-final display—perhaps the weirdest in the 46-year-old history of the competition—anything can happen when Nick Weslock of Windsor, meets Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver in the 36-hole match play final.

In a generous sense, form was followed. Nick defeated Vern Mohs of Edmonton, 6 and 4—not an unexpected result. Mawhinney and Jerry Kesselring of Kitchener, Ont., both 21-year-old former Canadian junior champions, put on the real dog-fight of the day. The lead shifted about in bewildering fashion until Bill finally outlasted Jerry, 2 and 1.

But the process of achieving these decisions was something to behold. The golf was good, poor and terrible.

Keeps Floundering

Even the reliable Nick contributed his share to the general floundering, firing into the woods and hooking shots.

High winds whipped the course, but the same winds have been in evidence practically through the week-long tournament.

An analysis of the play gives this illuminating information.

For the distance played, the usually-brilliant Weslock was 10 over par on his 32 holes of medal play. Mawhinney, a studious tactician in golf, was 13 over for 35 holes. Surprisingly, Mohs, who took the worst trouncing, ranked next with a 14-over display and Kesselring had a shuddering 17 over.

Weslock had 14 pars, 12 over pars and six birdies; Wawhinney 15 pars, 16 over pars and four birdies; Kesselring 12 pars, 18 over pars and five birdies; Mohs 15 pars, 15 over pars and two birdies.

Longest Air Race From London Planned For '53

By J. C. GRAHAM

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Z. (CP)—An air race from London to Christchurch, scheduled for 1953, will be the longest race in aviation history. It is likely to provide an entirely new conception of the possibilities of long-distance flying.

Sponsored by the Canterbury International Air Race Council of this city, with the assistance of the Royal Aero Club, London, the race will be divided into two sections—speed and handicap. The handicap section is unique in that the entrants will probably be chiefly leading word airlines which will send fully loaded passenger airliners over the route.

Experts are already speculating whether, with the present rate of improvement in aircraft speeds, the race will be won in a single day. It is estimated that existing jet fighters, equipped with special fuel tanks, could cover the distance in 30 hours, flying time New types developed by 1953 are likely to cut the time considerably.

Already provisional entries have been made by British Overseas Airways Corporation, British European Airways Corporation, Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM), and Qantas Empire Airways. American Airlines are also showing interest in the project and there are prospects of a Boeing stratocruiser and an American jet airliner being entered.

British Entries

Among British manufacturers, the Armstrong Whitworth Company has provisionally entered its Apollo II turbo-jet air liner powered with four Armstrong-Siddeley Mamba 8 gas turbine units The De Havilland Company has entered but has not yet stated whether it entry will be its record-breaking Comet jet airliner or a new aircraft in the speed section.

Other airlines and manufacturers are likely to make entries when the full rules and conditions are announced. Already a great deal of preliminary work has been done and representatives of the organizing committee have discussed the project with civil aviation authorities, airlines and manufacturers in Australia, India, England, many European countries and the United States. The route will be via the Middle East—from England to Basra, Calcutta, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand.

Prizes will be $30,000 for first in both the speed and handicap sections, $9,000 for second, $3,000 for third and $1,500 for fourth. However, in an event of this magnitude the prestige of winning is of far greater importance to the firms concerned and the prize-money is likely to be a fairly minor consideration with most of the entrants.

Royals Blank Toronto In 6-0 Triumph

By The Associated Press.

Carl Erskine, the 23-year-old righthander who won eight games and lost only one for the Dodgers last season, found himself shipped to Montreal this year after a brief trial and an 0-0 record.

Young Erskine set out to show the Dodger higher-ups it was all a mistake. The going was tough at first but the stocky 165-pounder finally appears straightened out. He has a 7-6 record and a four-game winning streak.

Erskine also is working a string of three straight shutouts.

He blanked Toronto 6-0 Friday night. Earlier he had shut out the Leafs 1-0 and Rochester 6-0. He checked Toronto on four hits last night, striking out 13 batters and walking three.

George Schmees, with three hits, helped Erskine win No. 7. Jack Brittin suffered his sixth loss.

Whip Buffalo

Triples by Ed Mierkowicz and Don Richmond in the eighth inning gave Rochester a 5-3 victory over Buffalo. Ed Yuhas gained his 10th victory.

Jersey City, behind George Spencer's five-hitter, whipped Syracuse 7-1. Chet Laabs paced the Little Giants' 13-hit attack with two singles and a home run—his 20th.

Springfield and Baltimore divided a doubleheader, and the Orioles fell three full games behind league leading Rochester. Baltimore won the nightcap 8-2 after Springfield captured the opener 6-5.

Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

Teddy Morris who coached Toronto Argonauts to three Dominion football championships, announced his resignation Friday as manager of Argos and said he will coach Toronto Balmy Beach Seniors of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Morris was appointed manager of Argos last winter after resigning as coach when the Toronto Big Four entry finished out of the league playoffs two years in succession.

In his new job, Morris replaces Don (Shanty) McKenzie, last year's playing coach, who this season is trying out for a line position with Argonauts.

Morris was succeeded as Argo coach by Frank Clair, former catch of the University of Buffalo.

In an interview today, Morris said he is leaving the Big Four club under amicable circumstances and is happy about his new job.

Carlisle Hanover, owned by A. P. McNiven of Ecorse, Mich., won the fifth dash and finished third in the eighth to take the major portion of the $1,000 feature event at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto Friday.

In the eighth, Carlisle Hanover was shuffled back in the early pacing and, although he came with a rush through the stretch he couldn't catch Tom C. Grattan or Count Hanover, who finished second.

Carlisle Hanover paid $9.25 in winning his dash and Tom C. Grattan, overlooked in the betting, paid $24.80 in the eighth. Tom paid $13.15 to place and $16.40 to show.

One of the greatest track stars ever produced in Canada—Bob McFarlane—may quit the sport after the greatest year in his career, but the lure of the cinder paths may again get him back into competition for the 1952 Olympics.

Big Bob said Friday that he was all through with track, and that from here in he would concentrate on his career in medicine.

In his hint that he may retire, Bob had some good news for western football fans. He said that he hoped to try again for a place on Johnny Metras' intercollegiate football club.

The Hamilton Tiger-Cats said Friday night they'll go to court before they surrender Jackie Stewart and Earl Valiquette to Edmonton Eskimos.

"We'll take it to court," general manager Care Voyles said when told that manager Al Anderson of Edmonton had said Valiquette and Stewart must play in Edmonton this year or quit football.

Voyles insisted the two players had signed contracts with the Tiger-Cats before signing Canadian Rugby Union certificates with Edmonton.

Top-seeded favorites, including Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif., and Doris Hart of Jacksonville, Fla., advanced with little difficulty Friday as the second round of men's and women's singles was completed in the 40th United States clay court tennis championships at Chicago.

The last Canadian entry bowed out of the tournament when Davis Cupper Henri Rochon of Montreal dropped his third-round match to Glenn Bassett of Santa Monica, Calif., in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3.

Tigers Outfight Crescents 6-5

By The Canadian Press

Action was fast and furious in the Ontario Lacrosse Association series Friday, with upsets being the feature of the night.

Hamilton Tigers, paced by a brilliant one-man show by Captain Blain McDonald, outfought the league-leading Owen Sound Crescents 6-5 in Owen Sound. McDonald rapped home four Tiger goals, and assisted on another. It was Crescents third loss in 16 games, and it maintained the hot winning streak posted by the Tigers in recent weeks. The game was a hard-fought, close-checking affair, with Tigers collecting 22 penalties.

St. Catharines Athletics staged their usual hard-driving finish to pot eight fourth-quarter goals and gain a 17-10 win over Weston Lions in the Garden City.

The game started slowly, and not until the third quarter with Athletics ahead 8-6 did things liven up. The last period was a thriller from beginning to end. Ken Croft paced St. Kitts with four goals, three of them in less than two minutes of the fourth frame. Ted Downer bagged four goals for the losers

Marmora Victors

MARMORA, July 22 (ENS) — Although a little slow in getting down to action, Marmora won comfortably in their home game with Norwood on Friday evening, the score being 14-4 in their favor. Drummond pitched throughout for the winners and was given good support by his teammates. Norwood used Fredericks for the opening pitcher and he was changed for E. Spencer in the third when 10 men crossed the plate. This inning was featured with a homer and a three bagger by Auger. In scoring his home run Auger also brought in two other runs. Killian playing his usual effective game and Sweet scored a brace each in that frame. From the fourth, Kelly took over the pitching for Norwood and kept the Marmora scoring down to only two more runs. In the fifth Marmora executed a neat double play, Drummond to Killian to Darrah. The game was witnessed by a somewhat larger crowd than usual.

George D. Allen Dies

TORONTO, July 22 (CP) — George David (Doug) Allen, 57, director of prisoners of war in Canada during the Second World War, died Friday after a long illness. Active in veterans' welfare agencies, he was organizer of the Tubercular Veterans' Association and a member of the veterans' advisory council of Toronto.

THUNDERBIRD CHIEF — Wing Commander C. H. Mussells, 30, of Montreal, will lead the RCAF's No. 426 Thunderbird squadron when it joins the United Nations' airlift to Japan. The North Star squadron will carry supplies and men between the United States and Japan, but will not take part in fighting in Korea.

Jail Cell Not Like Waldorf But Many Keep On Returning

KINGSTON — (CP) — What's life like in a county jail in Ontario? Does a non-paying guest of the government enjoy his sojourn there or does he find life sufficiently depressing to discourage a return visit?

Though accommodation and food, service and entertainment are a far cry from those offered at the Waldorf, statistics show that odds are about 3-1 that the man will return.

When the judge or magistrate pronounces sentence, whether it is five, 10, 30 days or even three or six months, the convicted person is on his way to an experience he cannot have anywhere else. And it all starts the minute the pronouncement is made in the courtroom.

The policeman who escorted him to the courtroom with the friendly word that "perhaps the old man is in a good frame of mind this morning," is perhaps less friendly as he escorts him to the door of the county jail. The prisoner is now a convicted felon in the eyes of the law.

No Welcome

There is no word of welcome from the turnkey who takes over from the policeman and escorts the prisoner to the jail office for fingerprinting and photographing — "printing and mugging" as it is known to old-timers.

The prisoner is next presented with a pair of dungaree overall pants, a shirt, socks and a pair of boots. A bath often precedes the dressing in, and frequently it is just as well. Even jail clothes can suffer from contact with not-too-clean bodies.

The turnkey then escorts the prisoner to his room. The "room" is a cell where he will spend his nights—and his days, if he is recalcitrant

Starts Jail Routine

He receives blankets — three in winter, two in summer. Then he is free to meet his fellow inmates and tell his story. Most prisoners say they are "Victims of circumstance."

A bell interrupts their conversation. It is mealtime. When the meal is over, the prisoner realizes he is in jail and settles down to finish his sentence as quickly as possible

Most jailers are firm believers in the old maxim that the devils finds work for idle hands and the prisoner soon finds himself with either a hoe, a rake, a shovel or a lawnmower.

Men not trusted to work outside are "urged" to mop, scrub, paint, scrape, or carry out some other duty indoors.

Taxpayers Costs

When a man is sentenced to 30 days in the county jail, it costs about 40 cents a day for each day he is there to feed him and about 50 cents a day to clothe him. On the average it costs taxpayers $2.97 a day for his upkeep.

When the day comes for the prisoner to leave the jail, he goes with nothing in the way of money to show for his time within. In some western Canadian provincial jails, the men are given $1 on discharge, but the prisoners are not so fortunate in the east.

During the time he has been in, the prisoner has had the opportunity of attending church each Sunday and has been visited by representatives of the Salvation Army or some other organization interested in re-establishing prisoners If he is sensible, he will have heeded the advice given him by these visitors.

Say New Trophy May Supplant Old Allan Cup

TORONTO, July 22 (CP)—The Allan Cup's future doesn't appear too bright today.

It's a battle-scarred veteran of 42 years in the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and may be heading for a "semi-retirement" role—as far as Canada's rough-and-ready senior puck-chasers are concerned.

Its successor has been identified only as a "super" trophy. And there's been no inkling as to a would-be donor.

It all started at the CAHA annual meeting at Banff, Alta., last month. The idea will be considered by the association's executive at a meeting and its recommendation will be presented to provincial officials today.

Idea Not Welcome

If the new cup is accepted by provincial officials, it will mean the power-packed senior clubs will shoot for the "super" cup, while weaker clubs will go after the Allan Cup. Clubs in the "super" class will come from various points in Western Canada, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

The idea hasn't been welcomed by all club or league officials.

The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association turned thumbs down on it last week. Officials said they are opposed to segregation of the wealthier clubs and added that President Gerry Thomson of Trail will cast a "no" vote at the executive meeting.

The Western Canada Senior Hocky League has also decided against the move.

Sunday School Picnic Held On Katchewana

YOUNG'S POINT, July 22—(ENS)—The Anglican Sunday School at Young's Point enjoyed a picnic recently at the summer home of Mrs. Bland on the banks of Katchewana. The swimming and diving was supervised by Mr. Freed and the ladies. The races were keenly contested.

Mrs. Nicholson and Mrs. Fife directed the activities of the younger pupils. The parents provided a meal and ice cream was servd by the hostess.

Messrs. Morris, Freed, Nicholson and Pelton and Mrs. Hilliard provided the transportation.

Successful contestants were: Tiny tots, every runner a prize, Reginald Coones, Gale Godfrey, Doris Nicholson, Robert Creyon, Wayne Heard, Lillian Traynor, John Darling, Joan Townsend, Pauline Fitzgerald, Ruth Wilson, Peter Heard, Robert Henderson.

Reds Drive Up In US Truck Borrow Gas, Then Shoot

A U.S. COMMAND POST, Korea, July 22 (AP)—Four Korean Reds, posing as South Koreans, borrowed five gallons of gasoline Thursday from an American engineering detachment and then opened fire on the Americans.

Lieut. Ward Neville, 32, of San Francisco, told of the adventure which illustrates the trickery practiced by the Korean Communists.

Neville was setting a demolition charge when four men in South Korean uniforms drove up in an American weapons carrier. Three spoke English, one quite well—better than my interpreter—Neville said.

They amiably discussed the bridge demolition job. One of them blew a whistle and about a dozen men in white came out from the enemy side of the bridge and helped put in the demolition charges. When the Koreans blew the whistle again, the men in white left.

The Koreans then asked for five gallons of gasoline, which Neville provided.

But then instead of driving across to the American side, the Koreans turned around and drove back toward the village in the American weapons carrier.

Neville fired a warning shot over their heads. Answering shots came from the Koreans. Neville's men, who had been giving him protective fire cover all along, pinned down the unmasked guerrellas and Neville blew the bridge.

The Perfect Bait

Fish Attracted To One Man's Homely Device

By JIM ENGLISH

For years fishermen have sought the perfect bait, and for years they have been frustrated in their search. They have tried everything to attract fish, from bits of their red flannel underwear to fancy mixtures of feathers, fur and foil.

The other day we met one of these searchers for the perfect bait; an elderly gentleman who has spent most of his life scouring the world for better fish-catchers.

He was standing on Hunter St. bridge, gazing mournfully at an old straw hat which was floating rapidly down the Otonabee. He looked at us, and threw the butt of a black cigar after the hat.

"Life," he said, sighing. "That's life."

From a vest pocket he drew a red bandanna and tied it on top of his head, looping the corners below his ears.

Best Bait in World

"Pretty fetchin', eh?" he asked, pointing to the bandanna. We said it sure was.

"Best bait in the world for bass and 'lunge," he said. What is, we asked. "These here red bandannas. Sure killer. Never saw a better one in all m' sixty-eighty years.

"And let me tell you, buster, I've seen what wasn't the perfect bait, but what sure was the perfect attracter for fish. Drew fish like flies. Then the law done me out of it.

"Saddest story y'ever heard. Wanna hear it?"

We said okay.

"You'll never believe me if I tell you," he warned us. Oh sure we will, we said.

"Well, if you want to know what it was, it was the big toe on m'right foot. Fish came for miles to see it. Found it out one day when I was six, sitting on the end of the wharf at m'old man's cottage. Big muskie came along and started nibbin' on that toe.

"Well, sir. I was only six and scared as they make 'em. I yelled. Old man come down and saw this fish and he was so excited he could have jumped over the cottage. Never saw a man so excited.

Sat in Bow of Punt

"Well, sir, after that he took me fishin' with him all the time. I'd sit up on the bow of the punt and hang that toe in the water and the fish'd flock right around. My old man caught more fish than any sane man'd want.

"He used to sit around in the evenings, talking away to himself, sayig, 'It can't last. It ain't even true, it's so good."

"And he was right. First thing we know the fish and game club comes along. They've heard the rumor and they're all riled up. They try to get the old man to stop doin' it, but he says they can go you know where.

"That same night along come the Children's Aid and they say they hear he's usin' me for bait and they don't like it none too well. Say it's cruel. I tell 'em ain't nothin' to it, but they swear they'll get a conjunction from the court and stop him.

"The old man saw right there I was big suff, and he sets up as a guide. I'd hate to tell you how much money he made that summer. Never saw so much of it before or since.

"And the Americans; they'd just sit and stare. They couldn't hardly put their baits in the water, they was so surprised.

Made Big News

"It couldn't last. We was pullin' in money hand over foot. Newspapers and magazines was writin' pieces about me. The fish and game clubs clear across the province was howlin' for my blood.

"Then it came. The government called an emergency session and legislated that I couldn't put my right foot in the water without it had a shoe on it."

"We tried every other toe on both my feet, and there wasn't one could draw fish like that big one on my right foot. Saddest man you ever saw was my father. Used to sit on the wharf at nights and sniffle.

"Finally he took to drink and started beatin' me. So I run away. Haven't been home since."

The old fellow sniffed and took the bandanna off his head to wipe the tears away. A breeze blew the bandanna over the river and it floated down onto the water.

A muskie at least six feet long came up and grabbed it.

We pushed the old man over the railing and ran for a drygoods store.

Making Films In India Fun, If Don't Mind Riots, Snakes

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, July 22 (AP) —Shooting a picture in India is great fun—if you don't mind riots, sweltering heat, deadly snakes and cows that bite.

That's the word I got from Tommy Breen, handsome young actor just returned from making "The River" near Calcutta.

"It was a great experience," said Breen, the lad who gave Jane Powell her first screen kiss in "Luxury Liner" and appeared in several other M.G.M. films. Among the drawbacks of filming in India there were the religious riots.

"We didn't actually see any trouble," he said. "But there were times when we were told to stay indoors. And for a few weeks we were driven to locations in jeeps armed with tommy-guns.

"It was between 105 and 108 part of the time. The humidity was about 90 per cent. Under the hot lights needed for color film, the heat rose to about 115."

Great Snakes!

"One day I was walking through the jungle and I saw a little snake about eight inches long. It was no bigger than an over-size worm and I stepped on it. The natives scrambled through the brush. It turned out to be one of the deadliest snakes in India.

"Once I was walking through the streets of the city and a cow reached out and bit me on the thigh. I started to kick the beast, but I realized that the Hindus all around me considered it sacred. I was outnumbered —about 300,000,000 to one — so I restrained myself."

Despite these factors, Breen said the Indian adventure was a worth-while experience. "The River" company took along a few technicians, mostly Britons, and relied on native help for the rest.

Omemee Group Enjoys Drive

OMEMEE, July 22 —(ENS)— The annual summer bus trip of Omemee and District Horticultural Society, Wednesday, was a day full of interest and enjoyment. The route was planned by Director V. E. R. Zufelt.

Leaving Omemee at 7 30 in the bus followed highway No. 7 to Marmora, then No. 14 to Belleville and across the bridge to the Island of Prince Edward County through Bloomfield and Picton. The party crossed the bay by ferry at Glenora, continuing on highway No. 33 to Sandhurst, where it swung north to Napanee and followed No. 41 to Kaladar, returning to Omemee on No. 7.

The varied scenery along the way was refreshing, one of the striking views being that from below the Mountain View Airport which overlooks Mosquito Bay. Here also Mountain View cheese factory was pointed out as having been famous in the past for the quality of cheese manufactured there, for years taking first prize in the British Empire competition.

Harvesting on the Island was at much the same stage as in the Peterborough district, only one wheatfield being seen where the binder had begun operations.

Pea thrashing and canning were on, and the picnicers were conducted through the Baxter Canning Factory at Bloomfield, by Mr. Zufelt and his sister, Mrs. O. B. Calnan of Picton. Mrs. Calnan and daughter Doris, who met the party north of Bloomfield, led the way to several places of interest such as Mr Howard Leaven's 95 acre cherry orchard.

Next was the sand banks at West Lake, which, after climbing the party proceeded to a spot commanding a grand view of Lake Ontario and of West Lake, and returned to the trail by a precipitious descent in ankle-deep sand. They were told that whole farms had been devestated by the steady accumulation of sand.

Outlet Beach at the East Lake outlet, was also visited.

The party had dinner on the lawn of the Calnan Dairy Farm home in sight of the Picton Airport. Hot tea which was prepared by the Calnan family was much appreciated.

After dinner another Island wonder was admired—the beautiful Lake on the mountain with no known inlet or outlet. From it the party descended on foot, by a sloping stone road, to the Government fish hatchery by the Ferry Dock.

At the dock, appreciation was again extended to the Calnan family for their hospitality. The only other stops were in the Kaladar district to pick blue rear the rocks and to eat lunch by the roadside.

On arrival at Omemee, Mrs H. Hill, on behalf of the society, expressed thanks to Mr. Zufelt for the planning and managing of so delightful a trip.

Hope To Solve Hospital Care

STRATFORD, July 22—(CP)— Health Minister Martin said today that the problem of providing adequate hospital care for all, regardless of means, is one "we will surely solve in the years ahead."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the opening of the new Stratford General Hospital, Mr. Martin said:

"We believe that access to good health is a fundamental human right and we would not see anyone in Canada deprived of adequate hospital care through financial disability. This is one of the problems we will surely solve in the years ahead.

"A public appreciation of the importance of this problem is already evident in the increasing participation by individuals in voluntary hospital insurance plans, and in the establishment of hospital insurance programs in two provinces (Saskatchewan and British Columbia)."

Need 25,000 Dentists To Service Britain

MANCHESTER, England, July 22 (CP)—Britain will need 25,000 dentists—twice the number practicing now—if the country's dental needs are to be adequately served, says Professor F. C. Wilkinson, director of the Manchester Dental Hospital.

Wilkinson said there is only one dentist for every 3,700 persons. Dental schools were filled but were able to turn out only about 500 graduates a year—just enough to maintain the profession at its present level.

"At a conservative estimate the number of dentists needed is 25,000 and to reach that figure it would take 25 years even if the capacity of all our dental schools were doubled."

Say Premature Baby Now Growing Bigger

MONTREAL, July 22 (CP)—A baby girl born 3½ months prematurely is steadily growing bigger and will be a redhead.

Dr. Roman Pniewsky, returning from a vacation, saw the child in St. Justine Hospital here Friday and said the progress she made "is something to wonder at."

Albina Mary Macikas weighed two pounds, five ounces at birth three months ago next Thursday. Now, she tilts the scales at four pounds, one ounce.

Dr. Pniewsky said the baby is sprouting a fine head of hair—red like her mother's, Mrs. Helen Macikas.

Public Schools Cost Up 7.5 Cents

Average cost per pupil-per day (the pupil-day) in Peterborough Public Schools last year was 66.3 cents as compared with 58.8 cents in 1948.

This is a quotation from the summary by Edward Humpage in his audited report of the city's financial affairs and position at Dec. 31, 1949.

The average cost in the academic department of the Collegiate Institute-Vocational School was 93 cents per pupil-day as compared with 91.1c in 1948.

The vocational department average cost of $1.779 in 1949 compared with $1,76 per pupil-day in 1948.

Average cost of combined collegiate departments (academic and vocational) was $1,231 in 1949 as compared with $1,208 per pupil-day in 1948.

A summary of the financing of the public untilities by the Commission composed of G. S. Matthews, G. A. Macdonald and Fred Hills included the following facts:

Debentures to the amount of $17,301.73 for the waterworks; $13,000 for gas department and $6,000 for electric department matured and were paid off, in addition to other sinking fund payments. Debentures for $200,000 were issued for the waterworks Dept.

Capital additions were: $272,660 for waterworks; $304,813 for the electric dept. and $9,070 for the gas dept. all were made from current funds, except the $200,000 debentures issued for the waterworks.

Operating statements show a surplus in the waterworks dept. of $10,164.83. Total revenue shows an increase of $45,645 over 1948, while expenditures including debt charges and reserve show an increase of $32,859 over 1948.

The electric debt. shows a surplus of $71,979 after allowing for all debt charges and reserves for depreciation, etc, this is a decrease of $2,082 from the previous year.

Total revenues increased by $43,848 over 1948, while total expenditures increased by $45,931.

Gas Surplus

The gas debt, shows a surpus of $2,458.68 against a loss of $9,631.87 for 1948. Total revenue from gas consumption increase by $1,409 while expenditure decreased $11,684.

During the year the various services were considerably expanded to meet growing needs of the city. This accounts for the large capital expenditure. However this will result in substantial increased revenue in subsequent years.

Portsmouth Base Explosion Straight Sabotage Attlee Tells Parliament

Nine Ammunition Barges Blown Up, Blast Felt Four Miles Away, Miracle Casualties So Light, House Told

LONDON, July 24—(Reuters)—Prime Minister Attlee told Parliament today that blowing up of nine ammunition barges at Portsmouth Naval Base July 14 was due to sabotage. It has not yet been possible to establish who did it, he added. Attlee said the fire which led to the explosion was "caused maliciously by some person or persons unknown." But enough was known about the means employed to show that they were based on considerable scientific knowledge and were carefully calculated for their effect, he added.

"The incident thus constitutes an act of sabotage," he declared.

Further inquiries are being made.

Felt Four Miles Away

No one was killed in the explosion which touched off a series of terrific blasts and a raging fire. Seven persons were injured — none of them seriously. The blasts shattered hundreds of windows and were felt four miles away.

Attlee told the house it was a "miracle" that there was not a serious loss of life among the workers in the armament depot and their families living near Bedenham Harbor where the explosion occurred.

Answering Anthony Eden, deuty opposition leader, Attlee sa extra precautions have been taken at Admiralty establishments for some weeks.

Attlee said the facts he gave today were the interim report of the board of inquiry set up to investigate the explosion.

Woman Drowns At Lindsay, Falls Off Dock

LINDSAY, July 24.—Lindsay police and firemen located the body of Mrs. Charlotte Gregory in the waters of the Scugog River, just behind her son's residence, a few hours after she was reported missing Saturday.

At about 6:30 Saturday morning Walter Gregory, her son, heard his mother get up and leave the house. No notice was taken until the 80-year-old woman failed to return in a reasonable time.

Police were notified and Constable Hunter proceeded to contact all taxis, the bus terminal and the railroad station. Meanwhile, Chief Webster and men of the Fire Department began dragging operations in the Scugog River above the Rainbow Bridge. About 9:20 a.m. the body was located not far from the dock behind the residence on 12 Water Street, Lindsay.

Dies of Drowning

Dr. Crowe pronounced her dead as a result of drowning.

According to the police, Mrs. Gregory had gone to the dock to fill an aluminum kettle with water. She had filled it and had probably overbalanced and fallen headlong into the river.

Mrs. Gregory had come to the home of her son from Hamilton just a week ago.

33 Die In Crash Of Transport

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C., July 24—(AP) — Thirty-three men were killed Sunday when a United States Air Force transport carrying national guardsmen from war games crashed and burned near here.

The C-46 plunged into a lonely pine thicket minutes after it climbed frm the Municipal Airport here en route to Nashville.

A towering gasolinefed- fire kept rescuers at a distance and they were helpless as they watched the cremation of the Tennessee Air national guardsmen and Air Force reserve crew from Miami.

It was hours later before air force men could approach the white hot remains. Debris was scattered over a wide area.

"You couldn't tell it was a plane," reported one of the first on the scene. "Parts were blown hundreds of yards."

The plane carried 30 passengers and a crew of three.

Suspend River Pilot For Grounding Liner

OTTAWA, July 24 (CP)—J. C. Lessard, Deputy Minister of Transport, said today the department will suspend Edmond Lamontagne, veteran river pilot at the helm of the 20,000-ton liner Franconia when it grounded off the Island of Orleans in Quebec harbor July 12.

Length of the suspension will be decided by Transport Minister Chevrier.

Mr. Lessard said that under the Canada Shipping Act the department could order a formal inquiry on the basis of the information obtained in a preliminary inquiry. The alternative was to suspend the pilot.

"We don't intend to carry out a formal inquiry," said Mr. Lessard.

Lawson And Frost Attend Funeral

TORONTO, July 24 (CP) — Lieut.-Governor Ray Lawson and Premier Frost will leave Tuesday night to represent the Ontario government at the funeral of W. L. Mackenzie King.

The Premier said he offered Prime Minister St. Laurent all the facilities of the Ontario government for the burial service of the former Prime Minister in Toronto Thursday.

The entire Ontario Cabinet will meet the funeral train on its arrival here and will accompany the cortege to the cemetery.

Sorry For Animals

HAMILTON, July 24 (CP) —An unknown person—apparently an animal lover—forced a padlock at the Humane Society pound here during the weekend and liberated some 45 dogs and about 12 cats. It took Humane Society workers all day to round up the stray animals.

Brakeman Snatches Baby Off Track As Train Roars By

ST. CHARLES, Va., July 24 — (AP)—Jim Dowell, 60, a Southern Railroad brakeman, said the whole thing gave him "the weak trembles."

The Negro railroader, a 10-car coal train, a 16-months-old baby and baby's frantic young mother all reached the same point on the tracks at about the same time Friday. But moments later—

There was Dowell on the rear platform of the coal train caboose backing down a steep slope from a mine at a good clip. The brakeman glanced down the tracks and froze.

"Oh, my God, look at that baby," he yelled to Conductor Hugh Kestner.

About 100 yards ahead on the tracks was Jimmie Woodward. He had clambered away from his home and was inspecting rails.

The conductor slammed the brakes on all cars. But it was plain the train couldn't stop in time.

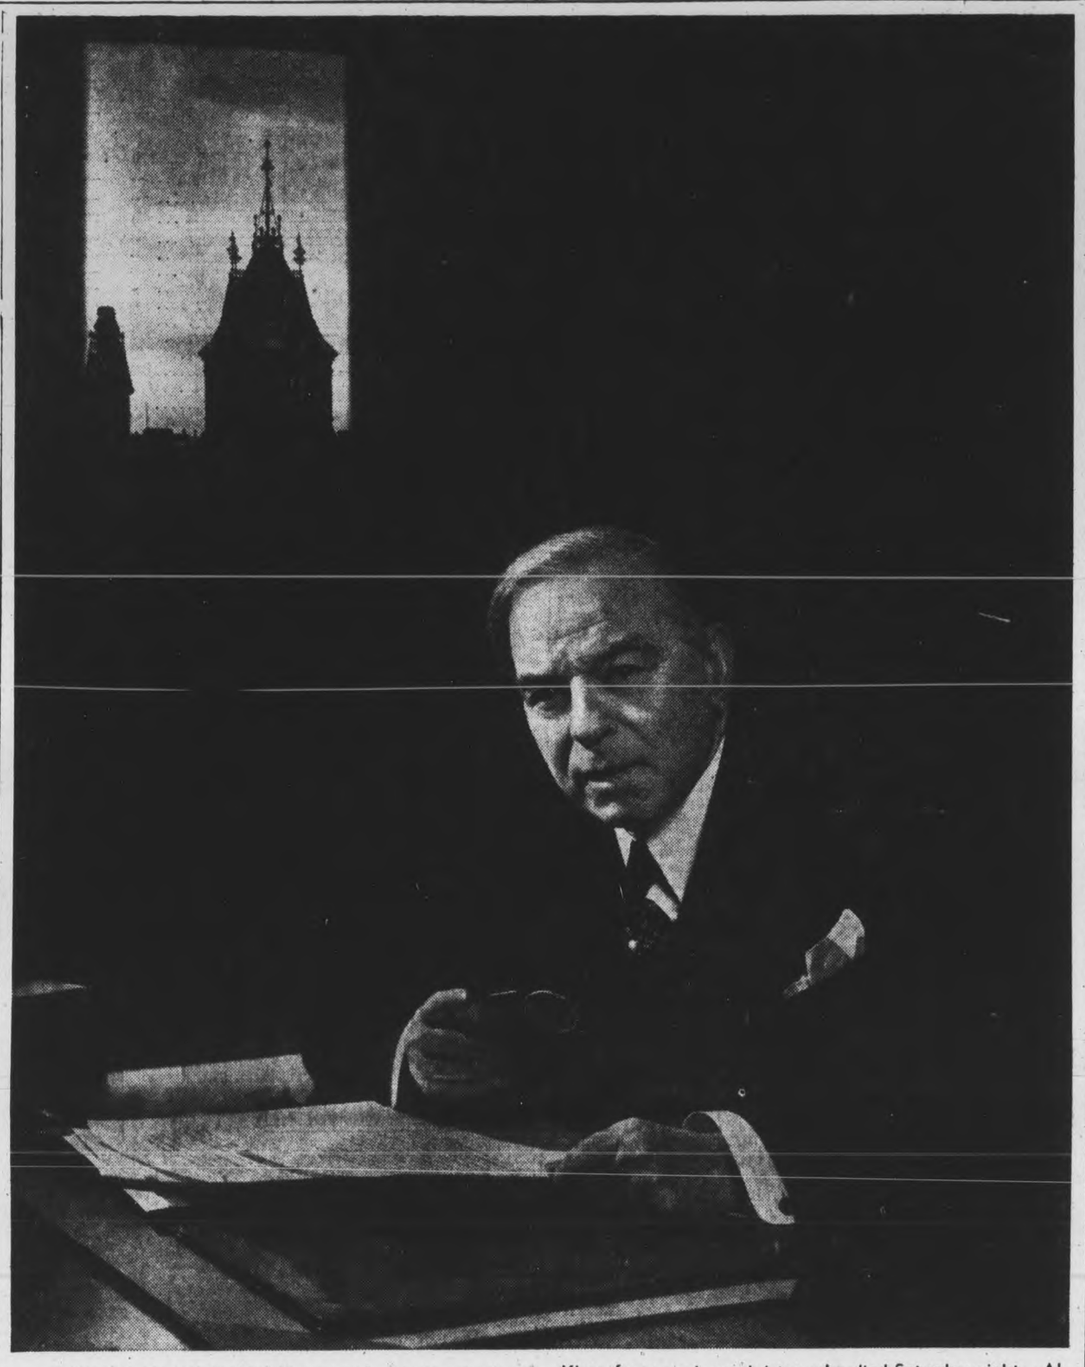
Then Dowell jumped. And ran toward the boy.

At that moment, Mrs. Carl Woodward, 23, spied her son. She dashed toward him too.

Dowell just avoided a three-way tie in the race. A few feet in front of the slowing train he scooped up Jimmie with his left hand, straight armed Mrs. Woodward off the rails with his right, and jumped to the side with Jimmie under his arm.

Said Dowell:

"Prettiest baby I ever saw. I couldn't bear the thought of him getting killed."



CANADA HAS SUSTAINED a great loss in the death of her veteran statesman, the Rt. Hon. William L. Mackenzie King, former prime minister, who died Saturday night. Although in ill health since his retirement, his condition did not become serious until Thursday.

Report Attack Against Quemoy

TAIPEI, Formosa, July 24 (AP)—A defence ministry spokesman said today a number of junks were approaching Quemoy Island under cover of a Chinese Communist artillery barrage.

It may be the long-expected invasion attempt against the Nationalist-held island used as a blockade base against the Reds.

The spokesman said Nationalist forces on Quemoy, just off the mainland port of Amoy, were adequate to meet the expected Red attack. He said they would be supported by locally-assigned Nationalist air and naval units.

Haliburton Man Recaptured On Street In Owen Sound

OWEN SOUND, July 24—(CP)—Provincial Police have recaptured one of two criminally insane escapees from the Ontario hospital at Penetanguishene. George Herman Woodcox, 35, of Haliburton, was found Saturday night wandering the streets of Owen Sound. He offered no resistance and was returned to the hospital, where he escaped July 13.

Melville Wilkie, 40, who escaped with Woodcox, is still at large. The search for the pair centered in this area Friday night when they were flushed from a bushland hideout in the North Sauble Beach area, about 20 miles south of here.

Police said they fled into the Amabel township forest reserve. Neither man was considered dangerous.

Seemed Hungry

Cpl. J. R. Brown said that Woodcox was very hungry and seemed glad that the hunt for him had ended. He said nothing, was not troublesome and had no money when apprehended, said police.

Meanwhile, 28 provincial police from all sections of the province are still combing the tracts of bushland near Shallow Lake for Wilkie.

A suitcase of old clothes, two or three pails used for boiling tea and food and a meagre quantity of food were found in the stolen car used by the pair.

Police know that Wilkie obtained no food when he visited his mother's home at Shallow Lake last Tuesday evening.

Woodcox was committed to hospital following a court ruling that he was unable to stand trial for the Hallowe'en murder of Arnold Gill at Tory Hill, Ont., in 1948. It was his third escape.

Attlee Calls Cabinet Meeting

LONDON, July 24 (Reuters) — Prime Minister Attlee today summoned a special meeting of the cabinet to pave the way for statements on defence and Korea which he and Defence Minister Emanuel Shinwell will make to parliament Wednesday.

The cabinet is due to consider tomorrow the reports of departmental ministers and experts on how Britain can give more concrete aid.

Observers suggested today's meeting was summoned to consider whether any new steps being considered would involve emergency legislation before parliament rises next weekend.

Later this week, Attlee will call a meeting of the cabinet defence committee of which the service chiefs of staff and service ministers are members.

The service chiefs were not present today, but Viscount Hall, First Lord of the Admiralty, was there.

The cabinet so far has not considered the extension of Britain's present period of compulsory military service—18 months—or the question of a supplementary defence estimate.

But at the weekend War Secretary John Strachey made a speech from which some inferred that plans for increased expenditure on the services are probably on the way.

Bumper Rocket Does Its Stuff

COCOA, Fla., July 24 (AP) — A two-stage "bumper" rocket thundered into the air at 10.29 a.m. EDT today in the first horizontal test firing.

It was a preview of "push button" warfare, and the first successful rocket launching from this Florida proving ground for guided missiles.

The firing was originally scheduled for 9 a.m. but was postponed because of technical difficulties.

An attempted test firing of a similar two-stage rocket fizzled last Wednesday.

Defence Dept. On Lookout 2 Weeks For Russ Subs

OTTAWA, July 24 (CP)—The Defence Department has been concerned and active for at least two weeks over fishermen's reports that Russian submarines are being sighted off the Canadian Atlantic coast, the navy said today.

The first of a number of sightings came about three weeks ago.

The department's concern is believed to have been one of the factors which entered into last week's cabinet decision to expand the manpower of the forces and to step up the equipment program. A navy spokesman said today reports from fishermen indicate there is at least one submarine and possibly two operating outside Canada's three-mile-limit. The reports say they bear no distinctive markings.

Royal Naval and RCAF units are believed to be on the prowl trying to ascertain how many there are and what they may be up to.

The news has been kept secret in an effort to allow the investigation to go forward as quietly as possible without inviting panic sightings and reports. There also was a desire to keep the Russians in the dark as to how much knowledge Canada has.

A naval spokesman said a check with London and Washington disclosed that neither the Royal nor United States navies had any submarines in that area. Russia is believed the only other country which could logically have a submarine off the Atlantic coast of Canada.

Cabinet Plans State Funeral For One Of Canada's Greatest Government Heads

Tributes Come From Capitals of World Where Former Prime Minister Made Canada An International Power

By Clyde Blackburn

OTTAWA, July 24—(CP)—Canada today mourned the loss of one of her most illustrious sons, William Lyon Mackenzie King whose influence largely shaped the country's destiny in the last 50 years. The veteran statesman, the bachelor who was Prime Minister longer than any other man in any British Commonwealth, died late Saturday evening. His life, which began in what now is Kitchener, 75 years ago last December, was the story of Canada's growth to nationhood in the first half of the century.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, chosen by Mr. King as his successor when he left public life in 1948, said the death marks the end of what historians will call :"The Mackenzie King Era."

Mr. King died at his summer home at Kingsmere, a lakeside community in the Gatineau hills of Quebec about 20 miles from Ottawa.

He had been ill since a heart and circulation ailment sent him to bed for a month while he was attending the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers in London in the fall of 1948.

But there had been periods since when he seemed to have recovered much of his former vigor and he was trying to write his memoirs.

Develops Pneumonia

Last Thursday he had a recurrence of the pulmonary distubances which had bothered him for years, developed acute pneumonia and soon passed into a coma.

His attending physician at first thought he would rally as he had many times but at Saturday noon his condition was critical.

At 9:42 p.m. EDT Saturday he died without regaining consciousness.

Tributes came from the capitals of the world. The King and Queen sent a message of sympathy, saying Mr. King's lifelong service would ensure him a place in the history of his country. In Washington President Truman expressed personal sorrow and said Mr. King was an unwavering champion of freedom and democracy.

U.S. Defenders Repulse Heavy Attacks

TOKYO, July 25—(Tuesday)—(AP)—North Korean invaders were attacking Monday all along a 150-mile front from Taejon eastward to the coastal town of Yongdok, but "continued to be repulsed" by United States and South Korean defenders, General MacArthur's headquarters reported early today.

Field dispatches described two hard assaults on separate American defence lines deep along back roads in rugged south-central Korea.

A third Communist column had swept south along the west coast to Kwangju, near the southwest tip of Korea, in a broad flanking threat.

Dispatches from the front late Monday night said North Korean pressure mounted steadily all day against American lines astride the Taejon-Yongdong highway, while 20 to 30 miles northeast another drive was in progress, pronging out along three roads.

Strong Infiltration

On the Yongdong front, AP correspondent Hal Boyle reported Communist infantry at one time got behind advanced American positions and threw up a mortar-backed road block.

This serious threat in the area southwest of Taejon was cleaned out in two hours with the aid of American tanks and artillery, Boyle reported.

"We didn't fool with it; we sent the tanks to clean it up," he quoted an Artillery commander. (This was one of the few references made to American tanks.)

Choose Next Monday For Ballot Results

MONTREAL, July 24 (CP) — Deadline for completion of strike ballots by 90,000 members of International brotherhoods engaged in a wage-hours dispute with Canadian railways is midnight tonight but union officials said today the results will not be made public until next Monday

The international brotherhoods, seeking a seven-cents-hourly increase and the 40-hour work week in place of the present 48-hour week with no reduction in take-home pay sent out strike ballots to members early last month.

Use Ball Bats In Gang Fights

SUTTON, Ont., July 24 (CP)—Baseball bats and beer bottles were swung and a policeman assaulted as gang fights broke out in two York county summer resorts during the weekend.

Police Chief James of Sutton was struck in the face when he investigated a prowler among parked automobiles. Ronald Ball, 22, of Toronto was charged with assault. Four others were charged with consuming beer on the street and one with having liquor in an illegal place.

At Jackson's point, dance hall proprietor Ray Smith and his son were beaten by a gang of youths demanding entrance. Baseball bats and bottles were their weapons. Two suspects picked up by police were not identified in a police line-up and were released.

Arrest One Bandit After Bank Holdup

REGINA, July 24 — (CP) — RCMP held one man and sought another Sunday night following the $45,000 robbery of a Bank of Toronto branch at Wolseley, Sask., Sunday.

Officials said a suspect, believed to be from Quebec, was picked up at nearby Lemberg, Sask., two hours after the armed men pulled their daring daylight raid.

They said five members of the bank staff had picked their suspect from a lineup. Roadblocks were strung through the southwestern Saskatchewan area.

Capt. W. Peryer Official Of Bandmasters

Captain W. H. Peryer former director of the Peterborough Citizen's Band, was installed first vice president of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association on Sunday at the closing session of the 19th annual convention held in Woodstock.

Martin Boundy of London was installed president in succession to W. S. Sheppard of Waterloo. Second vice president is Wilfred L. Manning of Woodstock.

Other officers: Directors — W. E. Clancy, Brantford, M. D. Decelles, Quebec; P. C. Allan, Windsor, Ont.; E. M. Johnston, Toronto, I. L. Coulter, Wheatley, Ont.; J. R. Brown, Windsor.

In business session Saturday the convention approved a series of courses intended to lead to the degree Fellow of the Canadian Bandmasters Association. Twelve applications were received for the course which will be opened immediately. Final examinations for the degree will be conducted by Dr. Charles O'Neill, of the University of Toronto School of Music.

A talk on methods of teaching was presented by Dr. J. M. Gayter, Musical Director of the central command of the Canadian Army. Professor R. A. Rosevear, of the Faculty of Music, University of Toronto, presented a demonstration of brass ensemble work with six boys from the Woodstock Lions Club Band.

Musical highlights of the convention were elections by the Central Command Banl of the R.C.A.F.

ONE OF THE FALLEN—In an Army cemetery in Korea, Chaplain Robert Hearn, of Roxbury, Mass., reads the requiescat as a fallen GI is buried. The dead soldier's buddies stand quietly by. In the background are the headquarters and the supply tents of the American graves registration unit. Chaplain Hearn wears a stole over his fatigues.

U.S. Defenders

Boyle added, however, that North Korean frontal pressure was still mounting, with steady artillery and mortar firing all Monday afternoon.

North and northeast of Yongdong, a force identified as the North Korean 2nd Infantry Division pushed its three-speared attack on other defending positions.

Pushing Ahead

One 2nd Division column reached Poun, 22 miles north of Yongdong and 35 miles northwest of the rail-highway hub of Kumchon.

American planes and ground troops were credited with knocking out five of the eight tanks leading about 700 Red infantrymen near Poun.

The two other columns of the invading 2nd Division were reported 15 miles and 20 miles northeast of Poun on two rugged mountain trails that wind southward west of the town of Hamchang.

Air activity included a strike by Mustang fighters of the Royal Australian Air Force, Sunday, in which they destroyed two tanks and damaged six others. The target was not located. All the Aussie planes returned safely

Koreans Withdraw

General MacArthur's press release early Tuesday also said a South Korean division withdraw from Yongju — 30 miles farther northeast of Hamchang—"to more tenable positions" two miles south of Yongju.

MacArthur's release outlined the front as running generally from west to east as follows:

From Kwangju in southwest Korea, 28 miles northeast to Namwho sat with his back to the Chinan, thence to points eight miles northwest of Yongdong, northeastward to a point four miles south of Ochon, then two miles north of Yechon, two miles south of Yongju, and thence to the east coast two miles south of shattered Yongdok.

MacArthur's report said Red tank-infantry teams ranged as far southwest as the outskirts of Mokpo, a South Korean naval port 45 miles southwest of Kwangju.

Only Police Resistance

The announcement said these teams were meeting resistance only from units of the South Korean national police.

A U.S. 1st Cavalry Division counter-attack stopped an earlier Communist thrust along the mountain highway leading to Yongdong. An expected second Red attack on this sector failed to materialize.

In the early thrust at the 1st Cavalry, the Communists kicked off with tanks, then shot their infantry at American lines. The fresh cavalrymen went to close quarters with the North Koreans and beat them back in a rough-and-tumble fight.

(The Pyongyang radio Monday broadcast a claim that the North Koreans captured Yongdong, said a Reuters dispatch.)

Fighters and bombers went out at dawn Monday to support the U.S. ground troops.

Counter-Thrust

The counter-thrust by southern forces developed after a Communist tank attack along the mountainous, winding Taejon-Yongdong highway was stopped Sunday. That attack was unsupported by Red infantry.

The North Korean's tank-led infantry assault near Taejon today was driven back in a rolling tumbling mountain fight. The Americans gained more ground than had been yielded previously.

News of the aerial and artillery-supported assault was tempered by Gen. MacArthur's report of a buildup of North Korean Communist troops in "considerable strength" on the southwestern, western and central fronts.

Die In Defence

The Red radio at the North Korean capital of Pyongyang reported Kwangju's capture. It said 1,000 South Koreans died in defence of the city.

Kwangju is a rail and highway junction. It evidently was seized by comparatively small Communist forces. In their 75-mile sweep southward from Taejon they had little opposition.

Associated Press correspondent Leif Erickson in Korea said the move could develop into a flanking threat against the vital Pusan-Taejon rail line. However, he added:

"It is apparent the American command here (8th Army Headquarters) is not yet concerned that the Reds can make a serious threat from this direction while hitting in strength on other sectors."

In the fighting east of Taejon, at least eight tanks were knocked out. It was a continuation of Sunday's battle in which close support was provided the U.S. infantrymen by American and Australian jet and Mustang fighters and by artillery.

The Reds were reported to have suffered severe losses in manpower.

Increased Pressure

Increasing North Korean pressure was reported on the central front in the Hamchang sector, along the vital corridor leading to the American east-coast beachhead. Hamchang is about 50 miles northeast, and across the mountains, from Taejon on the western plain.

That general area is one in which MacArthur reported Red reinforcements are pouring from garrisons in Seoul, fallen South Korean capital.

South of the mountains on that front are American communications lines to Pusan and to Pohang on the east coast where the first cavalry division (infantry) landed unopposed last week.

Troops of the 1st South Korean Corps, on the American right flank back of Taejon, were described by MacArthur as withdrawing "to rectify the line and occupy stronger defensive positions."

On the east coast, British and American naval guns again blasted the ruins of Yonkdok. It was retaken by the Reds Saturday after having fallen to U.S. and South Korean forces only the day before.

Yongdok is near the coast and 25 miles north of the eastern U.S. beachhead at Pohang. It was destroyed by persistent Allied naval bombardment last week. MacArthur described the situation there as "fluid."

Air power made itself felt again with clearing weather Sunday. A U.S. 5th Air Force spokesman said Allied fighters and light bombers flew 248 sorties and Superfortresses continued to hammer at Communist communication facilities.

American and Australian fighters teamed to support the ground action on the Taejon front.

Prices Weakening On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, July 24 (CP). — Prices weakened slightly in dull dealings on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Market leaders backed down fractions at the opening and couldn't recover as the session progressed. Volume for the first three hours was 571,000.

Papers, liquors and utilities were lower while steels held firm. Issues like Consolidated Paper, Ford A, Brazilian Traction, Imperial Oil and CPR, were among the losers.

Base metals held against the downward trend. Leaders like Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel and Quemont added fractions and Normetal continued climbing.

Western oils slipped back from an attempted recovery movement. Losses ranged to about 10 cents.

Junior gold producers declined pennies while seniors held steady. Cobalt Lode Silver Mines was a brisk issue at about 65 cents in its first appearance on the board.

150 Million People

WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP) —The Census Bureau has estimated the 1950 population of the United States at 150,520,000. This is almost 19,000,000 higher than the 1940 total of 131,699,275.

Say Northern Invaders Draining All Manpower

U.S. 8TH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, July 24 (AP) —A South Korean army officer said today that the Northern invaders are drafting practically all available manpower — including school children—to throw into the war.

Col. Lee Sun Keun, former Dean of the Seoul University Law School, said children as young as 13 years of age were summoned in Seoul and then impressed into "student volunteer corps" and used in combat zones.

Lee also said:

North Koreans are unaware they are fighting troops. "They believe the UN force is a guerrilla force . . . and they have only a week or two to fight and it will be all over."

Emergency Tax Truman Plan

WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP)— President Truman discussed with Congressional leaders today the advisability of an immediate emergency tax on both individual incomes and business firms.

Sam Rayburn (Dem., Tex.), Speaker of the House of Representatives, told reporters after the White House conference that the matter is "still in the conversation stage."

But in any case a long-range tax bill, possibly including an excess profits tax, is likely to be taken up later in the year or early next year, Rayburn said.

Have Heavy Storm

TORONTO, July 24 — (CP) — Heavy rain accompanying an electrical storm swept Toronto early this afternoon but only minor damage was reported. Several houses were struck by lightning. Rainwater surged into cellars in many parts of the city, including the downtown area where the stock exchange had some flooding.

CANADA PRODUCES SOME OF THE WORLD'S FINEST LUMBER

Canada has almost unlimited timber. From British Columbia fir to Maritime spruce her lumber is in demand throughout the world.

Why Seagram's sells Canada first

This is an adaptation of one of a series of advertisements designed by The House of Seagram to promote the prestige of Canada and help sell Canadian products to the markets of the world.

The campaign is appearing in magazines and newspapers published in various languages and circulated throughout the world. The peoples of many lands are told about the quality of Canadian products and see Canadian scenes illustrating these products.

The advertisements are in keeping with the belief of The House of Seagram that the future of each business enterprise in Canada is inextricably bound up in the future of Canada itself; and that it is in the int every Canadian manufacturer to help the sale of all Canadian products in foreign markets.

♦ ♦ ♦

A campaign such as this not only helps Canadian industries but also puts money in the pocket of every Canadian citizen. One dollar of every three we earn comes to us as a result of foreign trade. The more we can sell abroad the more prosperous we will be at home. It is with this objective that these advertisements are being produced and published throughout the world.

27 Lose Lives In Accidents Over Weekend

By The Canadian Press

A wide variety of mishaps — drownings, traffic, trains, fires and falls—took the lives of 27 persons in Eastern Canada during the weekend.

A Canadian Press count of fatalities from midnight Friday to early Monday included eight persons drowned, nine killed in traffic accidents and two each by fires, falls, and trains.

There were 13 fatalities in Ontario, 13 in Quebec and one in New Brunswick.

Most serious of the Ontario traffic accidents was a collision between a car and a truck near Barrie Sunday night which killed Dennis Hayes, 17, and Albert King, 24. Four more persons were injured.

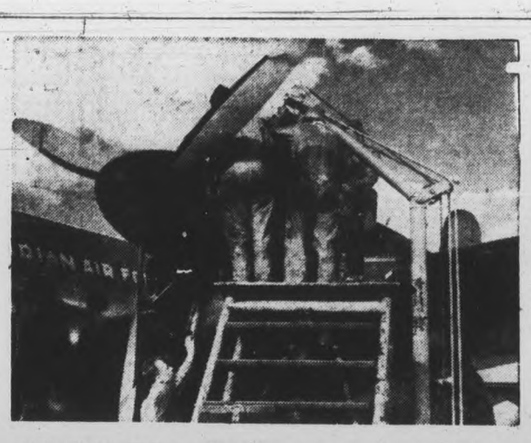
Two of the Ontario traffic victims were children—Terry Hardaker, 3, of Windsor, killed in a collision that injured seven persons; and Jimmy Eckers, 2, of Hamilton, killed in an accident that critically injured his parents.

Other Victims

The other Ontario traffic victims were Wilma Van Deelan, 27, of Edmonton, hit by a car while crossing an Ottawa street; Charles Metner, of Hamilton, killed near Wiarton in a crash; and Harry Sanderson, 33, of Stratford, killed near Drayton Saturday night.

Near Lindsay, Mrs. Walter Gregory, 80, was drowned when she fell in the Scugog River while trying to fill a bucket. Two persons in Ontario were burned to death—Claudette Dore, 2, in Sudbury, who set fire to her dress while playing with matches, and Pauline Boyd, 36, of Halifax whose bed in a Toronto rooming house caught fire from a cigarette.

Near French River, Paul Joseph, 36, was hit by a train while crossing a bridge and killed. In St. Thomas, George Carroll, 63, fell on a flight of stairs in his home and was fatally injured. Three miles north of Sudbury, William Logan, 65, was thrown under the hooves of a team of runaway horses.



WINGS OF WAR — RCAF Transport Squadron No. 426 will send 10 giant North Star transport planes to Tacoma, Wash., during the course of the next few weeks to take part in the air lift to Japan and Korea. Find TV Screen Aiding Doctors

MONTREAL— (CP) —A new use for the television screen which may remove a hazard to human life and become a boon for medical science has been shown in experiments conducted by Dr. Arnold Bernstein of Montreals homoeopathic hospital.

The European- born radiologist has hooked up television to x-ray and fluoroscopic machines.

In one experiment, projection on a television screen of an x-ray film made it easier to read details not ordinarily visible except when the film is placed under a microscope.

Another experiment conducted by Dr. Bernstein was the television of x-ray images from a fluoroscopic screen.

The use of the fluoroscopic screen, Dr. Berstein said, has always been attended with hazards for the radiologist.

Despite all precautions available, the radiologist receives radiation from the x-ray tube in the use of such a screen. This radiation has a cumulative effect.

But by televising the image, Dr. Bernstein said medical men may study ... oscopic images without danger to themselves.

Abruptly Cut Cabinet Ties

OTTAWA, July 24—(CP)— To the surprise of many, when William Lyon Mackenzie King quit politics he quit them completely. He gave advice when it was asked —and it often was—but never if it wasn't.

His era, long as it was, ended abruptly the day he turned over the prime ministership to Louis Stephen St. Laurent in late 1948.

Informed quarters said the man who dominated Canada's political life longer than any other, leaned over backward to avoid the slightest sign of wilful intrusion in the decisions of the cabinet he had left.

In that brief period before the June, 1949, election when he sat as a private member of the Commons for Glengarry, he stopped attending Liberal caucuses because he wanted Mr. St. Laurent's leadership to be left untouched by any lingering shadow of his own.

But Mr. St. Laurent often went to him for advice, intimates said. Sometimes he went himself to Laurier House or to Mr. King's summer home at nearby Kingsmere. At other times, he sent an aide.

As Mr. St. Laurent said in a tribute: "The government has lost its wisest counsellor."

Legion Men, Women Meet At Chandos Lake

APSLEY, July 24 —(ENS)— Members of Canadian Legion No. 381 together with members of the Ladies' Auxiliary met at home of Mrs. Burridge on Chandos Lake for the July meeting. The highlight of the meeting was the report of the convention held in Hamilton, given by Mrs. Charles Smith who attended as a delegate.

Articles were brought in and plans made for the bazaar to be held at the regatta which will be at Chandos Lake August 19.

A piggy bank was donated and a system of giving birthday money was explained by members who donated it.

BERLIN, July 24—(Reuters)— The Jewish community in Germany, which numbered 540,000 when the Nazis came to power in 1933, has dropped to about 20,000, it was announced today in a report issued by the east Berlin city authorities.

5 Evangelists Under Arrest

TORONTO, July 24 (CP)—Five Baptist evangelists were arrsted Saturday night after trying to hold a religious meeting in the streets of La Sarre, Que., a Toronto paper reports today.

The five were held in jail at Amos, Que., and will appear for trial there July 29, the paper said in a newspage dispatch from the northwest Quebec village.

The five were Leslie G. Barnhart, 37, pastor of the Bonne Nouvelle Baptist Church near La Sarre; Maurice Boillat, 24, professor of French at the Central Baptist Seminary in Toronto; Lloyd Carr, 20, a student at the Seminary Alphonse Clouthier, 40, a La Sarre farmer; and Noel Rasignol, 35, a La Sarre welder.

The paper said they were arrested after a group of residents broke up the street-corner meeting by shoving the 10 persons at the meeting from the street. Five persons were released without questioning. The others were charged with illegal assembly and causing a disturbance.

There are about 40 members of Mr. Barnhart's church in this predominantly Catholic town. Last Saturday, an open-air service was broken up by a mob of boys.

W. H. Russell Dies, Funeral At Cobourg

MILLBROOK, July 24 (ENS) —The funeral of William Henry (Harry) Russell, for many years associated with Cobourg waterworks and a well known figure in the community, was held Friday at the Tait funeral home, Cobourg, the Rev. W. P. Woodger officiating.

Mr. Russell died on Wednesday while on his way to hospital, having been ill for some time.

Aged 85, Mr. Russell was a native of Cavan township, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell of Millbrook. Forty years ago he moved to Cobourg and his home has been there since.

He was a past master of Cobourg Orange Lodge and fellow members were pall-bearers at his funeral.

Mr. Russell is surived by a son Clarence, a daughter Mrs. Myra McLaren, both of Cobourg; a sister, Mrs. E. J. Fisher of Millbrook and a brother Levi of Cobourg.

The swing is to FORD

Chrome wheel trim rings and white sidewall tires optional at extra cost.

Just watch the '50 Fords go by along "vacation trail" these days . . . and your own eyes will convince you, more and more people are swinging to Ford! Then "Test-Drive" it yourself and see, hear and feel the reasons why!

Look beyond its "Fashion Car" beauty and see the extra hip and shoulder room in Ford's big, big "Lifeguard" Body . . . so restful on long trips.

Hear the smoother, quieter Ford 100-Hp. V-8 Engine "whisper while it works". Feel the difference in riding ease with Ford's new "Hushed" Mid Ship Ride. You'll say it has "big-car" roadability!

And here's another big reason why people are swinging to Ford for happy motoring: The '50 Ford costs less per mile than any other full-size car!

because its BIG!

Ford seats are wider, to bring you "big-car" roominess. You get "big" power, too—100-Hp. V-8 power. And you get a big-car "feel" from Ford's "Hushed" Ride, with "Para-Flex" rear springs and "Hydra-Coil" front springs smoothing the way.

because its BEAUTIFUL!

Canadian car buyers agree with famous style experts who selected Ford as "Fashion Award Winner". They're swinging to Ford because, inside and out, it's so luxuriously, so completely "The Fashion Car of the Year".

because its QUIET!

Ford brings you the quietest engine, the quietest ride in the low-price field. And for those who want even quieter, smoother performance, Ford offers its optional Overdrive. This advanced Ford feature lets the engine loaf at 35 m.p.h. speed, while the car hustles along at 50! And it pays for itself with savings of up to 15% on gasoline. Enjoy a demonstration.

MONDAY, JULY 24, 1950

The Long Day Over

The death of the Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, P.C., C.M.G., O.M., comes at the end of a completed career. No work to which he set his hand is left undone; no public ambition which he cherished is unfulfilled. He met great challenges, he bore great burdens, he received great rewards. Therefore his death does not bring the pang which would have been felt if he had died earlier. This is not to say that no grief is caused by his death; it is only to say that our grief is of a special kind. We grieve that one who has done so much to bring Canada to maturity as a nation has been taken from the land he loved, we grieve that his advice and his store of experience are no longer at our country's service, we grieve because the passing of a great man brings home to us the fleeting and dream-like quality of life itself.

* * *

Mackenzie King's political career is reviewed in detail in our news columns and it would be idle to repeat the story here. Certain aspects of his public career and his private character, however, may fittingly be enlarged upon. He was a man who devoted all his life and energy to the public service. No close ties of family claimed him, and although this undoubtedly contributed to the austerity of his personality it also set him free to do his work with an undivided mind. He won the deep affection of his few personal friends, but from his hundreds of political associates, and from his party, he won an unwavering respect and loyalty. He could be ruthless; the affair of Colonel Ralston was only one instance of that quality in him. He was a rigorous party disciplinarian, and his displeasure could strike like a two-edged sword. But it is no mere obituary sop to say that he could also be tender, forgiving and generous, and those who knew him best can relate countless occasions on which these qualities were shown. He was, though not in a conventional sense, a religious man, and he was also a philosopher with a strong vein of stoicism in his nature. He found many hours of relaxation in the poetry of Matthew Arnold, and it is certain that in the classical restraint of Arnold's verses he found a response to something that was deep in his own nature. Not lack of passion, but passion held in the severest intellectual bonds, was characteristic of Arnold's poetry and the spirit of Mackenzie King.

* * *

As well as the respect and affection which he commanded, he inspired hatred of a virulence unequalled in Canadian politics. His faults and peculiarities were such as could be understood and mocked by anyone, and contrasted with his qualities of greatness they stood out in startling relief. His indecision was at times as awesome as his quick decision, and there would be half-justice in the statement that, like Queen Elizabeth, his life was "a passion of postponement". But it would be even truer to say, as it was also said of Elizabeth that "his protean mind, projecting itself with extreme rapidity into every sinuous shape conceivable, perplexed the most clear-sighted of his antagonists and deluded the most wary". There was a quality of intuition about Mackenzie King's political generalship which raised it to the level of genius. His most inexplicable and disappointing delays might be followed by a series of rapid and brilliant decisions. Such a man is bound to arouse intense dislike as well as fervent loyalty, and he won a full measure of both. Today his lifelong detractors, his political opponents, and editors who wore themselves out in their fury against him will unite in his praise, but we may fancy that his spirit, lingering near, will smile—

To hear the world applaud the hollow ghost
Which blam'd the living man.

* * *

His place among the makers of Canada is secure. He met difficulties greater than were ever those which faced his great predecessors, Macdonald and Laurier, and he overcame them. In all the involvements and complexities of his political career he had one fixed goal, and that was the unification of this broad and diverse country. He never lost sight of that aim, and in his long tenure of office he did more than any man before him, and more than it will soon be granted to any man to do again, to make this country a self-reliant, well-founded and mighty nation.

* * *

It is usual for the reputations of great men to suffer a sharp decline soon after they are dead, and Mackenzie King is not likely to be an exception to that common experience. It will be fifty years before a true perspective on his career can be achieved. Undoubtedly he knew this, and it may be that his last days were solaced by a verse from Arnold, his lifelong intellectual companion:

With aching hands, and bleeding feet
We dig and heap, lay stone on stone;
We bear the burden and the heat
Of the day long, and wish 'twere done.
Not till the hours of light return
All we have built do we discern.

The Hospital Board's Dilemma

Our sympathy goes out to the Board of Governors of the Civic Hospital in the dilemma which now confronts them. Under their guidance a splendid new hospital has been built. They are understandably anxious to keep it looking as well as they possibly can. But they are being offered gifts for the ornamentation of the building—certain pictures, to be precise—and they are not sure what they should do. We understand their dilemma, and we grieve for them.

There are few artistic productions which arouse so much heated disagreement as pictures. And there are few artistic productions which age so rapidly and become obsolete so quickly as pictures. The Academy prize-winner of twenty-five years ago is the laughing-stock of today. The picture which, in 1930, shocked onlookers by its daring, may now be looked upon as an uninteresting daub. There are some pictures, of course, painted by masters, which grow in interest and value with the years, but we trust that we shall not give offence when we suggest that the pictures which are being offered to the Civic Hospital are not likely to be of this kind.

The Hospital Board has done wisely to reserve its judgement on the proferred pictures. It would do well to get someone who is thoroughly conversant with pictures to examine the gifts before accepting them. For once a picture has been hung, it is very difficult to get it down again, without hurting many people's feelings. And it is a question whether the walls of a hospital are the proper places in which to display any pictures which are not of some unusual interest or value.

If anyone is eager to beautify the hospital, we suggest that they do so by presenting the city with a fine memorial to the late Charlotte Nicholls, to stand outside its main entrance. Owing to the charity of this public-spirited lady Peterborough enjoyed cheap hospital service for several decades. We have a new hospital now, but we should not forget Mrs. Nicholls. On the contrary, we should make some handsome acknowledgement of all that we owe to her. A fine fountain, or a fine piece of statuary outside the hospital would beautify the grounds and perpetuate a memory which should be honoured by every citizen.

The Flower Of Cities All

Which is the larger city—London or New York? Fifty years ago anyone would have said London, but of late years there has been some doubt. The latest New York figures, however—the result of a preliminary census—give a population of 7,841,610. The latest figures available for London are 8,367,000. So it appears that London still keeps its lead by roughly half a million people.

Not that size is of special importance. Both London and New York are big enough to be above petty jealousies. And both cities are full of wonders—so full that it is possible to live a lifetime in either place without exhausting them all. The greatest wonder, of course, is the constant parade of people from all over the world who may be seen on the streets; this is an attraction which never palls.

New York is a city of wonderful character. It has a lively climate, even in the heat of summer, and there is beauty wherever one turns. Its position, on a peninsula, gives it an interesting shape, and it is strangely stimulating from time to time, to see water at the end of a busy city street.

London is sprawling and its climate is foul. Like New York, it has a rich personality and a dower of beauty which can never be exhausted. Its meanest street is filled with the promise of unexpected happenings. As William Dunbar wrote of it four hundred years ago:

Gem of all joy, jasper of jocunditie,
Most mighty carbuncle of virtue and valour;
Strong Troy in vigour and in strenuity;
Of royal cities rose and geraflour;
Empress of towns, exalt in honour;
In beauty bearing and crown imperial;
Sweet paradise procelling in pleasure;
London, thou are the flower of Cities all.

Inquest On Korea

By MICHAEL DAVIDSON

A LOT has been written about American shortcomings in Korea. But is is time someone talked about their achievements and put their misfortunes into perspective.

What would the foreign onlooker have said about the British retreat in Malaya in 1941?

"Look at these Limeys", he would have exploded, "Their guns pointing the wrong way; they have too few men, are not as well trained as their conquerors; they haven't enough weapons and those they have are inadequate. Who said the jungle was impenetrable? And anyway they're running away".

◇ ◇ ◇

THIS is precisely what is being said of the Americans in Korea. And most of it is true. It is true that these youngsters were trained perhaps for the parade ground but not for pitiless warfare; that they are flabby and spoilt after years of occupation fun: that they are led by officers many of whom are uneducated and still in the Army only because they couldn't get a civilian job when post-war demobilization came. But, even granting all that, this force has caused inestimable trouble to Northern Communists. It has upset their timetable, delayed their projects and inflicted tremendous losses upon them.

◇ ◇ ◇

IN the first place, with a recklessness which any Sandhurst cadet would condemn as militarily indefensible, the Americans dispatched two infantry companies and one gunner battery to give battle to the whole North Korean Army. They gave battle—suicidally; but that tiny gallant gesture inspired the world and definitely startled the Communists.

◇ ◇ ◇

SECONDLY, the efficiency and rapidity with which the American command brought in a whole division and deployed it against the Communist advance must become a classic example of how the Americans can move once they mean to move. Foreign military experts in Tokyo were astonished by this impressive "logistical" achievem ent.

◇ ◇ ◇

AND thirdly, this division (though there is little left of it today) has definitely saved South Korea from being overrun long before this. If the twenty-fourth division had not fought as it did—fumblingly, often amateurishly and badly led, sometimes through a morass of tactical error and inadequate strength, but frequently with extreme bravery and always with the one idea of gaining time—Pusan would be in Communist hands at this moment. This gallant retreat has won days, perhaps weeks, in which to erect the counter-offensive machine.

◇ ◇ ◇

AMERICA'S chief weakness here, apart from their numerical weakness, lies in two psychological fallacies: the ineffable conceit of their invincible air force, and the belief that, unlike England, they will never have to withdraw in a war. The American air force may be invincible, but it cannot win a war on its own. That truth the Americans today have found out. Their cheerful confidence that P.80's, P.50's and B.39's could knock out the whole Communist Army has given place to the realization that, terrific as their assaults are, they have at most created for the Communists considerable supply difficulties, but have had no decisive effect.

◇ ◇ ◇

UNLIKE the British Army, American troops are not trained in withdrawal — which soldierly experts say is the most delicate of all operations. Believing that they must always win, they do not bother to learn how to lose even temporarily. This explains largely why so often in this campaign units have been cut off and demolished, when a tactical withdrawal at the right moment would have saved soldiers and more effectively delayed the Communist advance.

◇ ◇ ◇

THERE is another important psychological weakness in this Army. There is an inclination in every command above a battalion to have two wars: one on paper which the world shall see; and the other—the real war—which one doesn't talk about. This explains the attacks, which sometimes seem almost pathological, on newspaper correspondents who are trying to report the war truthfully. There is an utter confusion in brasshat minds of security with prestige, a ridiculous suppression at Field H.Q. of facts which are being published in Tokyo and even more in Washington. The hysterical "expulsion" of certain newspapermen has been followed almost immediately by reprieves, accompanied by gifts of Bourbon whisky. I have seen a Staff Officer solemnly assert that the Americans were holding such and such a town until some of us correspondents said, "But, Sir, we were there three hours ago and saw the Americans get out".

◇ ◇ ◇

THE American forces here, like all forces, have plenty of defects which all ranks below that of major freely concede. These defects, however, silly or tragic as they may be, cannot alter the noble truth that this tiny and frail American army has done and is doing just what was asked of it, even if shortly it holds only the pathetic bridgehead of Pusan.

Letters To The Editor

AT THE RISK OR HIS LIFE

Sir: May I add my word of protest to that of V.J., which appeared in your paper on July 21. On Thursday last, at about five o'clock, I was forced to retreat twice to the curb while trying to cross George Street, although the light was with me. The result was that the light changed, and I had another wait before I was permitted by motor traffic to cross the street. Motorists think that it is a great nuisance if they cannot round a corner without slackening speed. But pedestrians, in their own way, are just as anxious to cross the streets when the green light is with them.

The rudeness of motorists is car-snobbery, and nothing else. They think that because they are in a machine, weighing probably a ton, they are entitled to bully pedestrians, who cannot dispute the right of way with them. It is sheer triumph of might over right, and exactly what is wrong in world politics today. How can we expect to behave well in the international sphere, when we are unwilling to yield an inch in such a small thing as crossing a street?

Motorists and people on bicycles have nothing but contempt for people on foot, and as the police seem utterly uninterested in the rights of pedestrians, there seems to be nothing that can be done about it. At factory-closing time in Peterborough, a pedestrian sets out across the street literally at the risk of his life.

Yours faithfully,
RABBI BEN EZRA.

IS THINKING BECOMING A LOST ART?

Sir: This may seem a strange question to ask in this age of boasted enlightenment, when universities are being endowed on every side, when new schools with the latest equipment are springing up in every town and city. Yet if we examine the matter closely we will find reason to doubt if intellectual development is keeping pace with material progress.

As I strolled through one of these new buildings recently I wondered if I had gone to school sixty years too soon. What a contrast with the little red school house! Instead of the big box stove in the corner there was up-to-date concealed heating. To protect the children's eyesight sunlight poured in from the entire side of the room and there were fluorescent fixtures in the ceiling. The lighting in the old school would be condemned by any modern inspector, but none of the pupils wore glasses. Tile floors have replaced the pine boards so worn by rough shoes that the knots stood out like door knobs. It has been said that John Hopkins on one end of a log and a student on the other would make a university. It would not be fair, however, to keep the pupil and the professor sitting there too long. A suitable school should be built, but the point is that the building does not make the school, rather the ability and zeal of the teacher and the desire of the student to acquire knowledge and to learn how to develop his intelligence.

"By their fruits you shall know them" is a very sound axiom to build upon. If our primary and secondary schools are really developing the intelligence and imparting a liberal education, we should see evidences of it in the tastes and ideals of the people. Let us examine some phases of our national life to see what light they throw upon the question.

Take, first of all, literature. A good education should develop a taste for good reading. But how many of the graduates of our high schools or universities have acquired this? They have read along certain prescribed lines in order to get their certificates or degree, but you will find few of them enthusiastic about the classic literature of our own tongue. Not long ago a writer bemoaned the fact that our good old English authors were but gathering dust in libraries while the people were feeding upon the latest froth that appealed solely to the imagination or the passions.

Take the matter of public lectures. There was a time when a good speaker was a drawing card, but there are now many towns in Ontario where a modern Demosthenes or Burke would not draw a sufficient house to pay expenses. The only kind of lecturer who succeeds now is one who amuses the people, tells funny stories or indulges in some rhetorical fireworks that please the senses but leave the brain inactive.

Apart from the defect in our educational system above referred to, there are two things that murder thought. The one is the lack of any religious conviction and the other is a bad conscience. Many people who belong to either of these two categories supply themselves on Saturday evening with a bundle of pictorial magazines or one of the thousand and one books which are written for no other purpose than to kill time. These act as a mental anaesthetic that puts the individual in a trance throughout the day of rest. No wonder the Scripture says "With desolation is the world made desolate because there is no one who thinketh in his heart". If these people were in a concentration camp perhaps they would begin to do some thinking. If they were made to "sit and weep upon the rivers of Babylon" (Ps. CXXXVI vs. 1) perhaps they would remember Sion.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is....Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee. (Ps. 63: 1, 3.)

◇ ◇ ◇

I will mention the lovingkindnesses of the Lord, and the praises of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitudes of his lovingkindnesses. For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: so he was their Saviour. In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old. (Isa. 63: 7-9.)

◇ ◇ ◇

And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him....

We love him, because he first loved us. (I John 4: 16, 19.)

Enjoying The Evening

(Toronto Saturday Night)

There is now a proposal in England that everybody, including workmen and office workers, should have half an hour's nap after lunch. The proposal is accompanied by the qualification: "Working if necessary a little later in the evening," but this of course is a mere concession to the old-fashioned prejudice which holds that people ought to work as hard and as long as they reasonably and comfortably can.

The modern view is that anything which reduces working hours is good because it either enables the worker to produce just as much as he did before in less time, so that he is better off and nobody is worse off, or else it compels him to produce less, which means that more workers will be needed and consequently there will be more employment and everybody will be happy.

By extending the lunch-hour a little forward it could be joined up with the time off for "elevenses," and by extending the after-lunch nap it could be joined up with the interval for afternoon tea, which beverage would be helpful in bringing the worker back to the state of wakefulness. A tremendous amount of energy would be accumulated during this long restful period, and in the words of the promoter of the nap idea, the workers "would do more work in the afternoon and be in a much better state to enjoy their evening.

Well, anyhow, they would be in a better state to enjoy their evening, and it would be preposterous to curtail its length just as they are being enabled to enjoy it.

British Newspapers Laud Work of Mackenzie King

LONDON, July 24—(Reuters)—Several British national newspapers today devote editorials and obituaries to Canada's former prime minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, who died Saturday night.

The Times says in an editorial, "the death of Mr. Mackenzie King removes a wise and understanding statesman of the commonwealth who guided the destinies of Canada through nearly all the most vital years of the Dominion's rise to be an international power.

"Canada has had little need in her maturing years of the flourishes of forceful or dynamic leadership. But her English-speaking and French-speaking groups have stood always in need of the shrewdness and conciliation of a patient arbiter if the unity of the nation was to be welded rather than weakened by the progress of events.

"Mr. Mackenzie King was by talent and temperament admirably fitted for the role.

"As a statesman of the commonwealth Mr. Mackenzie King always had regard both to the national unity of Canada and to the fact of Canada's continuity to the United States.

Valnued Co-operation

"Before the statute of Westminster, which bore especially the mark of his thinking, the emphasis was on Canada's independence of action. Afterwards his practice left no doubt as to the value he put on the closest association and co-operation with the other members of the commonwealth, although not by institutional forms.

"That Canada, not long after his retirement, should become the keystone of the arch of the North Atlantic treaty was in keeping with Mr. Mackenzie King's conception of the commonwealth as part of the larger community of free peoples."

"There was much that was cautious in Mr. Mackenzie King's policies but nothing that was ever petty or unworthy," the Times adds.

The Conservative Daily Telegraph says in an editorial: "When Mr. Mackenzie King first assumed the premiership Canada hardly counted in the world of diplomacy. He leaves behind him a country whose authority on the international scheme is greater than that of any country of comparable size.

"To him more than anyone else was due that beneficient development in Commonwealth relations which we call dominion status as embodied in the Statute of Westminster."

He "realized perhaps more clearly than many of his countrymen the necessity of her (Canada's) role as lynch-pin in the relations between the British Commonwealth and the United States".

The Conservative Daily Mail says Mr. King "made Canada a united nation, inspired the solidarity of the British Commonwealth, and established a long-time record as the Prime Minister of any British country."

"He got things done—by finding the common denominator, unobtrusively, without fuss, always after deep thought. Thus he gave Canada the best administration she has ever had."

The Liberal News Chronicle describes him as one of the greatest statesman the British Commonwealth produced.

Will Discuss Wheat Floor

LONDON, Ont., July 24 (CP)—Robert McCubbin, parliamentary assistant to Agriculture Minister Gardiner, and Hugh MacKenzie, Liberal member of parliament for Lambton-Kent, are going to Ottawa to discuss the possibility of a floor wheat price; or the idea of the government buying up 2,000,000 bushels of wheat to stabilize prices.

Price of wheat to the millers dropped from $2 to $1.50 a bushel in the past two weeks. Wheat for livestock feed still sells at $1.80. Growers suggest a floor of $1.75-$1.80.

"No businessmen have been exploited like the farmers, and the sooner they realize it the better," Mr. McCubbin said. He urged them to organize their Provincial Ontario Wheat Producers' Association under the marketing board to market all their wheat and to have a body with which the government could deal.

"I think the millers are trying to buy wheat too cheaply," said Mr. MacKenzie.

Prime Minister Shy With Reporters

By CLYDE BLACKBURN

OTTAWA, July 24 — (CP) — Former Prime Minister MacKenzie King, who died Saturday night at the age of 75, was a former newspaperman and an honorary life member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

But there have been few men in Canadian public life who shrank more from business meetings with reporters and his press conferences were few.

He knew the value of the press in reaching the people and was extremely sensitive about what was printed about him.

Yet he consistently refused to establish any regular scheduled meetings with reporters such as that followed by his friend, the late President Roosevelt, in Washington.

Mr. King stuck to the belief that the Canadian prime minister should conduct himself in his press relations as did the prime minister of the United Kingdom.

His argument was that Canadian and British prime ministers were obliged to go before parliament daily during a session and submit themselves to questioning. The United States president was not a member of Congress and his only channel to the people was the press.

Complete Assurance

Mr. King always conducted himself with complete assurance when he did hold a press conference.

His remark to me, in a number of talks about his reluctance to meet newspapermen, was: "A man will never be blamed for what he didn't say."

Despite Mr. King's shyness with the press, it is known he had a real affection for many members of the Ottawa press corps.

In 1945 he appointed to the Senate a veteran and generally-beloved correspondent, Charles Bishop, of the Southam and other newspapers.

In 1946 he recommended to the King that officership in the Order of the British Empire be awarded to wartime presidents of the Press Gallery and made similar recommendations for a number of war correspondents and others in the writing profession.

Rejected Suitor Tries To End It All

LONDON, Ont., July 24 (CP)—A rejected suitor who wanted to throw his money away before he ended it all attracted a curious crowd on downtown Richmond Street Saturday.

Police said a 31-year-old Sarnia man, a newcomer to Canada, was throwing his money and other items out into the street and also threatening suicide.

Police salvaged what they could of the man's belongings. He told them his girl had thrown him out. He did not say how he meant to take his life.

Britain's Employment Fuller Than Ever

LONDON, July 24 (CP) — Britain's full employment seems to be fuller than ever.

Latest labor ministry figures show more workers in civilian jobs than at any time since the end of the war.

At May 31, the figure was 22,331,000—an increase of 9,000 men and 12,000 women from the previous record-breaking monthly total.

Total of unemployed fell from 314,700 May 15 to 282,000 June 12. Only 1.4 per cent of insured workers now are without jobs.

Four vital steps to security
(with something important in common)

1. A steady job is the foundation of security. And job-security can be increased by showing initiative — the quality which, surveys prove, makes workers most valuable. Life insurance dollars, invested in industries and public works, create many new jobs each year.

2. Owning your own home builds security two ways. It allows you to make a sound investment through regular savings, and it brings freedom from housing worries. Hundreds of thousands of Canadians now own their own homes, built with the help of life insurance dollars.

3. Cash resources, such as savings accounts and Canada Savings Bonds, promote security by providing funds for emergencies. And it is important to save regularly. Life insurance helps you save systematically — for family protection, retirement and other future needs.

4. Life insurance protects you and your family as you build security in all these other ways. It helps to provide income for your retirement. And it guarantees your dependants an income in the event of your death. Thus by owning life insurance you take your most vital step to security!

Here's to your future! In all these ways, life insurance helps you and yours to find greater security. Today 5 million Canadian life insurance policyholders are helping themselves and each other to face the future with increasing confidence!

George Davidson Strikes Out 17, Gives One Hit

TORONTO, July 24.—Oshawa's George Davidson created a strike-out record and tossed a one-hitter as Merchants downed Staffords, 10-0, Saturday night. Dover Men's Shops upset the second place Ace Bowling twice, 5-2 and 3-1, in the afternoon tilts, while Sunday Ace's came back to defeat Staffords, 5-2, in a Viaduct Major League busy week-end schedule at Millen Memorial Stadium.

Billy Haddleton spoiled Davidson's bid for a no-hitter after one was out in the ninth by doubling to left. The fireballer from Lafayette University whiffed 17 batters.

Fishy Shadlesky's four hits, combined with Jack Henderson's eight-hit pitching, enabled Dovers to annex the opening game from Aces.

Bill Leauty was the hero in the second encounter, allowing Aces only two safeties. Two misplays, two walks and safeties by Shadlesky and Mandrake sparked Dovers three-run rally in the fifth.

Home runs by Doolittle and Rus Wallace enabled Aces to win their Sunday game with Staffords. Pitcher Al Kelly was forced from the fray in the ninth with two on. Gord Dymont completed the game, whiffing the final batter.

Manager George Hosking was chased from the Stafford bench and finally put out of the park for protesting Plate Umpire Pat Zona's calls.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Despite a lot of opposition, there was another good crowd out, Saturday evening, for The Family Hour tournament. It would appear that this is the most popular weekly event. If we have favorable weather next week, watch out for a record attendance. The winning skips Saturday night were H. Northrop ,T. Parker and S. Cummings. We understand that it was the first time that T. Parker and S. Cummings ever skipped a rink. You never can tell.

Tonight we have the men's regular schedule games and also the ladies' schedule games.

The final game in Provincial doubles is on for tonight. It will be R. Gamble and W. Jeffries vs. H. Freeman and R Hopkins.

And in the singles it is B. Jeffries vs. C. Renaud.

We have no report from any of the bowlers who took in the mixed doubles tournament, down at Cobourg on Saturday.

Sunday Softball Draws Large Crowd

COBOURG, July 24.—Biggest crowd of the local season greeted Cobourg's first Suunday softball game here Sunday, as Montreal Robitailles downed the local Orphans, 9-3, in the third and deciding match of a weekend exhibition series.

The Montrealers won the first contest, 4-3, on Saturday afternoon, and the home side retaliated with a 5-3 victory last night. Orphans dropped into Montreal for a trio of tilts two weeks ago, and this was the end of the home-and-home set.

Star of the Orphans was Iron Man Paul Saindon, who pitched in all three games, going the route Sunday. He limited Montreal to 10 hits in the final game.

Petes Defeat New Toronto With Dadson On The Slab

By CEC. PERDUE

Downing New Toronto 7-2 at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, the Petes took over sole possession of third place in the Viaduct Baseball League, back of Oshawa and Aces, with New Toronto dropped to the fourth slot. The locals were minus Al Menzies (on the injured list), and Dick Golden, the Massachusetts import, who got homesick and pulled up stakes Friday.

Danny Brown, who recently signed a contract with Chicago Cubs—and will report early in March to Springfield Indians of the Cubs' chain—smacked out three for three at bat, one a double and single in four, playing second, and Bud Harrison (at first) a two-bagger. Hastings and Bouchard each hit two for four and the losers, one of the former's being a triple.

Lefty Did Fine

Lefty Dadson made his first mound appearance of the year for the Murphyites, after having an ailing left flipper all season. He came up with a neat seven-hit job, fanning 10 and walking none in a fine initial showing. His support generally was good. Jack Cabot—just back from London, Ont., allowed 10 hits and was wild to walk seven. His support wobbled a bit and the earned run score was 4-1. Paul Estlick starred with a one-hand running grab of a deep drive in the sixth.

Bouchard's single and Hastings' triple meant a run in the first but the Petes got three right back on two walks, a wild pitch, and error, Brown's single and Harrison's double. An error, an out, Hastings' hit and another out gave New Toronto their other run in the fifth. Meantime, the Petes got one in the second on a hit by Edger, a two-base sacrifice by Dadson and an error. They added two in the fourth on Dadson's single, a walk, a wild pitch, Garvey's bingle to left and an out. Their last one came in the seventh when Estlick walked and raced all the way around on a hard double by Edger.

Excelsiors Whip Riverdales 22-10

BRAMPTON, July 24—(CP)—Brampton Excelsiors moved into a four-way tie for second place in the Ontario Senior Lacrosse Association Saturday with a convincing 22-10 win over Toronto Riverdales.

Nick Ferri potted five goals for Brampton, Harvey Madgett scored three, Sheppard, Landess, Brownring and Cruickshanks two, and Severson, Crawford, Gowland and Ashbee one apiece. For Toronto, Donny Needham, Frank King and Thomas netted two each. Hill, Facto, Kapaski and Howes got singletons.

Orphans Win, 6 to 4 Against Mutuals

The tail-end Orphans of the men's softball loop took the top-place Mutuals into camp 6-4 at the Bowl on Saturday night, but it was only an exhibition which went seven innings. Neither team had its full quota of signed players—due to holidays—so they staged an exhibition. It was a fair tilt, too, and the third win for Orphans this season, once against each other team in the loop. Riches threw seven-hit ball and had perfect support, while Bigford gave but eight hits and had three errors behind him by his mates. Lewis, Grafstein, Sanderson and Carpenter each had two hits.

East City Wins

Welch's East City peewees yanked out a 15-13 minor baseball win over the northenders on Saturday morning at the Bowl. They got four runs each in the second and fourth frames, two in the third and five in the sixth. The losers shoved over two each in the first and fifth, one apiece in the third, fourth and seventh, with six in the sixth. Teams:

Northend: Collins, Haig, Mountney, Manbeck, Brown, Naish, McConnell, Dubay, Harris.

East City: Towns, Dorrington, McCarthy, Garvey, Ayotte, Hickey, Baptie, Fitzgerald, Hilliard.

Junior Petes Beaten

Shorthanded, the junior Petes boxla squad were downed 20-6 Saturday night in Fergus. The hardwood floor also hampered the play of the local team which is used to the dirt surface. Gervy Fitzgerald coached the team in the absence of Lou Vitarelli. The next game will be at Miller Bowl Saturday when the locals will be hosts to St. Catherines.

Open New Wing At Hall Of Fame

COPPERSTOWN, N.Y., July 24—(AP—A new $175,000 wing to the baseball hall of fame and museum was opened formally today by Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Ford Frick, National League president, and Will Harridge, American League president, joined in the ceremonies, along with George Trautman, head of all the minor leagues.

This little upstate New York town was jammed for the gala occasion and for the annual game at Doubleday Field, pitting Boston Red Sox of the American League against New York Giants of the National League.

The wing, which makes an L-shaped building out of the hall of fame, was completed in March.

One of the rooms in the new wing is crowded with exhibits pertaining to Babe Ruth — his uniform, bats, autographed baseballs, pictures, and trophies.

The bronze plaques of baseball's immortals have been arranged in the original hall along the walls leading to the new wing.

Northenders Beaten

East City peewees edged the Northend Saturday 15-13 in a minor baseball tilt in Ashburnham. Baptie, Hillier, and Garvey all saw service on the easterners mound while Haig went the route for the northend nine. Garvey led his team at bat with three for four while Beck, Brown and Naish were tops for the north.

Whitaker Club Defeats Toronto At Nichols Oval

By C. H. IRESON

Peterborough Whitaker cricketers defeated at Nicholls Oval, Saturday, Toronto B Club, 203 to 103, in a District Council match. On June 17 the two clubs met at Armour Heights with Peterborough the victors by a score of 199 to 128.

Saturday Peterborough batted first and lost one wicket with only one run scored. Then Booth was joined by E. Cotton and 64 runs were scored by the partners. Scott helped to take the score up to 95 and then Wright joined Booth to push it up to 151. Having added 86 for the wicket Booth was the 6th out at 159 for a carefully played 67.

At the opening of his innings Booth defended carefully and his first 15 runs were all singles. Later he scored freely to stay until his individual score amounted to 67. He was in the match while 159 runs were scored.

The Toronto batting was featured by a display by J. A. Shirreff, who, going in the second wicket with a total of two, was 5th out with a total of 98 of which his share was 64 runs. D. Orr with 13 assisted Shirreff, the pair combining for 50 runs while in partnership.

The locals were in the limelight in the fielding, feature catches being made by Cotton and Dibben.

The winners were without the services of A. Pope, who was playing for Ontario against Quebec in a provincial match.

Peterborough Whitaker:

Batting—F. Booth 67, B. Roberts 0, E, Cotton 48, T. Scott 13, W. Wright 42, R. Rollwagon 4, B. Titshall 1, F. Dyer 5, W. Titshall 0, M. Walker 2, H. Dibben 6 not out extras 15; total 203.

Fall of wickets—One for 1, two for 63, three for 85, four for 151, five for 187, six for 189, seven for 190, eight for 191, nine for 197, ten for 203.

Bowling — J. Gerrard three wickets for 55 runs, E Flook four for 38, W. Smith none for 35, R. Atkin none for 28, J. Shirreff three for 32.

Toronto B:

Batting—C. Mills 0, W. K. Smith 2, L. Turner 1, J. Shirreff 64, D. Orr 13, A. Timms 7, F. Flook 5, H. Cameron 0, J. Gerrard 8, R. Atkin 0, J. Cox 2 not out; extras 1; total 103.

Fall of wickets—One for 1, two for 2, three for 19, four for 69, five for 80, six for 85, seven for 87, eight for 98, nine for 100, ten for 103.

Bowling—F. Brooks one wicket for 36 runs, B. Roberts two for 17, E. Cotton none for 23, R. Rollwagon one for 20, F. Dyer five for 16.

There is no match next Saturday, July 29. The match against Dentonia scheduled to be played in Toronto on that date has been postponed.

Places Second

TONAWANDA, N.Y., July 24—(CP) — George Reynolds, of Brockville, Sunday placed second and fourth in two Class 135 hydroplane events during inboard motor boat races at the third annual Swiftewater regatta. Bob Lueckenhoff, of Detroit, won both events—one of them using alcohol, the other gasoline. Both races were five miles long.

Stanley Sayres' Slo-Mo-Shun IV, which set a world's speedboat record of 160.32 miles an hour on the west coast last month, won all three heats to take the 90-mile gold cup race on the Detroit River Saturday.

Defending champion My Sweetie gave the Seattle racer a run until it blew an oil line in the second heat and had to retire.

Bandleader Guy Lombardo, driving Tempo VI, took second money, finishing third in the first heat and second in the other two.

My Sweetie set a lap mark of 86.2 miles an hour while Slo-Mo-Shun boosted the 30-mile heat mark to 80.161 from the 78.645 set by My Sweetie last year.

Morris Mite, owned by O. E. Corbeil of Montreal, came within three-fifths of a second of equalling the Canadian mile trotting record for a half-mile track at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto Saturday.

Driven by E. L'Heureux and racing against time, the son of Volomite was clocked in 2:05 3-5. He was paced by a track jeep.

The time erased the previous track record of 2:07 1-5 made by another Quebec trotter, Duke Volo, owned by Lucien Lachapelle of Sorel.

Behind the brilliant bowling of Harold Padmore who took nine wickets for 10 runs, a team representing Quebec Sunday defeated an Ontario cricket team by 47 runs and retained the Atholstan Trophy.

Total runs for the two-day mach were: Quebec 240 and Ontario 193. Innings scores were: Quebec 111, 130; Ontario 166, 27.

The trophy was donated by the late Lord Atholstan, owner of the Montreal Star, for annual championship play between Ontario and Quebec.

A squad of brawny policemen from Detroit swept to an easy victory over the Toronto police force Saturday in the 68th annual Toronto police games.

The Detroit track and field team piled up 113 points against 45 for Toronto.

A record 216 affiliations were approved during week-end sessions in Hamilton of the Ontario Softball Association executive committee.

Secretary Frank Feaver announced that all OSA series will wind up by Oct. 9, with the winner of the southern junior "A" series then travelling north for the final. The north-south juvenile "A" final will be played in southern Ontario.

To Market streaked to a five-length victory in the $67,350 Arlington futurity at Arlington Park Saturday.

Bugledrums was second in the rich event with Jumbo third. Sir Bee Bum finished fourth in a field of 14.

To Market, superbly ridden by Angel Rivera, sprinted the six furlongs in 1:13 3-5 over a slow, drying out track.

Noor, the dark conqueror from Ireland, picked up Saturday where he left off with Citation a month ago and captured the $50,000 American handicap.

An upstart young colt, Dharan, almost sent the red and white silks of the late Charles S. Howard trailing in the dust.

But the all-star combination of jockey Johnny Longden and Noor mustered a final burst of speed and hit the wire half a length ahead of Dharan and Nick Wall.

Noor packed the heaviest weight of his career—132 pounds, 30 more than Dharan—but came within a fifth of a second of the track record. He travelled the 1¼ miles in 2:00 1-5.

Bethany Boys Win

BETHANY, July 24 (ENS) — Bethany defeated Janetville 14-9 Friday night in a North Durham Baseball League fixture to claim first place. Edmunds hurled steady ball for the homesters' final game with Reynolds receiving and held Janetville scoreless for the first three innings. Ross McGill started for Janetville, lasting three innings when Thompson took over. Gerald McGill received throughout.

Two Exhibition Games

Harold Dormer's Orphans have two exhibition games this week with the strong Mutual squad at the Bowl Tuesday and Thursday nights at 8.30. These games are intended to keep the Orphans in shape for the junior OASA playdowns. With the juniors are: Bigford, Doris, Hall, Riches and Ash as pitchers; Griffin and McGrath, catching infielders; Evans, Grafstein, Pammett, Thompson, and Casey; and outfielders: Floyd, Wyatt and Lea Sullivan.

East City Loses To UEW For Second Spot

UEW trounced East City 14-6 at the Bowl on Saturday night to close the City Softball League schedule in second place, behind Mutuals and ahead of East City, with Orphans in the cellar. A small crowd saw a loose contest with the victors too strong at the plate, as they pounded Terry Woods and Haddy Eakins for 20 safeties. These included two doubles by Legrow and doubles by Taylor, White and Thomson. The losers got 11 bingles off Gordon, who was steady, including homers by Sullivan and Scriver, a triple by Woods and two doubles by Wade.

Legrow led the UEW squad at bat with four for five, as Hall got four in six and Taylor three in five tries. White having three for six. Sullivan topped East City with three in five tries, Wade and Cournyea each having two for five. The losers reeled off a neat double play, Wade to Cournyea. They had eight miscues to four for the other squad in a so-so struggle.

CAHA Organizes New Series For Sr. Hockey

TORONTO, July 24 (CP)—The Allan Cup, symbol of senior hockey supremacy in Canada for 42 years, appears to have shed most of its glamor and glory. In its place is a trophy—as yet unnamed—to be competed for by only a few of the higher-bracket senior teams.

A special weekend meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association instituted a major series, open only to CAHA-designated leagues—the Cape Breton, Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario and Western Canada seniors. Final touches were to be supplied today when the CAHA executive meets professional interests.

The major series was formed after hours of discussion. Some delegates termed it "one of the biggest things the association has ever embarked upon" and others labelled it "segregation" of the sport in Canada. As constituted, the major series will consist of about 18 teams.

Must Keep Cup

Delegates from all sections of Canada were adamant on one point—that the Allan Cup must not lose its identity as symbolic of the Canadian senior championship. The major series will be labelled "senior."

But it leaves Allan Cup competition to teams who have had no hope of winning the trophy and who would have little drawing power in Metropolitan arenas. The CAHA executive said it is probable the association will underwrite next year's play-offs.

The major series, which eliminates the possibility of play-offs in May by weeding out the numerous weaker clubs, in effect has the status of a semi-pro outfit. Players will sign a contract, almost similar to that in the National Hockey League, and will be paid a minimum salary of $1,000 a year.

Alberta and British Columbia delegates alone voted against the new series, to be operated along lines of the Allan and Memorial Cups with east and west champions, playing for the Dominion title.

D. P. MacDonald, of Calgary, president of the Western Canada Senior League, said the major series will rob the CAHA of its national character.

"The Allan Cup will be relegated from its proud position in the world of sport and I am not sure the people of Canada will take kindly to it."

Ontario, smashing all records in Willingdon cup competition, captured the interprovincial golf championship at Mount Pruno, Montreal 11 years ago today with 583 strokes, 13 under the previous record. Ontario has won the cup 11 times, retaining it this year with 581 strokes, three over the all-time record set by British Columbia in 1948.

Phils Romp Into First Cool Off Cincinnati Twice

By RALPH RODEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phils' Whiz Kids are performing beyond manager Eddie Sawyer's fondest expectations.

Sawyer, who brought his young charges home a surprise third last season, said in the spring he would settle for an encore this year.

At the moment it appears the Phils will better their 1949 deeds. In many quarters the Phils are looked upon as the next National League champions.

The lone fly in the ointment is the imminent departure of Curt Simmons, 21year-old star lefthander, for a 14-day tour of duty with the National Guard. During this spell the Phils are at home for 17 games.

Simmons recorded his 13th victory Sunday as the Phils cooled off Cincinnati Reds in a doubleheader and gained undisputed possession of first place in the National League.

Simmons turned back the Reds 12-4 in the opener. The Phils took the second 7-4 behind Russ Meyer and Jim Konstanty to snap their tie with St. Louis Cardinals for the top rung. The Cards downed Boston Braves 8-4.

Really Clicking

Simmons scattered 10 hits and fanned seven while his mates came up with a 15-hit attack that included a pair of homers by Willie Jones and one apiece by Andy Seminick and Del Ennis.

Eddie Waitkus was the big gun for the Phils in the nightcap. He smashed a double and four singles, drove in two runs and scored two.

The loss dumped the Braves out of third into fourth place with Brooklyn Dodgers moving up. The Dodgers outslugged Pittsburgh Pirates 11-6. The Bums broke a 6-6 tie with a four-run rally in the eighth that Gil Hodges featured with a three-run homer. Jackie Robinson contributed a homer, double and three singles to Brooklyn's 18-hit bombardment.

Sheldon Jones, knocked out in each of his last four starts, turned in the pitching gem of the day—a 3-0, one-hit victory for New York Giants over Chicago Cubs in the second game of a doubleheader. Rube Walker doubled with two out in the eighth to spoil the no-hit bid.

The Giants also won the first game, 5-3, with Wes Westrum knocking in three runs, one on his 16th homer.

Stage Rally

In the equally-close American League pennant scramble, the pace-setting Detroit Tigers staged a two-out ninth-inning rally to whip the runner-up New York Yankees, 6-5. The victory boosted the Tigers' edge to 1½ games.

Bob Lemon became the majors' biggest winner as he turned in his 15th triumph for Cleveland Indians who beat Washington Senators, 6-2. The Indians scored all their runs in the first three innings.

Boston Red Sox also did their scoring early in beating St. Louis Browns 6-2. The Sox scored all their runs in the first two frames with Don DiMaggio and Bobby Doerr driving in three runs apiece.

Philadelphia vacated last place in favor of the Browns by taking a twin bill from Chicago White Sox, 2-1 and 5-4.

Canadian Oarsmen Win 2 U.S. Titles

PHILADELPHIA, July 24 (CP)—Canadian oarsmen won two U.S. singles titles in the 76th national rowing championships here this weekend.

Both are youngsters whose performances were listed as upsets. Jack Guest, Jr., son of a former diamond sculls winner for Canada, scored in the senior singles Saturday, while Tom Smith, of Hamilton, won the 145-pound singles in a brilliant finish.

Guest, 17-year-old Canadian schoolboy champion who attends Etobicoke Collegiate Institute, Toronto, took his honors over a field of nine to win his way into the American championship class.

Orioles Sweep Twin Bill From Springfield

By The Associated Press.

A little world series atmosphere will hover over Baltimore's Municipal Stadium tonight when the International League's pace-setting Rochester Red Wings take on the runner-up Orioles in a twilight double-header which opens a six-game series.

The Orioles, who cut the Wings' lead to three games Sunday, will shoot Russ Bauers (7-2) and Ray Poat (5-3) against the Wings who are expected to counter with rookie Ken Wild (6-1) and veteran lefthander Mike Schultz (3-3).

The teams play another doubleheader Tuesday night and the important series concludes with single games Wednesday and Thursday.

Baltimore swept a doubleheader from Springfield Cubs Sunday, 2-1 and 5-4, while the Wings divided with the last place Buffalo Bisons, winning the opener 7-4 but dropping the nightcap 4-2.

Bill Kennedy, ace Oriole lefthander, scattered seven Cub hits in outpitching Allan Ihde in the opener for his 11th triumph. In the finale Joe Payne started for Baltimore but was lifted in the fourth in favor of Ray Shore who saved the verdict for him.

Sixth Victory

Johnny Wittig with help from Jackie Collum, picked up his sixth victory in the opener at Buffalo. Ed Mierkowicz, a former Bison, won the game with a three-run homer. Veteran Jake Wade stopped the Red Wings on eight scattered hits in out-duelling young Jack Fasholz in the aftermath.

Montreal's third-place Royals divided with Toronto Maple Leafs. The Royals won the second game 2-1 after losing the opener 3-1.

Jim Hughes, with help from relief ace Ronnie Lee, squared his record at 2-2 in the nightcap. Don Robertson and Jocko Thompson set the Royals down on seven safeties in the first game with Robertson gaining the victory.

Jersey City Giants and Syracuse Chiefs also divided a doubleheader. Giants won the opener 2-0 and Chiefs grabbed the nightcap 4-3.

Mawhinney Captures New Golf Title

SASKATOON GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB, July 24 (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Golf Championship today rested in the capable hands of 21-year-old Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver.

The west coast star, a former Canadian junior champion, Saturday blasted pre-tournament predictions and submerged the favored Nick Weslock of Windsor, under a 6 and 4 decision.

The final 36-hole match play round of the tournament was little short of a rout. At the end of the 18-hole morning round Mawhinney was seven holes up and twice during the day the margin was eight.

Mawhinney took the first four holes in the morning and that was as close as Weslock ever got. He tried desperately to catch up but in the face of Mawhinney's steady golf Nick's cause was about hopeless although his game improved in the last few holes.

Weslock's main weakness was his second shots. He played both irons and woods poorly and his collapse was inexplicable. He was off line, out of bounds and in traps with almost monotonous regularity.

He was 12 over par for the 22 holes played, while Mawhinney's medal score was only four over par. Mawhinney had a medal par at 22 holes. Nick could collect only 13 pars.

MACKENZIE KING ONE OF CANADA'S GREATEST STATESMEN

Leaves Imprint of Stature On Dominion, Commonwealth Nations

By The Canadian Press

William Lyon Mackenzie King, during more than a quarter century as leader of the Liberal party, gained world stature as did no Canadian before his time and lived to see the imprint of his political and social thought deeply engraved on Canada. His long tenure of office as prime minister and the fact that its latter period spanned the upheaval of the Second Great War made him an elder among the leaders of the nations.

His imprint on Canada, which in some respects applied to other nations of the British Commonwealth, came from his leadership in social reform, his championship of national rather than imperial concepts in the status and relationships of the countries of the Commonwealth, and his efforts to establish Canada as a leader of the so-called "Middle Nations."

No other Canadian in the years encompassed by his career was more highly praised or more bitterly attacked. His followers called him the greatest single force for unity in the Dominion, a great conciliator and world statesman, a master politician unequalled as a party leader. His opponents accused him of splitting the country by opposing conscription in the Second Great War, of political opportunism, of fostering disunity by pleasing no faction wholly and by leaving basic issues unsolved.

Frequent Compromise

He was often criticized during his years of leadership for his lack of "color" and for his quiet method of government by compromise. He was, on most occasions, a flat and belaboring speaker, lacking nearly all those qualities supposed to mean vote-getting glamor in a public leader. Yet Canadians elected him again and again. Perhaps the key to his method of heading a nation was the fact that he trod carefully, slowly, to all outward appearance, letting events shape themselves. Then when he did act he did it firmly, even though his course might be, and often was, a compromise.

Mr. King reached the twilight of his historic political career in 1948.

Then an ailing 74, he drove through the captal's first snow on a bleak November day to the governor-general's residence to tender his resignation as prime minister. He was promptly succeeded by Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, 66, the brilliant Quebec corporation lawyer who had entered the cabinet in 1941.

Notable Record

With that last official act, Mr. King ended a commonwealth record of 21 years, five months and five days in office. He had served longer than any other prime minister in commonwealth history.

He sat in the last session of the 20th parliament and spoke in the House only once, and that briefly, when the legislation to cement the union of Canada and Newfoundland was adopted. He had been one of the major figures in the steps leading up to the union.

He did not contest the 1949 general election. He retired to his great grey-stoned home on Ottawa's quiet Laurier Avenue to begin a task he often had spoken of—the sorting, cataloguing and sifting of the many private and state papers which were to become his memoirs.

His retirement came at a time of illness traced to the strains of leading the government through the war years, though he had hinted as far back as 1945, during the general election campaign of that year, that he intened to give up office.

He clung to the Liberal leadership until the party, at his request called a national convention into being Aug. 5, 1948. Then, two days later—on Aug. 7, the 29th anniversary of his own election to the leadership — he saw the delegates choose Mr. St. Laurent, the man he was known to favor, as the new Liberal leader.

Ill in London

With the actual transfer of office only weeks away, Mr. King went overseas to attend the Paris meetings of the United Nations and the later London discussions of the Commonwealth prime ministers.

He spoke before the U.N., then journeyed to London where he was stricken with an ailment of the blood circulation and sent to bed for nearly four weeks. Weakened, but still on his feet, he returned to Ottawa early in November and a week later—on Nov. 15 — tendered his resignation as prime minister.

When Mr. King was 70 years old on Dec. 17, 1944, he was able to look back on more than 25 years in the leadership of the Liberal party, a longer time in such a post than any other leader in the Empire then living. He then had been prime minister more than 17 years, a period surpassed by only one other prime minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, who led the country for almost 20 years.

Looking back then on the somewhat straitened circumstances of his family in his youth, and the series of events which led him into politics, he remarked: "It is better to be born lucky than rich."

If 1944 was a milepost in Mr. King's life the year 1945 was one of his most active. For it was then that this 70-year-old bachelor rose to the highest peak of his influence in Canada and moved out on the world stage as one of its seasoned and veteran performers.

An Historic Year

Into 1945 he crammed two sessions of parliament, a victory in a general election, a share in shaping the World Security Organization at the San Francisco Conference, a trip to London for conference with the British government, participation in the making of the joint Canadian-British-American policy on the control of atomic energy in a meeting at Washington, and a Dominion-Provincial conference which undertook the job of revising the framework of confederation in its financial aspects.

It was in 1945, too, that the prime minister first spoke of retirement. He announced during the election campaign that he did not intend to run in another general election and that he would retire before the dissolution of the new parliament. But a year later he modified that declaration, telling a press conference that when the time approached he would "consider whether to reconsider" the decision.

In mid-February of 1947 Mr. King suffered his first serious illness, a heavy cold which approached the pneumonia stage, and for a brief time it was thought possible he might have to give up public life. However, a three-week holiday in the southern United States following convalescence at home restored the then 72-year-old prime minister to health.

In June of that year he completed a record 20 years as prime minister, outdistancing the tenure of Sir John A. Macdonald, and then set his sights on equalling, 11 months hence, the Commonwealth record for a prime ministership, established in the 18th century by Britain's Sir Robert Walpole.

Headed For Paris

In 1946, Mr. King headed a Canadian delegation to the Paris peace conference, where treaties of the peace—later ratified by the Canadian parliament — were drawn up for the enemy satellite states of Italy, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

Mr. King's world influence in the year which marked the end of the Second Great War arose partly from the fact that of three closely-associated leaders of the English-speaking world in the critical days of the conflict he

King Remained A Student All His Life

OTTAWA, July 24 — (CP) — Little has been written of Mackenzie King's youth. He was a home-loving boy and studious from his earliest years. John King, his father, practised law for a time in Berlin, Ont. (now Kitchener) but had earlier edited a newspaper and was a prominent essayist. The King children were reared in a scholarly atmosphere with the family library the popular meeting place.

After completing studies at the local schools Mackenzie King went to University of Toronto as an undergraduate in arts and law. He won a fellowship at the University of Chicago where he began a post-graduate course in political economy in 1896.

From his mother, for whom he held a devotion approaching worship, King imbibed the traditions and spirit of his grandfather. His mother was born in the penury and isolation of exile following the armed uprising which forced her father, William Lyon Mackenzie, to seek sanctuary in the United States.

During his student years "Willie King" had little idea of a political career. His mind was fixed upon the teaching profession. He went to Harvard on a political science fellowship in 1897 and there won a travelling fellowship which was to take him round the world before settling down to a position as instructor in political economy, at the University. But he gave up that prospect for a deputy minister's post at Ottawa which led him eventually into politics.

Cared For Family

When he went to Ottawa in 1900 his father John King had taken up residence in Toronto where he practised law and lectured at Osgoode Hall. There were two sisters and a brother, Dr. Macdougall King. First break in the circle came when his unmarried sister died in 1915.

John King had suffered from failing sight and in 1913 became totally blind. He died in 1916 and Mrs. King, seriously ailing, went to Ottawa to live with her son.

Dr. Macdougall King, an Ottawa physician, was stricken with tuberculosis and forced to give up his profession to seek a cure in Colorado. Mackenzie King took over the care of his sister-in-law and her twin sons. Dr. King later resumed practise in Denver, where he died in 1922. On Dec. 18, 1917, Mr. King's mother died in Ottawa.

Soon after he assumed leadership of the Liberal party Mr. King moved into the spacious former residence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, given by Lady Laurier. There, with only servants and an Irish terrier, "Pat", to keep him company, King lived in privacy broken only by occasional modest dinners and receptions, or visits from his relatives. Later he bought a county estate in Kingsmere, 20 miles from the capital. There he maintained two houses, one for winter use and the other for summer, and spent considerable money in beautification and conservation.

Liberal Leader Conscientious About Work

OTTAWA, July 24—(CP)—A little less than medium height Mackenzie King's square-built stocky figure, inclined to portliness, and his often-unruly fair straight hair gave him a boyish appearance at times even in later life.

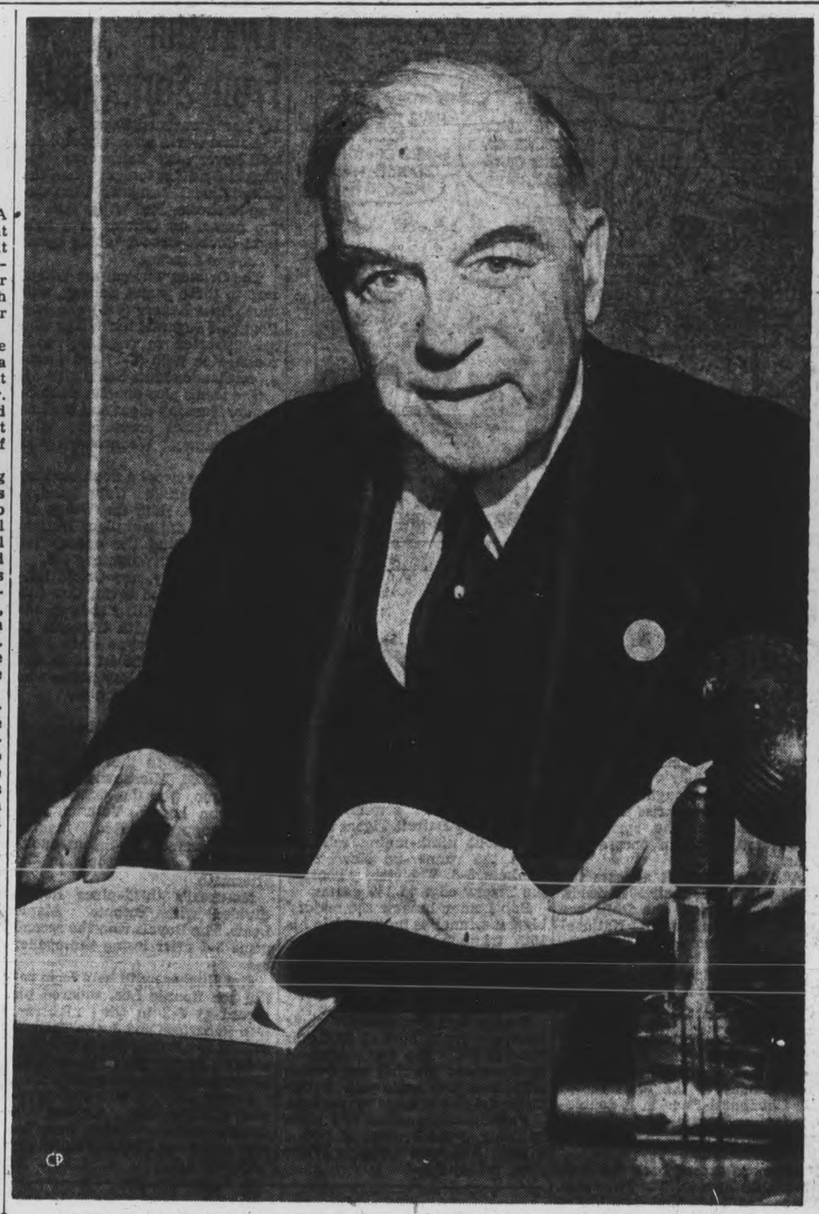
Generally of serious mien he became known to his friends as a man with a ready smile and at rare intervals a flashing humor. A stickler for procedure and ethics he made every statement and written report a subject of painstaking preparation.

As Prime Minister, Mr. King had relatively few close friends but he was a friendly person to meet whether in large or small gatherings. He enjoyed social contacts but during the Second Great War years to conserve his energy and time dropped practically all his social engagements, although he attended the 35th anniversary of his barber in 1945. A non-smoker and a moderate user of liquor, he cut out the latter during the war.

He developed the habit of doing much of his work at his home where he always kept a secretarial staff. This enabled him to get more rest since he was able to dispose of a lot of the day's work before leaving the house in the morning. He took almost all his meals at home.

Always a careful and conscientious worker he learned to attach great importance to rest. Once, when asked how he stood the strain, he attributed it to the fact that he did not allow himself to become over-tired. He learned the trick of being able to lie down at any time of the day or night and sleep for an hour or two, awakening refreshed and ready for more work. In parliamentary debates and in his personal dealing with colleagues and political foes alike he was always courteous and friendly although unyielding in adherence to his convictions.

Although he was awarded the GMC in 1906 King as prime minister was opposed to the granting of titular honors and adhered to the parliamentary resolution adopted before he first came to office, asking his Majesty not to confer titles upon Canadians.



STUDY OF A LEADER — This camera portrait of William Lyon Mackenzie King was one of the best taken in recent years. The slight smile and wisp of hair wandering over his forehead were characteristic of the man who was Canada's prime minister for so many years.

Great Politician Visited Other Lands Many Times

OTTAWA, July 24—(CP)—Mackenzie King made his first trip abroad when he won a travelling fellowship at Harvard University at the close of the last century. After that he made many voyages to Europe.

Meetings of the Imperial Conference in London, the League of Nations in Geneva, the coronation of King George VI, and other events took him to Great Britain and the Continent on numerous occasions.

In the years immediately preceding the Second Great War Mr. King found it increasingly difficult to get away from Ottawa. From 1935 to 1940 he did not visit his constituency in Saskatchewan and he made only one coast-to-coast Canadian trip as minister in attendance upon King George during the royal tour. He made only six platform speeches in the 1940 election, two of them in Prince Albert.

It became his custom, either late fall or early spring, to get in a week or two in Georgia or Virginia where he spent his time walking, reading, absorbing sunshine and attending to correspondence with the secretary who accompanied him.

Trip to Britain

During the Second Great War Mr. King opposed formation of an Imperial war cabinet and declared the modern means of communication and travel made this unnecessary. Surrounded by his colleagues and technical experts in Ottawa he felt himself in a better position to reach decisions on behalf of Canada than if he were in London separated from such assistance.

In August, 1941, he flew by bomber to the United Kingdom, and flew back the following month. He had never flown before but stood both flights well In London he attended meetings of the British cabinet and held long conferences with Prime Minister Churchill.

Mr. King attended a Canadian army sports event in Aldershot which was already under way in teeming rain when the prime minister arrived almost half-an-hour late. Out in mid-field, a crack guard of Montreal's Black Watch, sodden from the downpour stood to attention. From the thousands of Canadian soldiers in the covered stands broke a greeting of mingled cheers and boos as the prime minister entered the field.

More Overseas Trips

The year 1944 found him again in Britain, this time attending a meeting of British Commonwealth Prime Ministers. He paid visits to the Canadian Army, then preparing for the invasion of the continent at strictly secret assembly points in southern England and to the Royal Canadian Air Force Bomber Camp, then bombing Germany from stations in Yorkshire. On this as on the earlier occasion Mr. King travelled to and from Britain by air.

During the war he did comparatively little travelling in Canada but made several trips to Washington for meetings with the late President Roosevelt. The United Nations conference at San Francisco required him to make two trans-continental trips in 1945. He went for the opening, returned to Canada for the election campaign and returned to the conference at the end to sign the charter on behalf of Canada.

In the autumn he went to England for private discussions with Prime Minister Attlee and members of the Labor government which had taken office since his previous contacts with British authorities.

Former Prime Minister Did Much To Improve Conditions For Labor

OTTAWA, July 24—(CP)—Political life brought Mackenzie King his share of failures and disappointments but compensation came in the form of two of the greatest party victories in Canadian electoral history. Among the proudest of his achievements in international affairs was his part in the Imperial Economic Conference of 1926 when Canada and other Dominions were declared free and independent nations within the Commonwealth, a declaration embodied in the Statute of Westminster in 1931.

Conclusion of a reciprocal trade agreement with the United States in 1935 was another milestone in Mr. King's international career.

In his years as deputy minister of labor he worked arduously for better conditions between workmen and their employers, particularly seeking the establishment of an eight-hour day. During that period he settled some 40 labor disputes.

Experience with a coal mine strike in southern Alberta in the winter, when consumers suffered great hardships from lack of fuel, convinced Mr. King that legislation was needed to guard against a recurrence.

Mr. King drafted the Industrial Disputes Act which compelled submission of industrial disputes to machinery of conciliation before there could be any stoppages ot work by strike or lockout.

Return In 1926

The Liberal return to power in 1926 was followed by a short period of prosperity but the great world economic depression struck in 1929 and in 1930 the government met parliament under pressure of widespread unemployment and demands from the provinces for assistance.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett was then leader of the Conservative opposition. He urged assistance to the provinces to meet the unemployment problem and high tariffs to protect Canadian industry. During debate on relief Mr. King made the declaration that he would not give "a five-cent piece" from the federal treasury to a province with a Conservative government—a statement which was frequently quoted in subsequent campaigns and debates.

Outstanding activity of the Liberal leader during his five years in opposition from 1930 to 1935 was his fight against the Empire trade agreements negotiated at the Ottawa Imperial Conference of 1932. All Liberals but one voted against the agreements.

Come-back of 1935

The five years following Mr. King's return to power in 1935 brought a sequence of historic events. Empire trade agreements were renewed, a reciprocal trade agreement negotiated with the United States. Mr. King travelled to London and the continent and had a conference with Hitler, then Chancellor of Germany.

Death of King George V, accession and later abdication of Edward VIII, and coronation of George VI all had their repercussions in Canada.

War brought sorrow and heavy burdens to Mr. King who, at 65, plunged into the task of leading his country into a great conflict for which it was little prepared. The swift sequence of events in Europe during the first year of war, all bringing new and heavier tasks to Canada, seemed to give new strength to the prime minister and he worked long hours with little apparent fatigue.

Be No Memoirs Mail Kept King Too Busy

OTTAWA, July 24 (CP). — There will be no memoirs by William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Persons high and low kept him too busy with a worldwide correspondence to allow the former prime minister really to get around to the major task of his retirement.

Others will write volumes out of the wealth of papers he left behind—two men are working on them now—but Mr. King died on Saturday with little written by himself about his long career.

A constant stream of mail from Canadians as well as people of other lands combined with the limited strength of advancing age to rule out any autobiography.

Fred A. McGregor, the former combines commissioner, who returned to Mr. King's side last year to help with the memoirs, said Sunday the death means a great loss to the work that ultimately will emerge.

Change Character

It will change its character, Mr. McGregor said, because death means that the work will not be autobiographical but biographical. It means that Mr. McGregor and Fred Gibson, the historian who is working on the task too, will not be able to go to Mr. King himself to discuss issues that emerge in his papers.

They will have to draw their own conclusions. They will have to write what he might have written.

Mr. Gibson is working at the Dominion archives on public papers Mr. King had already sent there. Mr. McGregor is working at Laurier House, Mr. King's home, on more intimate and personal papers. He said they, too, will later go to the archives.

The work is being financed by the Rockefeller Foundation of the United States through McGill University.

Ex-Prime Minister Published 3 Books

OTTAWA, July 24 — (CP) — Three volumes were published by Mackenzie King during his career. The first, "The Secret of Heroism," appearing in, 1906, was a memoir to a college friend and later associate in the department of labor, Henry Albert Harper, who died trying to save a woman from drowning in the Ottawa river. Mr. King was instrumental in having a monument to Harper placed on Parliament Hill.

In 1918, largely as a result of his findings while engaged in industrial research for the Rockefeller Foundation, Mr. King published "Industry and Humanity," a study in the principles underlying industrial reconstruction.

King's third volume "The Message of the Carillon and other Addresses," came out in 1927, the year Canada celebrated the 60th anniversary of Confederation. It was a collection of his speeches dealing with the significance of Confederation and other national events.

Great Leader Lone Ranger Few Really Knew Him

KINGSMERE, Que., July 24 — (CP).—For one last time, they all talked of the controversial, enigmatic man who was William Lyon Mackenzie King.

He died here Saturday night in the utter quiet of a summer home among the trees, but the talk was all across the country, among the people who had talked of him so many times before, sometimes in the strong, partisan words of politics, in the wild and swaying opinions of crises that came and went.

There wasn't much talking here. Only muted voices on the lawns outside the unostentatious wooden house.

But three miles or so down the road in old Chelsea a man sat on the steps of the village grocery store and yarned about the man who used to walk along the road under the great, green trees, bidding good-day to people, while his chauffeur drove slowly along ahead until Mr. King was ready to climb in and drive the rest of the way into Ottawa.

He laughed about the day Mr. King stopped in the village and a visitor gave him an earful about the government, not knowing how close the government was, and he said Mr. King was amused. The visitor was nonplussed, the man said, when he learned what he had done, but Mr. King only laughed.

In the each block of the Parliament Buildings they will talk of the strong, shrewd taskmaster who sometimes forgot that subordinates had wives and families, who ruled the cabinet with an iron hand and scented the winds of public opinion with some inherent talent no political contemporary could match.

All across the country the people would talk of him and think of him, of the aloof and distant man so few men knew, of the bachelor who seldom came near to the people yet knew their thinking better than they did themselves.

Caretaker Frank Kelly, said Mr. King was a quiet man, who liked his solitude, who let few people inside himself.

"He was a lone ranger," Frank Kelly said.

Say King Leaves Sizeable Estate

OTTAWA, July 24 — CP)—Former Prime Minister Mackenzie King had little opportunity to amass a fortune, but is believed to have left a sizeable estate.

When he first came to Ottawa he bought some land in Kingsmere, 20 miles from Ottawa in the Gatineau Mills, where he built his summer home. It was there he died.

Through the years he added to his holdings, and at his death had about 500 acres and two houses built for winter and summer use.

In Ottawa he owned the old four-story stone home on Laurier Ave., Laurier House, willed to him by Lady Laurier, widow of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who had preceded him in the Liberal leadership.

Value of that property might not be great because of its age, but it is filled with objects of art and furniture on which antique dealers might place a high value.

Mr. King was known to have placed a great value on his paintings and furniture and art pieces, and in recent months he told a friend one of his immediate tasks was to provide a fitting distribution of them on his death.

Cements Anglo-American Understanding

Never Ceased Work For Strong Canadian Role Internationally

OTTAWA, July 24 — (CP) — Mackenzie King worked for, and gained in a wide measure, recognition as a strong factor in maintenance of Anglo-American friendship and understanding.

On Christmas Day, 1941, after Prime Minister Churchill had dramatically arrived at the White House, Mr. King went to Washington as the guest of the president and joined in their discussions.

First result of his meeting with Churchill was the announcement that the British Prime Minister would visit Ottawa. A few days later Mr. King was privileged to present Churchill to a hastily called special sitting of parliament for an address to the members of the war committee of the cabinet.

On more than one occasion Mr. King, as prime minister, welcomed President Roosevelt to Canada but the most historic of these visits occurred in August, 1938, when Roosevelt came to Kingston for an honorary degree, then drove with Mr. King to share with him in the dedication of the international bridge across the St. Lawrence River at Ivy Lea, near Gananoque.

On receiving his degree from Queen's University that day President Roosevelt made the declaration that if Canada should be menaced by a foreign power the United States would be at her side in resisting invasion.

Prepared For War

This set the policy the two countries were to follow when war came. Even before the United States entered the war or was threatened Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. King met at Ogdensburg, New York, and agreed on the establishment of a Canada-United States joint defence board.

Another historic meeting between the two leaders was at Mr. Roosevelt's home at Hyde Park, N.Y., from which came the Hyde Park declaration announcing a pooling of the economic resources of the two countries.

Mr. King's relations with Mr. Churchill were equally intimate. He was not in on the top secret planning of war operations carried out by Churchill and Roosevelt together and sometimes with Premier Stalin of Russia but he was not far out of it. On the basis of Canada's war contribution Mr. King felt he might have claimed a place but he refrained from doing so because that would have given rise to claims from other United Nations and high strategy could not be settled in large meetings.

He was present at, but not in, the two Churchill-Roosevelt conferences held at Quebec City in 1943 and 1944 where some of the great decisions of the war were taken. He acted as host on behalf of Canada and had frequent talks with the two leaders.

Post-War Policy

As attention turned from the actual conduct of the war to the shaping of plans for the post-war world Mr. King insisted on Canada's voice being heard to a greater degree than in the strategy councils. He realized that as, in connection with war matters, it would not be possible for all countries to have an equal say in dealing with certain post-war problems. He enunciated the "functional principle" in regard to representation on international bodies. It was that these countries which had the greatest contribution to make to the solution of a particular problem should form the executive body dealing with that problem.

The San Francisco conference brought Canada's new position in world affairs out clearly and provided a test for the functional principle. King and the Canadian delegation did not go so far as other smaller states in challenging the right of the big powers to order the world, but did fight for and attain greater recognition for the claims of middle powers.

WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING'S LIFE STORY TOLD IN PICTURES

DEVOTED SON — Throughout her lifetime, Isabel Grace King, youngest daughter of William Lyon Mackenzie, who was exiled for his leadership in the responsible government rebellion of 1837, received the earnest devotion of her eldest son. This is one of the best photos of Mr. King with his mother and father, taken at Scarboro Fair in 1911 when Mr. King was 26. John King, KC, his father, was an able lawyer.

BECOMES LEADER — It was a sincere, earnest person who was chosen by the Liberals of Canada to succeed their great leader Sir Wilfrid Laurier following his death in 1919. At that time Mr. King, a former minister of labor, was comparatively unknown to Canadians. This photo was taken as he assumed the leadership of the party.

QUEBEC CONFERENCE — One of the most important conferences in Canada during the Second World War was the first meeting in Quebec City of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin Roosevelt in 1943. Held in the historic Citadel the talks mapped future strategy of the war. Mr. King, not only acted as host for the parley, but took an active role in the discussions. He is shown here with the two great wartime leaders of the Allies.

FUTURE LEADER— When his parents recorded the childhood of William Lyon Mackenzie King, shown here seated astride a rocking horse at the age of two, they little thought their son would grow up to become prime minister of Canada. Not only did he become prime minister but he served in that office for 21 years, five months and eight days — a total of 7,829 days, longer than any other person has been prime minister in the Commonwealth.

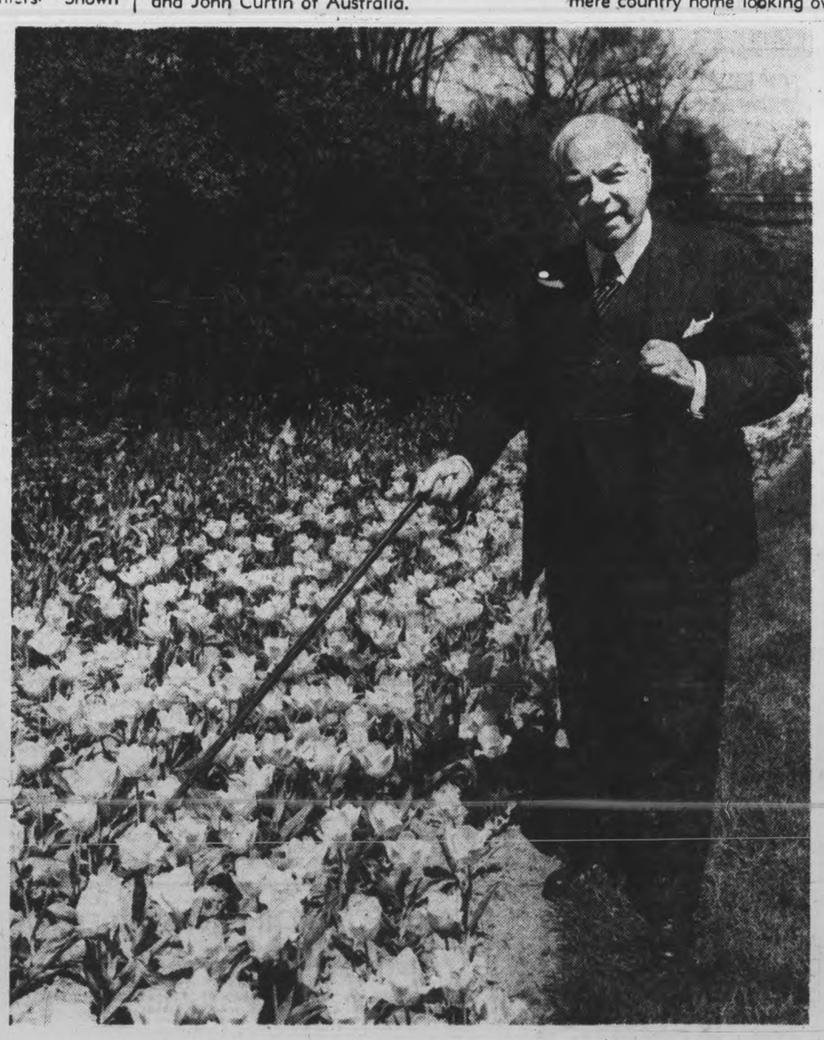
DOG LOVER — Mr. King was a great lover of dogs but confined his choice to one variety — the Irish Terrier. He also kept to one name — Pat. After Mr. King assumed office as prime minister he always had Pat as a companion on his long walks in the Ottawa countryside. The present dog is Pat III, the other two having died. This photo by Karsh of Ottawa shows Mr. King with Pat III at his Kingsmere country home looking over the Gatineau Valley.

YOUNG CAMPAIGNER—Following his graduation from University of Toronto, Mr. King worked on Toronto newspapers as a reporter and later as a special writer on social conditions. It was a result of his articles Sir Wilfrid Laurier picked him as Canada's first deputy minister of labor. In 1908 he was promoted to labor minister and contested his first election campaign in Berlin, now Kitchener, that year. This photo shows him emphasizing a point during a campaign speech.

CONSCRIPTION ISSUE — One of the bitterest political battles Mr. King waged during his long career in the House of Commons was the conscription issue during the Second World War. The government during the early years depended on voluntary enlistment. As the war continued, many Canadians advocated conscription while others opposed it. In 1942 Mr. King called for a plebiscite to free the government from its anti-conscription pledge. This photo shows Mr. King surrounded by autograph seeking children as he emerged after casting his ballot. The results favored the release of the administration from its pledge.

IN LONDON IN 1925 Mr. King is seen at one of the social events in connection with the Empire Conference. At this conference and the one immediately succeeding it the status of Canada and other Dominions changed and the British Commonwealth of Nations took form.



LOVER OF OTTAWA where he was for years recognized more as an elder citizen than prime minister, Mr. King took a keen interest in the development and growth of Canada's capital. He was largely responsible for much of the progress which has been made in laying out the city. He is shown here in the spring of 1946 looking over the beautiful beds of tulips on Parliament Hill.

ROYAL TOUR—One of the highlights of Mr. King's years as prime minister was the tour of Canada by King George and Queen Elizabeth in 1939. The visit of the King and Queen marked the first time in history reigning monarchs crossed the ocean to visit citizens of a Commonwealth country. Mr. King acted as official guide for the entire tour. This photo shows Their Majesties with Mr. King at Banff.

Edmund Gwenn Example For Other Stars

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, July 24 (AP) —Edmund Gwenn, wracked with a virus infection that would have sent a younger actor to bed, sat in his dressing room ready for work.

Although pain was stabbing him between the shoulders, the 72-year-old smiled quietly at the movie kids who paraded past his door to sneak a look at the man who played Santa Claus. Gwenn was awaiting a call to the set of "For Heaven's Sake," his fifth big picture in a row.

"I think it was my athletic youth that keeps me going," He said. "I was quite an amateur athlete, you know. . .

"Also, I came from good stock. My father and mother were extremely healthy, my mother especially. Anything I may have achieved I owe to her."

"Santa Claus" Reminisces

Gwenn now is in his 55th year as an actor and he reminisced over his early days in England.

"It was George Bernard Shaw who virtually was the sponsor of my career," he mused. "I had been around London, doing a few little roles but not getting very far. Quite by surprise, Shaw wrote me and said he had part for me in his new play, 'Man And Superman.' That was what first brought me to attention.

"A person easily gets typed in our business, Nowadays I am typed as Santa Claus."

Gwenn keeps a vigorous schedule at an age when most men have retired to putter in the garden. I asked him if he ever thought he'd quit.

Gwenn keeps a vigorous

"Good heavens, no," he replied. "I wouldn't know what to do without work. I'll keep acting as long as people wil put up with me."

Mountain Lures U.S. Climbers

VANCOUVER — (CP) — The sheer cliffs of Mt. Waddington, king of British Columbia's mountains, have beckoned a party of eight California mountaineers.

The 13,260-foot peak, 176 miles north of Vancouver, will be attacked by members of the Sierra Club of California, headed by Oscar Cook of San Francisco.

Six of the climbers will be flown into the mountainous area and 1,000 pounds of food and equipment will be flown in with the remaining two climbers. The attempt to scale the peak will begin as soon as weather clears.

After conquering Waddington —the climbers are sure of success — the party will climb neighboring mountains in the Tiedeman Glacier area. They will return here in six weeks.

Waddington is famed as the grave of a Vancouver Alpinist, Alec H. Dalgleish was killed in 1936 while attempting to climb the peak. He was buried on the mountain and a cairn erected to his memory.

Other members of the party are: Ray de Saussure, San Francisco; Bill Dunmire, San Lorenzo; Bill Long, El Sobranto; Richard Houston, Vallejo, and James Wilson, Phil Bettler and Al Steck, all of Berkeley.

Return From States After Fifty Years

SELWYN, July 24 (ENS). — Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Preston on Tuesday were Mrs. Stella Maxwell (nee Stella Arnott) of Carthage, NY, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Farney (nee Florence Arnott) of Castorland, NY, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sheley of Carthage, NY.

Mrs. Maxwell and Mrs. Farney are cousins of Mrs. Preston who lived in Lakefield more than 50 years ago. This was their first trip back to the home of their childhood, and they found things greatly changed in and around Lakefield. Their father, Mr. Arnott, was a tinsmith in Lakefield at one time.

From here they went on to visit other relatives around Dunsford and Omemee.

Selwyn News

Miss Ruth Wilson is spending a few days with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Jones of Omemee and her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Windrem, who is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Bell and Roy motored to Hamliton recently to spend the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Crapp. Enroute they left Mrs. Elizabeth Bell in Toronto where she intends to spend a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Millie Bradburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Seabrook and Mrs. Ruby Sanderson were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Fitzgerald.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McIlmoyl this week were Mr. and Mrs. Bert Tye of Toronto, Mrs. David Caison of Niagara-on-the-lake and Mrs. Alex Fyfe of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Dies In Jail After Drinking; Inquest Ordered

FENELON FALLS, July 24 — (ENS) — Following a drinking bout with two companions, James York, 46, Fenelon Falls, died Saturday on the floor of the Victoria County Jail, Lindsay.

An analysis is being made of the contents of his stomach and an inquest will be held.

Three local men—Robert Akister, Gratton Donaldson and York—had been drinking in a trailer owned by Akister. When complaints were received from nearby residents the men were arrested for creating a disturbance and taken to jail in Lindsay.

York was stricken after his arrest. He is being buried today in Fenelon Falls.

York was a veteran of the Second World War and a member of the Canadian Legion. He was a bachelor.

The funeral today will be from Cameron.

Bullet Wounds Lakefield Man

Ted Webster, 47, Lakefield, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital late Saturday afternoon with a bullet wound in his left side. Hospital authorities said today his condition is "good".

How the shooting occurred has not yet been explained. Provincial police at headquarters in Peterborough are investigating but will make no comment.

It is understood there were powder burns round the wound, believe caused by a .22 calibre rifle bullet.

Webster was visiting the home of his brother Arthur on the Oregon Trail, Harvey township, when the shooting occurred. He was some distance from the house when his brother's family heard a shot and then a cry.

He was taken to hospital by Dr. H. E. Gastle, Lakefield.

Trucker Fined $400 Takes Jail Term

A Wellington St. trucker was today fined $400 or one month in jail by Magistrate E. A. Gee when he was convicted of illegal possession of liquor.

Alvin Stoneburg chose the jail sentence, saying he didn't have enough money to pay the fine.

Crown Attorney John Bradshaw said: "We suspect bootlegging, but we can't prove it."

Stoneburg said he thought the fine was "too steep". His Worship said the government needs the money "for hospitals and roads".

Robert Tully Fowler

Rev. Dr. James Semple of George St. United Church conducted the funeral services of the late Robert Fowler from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons.

Mr. Fowler was born in North Monaghan, the son of John A. Fowler and Agnes Huggan. This family pioneered in North Monaghan east of Berry's Corners, where Mr. Fowler farmed for 40 years.

Pallbearers were Ira Robson, James Webber, Bruce Scott, Harvard White, Cecil Fowler and Norman Lillico, Sr.

Interment was in Little Lake Cemetery.

NO CANNING

Canada Packers in Peterborough will do no canning this year. Other CPC plants in Ontario will handle the work. District crops will be canned in Belleville, and as far as is known, no contracts for pea vineries have been let.

Prisoner Compliments Magistrate Believes Mimico Is A Nice Place

Mimico reformatory got a pat on the back from William Hanrahan of Lakefield today. Charged with his third offence of possessing liquor illegally. Hanrahan told Magistrate E. A. Gee:

"Mimico jail's a nice place, I'd like to go there."

Obligingly, His Worship sent Hanrahan down for six months.

When Hanrahan stood up, Magistrate Gee said: "I've seen you before."

"I've seen you, too," said Hanrahan, "and you haven't changed none."

Said his worship: "I may not have changed for the better. You know, this is your third offence, that means a holiday."

"I suppose so," Hanrahan said.

Favorite Disappoints Fans At Port Hope Race Track

By BOB HATTON

Two dollars to win on Miss Belle Gratton!

Almost all the more than 1,000 harness race fans who had gathered Saturday at the Port Hope racing track were pulling for the small Port Hope mare. They were backing their wishes with cash at four to two odds on what amounted to a para mutuel, for the second time at the Port Hope track.

In a day which saw many close races and fast running, Miss Belle Gratton had finished a miserable last in two heats by balking at the starts and refusing to run. But in the second heat, after the yield was more than half a lap ahead of her, she put on such a bust of speed for about a lap, that she stole the crowd's interest from the race itself.

Many of the fans knew that last year Miss Belle Gratton had been such an eager starter, she had hit her nose on the mobile starting gate. From then on, she had refused to start a race. But the crowd hoped that at last the Belle had decided to run again.

When the heat began, the mare was starting from eighth position. As the truck starting gate roared down to the starting wire, Belle Gratton was going with the rest. She came charging down with the pack and they were off on a mile run. She soon worked up with the leaders and was challenging them in the back stretch. On the front straightaway, she took the lead by about half a length, but Marguin stuck with her. Going into the first turn of the second lap, the two bikes collided and both riders were spilled.

That was the end of the race for most of the fans. The winner was Peter G. Lee, beating out Flicka (2nd) in a close race.

Ruth Benedict Tops

Top winner of the afternoon collecting $80 was Ruth Benedict, owned by Mr. Ayment, of Brighton, in the 2.28 class. When the first few bettors of the afternoon put their money on Ruth Benedict, they got 10 to two odds. But those odds soon tumbled until just before the first heat, the odds on Ruth Benedict were one to two. Plenty of people didn't have a doubt in the world that Ruth Benedict would win and they weren't disappointed.

Miller's Boy, owned by Sharpe Motors, of Oshawa, and driven by Orville Fallis, of Peterborough, racing in the Free for All, collected two wins and a second and did the fastest mile of the afternoon at two minutes and seven seconds. He won more than $9. Miller's Boy carried on a private duel with Peter Aubrey, owned by Harry Ingles, of Brighton, who won two seconds and a first.

In spite of a clown band which marched along Port Hope's main street to stir up interest in the races, Stan Crossett, a Port Hope hotel owner who sponsored the meet, was disappointed in the turnout and would probably lose money on the afternoon.

The trio of Windsor men who handled the fans' bets, said the betting was light although a fair amount of money for the size of the crowd seemed to be changing hands.

92-Year-Old Fan

One of the afternoon's keenest fans was 92-year-old Lon Simpson who has been going to harness meets in Port Hope for 65 years.

The winners of the afternoon were:

Fire Burns Brush Centre Of Village

LAKEFIELD, July 24 (ENS)—Two grass fires believed started by boys, cleaned out most of the brush between Reid and Albert Sts. in the centre of Lakefield, but did no real damage, Sunday morning and afternoon.

Fire Chief Allan Clark said he might have let the first fire go while his men watched it, to clean out the brush and debris left from a lumber yard formerly located there. But he decided it was too dangerous with a stiff breeze blowing.

Both village pumpers were required to quell the flames.

A rumor that the fires had been started by a carelessly thrown match into a roadside ditch beside the area into which oil from the road had drained, was discounted.

22 TB Victims Found In Survey

COBOURG, July 24 — (ENS) Twenty-two new cases of tuberculosis were reported, six of them active, as a result of the mass surveys held during the months of March, April and June in Northumberland and Durham Counties, it is revealed in the report issued by the counties' health unit which x-rayed 16,306.

The six active cases were admitted to hospital while the remaining 16 cases reported as inactive, will require further x-rays. The x-rays may be repeated in three to six months for one to two years as recommended.

The whole of the two counties has now been re-surveyed within the past year and these surveys were made possible by the sale of Christmas seals. Monthly clinics are being held in five centres for cases and contacts and for persons referred by the family physicians.

O. E. Manning Resigns

Vice-president and general manager of the Grey and Bruce Trust and Savings Co., O. E. Manning has resigned his position effective August 1.

Mr. Manning will work as an advisor for the company for the next six months. He had been with the company 17 years. His new job has not yet been announced.

Five Accidents On City Streets, None Badly Hurt

Worst of the weekend's accidents was on Friday night when a bicycle ridden by Howard Boucher colided with a car driven by Archie Hall, 249 Park St. Boucher suffered a slight concussion.

In five other accidents on Saturday and Sunday, damage was slight.

Hall was driving west on Sherbrooke St. and crossing Stewart St. when his car and the bicycle collided.

Saturday afternoon, E. C. Brown, 66 Monaghan Rd., was knocked down by a car at Charlotte and George streets. Driver of the car, James Chaffe, St. Catharines, said Brown walked out from behind a car. Brown was uninjured.

Truck Hits Car

The bumper guard was broken off a car Saturday night by an unidentified three-ton stake truck. P. J. Cooper, 522 Rose Ave., told police he parked a car on Rink St. and saw the truck hit it.

Three cars were slightly damaged in an accident at Reid and McDonnel streets Saturday afternoon. A car driven by Margery Wolstenholme, 629 Charlotte St., going east on McDonnel, stopped at Reid St. Behind her, Mrs. Janet Tully, RR 11, also stopped. Behind Mrs. Tully, Edward Myers, 544 Donegal St., tried to stop and hit Mrs. Tully's car, driving it into the rear of Miss Wolstenholme's auto.

Sunday afternoon, a car driven by Henrietta Haines, RR 1, and a motorcycle driven by Morris Legue, Milles Roches, PQ, collided at Armour Rd. and Otonabee St. Legue's right arm was slightly scraped.

William Hale, 715 George St., was cut on the forehead Sunday when a bag of cement he was carrying fell off the bicycle. The bicycle hit the bag, throwing Hale to the pavement.

Teaches Boy 8 To Shoot Mother

JONESBORO, Ark., July 24—(AP)—A 72-year-old father was in jail here today because, police said, he taught his small son to shoot and then had the boy shoot his mother.

As a result, they said, Mrs. Jewel White, 42, of Hardy, was taken to hospital with a bullet wound in her right lung.

The husband, police continued, is to be charged with assault to kill even though the shot was fired by the couple's eight-year-old son, Billy, Saturday night.

Good Swimming News

VANCOUVER (CP)— Vancouver swimmers got good news this year. Water temperatures are higher than they have been for years. Thermometer has climbed to 69 degrees. Average for past 10 years is 61 to 63 degrees.

Garbage Truck Upsets

The city's mechanical loading garbage truck fell on its side Friday at the entrance to the city dump in the south end.

Because it was full, about four trucks were needed to put it back on its wheels. It was believed the truck was crowded off the road into a ditch.

Arm Amputated After Crash On No. 7 Highway

Gerald Hill, RR 1, Codrington, had his left forearm amputated after a car accident Sunday night on Highway 7, two miles east of Havelock.

Today his condition is reported to be reasonably good.

Hill, father of three children, was driving along the highway with them and his wife when he came into sideswipe collision with a car driven by George Roderick Cameron, Toronto.

None of the others in his family was injured but Hill's left arm was so badly mangled that it had to be amputated at the elbow. Cameron had a slight cut on the left arm but it was not serious enough for medical attention.

Both cars were badly damaged: Hill's approximately $300 and Cameron's $275.

Provincial Constable J. C. McKendry investigated.

UK Team Making Strong Recovery Bid

NOTTINGHAM, England, July 24 —(Reuters)—England today made a strong recovery bid as the test cricket match against the visiting West Indies team went into its third day.

Reg Simpson and Cyril Washbrook, who had put on 87 for their unbroken opening stand Saturday, continued to bat confidently during the morning.

They were still together at lunch when they had raised England's second-innings score to 168 with Simpson 72 not out and Washbrook 84 not out. Twelve extras also figured in England's lunch-time total.

England scored 223 in the first innings and the West Indies replied with 558.

Mrs. Mary Pakenham

Rev. Walter Gilling of St. Luke's Anglican Church conducted the funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Pakenham from the funeral home of A. Comstocks and Sons on Saturday.

Mrs. Pakenham passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital on Thursday, following a lingering illness. She was born in Percy township, the daughter of the late James Owen and Margaret McCormick. When Mrs. Pakenham enjoyed good health, she was an active member of St. Luke's Anglican Church.

Pallbearers were Donald Hill, Douglas Hill, Willard Pakenham, Kenneth Pakenham, Malcolm Pakenham and James Benor.

Interment was in Little Lake Cemetery.

Yachtsman Says Trent System Better Than U.S.

"American canal facilities in regard to cruiser touring, cannot be compared to the Trent and Rideau systems, the Canadian are much superior," said A. H. Clarke of Buffalo, NY, who took his 18-ton ALTHEA over the hump at the Lift Lock today, en route to Lake Huron's North Channel and the Soo. Together with his wife and two crewmen, Don Ralf and Stewart Frase, Mr. Clarke was well qualified to make this observation. By the time the Althea reached here, she had been five months on the way.

Purchased in Miami, the cruiser toured the West Indies waters around the Bahamas, sailed north through the inland and outer Atlantic coastal canal systems, the Hudson River and Erie barge canal and put into Lake Ontario at Alexandria Bay. After covering so many miles already, Mr. Clarke said that he thought the Trent scenery surpassed any they had seen. He keeps in touch with his business in Buffalo by car which has paced the boat from New York and is driven by a crewman.

U.S. Editorials Praise King

NEW YORK, July 24 —(CP)—The New York Times says today that in the death of Canada's former prime minister, Mackenzie King, "The United States loses a staunch friend who believed firmly in American - Canadian unity on all levels."

The Times says his part in Canada's emergence from Dominion status to full nationhood was "perhaps outstanding in the long political career he began in 1908."

"Another accomplishment was his strengthening of Canada's internal unity by equal respect for all population groups."

Referring to his acquaintance and interest in the United States the editorial says:

"In 1941, through the American-Canadian joint permanent defence board, he set his country on a policy of military collaboration with the United States — a policy still working for the security of the two nations.

"The policies he fostered and his achievements in office will make his name long remembered and respected."

Oshawa Man Charged With Careless Driving

LINDSAY, July 24—(CP)—Albert Rose, 32, of Oshawa, was charged Saturday with careless driving following an accident at an intersection here. Rose, proceeding south on No. 7 Highway, turned off and struck a car driven by Len D. Patterson, 32, of Toronto.

Mrs. Mona Patterson, 28, was thrown from the car and suffered abrasions to her left side and a head cut.

Mr. King Honored Both Men Elected By Peterborough As Liberal Representatives

"Peterborough elected two supporters of Mackenzie King," George A. Gillespie, O.B.E., recalled this morning. "One of them he appointed a Minister of the cabinet, and the other a Senator. He could hardly have given Peterborough any more recognition than that." "I believe Mr. King had a warm spot in his heart for Peterborough as the constituency that elected the late Hon. G. N. Gordon in the by-election of 1921 when the fortunes of Arthur Meighen and Mackenzie King were about to be decided."

"The defeat of Mr. Meighen followed in the general elections toward the close of that year."

"It can also be said of Senator Duffus that he was very active in the organization of the Central Ontario Liberal Association, and I think Mr. King was thinking of that contribution when he named the Peterborough member to the Senate."

"Mr. King was one of the great political leaders, and administrators, of his generation," Mr. Gillespie said. "He could stand up in the company of any of them. Events of his life amply demonstrated his great abilities."

"It should be remembered that Canada is not an easy country to govern and direct. It is far spread and it is bilingual."

"The leaders of the United States and Britain and France and various other countries had no such difficult position as that which Mr. King had to keep uppermost in his thinking and planning.

Choice of Sir Wilfrid

"Mr. King was the choice of Sir Wilfrid Laurier when the Old Chief was thinking of a successor to himself. That was a great and happy recognition for Canada Then there was the great friendship of Mr. King and Mr. La Pointe, and finally we have seen recently the succession of Mr. St. Laurent in the Liberal leadership and at the head of the country," Mr. Gillespie said.

"It is plain to us that Mr. King had a vision of Canada developing as a nation, and to achieve that he realized the importance of developing unity among his own people. At the same time he maintained and strengthened Empire ties and finally the British Commonwealth. These were the proofs of his statesmanship. Canada has attained during his leadership a high place among the nations of the world."

"I think that his example of unity at home is something we should all remember. His policies of promoting trade, of recognizing the place of labor in our domestic affairs, and of contributing social services for the average citizens, have all been tested in his own life time, and we can see the results as they have developed."

"I think we should realize, too, that the personal life of Mr. King has been edifying to the Canadian people. He was a great man; he was also a good man; and I think we should be grateful to his memory as churchman and one of the outstanding Christian laymen of his day."

Mr. King was throughout his life a member of the Presbyterian Church.

James A. Bryce Buried At Keene

Rev. M. J. Aiken of St. Andrew's United Church conducted the funeral services of the late Mr. James Archibald Bryce on Saturday from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons.

Mr. Bryce was born in Keene where he spent the early part of his life, engaged in the contracting business. During the past 35 years he has travelled in Eastern Ontario for the Pellar Company.

Pallbearers were Allan Bryce, Archibald Bryce, Thomas Lillico, James Lillico, Jack Henderson and Norman Moore.

Interment was in Keene Cemetery.

City Alderman Describes Manitoba Flood

"The Red River flood was a catastrope that exceeded all that we imagined," says Ald Adam Sands who has just returned from a week in Winnipeg and Minneapolis.

"You have to see it to understand the extent of the damage. The river is back to normal. At one place where ordinarily it is probably 70 feet wide, the inundation extended to 70 miles. I was told that around 7,000 houses in the flooded area show a loss averaging $3,000.

The majority of the houses appeared to be of stucco finish. The exterior has to be replaced, and the buildings dried before they can be put back in really habitable condition.

Hardwood floors have to be pried up, and relaid. Walls have to be renewed. Silt was deposited mostly in cellars and on ground floors. You wonder how they will get the smell of it out of the houses. I was talking to one young man who had done considerable landscaping around his house. There isn't a trace of the top soil he bought and built up for lawn. It's a heart rending sight wherever you go in the long flooded stretch of the Red.

You wonder whether they'll ever have an accurate idea of the damage to that part of Manitoba, including Winnipeg. One thing is certain, eastern people who contribute to the Flood Relief Fund, can be assured that they gave their money to a good and needy cause."

Two Tires, $40 Loot Of Breakins

A lone thief broke into an adjoining snack bar and garage on the main street of Havelock early Sunday morning and made off with loot valued at more than $40.

Two new tires were stolen from Cecil Tom's garage, and a quantity of cigarets and at least $2 in United States change were taken from Ray Peter's snack bar.

Entry to both premises was made by smashing rear windows. After the thief had ransacked one building he crawled out the broken window, smashed the window in the other and went through the same procedure.

All drawers and other possible hiding places for money were searched. A juke box in the snack bar had the back ripped off and the week's receipts were pocketed by the thief.

Chief Constable Bay Bell of Havelock investigated, assisted by Provincial Constable D. W. Coffey of Hastings.

The Circus Arrives in Town

Crowds Look On As Circus Takes Over Fair Grounds

By JIM ENGLISH

The circus came to town Sunday.

The actual arrival, at noon, was pretty prosaic, but as the afternoon wore on and got hotter, there were more things to be seen.

Watching the train shunt around on the CNR tracks just north of Lansdowne St., we saw a few pairs of bear-like ears, and perhaps two dozen dogs. Of the heralded elephants and camels (or dromedaries), there was no sign.

No stray gray trunk was poked out of a box car and no brown hump showed out of the top of one of the cages. There wasn't any brass band, either. Youthful memories of ours assured us there was always a brass band with a circus.

A three-year-old friend who accompanied us asked where were the lions. Just what we wanted to know.

However, by three o'clock in the afternoon, things were moving in the fashion of the circuses of our memories. Down at the exhibition grounds there were four elephants hauling heavy trucks around, and generally being useful.

Elephants At Work

Riding one of the elephants was a blond-headed chap, who guided his charges with heroic swats—swats from what looked like a large, heavy cane. The elephants weren't exactly sudden in responding to directions, but they seemed awfully sure about it.

Wilder animals, such as lions and tigers, and panthers, were nowhere to be seen, and probably won't be on display until this afternoon and tonight.

P. T. Barnum was right about human nature. Anything connected with a circus will draw a crowd. At one of the taps on the exhibition grounds, roustabouts were filling a canvas tank with water.

No Alligators!

Around the tank were crowded twenty people, looking into it, expecting something more than mere water. Attracted by the crowd, and not wanting to miss anything, we took a look ourselves, and felt a bit cheated when we saw no alligators, no seals, no water snakes, not even a speckled trout—just water.

Another disappointment came when we watched stakes being driven for the big top. No heavy-muscled, sweating workers pounded rhythmically with sledges to drive the stakes down. Instead, there was a pile-driver which did two stakes at a time. Thump-thump-thump—just like that.

By the empty cages, children gathered, poking bits of straw in, doors, and looking up at the bars, hopefully waiting the growl or waiting for a glimpse of some exotic animal.

Two Polar Bears

One of the cages did contain two polar bears. We can vouch for that because we looked.

Most of the noise came from the small animals. The dogs, tethered by their cage at the south side of the grounds, set up a snarling and yapping that finally prompted a hee-haw from a small donkey tied up with them.

There seemed to be something of the magic lifted from the circus. Whether fiction has made too much of the romantic, fly-by-night quality of the thing, we don't know.

Amid Roar And Clatter

There was something of the magic in the grey elephants and the dirty brown camels standing grunting and unconcerned and in the sort of carefree air of the place. But above all the magic, you could hear the steady pounding of the pile-driver and the clatter and roar of the tractors.

The roustabouts didn't look like the genial rascals of the movies. They looked just like working men who have a job to do and are doing it. They were tanned dark by days in the sun and maybe their muscles bulged a little more than most men's, but they still looked like working men.

Thumbnail impressions — a camel's face is homelier than the rear of a ten-ton truck or a five-ton elephant . . . dogs are dogs, whether they come from a circus or not . . . nobody yelled "hey rube" all afternoon . . . when a circus crew act like they're filling a tank with water, they're filling a tank with water . . . roustabout is just a fancy name for worker . . . there's a sucker born every minute.

Most Successful Living Playwright G. B. Shaw Has 94th Birthday

By CYNTHIA LOWRY.

NEW YORK, July 24 —(AP) —George Bernard Shaw will be 94 years old July 26.

GBS (that's what his friends call him; he hates the name George and has dropped it) will pay no attention whatsoever to the event. Following a pattern established a quarter of a century ago when Shaw birthdays started to be news the bearded, irascible Irish sage will closet himself for most of the day, refusing telephone calls and interviews and leaving congratulatory messages unopened.

At some point, however, Shaw may be glimpsed long enough by newspaper men to snort, in essence, on the subject of his birthdays: "Bah, rubbish!"

It is wise, however to use the word "probably" when anticipating the millionaire playwright, for he is nothing if not unpredictable. There are grounds to believe he is not strictly on the level in his professed boredom with the fuss made over his birthdays.

Eye on Commission.

Dublin-Irish Shaw has a Scotman's sense about money. Only last year he offered to go ahead with a birthday interview—provided he was offered "a niece, big commission" for it.

Shaw has never come up with anything particularly punchy or even outstanding witty on or around his birthday But there are few subjects under the sun upon which he has not commented with vehemence on other occassions. He has made people furious or amused them. But above all he has made them aware of Shaw.

He called Christmas a nuisance and a "horible carnival." He said men couldn't write the truth about marriage while their wives were still alive. He called all men villians at 40; all women at 30.

He invented a 42-letter English alphabet. He said he was careful never to say a civil word to the United States and had defined the 100 per cent American as 99 per cent idiot, "but they adore me. . "

Lacked Appeal.

Shaw said Joan of Arc lacked sex appeal. He publicly espoused Communism after a trip to Russia in 1931 He said— in 1933— he liked Hitler's deeds and the way he expressed resentment, but not the Fuehrer's Aryan ideas. He laughed —in 1936 — at the possibility of another World War, asking in the same interview if the Grand Canyon were a building.

He refused to go to King George's coronation in 1937 because "amateur pageants" bored him. He came out for R.A.F. bombing of Berlin and Rome at the end of 1940— and completely reversed his opinion a few months later. He predicted Hitler would "get away ith it" and wind up in the vice-regal lodge in Dublin.

That's a rough sampling of Shaw opinion through the years

It has been quite a year for the spidery-legged, fierce-eyed old gentleman who has been calling himself extinct for almost 25 years.

Three of his class were doing standing room business on Broadway last season. His latest play "Buoyant Billions" premiered in London. Even though it won mixed notices and ran only five weeks, Shaw is the most successful living playwright —and he can show you tax collector's receipts to prove it.

Snorkel Adds Complications To Sub Life

By RENNIE TAYLOR

SAN FRANCISCO July 24 — (AP)—The snorkel has added some bizarre new complications to life aboard submarines, Rear Admiral H. L. Pugh Navy Medical Officer, reported at the recent meeting here of the American Medical Association.

The snorkel is a long tube invented by the Germans to supply a submerged vessel with air for its men and its engines. A sub is supposed to be able to cruise indefinitely under water with this apparatus.

The top of this tube sticks out of the water a few feet. At the open end, where air is sucked in, is a valve which closes automatically when a wave engulfs it.

Despite this safety gadget, submarine compartments can become flooded because of a lag in the valve's operation.

The inrush of water floods men and machinery. The closing of the valve shuts off the air supply. But the engines keep going, rapidly gulping air The engines act like vacuum pumps, decreasing atmospheric pressure.

Potential menace

This can produce thin air like that 10,000 feet above sea level. It is a potential menace to men who need sure and steady hands and heads to keep the complicated machinery going "

When the snorkel valve opens again, air rushes in and produces a physical effect resembling a 10,000-foot dive in a fast plane Men with blocked eustachian tubes, the passages which lead from the ears, sometimes have ear drums broken.

Because the snorkel permits long periods of submerged cruising, while the old-style submarine had to come up for air every night or so, crew endurance may be less than formerly Pugh said it will take another war to find out just how much of the new life men can stand.

Pasteurizing Vegetables Called Health Insurance

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., July 23— (AP) —Pasteurizing fruits and vegetables for picnics or church suppers is health insurance, says Dr Willem Rudolfs of Rutgers University

The pasteurizing is something new, and easy to do. It develops from tests showing that raw vegetables and fruits often carry disease germs.

The germs can get aboard vegetables when they are harvested or handled by persons with intestinal infections, or when cr. are fertilized with animal manure or sewage.

They also may come when food is prepared by outwardly healthy people who are carriers of typhoid or other diseases.

Cooking vegetables kills all germs. But raw tomatoes, lettuce, carrots or fruits may still harbor the germs even after they have been washed.

Kills Germs

The pasteurizing kills the germs on raw vegetables You put vegetables in 140-degree water for 10 to 15 minutes. Water at this temperature doesn't change the taste, color or crispness of tomatoes, lettuce, spinach, carrots or apples, Dr. Rudolfs said.

Housewives could do it, but the risk of getting contaminated vegetables doesn't make it worth while as a daily practice.

Pasteurizing might be a smart idea when there are outbreaks of so-called summer diarrhoea or other ailments, or when many different people contribute food for a picnic or supper.

Some outbreaks of typhoid fever have been traced to such gatherings, with contaminated raw foods suspected as the cause, Dr. Rudolfs said.

Bach Dead 200 Years, Music Still Lives On

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK, July 24 (AP). — Two hundred years ago next Friday, Johann Sebastian Bach died in Leipzig.

For 200 years before that, there had been Bachs who were musicians. The family could count a dozen organists, a dozen cantors, a dozen composers, and many of them received official appointments to German courts. So many Bachs were musicians that a musician was sometimes called a Bach.

Today it is the best-known name in musical literature, and this anniversary year is probably the most important date on the musical calendar.

In Europe and America there has been an unending succession of festivals, fetes, concerts, programs and other events in his honor, and the record companies have flooded the field with Bach disks. The celebrations have been more than formal, empty gestures, too; they have consisted of hour after hour of performances of Bach's music. Nothing could please any composer more.

Would Have Pleased Him

It would have pleased Bach himself. Out of his profound religious faith came the St. Matthew and St. John Passions and the Mass in B Minor. If he absorbed the entire musical culture of his time, he also enriched it beyond description.

He raised numerous musicians among his own children . . . there were 20 of them, born to two wives.

The most talked-of Bach Festival was held last month in Prades, in the Pyrenees, with 'cellist Pablo Casals coming out of retirement to assume the direction of it.

TORONTO, July 24 (CP) — A team of runaway horses ran head-on into a car Saturday and the car got the worst of it Its windows were badly smashed and the driver, Mrs. Margaret Moore, 52, was cut about the face. The horses, a milk-wagon team, were uninjured.

Pilot Crash Lands

HAWKESBURY, July 24 (CP) —Pilot Roger Hutchins, 25, of Montreal, wrecked his plane and put himself in hospital with head cuts and broken nose in a crash-landing in a field 20 miles southeast of here Saturday. At about 1,000 feet he suddenly blacked out. When he regained consciousness, his plane was only 200 feet off the ground. He managed to pull it out of its dive but was forced to crash land in a farm field.

TEACH THE CHILDREN TO SWIM

Swimming days are here again! It's a wonderful sport . . . but it can be a dangerous one, particularly for the kiddies. You can help remove this danger. For example, never let the youngsters go into the water except under the supervision of an adult swimmer—and as soon as they are ready, teach them to swim! Next time the kiddies want to go for a dip, round up the gang and go with them. You can guide them—guard them . . . and surely that is "Good Citizenship".

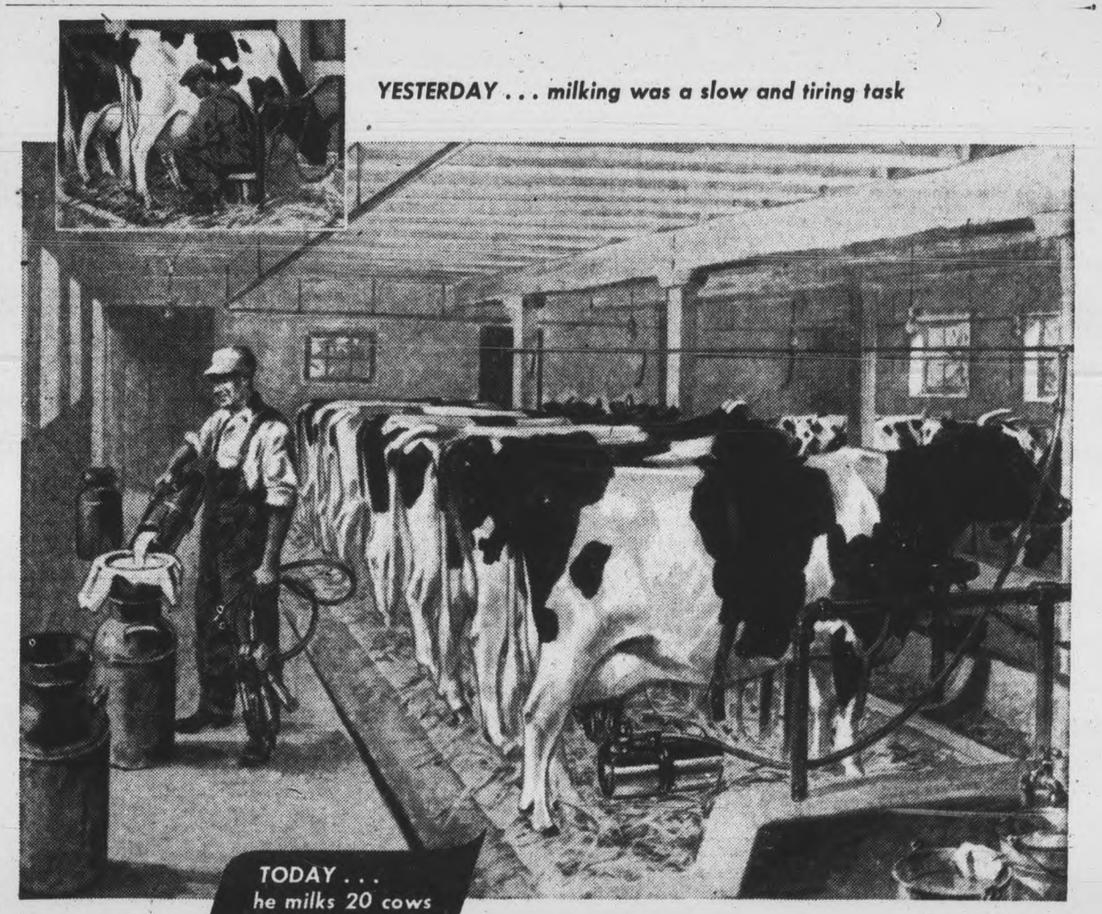
YESTERDAY . . . milking was a slow and tiring task



TODAY . . . he milks 20 cows in 60 minutes

MILK builds a healthy nation

Canadians consumed 14½ billion pounds of milk in 1949 . . . an average of 430 quarts per person. Modern machines enabled farmers to produce it, in spite of help shortage.

It takes a lot of hard work to produce milk. Cows have to be milked twice a day, 7 days a week. For every cow in the herd, it is necessary to put up at least 1½ tons of hay, 3 tons of silage and a ton of grain for winter feeding, plus half a ton of straw for bedding.

In spite of wartime and post-war shortage of help, dairy farmers have continued to produce milk in abundance . . . with the aid of modern tractors and power-farming equipment. Tractor-powered machines multiply the amount of field work a man can do in a day. Modern power milkers enable one man to milk as many cows in an hour as 3 men can milk by hand.

Milk builds healthy payrolls as well as healthy people. Farm income from the sale of 14½ billion pounds of milk in 1949 went out to buy millions of dollars worth of goods made by town and city workers.

Sack Uniforms Or Common Togs N.Z. Mothers Ask

By J. C. GRAHAM

AUCKLAND, N. Z. — (CP) — Is it better to dress school children in "gunny sack uniforms" than have them "run around in dirty sneakers and denims?"

A newspaper battle is raging here between United States visitors who are shocked at the uniforms worn by all New Zealand school children and local educationalists who regard American school clothes as 'common."

For New Zealand boys the uniform, summer and winter, is a navy blue or grey flannel shirt, open at the neck, serge shorts of similar color, and black stockings ending several inches below the knee. A small round cap is usually perched on the back of the head. All boys, up to the age of 18, wear short pants.

For girls, the uniform is a "gym" tunic,usually of navy blue serge, worn over a white blouse with a starched collar They wear black, woollen stockings and a felt or straw hat. Cosmetics and jewelry are banned.

Still Suffers

One American visitor wrote: "I am still suffering from the shock of my first sight of New Zealand school boys and girls."

"If uniforms are necessary, why can't they be more attractive? A gym tunic which fits like a gunny sack, a blazer cut along the lines of the hunchback of Notre Dame, and a bucket-shaped hat which gives the most beautiful face a hang-dog expression—why are these necessary?"

Comic Characters

A New Zealand headmistress hotly replied: "For an American woman to tell us that our children look like comic characters in their school uniforms seems to me the height of irony."

"American children are notorious for their peculiar dressing. The girls look messy, sloppy and over-dressed, and the boys — those awful knickerbocker trousers and plaid lumber jackets. The denims, and jeans, and shirt tails hanging out, and the dirty sneakers. There seems to be something about the way American children dress that makes them look common, even though they may not be."

There was some support for the original writer's view that uniforms should be improved.

One parent said she could see no reason for the "type of mass mourning in vogue here." A man pointed out that youth movements all over the world had devised attractive, yet serviceable and economical uniforms. Several writers urged the use of brighter colors, long trousers for boys in winter and lighter shirts in summer.

Almost without exception, however, the writers declared themselves strongly opposed to the North American system of leaving choice of clothes to children or parents, and in favor of uniforms, as putting children on an equal basis.

Directions

CHERRY STEAMED PUDDING

Sift together 1½ cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, and 2 tablespoons baking powder. Add ½ cup milk and 1 cup fresh stoned cherries, well-packed. Put in greased custard cups, cover tightly and steam about 15 minutes. Serve with Hot Pudding Sauce: Mix in a saucepan ½ cup sugar, ½ tablespoon flour, then stir in ½ cup water in which cherry stones have simmered 10 minutes. Stir until thick. Add this to 1 beaten egg yolk and ½ tablespon lemon juice. Cook 2 or 3 minutes longer, stiring, and colour a good red if desired.

CLAM CHOWDER (One hot-dish supper)

There are so many versions of clam chowder that I do not think I am taking too much of a liberty when I add a lot of things seldom heard of in clam chowde to this recipe today. All I know is—it is powerful good eating.

Saute in large frying-pan ½ to ½lb diced smoked ham or side bacon with 1 cup chopped onions until all is very light gold—not one bit burned. Add 1 cup water, ¼ clove of garlic chopped so fine it cannot be found, 3 large stalks celery chopped as fine as possible—including some of the leaves, ½ green pepper if available, 1 bay leaf broken, 1 to 1½ teaspoon saut, ½ teaspoon black pepper, pinch powdered thyme 1 pint clams or 2 medium tins canned clams, ½ cup raw rice (or if the traditional potatoes are preferred ad 4 cups of them diced), whole milk to make of thick chowder consistency — usually about 3 or 4 cups will do. Simmer, covered until rice or potatoes are tender and flavour suits you just right. You may need more salt and pepper. If desired to make this more of an entree instead of a soup, reduce milk and increase rice and serve on plate. Highly recommended.

Dafoe-Moncrieff Church Wedding Held at Lakevale

Miss Merle Evelyn Moncrieff daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. G. Moncrieff, was married on Saturday at Lakevale Presbyterian Church to Conrad Austin Dafoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Dafoe. The Rev. H. Kaye officiated

The church was decorated with baskets of white hydrangea and blue delphiniums. The bride wore a white slipper satin gown fashioned with tiny stand up collar topping a smocked bodice and long sleeves with points over the hand. The slim skirt of unpressed pleats fell from a high empire waist, ending in a slight train. She had a veil of English embroidered tulle which was square shaped and caught with satin headdress edged with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white roses and sweet peas.

Miss Isobel Moncrieff, sister of the bride, was the only bride's attendant, wearing a dress with a turquoise brocaded satin bodice with full skirt of nylon net and turquoise flowers and ruching to match. She carried white and pink carnations and sweet peas.

The groomsman was Mr. Don Campbell; Mr. Ronald Moncrieff and Mr. Neil Windrim were ushers.

During the signing of the register Mr. Harry Fowler sang "O Perfect Love."

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, where her mother received wearing a gown of navy mesh with lace inserts and a picture hat of navy mohair. Her flowers were red carnations.

The groom's mother, who also received, wore a gown of grey nylon with a hat of navy straw and a bouquet of pink carnations.

The couple left for a motor trip to the tates and for travelling the bride wore a pale blue dress with navy and white accessories and carried a blue top coat. On their return they will live in Peterborough.

Lola E. Gardiner Becomes Wife Of Clayton Thexton

MILLBROOK, July 24 (ENS)—Decorated with white lilies, hydrangea and blue delphinium, St. Andrew's United Church, Millbrook, was the scene on Saturday afternoon of the wedding of Lola Elizabeth Gardiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Gardiner, to Slayton William Thexton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Thexton.

The Rev. Bernard Heywood of Bailieboro officiated, and the wedding music was played by Miss Estella Hetherington. Before the ceremony, Mrs. William Gillis of Niagara Falls, the bride's cousin, sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," and during the signing of the register, "Because."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her fatner, wore a gown of white satin with full gathered skirt ending in a train, lace over satin bodice and long sleeves ending in lily points over the hands. Her finger-tip length veil was caught to the head with a halo of lace. She carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses, sweet peas and baby's breath, with rosebuds tied to long ribbon streamers.

Miss Jean Gardiner was her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Velma Thexton, sister of the groom, and Miss Lois Gardiner, another of the bride's sisters. They were dressed in similar gowns of net in shades of mauve, yellow and lime, with embroidered flower petalled net around the neck and waistline forming berthas and peplums with full gathered skirts and sashes of taffeta. They wore matching mittens and floral headdresses and carried bouquets of pink carnations, sweet peas and baby's breath.

Janet Hard, the bride's three-year-old niece, was flower girl. She was dressed in a floor length gown of baby pink organdy trimmed with lace and bows of pale blue ribbon, and carried a nosegay of pink roses, blue bachelor buttons and baby's breath.

The groomsman was Mr. Delmer McConnell, and the ushers were Bert Gardiner, the bride's brother and Keith Morden, cousin of the groom.

It was a double ring ceremony.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Gardiner chose a dress of deft blue with bands of matching lace, white flower trimmed hat, white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The groom's mother's dress was of navy faille, and she wore a large white hat trimmed with navy, white accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the reception, held at the home of the bride's parents, the bride and groom left for a motor trip to Muskoka and points north. For travelling the bride wore a two-piece dress of pink chambray with white hat and accessories and a corsage of white carnations and baby's breath.

On their return they will live on the groom's farm on the Zion line.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster and Mrs. William Gillis of Niagara Falls; Mr. and Mrs. George Reid, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Buchanan and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Argue of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Davidson, Merriton; Mr. and Mrs. E. Ruttherford, Roseland; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Harker, Mr. Clifford Thexton, Mr. Wesley Husk, Mr. and Mrs. Del McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Bradley, Mrs. Raymond Terry and sons Gary, Allen and Gordon, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Arnott of Peterborough; Mr. Geo. White and family of Bowmanville; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clarke, Mr and Mrs. W F. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Andrews, and Miss Margaret Patterson of Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. Melville Handley, Mr. and Mrs Keith Morden, and Mr. J. A. Morden of Ida; Mrs Thomas Fallis and Mr. and Mrs C. R. Hudson of Pontypool; Mr and Mrs. Bruce McGill and Mr John Fallis of Bethany; Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Cruse and Mr .and Mrs. Mac Walker of Campbellcroft; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fowler of Campbellford.

A surprise china and crystal shower was held by the children and mothers of Matchett's School, where the bride taught. The Tuesday before school closed cars were waiting outside the school to take teacher and pupils to the shower at the home of Mrs. Chas. Smith. The gifts had been arranged on a table under a gaily decorated umbrella. At the close, refreshments were served by the mothers.

On Thursday before her marriage a shower was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Olan. Mrs. Luther Olan and Mrs. Aubrey Gilmour were joint hostesses. Many gifts in crystal, linen and kitchenware were received. An address was read by Miss Evelyn Thorn. A program of musical numbers and a mock wedding ceremony followed. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

MISS BETTY EVELYN YOUNG, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Young, was married on Saturday to John Arthur Downie, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Downie. The bride's dress was of slipper satin and her attendants wore pale blue taffeta with pink net over-slips. The couple will live at 308 Maitland Ave. after their honeymoon.

Betty Young Bride Of John A. Downie

Pink carnations and white lilies provided a beautiful setting in St. George's Anglican Church for the wedding Saturday of Betty Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Young, to John Arthur Downie, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Downie. The Rev. W. J. Gilling performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by Mr. John Chambers, the bride wore a white slipper satin gown with a sweetheart neckline, flowing train and long pointed sleeves fastened with tiny covered buttons. Her finger-tip length veil of white net was held by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mrs. B. Middleton was matron of honor and the bridesmaid was Miss Jill Chambers. The bridal attendants wore pale blue taffeta gowns with pink net over-slips, blue elbow length mittens and blue flowered headdresses. They carried bouquets of multi-colored sweet peas.

The groom's attendant was Mr. Dennis Brockman and Mr. Bernard Middleton was usher.

Mrs. T. Garland played the wedding music and during the signing of the register played "O Perfect Love."

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Parish Hall. Mrs. Chambers received in a gown of beige silk jersey. She wore a hat of brown feathers and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to Blade's Island, Guil Lake, the bride chose an aqua crepe dress with white accessories.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Downie will live at 308 Maitland Avenue, Peterborough.

A shower was held recently at the home of Mrs. J. Chambers in honor of the bride.

Among those present were: Mrs. J. Chambers and daughter, Jill, Mrs. J. Gaskell, Mrs. W. Pakenham, Mrs. M. Taylor, Mrs. B. Boothroyd, Mrs. J. Wood, Mrs. A. Howarth, Mrs. E. Atkinson, Mrs. A. Marshall, Mrs. A. Fife, Mrs. H. Tasket Sr., Mrs. H. Tasket Jr., Mrs. Falconet, Mrs. Viney and Mrs. B. Middleton. Gifts were also received from Miss S. Wood and Mrs. Sandiford who were unable to be present.

Alice Edwards Becomes Wife Of Carman Everett

Miss Alice Marie Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Edwards, Warsaw, was married on Saturday to Carman Everett, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Nelson, Warsaw. The ceremony took place at the bride's home, which was decorated with roses and delphiniums.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was wearing a dress of ivory slipper satin and Queen Anne lace. She wore a floor length veil of embroidered net caught with beaded tiara. Her bouquet was of red roses.

Miss Betty Edwards, cousin of the bride, was the attendant, wearing a mauve brocaded satin dress with matching headdress and shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of mauve and pink gladioli.

The groomsman was Mr. Mervyn Nelson, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home where the bride's mother received wearing a dress of grey crepe with a hat of white and her flowers were talisman roses.

The groom's mother, who also received, wore a dress of navy sheer with a white hat and her flowers were also talisman roses.

The couple left for a motor trip to Niagara and points west. For travelling the bride wore a powder blue net dress with white accessories. On their return, they will live on the groom's farm near Warsaw.

M. Sugrue-William Norman Exchange Vows at St. Peter's

The Rev. K. Malane, conducted the marriage ceremony on Saturday of Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sugrue, Ireland, and William Edward Norman, Cardiff, South Wales, in St. Peter's Cathedral.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Edward Poole, a former business associate of the groom's father. She wore a gown of nylon sheer silk with gauntlets to match. Her flower length veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

The bride's attendant was her sister, Catherine Sugrue, who wore a yellow taffeta gown and short ruffled mittens. Her braided headband was caught with tiny daisies and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The groom's attendant was Cadet Officer Eric Massey. Ushers were George Graham and Peter Thomas.

The wedding reception was held in the Kawartha Room of the Empress Hotel.

For a trip to Quebec, the bride wore a powder blue sheer dress with white accessories.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Norman will live at 743 Water St.

DOROTHY DIX

Guest-Host Relationship Makes Home Life Easiest

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband has recently died and as he left me without any means of support I am compelled to go to live with my married daughter. How should I treat my son-in-law, and how should he treat me?

A DAUGHTER'S MOTHER

◇ ◇ ◇

ANSWER: Your son-in-law should treat you with the respect and affection that he would his own mother.

If your son-in-law loves his wife, he should look upon you as his benefactress, for no woman, not even his own mother, does more to promote a man's welfare and happiness than the one who provides him with a good wife. Many years of work and anxiety and sacrifice go into the rearing of a girl and the mother who does that task well and who fits her daughter to be a real helpmate and companion to a man has done him a service that he never can really repay and which entitles her to his everlasting gratitude.

Dorothy Dix

Adapt To Household

Treat your son-in-law as an appreciative guest would a generous host. Then realize that, as a guest, you must adapt yourself to the ways of the household and not try to run it according to your own ideas. The thing that makes old women such a pest and causes people to dread having them around is that they cannot resist meddling and sticking their fingers into everybody's pies. They never realize that their in-laws have a right to their own taste and their own ways and their own opinions.

Don't meddle. Don't lecture. Don't criticize. Just remember that you haven't any more right to police your son-in-law than you have any other man and that you have no sacred mission to reform him. Keep your hands off his affairs and your tongue off his faults and pay for your board and keep by making yourself agreeable.

And learn to do the vanishing act. Don't always be under foot. Don't always camp on the back back seat of the automobile and have to be dragged out everywhere your son-in-law and his wife go. A man likes to be alone with his wife sometimes and to go off on a spree just with her. Spend some of your evenings in your own room reading or crocheting or playing solitaire.

Use tact in getting alone with your son-in-law. In a word, treat him as you would your host.

◇ ◇ ◇

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am in a terrible predicament and would greatly appreciate your advice. My parents are sending me to dramatic school, after which they plan a long stage career for me. I know how perfectly marvelous that would be, but I am in love with a missionary. We had planned to travel together through the heathen countries spreading Christianity and happiness in our wake. Do you think it better to begin the career that will please my parents, or to follow the path of hardships with the man I love?

PERPLEXED

ANSWER: I would suggest that before you do either you come down out of your castle of dreams and get your feet on the hard old earth and try to see things as they are, instead of as you and your deluded parents imagine them to be.

To begin with, what makes you think that going to a dramatic school will insure you a brilliant and successful career? Thousands of girls take courses in acting every year and most of them are never heard of again. No other profession in the world is so full of disappointments and is so precarious as acting, and any one is foolish to enter it to whom God has given a great talent, who has not such a call to the work that nothing else on earth seems worth doing, and who is not willing to put in years upon years of grinding intensive work and study upon her art.

I certainly think you will have a far better chance of happiness in marrying your missionary than in pursuing the phantom of a dramatic career, but you are due for a sad awakening there also if you think you are going to spread Christianity and happiness in your wake as you travel through what you call "heathen countries." My advice to you is to read up a little about the histories and the old culture of those places.

◇ ◇ ◇

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: We are both in the middle twenties. Both from not-too-well-off families. Both at work. We have been giving everything we made to our families, but now there are others working and we want to get married. Another thing, we would like to get married without letting any one know about it until it was all over, for even a modest wedding is expensive. Please give us your advice.

W. D.

ANSWER: I thing your plans are exceedingly sensible and that you are right to start out for yourselves. If you keep putting off getting married until the family doesn't need your help you will never get married at all. For families, perhaps without realizing it, become very parasitic.

Your plan of just stepping around to the parson and getting married and then telling your friends and relatives about it afterward is a swell idea, and would that more poor couples would do likewise. There is no other way in which people get so little run for their money as in a show wedding with its fuss and furbelows.

Question (of Mrs . Condon — answer cont'd.): Mrs C. will you please let me know if the vitamin data I have suplied in the past few weeks suits your needs? This material requires considerable space and if you require more I shall give you source to send for more material.

Question: I think many years ago you printed a recipe for a bean and carrot pickle. We loved it and I made it up every year for years. But I had a long illness and some of my favourite recipes were mislaid in my absence from the kitchen. Would you mind repeating this one? I am sure other readers would find it as good as my family did. Emily D.

Answer: This is the only pickle that I have that combines those two vegetables:

String Bean and Carrot Pickle

One quart each diced carrots and cut string beans, 1 cup each sliced white onions and chopped celery, 2 green peppers, 1 sweet red pepper, 2 pints spirit vinegar, 1½ cups sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon each turmeric and paprika. (Additional 1 salt may be added if desired, after tasting before canning.) Cook the carrots and beans in boiling salted water until just barley tender, then add the other ingredients and boil until celery is barley ender and liquid looks clear — about 50 minutes is overall cooking time. Seal in sterile one pint jars and seal. This pickle can be made in the middle of winter — for all of the ingredients are available then.

Question: There is a one-crust pie that is made something like butter tarts, but the whites of the eggs are folded into the fruit mixture before baking and this gives the pie the effect of having a topping, that is not quite a meringue. It is wonderful for it keeps and is a good summer dessert when company might drop in. Do I make myself clear? Keep up the good work. Edie Answer: I hope this is it. This recipes comes from Missouri.

Banbury Pie

Line a deep 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Fill with mixture of ½ cup soft butter 1 cup white sugar (or ½ white and ½ brown), 2 egg yolks, ½ cup each raisins (the plump ones are best), chopped dates, coarsely chopped pecans or walnuts, 1 teaspoon vanila, 2 eggs whites, beaten nearly stiff. Naturally you fold in the egg whites last. Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. for about 60 minutes. In Missouri they serve it cold with whipped cream.

Thanks Victoria From UK Schools

LONDON — (CP) — Special thanks to Victoria, B.C., accompanied a gift to a British Thanksgiving Fund.

Miss M. Winnett, headmistress of Camelot Infant School, London, said pupils had collected £3 10s ($10.85) for the National Thanksgiving Fund. She said it was in return for parcels of food and toys received in the last four years from Victoria.

The fund aims to raise £2,000,000 to raise a memorial for gifts from Commonwealth and United States countries.

What's Right?

At a party given in your honor the hostess gives you a gift

A LUSCIOUS DISGUISE for leftover bread is Brazil-Nut Bread Pudding — the simple recipe is in the new Cookbook, "500 Delicious Dishes from Leftovers", ready for you now.

COOKBOOK OF THE WEEK

How to Turn Dry Cake Into An Exciting Pudding

Don't despair because the family is stubbon about that stale cake. And don't discard it, either! Just dress it up, serve as Tipsy Pudding, and no one except a sleuth will ever suspect the deception. Here's the recipe, taken from the Leftover Cookbook, the second in a series now being offered to readers of Examiner.

Tipsy Pudding

3 egg yolks 2 cups milk, scalded ¼ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon sherry ⅛ teaspoon salt, 6 slices of spongecake

Whipped Cream

Beat egg yolk and add sugar and salt. Add scalded milk gradually, stirring constantly. Cook in the top of a double boiler until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add sherry. Cool. When custard is cold, pour it over slies of sponge cake or any plain dry cake and cover with whipped cream. Garnish with chopped nuts, if desired. Serve 6.

Included in the Leftover book are dozens of helpful recipes and hints on using up odds and ends of jams and jellies, too, such as the following:

Marmalade Strips, Orange Marmalade

Pastry Roll-overs, Rolls

Fruit Turnovers, Jelly Corn Muffins,

Jelly-Centered Sugar, and many others

Cookies.

There are hundreds of easy-to-make and interesting suggestions and recipes for making use of left-over bread, cake, eggs, fish, meat, fowl, vegetables, fruits, sour milk and cream. From soups to desserts, your meals will be more delicious and economical.

You may obtain your Leftover Book as well as the release, "500 Snacks," for only 25c each with one coupon from any issue of the Examiner at the Examiner office. Your Examiner carrier at Braund's Home Food Markets

Bag Bulges With Recipes After Visiting At Week-End

By MARY MOORE

With my family out-of-town I have freedom over the weekends to accept invitations and visit my friends, and came home this past Monday with my bag bulging with treasured recipes and ideas begged and borrowed from my hostess.

One recipe is for a rich cookie called Butterfingers. Another is an openface canape. Both of these would help you if you are having a tea party or the kind of a do that requires sandwiches and cakes only.

The other two are summer fruit salad desserts, and are noted for three things: 1) beauty, 2) flavour and 3) acceptance by male members of the family.

If you are not a habitual fruit salad maker let me persuade you to try these two ideas, for even two salad-scorning husbands that I know grudingly admit these are "better than usual".

Ivy's Butterfingers

Put all ingredients into one large bowl: 1 cup soft butter, 5 tablespoons sugar (berry sugar is best), shake of salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 cups unsifted cake flour, 1 tablespoon water, 1 cup chopped nuts—pecans or walnuts are preferable.

Work all together between the hands and when all is smooth, shape into a flattened roll about 1 inch thick by 2 inches wide. If desired chill to harden. But if you are in a hurry, using sharp knife, cut into slices 1 inch wide by 2 inches long and ¼ inch thick. If desired, put quarter of a cherry in centre of each cookie. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes. Do not overbake. When cool roll in fruit sugar if desired. This way of cutting them gives you 36 cookies. They are similar to a very tender shortbread, with the added flavour of the nuts and vanilla.

Daisy Canape

(This is easy and pretty and costs very little.)

Make small rounds of white bread by cutting them out with 2½-inch cookie cutter. Spread with soft white or yellow cream cheese. Put ½ small raisin in centre. Surround with 8 halves of large salted peanuts (with salt rubbed off), cut in place to look like petals of a daisy slightly swirled. That's all. About 6 of these will make your plate of assorted sandwiches look quite professional.

Fruit Salad Cheese Squares

(These are to be one item for a fruit salad on lettuce cups with canned pear half, lengthwise-half-slice banana brushed with lemon or pear juice whole Byng cherry.)

Mix together 1/3-oz package of white cream cheese, 1 cup finely choped dates, 1 cup toasted chopped almonds, 1 cup well-drained canned pineapple, 1 cup heavy cream whipped, ½ cup best quality commercial mayonnaise (or half and half salad dressing and homemade mayonnaise). When well mixed pack into tray of refrigerator, and let chill until almost frozen, then it will cut neatly. It should not be frozen.

Fruit Salad Dressing

My hostess served this to mask banana halves and pineapple rings on lettuce cups; all were garnished with whole sweet cherries and raspberries and slices of orange.

One cup juice from canned pineapple, ¼ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 egg yolks, 2 egg whites. Mix together the sugar and cornstarch, add a shake of salt, then stir into the pineapple juice over low heat until thick. Cook 20 minutes over boiling water. Remove from heat and stir into the 2 beaten yolks. Add lemon juice. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Chill before serving. This is good on a great number of fresh fruit salads.

This salad is good for a main course at lunch if served with cheese straws, or small cheese tea biscuits.

MAYOR'S PARTY

LONDON —(CP)—Residents of south London's Camberwell for 50 years or more are invited to a party by the mayor to celebrate the borough's golden jubilee.

CUBAN SUGAR

Cuba has offered Britain sufficient sugar to eliminate rationing; it is believed Cuba is willing to accept sterling payment.

YOURS TO PROTECT

The INDIGO BUNTING is a small finch. He is the only all-blue bird we have. In some lights, due to his iridescence, he looks black. Look for him in scrubby, brushy places at the edges of fields. A beautiful little bird, he deserves protection.

6—In Memoriams

ASHBY—In memory of my father, Wilburt P. Ashby, who died July 22, 1947.
His lovely smile and happy face,
Broken link I can never replace,
Sad was the parting, no one can tell,
So sudden on earth the sorrow fell.
Memories are treasures no one can steal,
Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal,
God alone knows how I (daughter Eileen) miss him.
As I journey alone down life's lane,
But his voice seems gently calling,
"Dear loved one be good and true,
"At the end of your life's journey
"I'll be waiting and watching for you."

McFARLANE—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, David McFarlane, who passed away July 25, 1949.
Till memory fades and life departs,
You will live forever in our hearts.
—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

WILLIAMS—In loving memory of our brother, J. A. Williams, who died July 24, 1947.
The rolling stream of life goes on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the, time, the voice, the smile
Of him who once sat there.
—Remembered by brother Arthur and sister Grace (Mrs. Wm. Jobe).

Leopold Faces More Opposition

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 24 (AP)—King Leopold and his Social Christian government today faced tightening opposition which promised to take a far more solid form than catcalls and press blasts.

A Socialist leader declared that a wave of strikes would start today in Belgium's Walloon area. They would spread, he said, until the King quits the throne he regained only two days ago.

The Socialist spokesman indicated that no general strikes are planned immediately. Expecting the abdication fight to be a long one, the anti-Leopold party is loath to use all its weapons at once.

Leopold has shown no sign he intends to submit to his opponents' demands that he abdicate and let his eldest son, Crown Prince Baudouin, reign.

Held For Murder

WILMINGTON, Del., July 24—(AP)—A 23-year-old domestic was held on a charge of murder today, accused of the butcher-knife slaying of John Wallace, 20. The domestic, Blanche Wright, was quoted by police as saying she plunged the knife into Wallace's chest following an argument.

Child 4 Strangles

ALBERT, N.B., July 24 (CP)—Paula Beatrice, 4-year-old daughter of Ranald MacDonald, strangled to death in the family barn Sunday. The child climbed a ladder and apparently slipped her head into a short rope noose hanging from a hay wagon. Then her feet slipped and she strangled.

$15,000 Barn Fire

PARIS, Ont., July 24 —(CP)— Damage estimated at $15,000 was caused in an early morning fire near here when a barn owned by Mrs. Florence Osborne burned to the ground. The blaze is believed to have been started by lightning. A motorist roused the family in time to save two pure-bred bulls, a heifer and 18 hogs.

City Hall Dark

This is one Monday night the city hall will be in darkness. There is no meeting of the council or committees. Ald. Adam Sands has called a meeting of the legal committee for Tuesday afternoon.

Enraged Son Kills Father, Shot By Police

HULL, July 24 (CP)—One man was killed and two others seriously wounded when a long-smouldering family feud erupted into a triple shooting Saturday night.

Dead is A. J. LaPierre, 60, of Ottawa, shot four times in the back by his enraged son as he sat drinking beer in the Ottawa House tavern at Main and Eddy Streets.

The son, Graham LaPierre, 23, himself was shot in the back a few minutes later as he attempted to escape from the scene.

Before he was struck by police bullets, the youth seriously wounded George Remillard, 33, manager of the Remillard Tavern on Eddy St., who tried to apprehend him.

The wounded men, now under treatment in Sacred Heart Hospital, are expected to recover.

Narrow Escape

Constable J. L. LaCroix who stopped the fleeing LaPierre with a bullet in the back, narrowly escaped being killed in an exchange of shots with LaPierre. The officer stumbled as he rounded a corner after LaPierre and as he did so, the fugitive fired point-blank at him. But the bullet passed over his head.

Still lying on the ground—LaCroix took aim and hit LaPierre in the back as he ran for the next street corner.

Family differences — precisely about what is not known—are believed to have led to the tragic last meeting between father and son. It is understood that due to family quarrels the son had been living in a hotel for several weeks.

Witnesses said the tavern was just beginning to fill up when young LaPierre, neatly dressed in brown, entered a side-door and scanned the customers.

The moment he saw his father, who was sitting with his back to the door, LaPierre is said to have raised a black automatic pistol and fired four quick shots. Then he turned and walked out into Eddy St.

Car Crashes Into Compressor

MARMORA, July 24 (ENS) — William H. Bannon, Hastings, and Glen Taylor, Norwood, sustained cuts and othter head injuries Saturday when they crashed into an air compressor on Highway 7, a quarter of a mile east of W. D. Lavender's service station.

Both men were knocked unconscious temporarily.

After medical treatment by Dr. H. G. Parkin they were taken to Madoc by Provincial Constable Harry Lummiss for questioning. Both men face undisclosed charges.

The two were driving east on No. 7 when their car, apparently out of control, ran into the Department of Highways air compressor which was reportedly stopped.

A passing motorist notified Dr. Parkin.

Suspended Sentence

Charges with theft of a basket of potatoes, Conway O'Dette, 18, 353 Amstrong Drive, pleaded guilty and was given suspended sentence and put on probation for one year by Magistrate E. A. Gee.

A provincial police officer spotted O'Dette, who had been drinking, and saw him take the basket of potatoes.

Stadium Explosion

PORT DE BOUC, France, July 24 (Reuters)—An explosion Sunday destroyed part of a stand in a new sports stadium here, which was to have been named the "Joseph Stalin Stadium." On the wrecked stand was painted: "Municipal stadium for sport and not politics. We want nothing to do with Stalin."

Hastings Legion Triumphs 22-16

HASTINGS, July 24—(ENS)—Hastings Legion landed the league leading Frankford's their second defeat, in as many days on Friday night at Hastings park as they came out on the long end of a 22-16 count in a loosely played game.

Crowley started for Hastings, and after Legion went into a 1-0 lead in the bottom half of the first, gave up 4 hits and 2 walks in the second for 5 runs.

However Legion bounced back in their half to push an equal number over and from there in were never headed.

West replaced Crowley in the 7th, but had a tough time finding the plate and although only nicked for three hits in his three innings, five walks and five errors by his teammates gave Frankford 9 of their total runs.

Bill Rankin toed the slab for Frankford, but lacked fire and was hit for a total of 21 hits, two of them homers by West and Scott.

Scriver was top stick man with five for six, with Fife crowding him with four for six.

Summary:

was the only one left in office. Franklin Roosevelt died while president of the United States before the end of hostilities. Winston Churchill, prime minister of Great Britain, met defeat in a general election. Mackenzie King, who was the confident and intermediary between the two, remained alive, won his election and remained in office. For the successors of Roosevelt and Churchill, President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee, Mr. King was a link with the past.

The closing months of the war brought about a crisis which Mr. King steadily sought to avoid from the time he led the country into the conflict. Conscription in the First Great War had left bitter memories in Canada. At the start of the Second Great War all parties pledged themselves against it. By various means Mr. King sought to avoid a split in the country on the issue of conscription but as the war went on opinion in English speaking Canada became clamorous for conscription while in the French-speaking areas opposition to it solidified.

Compulsion was actually applied in the fall of 1940 after Germans had over-run western Europe but it was for service in Canada only. Of the men called up great numbers volunteered to serve outside Canada and so Canada's overseas forces were built. When pressure for all-out conscription threatened to force the issue, in 1942, Mr. King held a plebiscite in which the people were asked to release the government from anti-conscription pledges. The vote was for release but in the province of Quebec the majority was against release.

Change in Policy

Mr. King's next step was to ask parliament to give the government power to compel men to serve overseas. That was a tough pill to take for Quebec Liberals whose voters were against conscription. Some crossed the floor. One minister, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin resigned, the first of Mr. King's serious cabinet difficulties due to the troubling issue. He got the power but he also gave the promise that it would not be used unless necessary.

"Not necessarily conscription, but conscription if necessary," was the formula he used to state the position. In 1944 Canadian soldiers had heavy fighting in Italy and in western Europe. Infantry casualties were heavier than had been estimated. A shortage of reinforcements developed. Defence Minister J. L. Ralston contended the time had arrived when conscription was necessary.

That brought on the real crisis. Col. Ralston resigned. A new attempt was made to get conscripted home defence soldiers in Canada, fully trained as infantrymen, to go overseas voluntarily. It failed. The cabinet argued for weeks in late-night sessions. A special session of parliament was called. The government authorized the compulsory dispatch of 16,000 soldiers overseas. Air Minister C. G. Power resigned because he was opposed to overseas conscription. But the government survived a vote of 143 to 70. Before it was necessary to authorize larger drafts of conscripts the war ended.

The three achievements which brought most satisfaction to Mr. King in the latter years of his public life were his success in taking Canada into the war united —the House of Commons supported the government's declaration of war on Germany almost unanimously—securing the adoption by parliament of family allowances as the key measure in a structures of social security, and winning the 1945 election.

From his earliest days as a student and writer on social problems Mr. King had preached the doctrine of a minimum standard of life and well-being for all citizens with society insuring the individual against the greater hazards of life—unemployment, poverty, sickness and old age. The general scheme of his social reform program was outlined early but its practical application came in steps over a period of more than 40 years. These steps have been listed as the enactment of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, old age pensions, pensions for the blind, unemployment insurance, family allowances and the promotion of a scheme of national health insurance.

1945 Election

The 1945 general election saw the great Liberal majority in the Commons which was returned in 1935 and again in 1940 cut down to a bare working majority, but rarely in democracies do wartime governments which have to apply compulsion, restriction and high taxes achieve re-election. Mr. King's success contrasted with the defeat of the Conservative government after the First Great War and the defeat of the Conservative government in Britain after the Second Great War.

One of the most thrilling and satisfying events in Mr. King's long career was the visit to Canada of their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth in 1939. He travelled with the royal couple through Canada and the United States as minister-in-attendance. It was largely through his efforts that the unprecedented royal tour was made.

Almost immediately after their Majesties' departure from Canada in June, 1939, forebodings of dreaded European conflict were realized in Germany's march on Poland.

For years Mr. King had talked apprehensively of what he thought would result from the attitude of the totalitarian states. For these statements he had been criicized roundly, particularly by the opposition in the House of Commons. He had been charged with being too much preoccupied with international affairs.

At the time he was criticized for not being as co-operative as he might have been with the British government in defence matters. He refused to make any commitments in advance on a situation which might eventuate.

Foreign Affairs Debate

In the House of Commons foreign affairs debate, March 30, 1939, Mr. King said: "I cannot accept the view which is being urged in some quarters today, that regardless of what government or party may be in office, regardless of what its policy may be, regardless of what the issue itself may come to be, this country should say here and now that Canada is prepared to support whatever may be proposed by the government at Westminster."

But when the blow fell within six months of that speech Mr. King did not hesitate. He at once issued a statement declaring he would ask parliament to approve the government's policy of "effective co-operation by Canada at the side of Britain."

Of his personal reaction to this responsibility Mr. King said: "I never dreamed that the day would come when, after spending a lifetime in a continuous effort to promote and preserve peace and goodwill in international as well as industrial relations, it should fall to my lot to be the one to lead this Dominion of Canada into a great war; but that responsibility I assume with a sense of being true to the very blood that is in my veins."

Outstanding in Mackenzie King's career is his part in the achievement of free nationhood of Canada's case, when he headed the Canadian delegation to the Imperial Conference in 1926, was a vital step in the development of the Statute of Westminster of 1931. The Conference of 1939 made the historic definition of the position and mutual relations of Great Britain in the Dominions:

"They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any respect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Constitutional Issue

Mr. King at the Imperial Conference of 1926 also obtained a clarification of the duties and powers of the governor-general. After the general election of Oct. 29, 1925, Lord Byng, then in the vice-regal post at Ottawa, had declined the advice of Mr. King, as prime minister, to dissolve parliament on the ground no party had a clear mandate to form a government. The governor-general, had, instead, asked Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, to form a government, which was defeated in the "constitutional" election of Sept. 14, 1926.

In the Canadian Parliament, March 29, 1927, Mr. King said: "We have undoubtedly led the way in bringing about the present constitutional position of the governor-general. I think it can be said there is no longer any possibility of doubt that the governor-general is the representative of his Majesty the King and in no way representative of the government of Great Britain or any department of that government."

Shortly after this declaration the United Kingdom sent a high commissioner to Canada to act as liaison betewen the Canadian and United Kingdom governments, a responsibility which previously had been that of the governor-general.

Mr. King started Canada's foreign diplomatic service during his 1926-30 regime, sending ministers to Washington and Tokyo. Before the Second Great War started this service had been extended to include legations in Paris, Brussels and The Hague. During the war Mr. King raised the status of most Canadian representatives abroad from minister to Ambassador and extended the diplomatic service to provide for representation in many other countries.

Throughout his term of office Mr. King held the position of secretary of state for external affairs as well as prime minister. That had been the rule from the time of Sir John A. Macdonald but the growth of the external affairs department and expansion of Canadian business with other governments gave rise to suggestions there should be a separate minister. Mr. King admitted the need but preferred while the war crisis existed to keep his hand on the external affairs department.

Militant Ancestry

Born in Berlin (now Kitchener) Ont., Dec. 17, 1874, Mr. King was the eldest son of John King, K.C., and Isabel Grace, youngest daughter of William Lyon Mackenzie, militant advocate of responsible government in Canada, who was exiled for his leadership in the rebellion of 1837.

A brilliant university career prepared Mackenzie King for his life in public service. At the University of Toronto he received his B.A., in 1895, his LLB., in 1896 and M.A. in 1897. Fellowships gave him a year at the University of Chicago and a year at Harvard. It was while at the University of Chicago that Mr. King became deeply interested in social problems. He lived at Hull House, founded and then led by the late Jane Adams, pioneer social worker.

In vacations and on compilation of his university studies Mr. King worked on Toronto newspapers as a reporter and, for a time, as a special writer on social conditions. His newspaper work brought to his notice sweatshop conditions under which the manufacture of uniforms for postmen were carried on.

He told Sir William Mulock, then postmaster general in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's cabinet, of the conditions and suggested a fair wage clause be written into all government contracts. Sir William asked the young reporter to prepare a memorandum, which led to an act of parliament requiring the payment of fair wages on all work done under government contracts.

Made Deputy Minister

Sir Wilfrid decided to establish a department of labor and put Sir William in charge of it. Looking for staff he thought of the man who had drafted the memorandum on fair wages. While Mr. King travelled in Italy, on a Harvard fellowship he received a cable from Sir William offering him the post of first deputy minister of labor. The salary was smaller, the future more uncertain than that held out by the offer of a teaching post at Harvard but he accepted and returned to Canada to organize the department in 1900.

In 1908 Sir Wilfrid decided the time for a full-time minister of labor and promoted the deputy to the post. Mr. King was nominated as Liberal candidate in his native constituency of Waterloo North at the general election of that year, elected and sworn in as minister of labor. He went out of office with the Laurier government on the reciprocity issue in the general election of 1911, losing his seat in Commons.

Mr. King was placed in charge of the Liberal information office in Ottawa and became editor of the Liberal Monthly which provided him with an occupation until 1914 when he was engaged by the Rockefeller Foundation as director of industrial research.

Elected Leader

During the First Great War conscription became an issue in 1917. The Conservative government headed by Sir Robert Borden obtained the support of a number of prominent Liberals, formed a union government, passed the Conscription Act and the Wartime Election Act, and went to the country Dec. 17, 1917.

JUDGE CANCELS BAIL — Chief Sessions Court Judge Edouard Archambault, left, dropped a bombshell at the sensational trial of three Quebec Provincial Police detectives recently when he cancelled their bail of $1,900 each and ordered them held behind bars for the remainder of the case. They are Det. Lt. Marcel Patenaude and Det. Sgt. Gaston Archambault. Third accused, ex-Det. Paul Hervieux is not pictured. The three detectives are on trial for plotting a series of bank haldups in the Montreal district.

World Leaders Pay Tribute To Canada's Ex-Prime Minister

By The Canadian Press.

The men who worked with William Lyon Mackenzie King in his 40 years of public life and the men who fought scores of political battles against him joined today in paying tribute to his service to Canada and the world.

Tributes came from one end of Canada to the other. They came, too, from one end of the democratic world to the other —an indication of the key position in international affairs which Canada reached under Mr. King's leadership.

Among the first messages was one from the King and Queen. In a cable to Viscount Alexander the Governor-General they said: "his wisdom and wide experience were of constant value in the counsels of the British Commonwealth of Nations, while his lifelong service to Canada will ensure him an honored place in the history of his country and in the hearts of its people."

In Vancouver, Viscount Alexander himself said: "Canada has lost a great statesman and Lady Alexander and I have lost a very dear personal friend."

King Era.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said his predecessor's death from pneumonia Saturday night ended a period "which historians will certainly describe as the Mackenzie King Era."

"No other man will have a larger place or higher claims on the gratitude of his fellow citizens," he added. ". . . today the government of our country has lost its wisest counsellor and the people of Canada their greatest public servant."

Prime Minister Attlee said Mr King held the office of prime minister longer than any other statesman in Commonwealth history and "rendered eminent service not only to Canada but to the British Commonwealth of nations."

President Truman said Mr. King's political career was "as distinguished as it was extended and brought Canada to a new stature of greatness."

Add Tributes

Men who for many years were political enemies of Mr. King added their tributes.

George Drew, national Progressive Conservative leader, said: "He was intimately associated at all times with national affairs for half of the years which have passed since Canada became a nation because of the part he played in the many important events through which our country passed during those long and eventful years.

Gordon Graydon, now Progressive Conservative member for Peel and wartime opposition leader, said Canada was bowed in grief at the loss of a man of "uncanny wisdom and judgment in world and national affairs."

M. J. Coldwell, National C.C.F. leader said he had deep respect for "those qualities and characteristics which enabled him (Mr. King) to lead this country successfully through the war years."

Solon low, Social Credit leader, said the world had lost one of its greatest statesmen and Canada one of its most illustrious sons.

Other Tributes

Other tributes from national and international figures:

Winston Churchill, wartime British Prime Minister: "I deeply regret the loss of this great statesman whose friendship I enjoyed for so many years and whose services to Canada and the British Empire will long be remembered."

Prime Minisited Nehru of India: "I came to look upon him. . . not only as a great statesman of Canada who had played a notable part in the building up of that great country but also as a friend for whom I had respect and affection."

Omemee Wins First In Presbytery Series

Bethel and Omemee Young People's Union nines met Friday night at Omemee with Bethel topping the 21-14 score. This was the first game of the Lindsay Presbytery competition.

Bethel scored only one run in the first inning while Omemee crossed the plate five times The second inning ended with Omemee still out in front 7-5. They held Bethel scoreless in the third while they added five more to their majority. Bethel squeezed a run across in the fourth but Omemee retaliated with two.

Agreement was then made by the teams to play only two more innings due to the increasing darkness. The fifth was scoreless. Bethel then dropped the axe on Omemee scoring 15 runs in the sixth to end the scoring at 21-14.

Opinions Vary On Possible War Inflation

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

A considerable discussion goes on as to whether it is better to enter a war from a depression, as was the case in 1939, or from a boom, such as exists now.

The consensus seems to be that it is better to enter from a boom, but there are some arguments on the other side.

A principal argument on the other side is that, in 1939, there was a huge surplus of manpower and womanpower which could be drawn upon both for the services and for expanding wartime production.

The opposing argument is that there now is an industrial machine in being; that nearly every one is trained for some job or other; and that this industrial machine and trained personnel can be quickly turned towards any objective without the necessity of building new plants or training people.

There are arguments, too, on whether or not increased defence spending should bring higher prices.

It seems inevitable that it will to a degree, but some observers, at least, see tendencies which may keep prices under control. They argue as follows:

The great expansion in productive facilities has made it possible to take care of both military needs and a reasonable measure of civilian requirements.

Better Supplied

Also, recent heavy purchases of goods by the general public means that people are better supplied to go through a war period than in 1939 when they were just coming out of a depression in which they had bought little.

Further, new automobiles, appliances and gadgets have a longer life than those of pre-war days and so will need replacement so soon.

The other side of this argument runs like this:

Demand of the military for more steel, copper, zinc, motor vehicles, rubber and so on, comes at a time when some industries already are pushed to or beyond their capacity to keep up with present civilian demand.

Cabinet Plans

Prime Minister St. Laurent was to arrive today from his vacation home in St. Patrice, Que., to hold a cabinet council to plan the state funeral he has ordered.

To Lie In State

Th body was takn Sunday night to Laurier House, four-storey Ottawa home willed to Mr. King by the widow of Sir Wilfrid Laurier whom Mr. King followed as Liberal leader in 1919.

From 10 a.m. Tuesday the body will lie in state in the Hall of Fame of the parliament building. About 3.30 o'clock Wednesday a funeral procession will move from the centre block to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for a ceremony to be conducted by his pastor, the Rev. A. I. Burnett.

After the service the body will go by special train to Toronto for burial Thursday morning in Mount Pleasant cemetery beside the graves of his parents, Mr and Mrs. John King, and others of the family.

Mr. King, who held the prime ministership for more than 21 years with two breaks—one of weeks and one of five years—won himself familiarity and a large measure of respect not only in Canada but throughout the world.

Breaks Records

No other man has led an English-speaking political party as he—29 years—and no other Commonwealth prime minister had held office so long.

He died, as he lived, in quiet, modest surroundings, aloof from the public and from public acclaim.

A month ago he went from Laurier House to his Kingsmere estate which he started to build up when he first came to Ottawa in 1900.

He told a friend then that he believed the quiet and the country air would restore his strength as it had so often in the last 30 years.

But the physique and spirit which carried him successfully through much stress, including his responsibilities in the Second World War and its aftermath, failed to respond.

He had hoped at Kingsmere to make some progress on writing his memoirs and arranging for the Dominion Archives the vast accumulation of important documents in his care.

Not Equal To It

But he found, as he had since he handed over the Liberal party leadership Aug. 7, 1948, and the prime ministership Nov. 15, 1948, that his strength was not equal to it.

He had with difficulty accepted the verdict of specialists who treated him in London in October, 1948, that only the most complete rest and removal from any cares of office or position would permit his return to a measure of good health.

It was learned today that he had made little progress on his memoirs or on the preparation of his store of documents for public use. The work probably will be carried on by his associates.

Mr. King had found it necessary since Christmas to refuse most invitations and spend a great deal of his time in bed.

His last public appearance was as the state dinner given by the government to delegates to the Empire Press Union's conference in Ottawa in mid-June.

When he died there were at his bedside three nephews; his associates in preparation of his memoirs; his domestic staff; and J. Edouard Handy, for many years his secretary and constant companion.

In his life he had many political disappointments, personal defeats at the polls and two defeats of the government he led, but he also won unprecedented victories.

Entered Public Life

Mr. King entered public life in 1900. He became the first deputy minister of labor, and in 1908 assumed cabinet rank with the Labor portfolio. Except for four years between 1914 and 1918 when he was with the Rockefeller Foundation, Mr. King was prominent in Canada's public life.

He first became Prime Minister in 1921 and at the age of 46, 13 years after he was first elected to the House of Commons as member for the Ontario riding of Waterloo North.

He was out of office three months following the stalemate election in 1925 but came back the following year. Then his Liberal party was defeated in 1930 and was out of office for five years. The 1935 general election victory launched a 13-year stretch that closed out his record.

Early in 1948 he indicated he wished Louis St. Laurent, the man whom he brought into politics as Justice Minister in 1941, to succeed him as party leader. A Liberal convention acceded to his wish.

Mr. King retained the office of Prime Minister until November, 1948. He was then almost 74.

$500,000 Fire Destroys Wharf

VANCOUVER, July 24 (CP) — A raging $500,000 fire that shot tongues of flame hundreds of feet skyward, Sunday destroyed a major grain wharf and much of its equipment on Burrard Inlet, four miles east of the city's centre.

Four hundred firemen and most of the city's firefighting equipment battled the blaze, which for a time threatened seven nearby elevators containing $1,000,000 worth of grain.

By the time the flames began to subside, the Columbia pier, a distributor machinery building, an overhead grain conveyor and 14 boxcars on a railway siding alongside the pier were destroyed. No one was injured.

At one time, flames licked along conveyor system to within a few feet of the towering concrete elevators on the shoreline a short distance from the fire-ravaged T-shaped wharf.

Firemen crawled amidst intense heat into the conveyor housing to check the flames before they reached the elevators.

Grimsby Girl "Miss Toronto"

TORONTO, July 24 (CP) — A farm girl from the Niagara peninsula is Miss Toronto of 1950.

Ruby Mann of Grimsby, became the first non-Torontonian to win the beauty title when she was crowned Saturday at the annual Toronto police field day. She is a hazel-eyed, 125-pound blonde who wants to become a model.

She was born at Edam, Sask., and now lives on her father's fruit farm near Grimsby, 15 miles west of Hamilton, and works as a stenographer in Grimsby. With the title, she'll receive $1,000, a wrist watch, merchandise and clothing and courses in car driving and modelling.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Mann, were brought to Toronto by police squad car Saturday night for the celebrations. They gave up wheat farming in Saskatchewan six years ago to come east.

Former German Agent Outlines Russian Plan If War Starts

By CLARKE BEACH

WASHINGTON, July 24 (AP) —A former German espionage agent claims he has obtained information about the opening moves planned by Russia in case of war against the Western powers.

He described them recently in a series of articles in the newspaper Die Zeit of Hamburg, Germany. He also gave what he said were detailed descriptions of the Russian armed forces and military equipment.

The articles have been translated by the Congressional Library for the information of Congress and Government intelligence agencies.

No American officials vouch for them, but military experts have found them of great interest and deem them worth studying.

The articles are signed "Nikolaus Eck." The editor of Die Zeit told the Associated Press this is a pen name used by the writer for the security of himself and his sources.

Powerful Tank Force

This is Nikolaus Eck's story:

In case of war the first Russian push wil come from Thuringia, the German province in the southwest section of the Russian occupation zone. A powerful force of tank divisions is stationed there.

This army group will try to advance to the Atlantic and form the southern arm of a pincers around the Baltic Sea. The northern arm of the pincers will be formed by the Northwest army group.

The strategic plan is to seize the entire Baltic area.

Two other army groups in the south will at the same time clap a pincers around the Turkish straits. Another army would march on India.

It is unlikely that the Soviets will undertake any large scale amphibious operations against Japan or North America in the foreseeable future.

Remain on Defensive

In the Arctic the Soviet plan is simply to remain on the defensive. Russian surface naval strength is concentrated primarily in the Baltic and Black Seas. Among 110 vessels in the Baltic are eight cruisers and the old Czarist battleship October Revolution. In the Black Sea are 73 ships, including three cruisers In the Arctic are 182 surface vessels chiefly minesweepers, Torpedo boats and patrol raft. In the Pacific are 25 destroyers and torpedo boats.

The Russians now have 390 submarines, and 120 more are under construction

The island of Ruegen, in the western part of the Baltic sea of the north German coast, is being made into a major submarine base.

The Russian Air Force has 8,900 tactical planes and light bombers and 450 heavy bombers

263 Divisions

The Red Army gets the bulk of the country's defence funds. Its present strength of 4,500,000 men could be expanded to 20,000,000. It now comprises 263 divisions—170 infantry, 35 tank and 58 artillery.

Russia has 40,000 tanks and 40,000 guns. It is producing anually 40,000 to 50,000 guns and 15,000 tanks. Tank production could be doubled.

Strike Creates Power Shortage

REGINA, July 24 (CP)—Street lights were blacked out Sunday night to spin out the power supply produced by a skeleton crew manning Regina's strike-bound power plant.

Mayor Garnet Menzies called on business, industry and private citizens to cut consumption. The city-owned utility was put on an emergency basis Saturday after about 125 employees—members of the Electric Utilities Employees' Union (CIO-CCL) — walked off the job.

Sabotage Rife In Belgium Against King

20 Small Bombs Exploded In Various Sections

BRUSSELS, July 25—(CP)—Anti-riot squads of Gendarmes went to action posts in Belgium today as an epidemic of bombs and acts of sabotage shattered the uneasy three-day calm following exiled King Leopold's return to the throne.

The pattern of incidents suggested an attempt to paralyze communications.

About 20 small bombs exploded in various parts of the country within the last 24 hours. The main railway line between Namur and Brussels was dynamited in two places.

Saboteurs slashed telephone and signal lines at many points.

New incidents—from strewing nails in main roads to interference with level crossings and the unscrewing of rails—were reported hourly today.

There were no casualties or bloodshed reported.

Security Measures

Interior ministry and security officials discussed putting into operation security measures mapped out in anticipation of an outbreak of trouble on the King's return from exile.

Stormy scenes were expected at today's session of the two Houses of Parliament—first since Catholic Senators and deputies voted the King's return.

Opposition members — Socialists, Liberals and Communists—were expected to switch the emphasis of their attack against the King from his wartime record to his actions since the weekend.

Instead of delivering the message personally from the throne, Leopold last Saturday gave it to the presidents of the Chamber of Deputies and Senate. Made public then, it pledged the Monarch to forget past disagreements and maintain close relations with the legislatures.

To Continue Fight

Leaders of the anti-Leopold forces, meanwhile, went ahead with plans for "total non-co-operation and active resistance" toward the King and his adherents. A nine-man national action committee of Socialist, trade union and co-operative leaders announced they were setting in motion measures prepared "for the days and weeks to come."

Socialist leaders already have announced plans for a spreading wave of strikes but have indicated they do not plan yet to call a general strike.

WOUNDED WAITING—Wounded American soldiers rest in an evacuation hospital in Pusan, South Korea, waiting for hospital ships to take them to Japan. Late reports had a 14-hour tank-led Communist assault on the front below Taejon threatening communication lines from Pusan.

Say Retreat Likely To Continue

Allied Carrier Planes Stage Attack Against Reds in South

TOKYO, July 26—(Wednesday)—(CP)—Waves of fanatical North Korean troops drove elements of the United States First Cavalry Division out of Yongdong Monday, narrowing the American defence perimeter in southeast Korea.

Far to the southwest, Allied carrier planes blasted targets where Red troops swept virtually unopposed to the coast.

The air strike was mounted in 24 hours by U.S. and British carriers just returned to an unnamed port after operations north of the 38th parallel along Korea's east coast. They struck at "targets of opportunity," said a headquarters announcement. Results of the raid were not reported.

The rampaging Communists sheared off all the western and southwestern side of the peninsula. They seized the southern tip of Korea and turned eastward toward Pusan, U.S. supply port on the southeastern tip of the peninsula.

Yongdong Abandoned

Yongdong was abandoned after a fierce day-long fight. Most of the U.S. troops got out safely, but troops on the flanks were trapped and battered by Communist roadblocks, snipers and guerrillas.

The Reds stole through the hills surrounding Yongdong wearing grass and leaves to blend in with the countryside. Their camouflage made them difficult targets.

Gen. MacArthur's early-morning operational release today conceded that the North Korean invaders were continuing their pressure despite heavy losses and severed communications.

This release said "further withdrawals may be necessary," but did not include the withdrawal from Yongdong late Tuesday, which field dispatches already had reported.

A Reuters field dispatch said that during the fierce Yongdong battle U.S. troops were attacked from both sides but fought successfully to hold an escape route open under heavy Red shelling.

The 1st Cavalry fought off an all-out bid by two Red units to close the road and trap the main body of Americans.

Other units on the American flanks were reported making a fighting withdrawal through road blocks and guerrillas.

More Infiltration

Some reports said Communist infiltrators were fighting behind the U.S. lines of retreat. The withdrawal from Yongdong, which is 20 miles southeast of Red-held Taejon, came after North Korean tanks suddenly appeared in the city and hordes of Red infantry overwhelmed the U.S. front lines.

U.S. guns, shooting over open sights, were reported to have mown down massed waves of North Korean infantry in the hundreds.

Safe Crackers Strike

ILDERTON, Ont., July 25 (CP)—Safe crackers made a daring swoop Monday night on this Middlesex County village, blasted two safes and broke into a third building. They escaped with an undetermined amount in cash and cheques, and a small quantity of produce. Safes at the Medd Service Station and the Ilderton-Middlesex Farmers' Co-operative were blown open, and entry was made at Robb's Frozen Foods.

Labatt Abductor 3-Fingered Abe Dies In Windsor

WINDSOR, July 25 (CP) — Michael (Three-fingered Abe) McCardle, one of the men who kidnapped John Labatt in 1934, was buried here today. He was about 53.

He was freed from Kingston penitentiary in 1944 after serving most of a 12-year term for abduction of the wealthy London, Ont., brewer. Fourteen months later he returned to Kingston, sentenced to five years for armed robbery of a fruit company in Windsor.

When that term was served, he returned here.

McCardle, a native of the Dublin district of Western Ontario, confessed in Middlesex county court in 1935 that he was one of the men who figured in the Labatt kidnapping Aug. 14, 1934.

Labatt was abducted while driving from his summer home on the lakeshore road, near Sarnia. He was taken to the Muskoka district and held prisoner in a cottage. The gang demanded $150,000 ransom, which they never got.

Exonerated Meisner

McCardle's confession exonerated David Meisner, who at the time was under sentence of 15 years for participation in the kidnapping.

Arrested at Crown Point, Ind., McCardle confessed that the Labatt abduction was carried out by Jack Bannon, Russell Knowles a man named Pegram and himself. He said Meisner had nothing to do with it.

The ransom note sent to the Labatt family after the kidnapping was written in block letters and signed "Three-fingered Abe."

Call On Atlantic Partners To Rearm Quickly, Musn't Be Caught Napping

US Warns Council Korea Glaring Example Russia Will Stop At Nothing; Says Western Vigilance Must Be Redoubled

LONDON, July 25—(AP)—The United States called on her Atlantic Pact partners today to rearm quickly for the sake of world peace, warning that the West must not again be caught napping by Communist aggression. It was learned that Charles M. Spofford, U.S. member, told the first meeting of the Atlantic Alliance Council that Korea has shown Communism would not hesitate to pass from subversion to armed aggression. He called for Western vigilance and a quick increase in military strength.

The meeting was secret and only a non-committal communique was issued at the end of the session. It reported merely that, for reasons of military security, the deputies work would be conducted behind closed doors.

Named Chairman

Spofford, a New York lawyer, was named chairman of the 12-nation permanent civilian high command. The council was created in May by the foreign ministers of the 12 countries, who had called for "tangible results" by fall.

Prodded by events in Korea, the delegates mapped a program to cut a four-year rearmament schedule to two years.

Officials reported that their aim is to telescope the time-table of attaining military preparedness against Communism to two years. Originally the schedule allowed four years.

The objects which will come up for study and probable approval include:

1. Creation of a central Western Army of about 30 divisions, based in Europe.

2. Mapping and launching twin multi-billion dollar rearmament drives in the United States and Europe.

3. Assignment of specific jobs to each country as part of a grand plan for defence and rearmament.

These and a wide range of other tasks confront deputies of the 12 foreign ministers who were to begin their talks in London's Lancaster House this morning.

Britain Decides To Send Troops To Korea

LONDON, July 25 (CP)—Informants in touch with the government reported today Britain has decided to offer a small ground force to the United Nations for use in Formosa.

They reported this after the British Cabinet met in special session, apparently to discuss a number of major changes in national defence policy.

The government made a final check in preparation for tomorrow's full-dress debate in the House of Commons on the readiness of British defences to meet any aggression.

British ships and planes now are in the Korea fight. The government is reported to feel it must also send at least a token force of land troops for the psychological effect on men fighting in Korea and on United States public opinion.

Draw Up Reply

Ministers drew up the Cabinet's official reply to the request of Trygve Lie, United Nations Secretary-General, for more ground forces for Korea.

Political quarters said Britain might send such a force—but if so it could be only of small dimensions because of commitments elsewhere.

It is understood that defence experts practically ruled out, as unnecessary at this juncture, an extension of the periods of British compulsory military service from 18 months to two years.

Navy Hunting Foreign Subs Off East Coast

OTTAWA, July 25 (CP)—The navy is hunting foreign submarines reported off Canada's east coast, but so far all they've located is a few schools of whales.

A naval spokesman said seven separate reports of unidentified submarine sightings off the Atlantic seaboard have come in so far. The first was three weeks ago. But neither air-sea military search nor checks by intelligence officers have been able to confirm any of them.

The spokesmen conceded, however, that it is quite possible that a foreign sub may be in east coast waters. And it is thought that Russia is the only foreign power that would send such a craft.

The navy is taking no chances. It sent two frigates to comb coastal areas with the aid of an RCAF anti-submarine squadron and some anti-sub planes from Dartmouth, NS.

The frigates have swept the whole Bay of Fundy area in zig-zag lines. Nothing has shown on the radar screens of the Asdic sub-locating equipment except a few whales.

The latest reports of sub-sightings came from Saint John, NB, and Grand Manan Island, Neither appeared to have any foundation. The navy is more interested in earlier reports, one by a fisherman named Inter at Chance Harbor, NB, that a sub almost swamped his boat July 5, and one by a foreign trawler that a sub surfaced near her July 10 off Newfoundland's Grand Banks fishing grounds.

Naval intelligence officers have gone to the east coast to check these reports and are expected back in Ottawa soon. The naval spokesman said the fisherman's story had discrepancies but could be true.

HELP UNIVERSITY

CAEN, France, July 25 (Reuters).—Rt. Hon. Thibaudeau Rinfret, Chief Justice of Canada, has handed a cheque for more than $41,000 to Professor Paul Jaur, rector of the Caen Faculty of Science, to aid in building a new university.

20,000 Manchuria Veterans Recalled In March To Korea

By BILL SHINN

U.S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN KOREA, July 25—(AP)—North Korean prisoners said today that 20,000 Korean veterans of the Chinese Communist Army were recalled in March for the invasion of South Korea. They added today in interviews:

Russian advisers are working with North Korean Army units.

Russia in May—at least a full month before the invasion—supplied the North Korean Army with huge quantities of military equipment.

A companion strike at Formosa by the Chinese Communists apparently was planned but did not come off.

(The United States threw a screen of warships between Formosa and Red china a few days after the invasion of South Korea.)

Fought Several Years

Kim Kwang Whan, 24, and Suk Yung Chan, 22, said the 20,000 Korean veterans, as the 141st division of the Chinese Red 47th army, fought several years in Manchuria.

Some of the 239 prisoners in a stockade here talked freely with correspondents.

Ko Duk Rin, a second lieutenant, said the Chinese Communists told the Korean veterans that South Korea, Formosa and Hainan all would fall at the same time. Hainan fell in late April.

Kim Yung Bok, 35, a second lieutenant, said North Korea received much military equipment from Russia last May. There were unknown numbers of Russian-built tanks at the Pyongyang arsenal, he added.

RCAF Squadron Briefed On War

MONTREAL, July 25 (CP) — The personnel of the RCAF 426 Transport Squadron today received last-minute briefing before leaving for their United Nations assignment to ferry men and supplies across the Pacific in connection with the Korean war.

Flight orders, expected hourly since the squadron was assigned to the job last week, were announced Monday by Wing Cmdr C. H. Mussells, the squadron's commanding officer.

Total of 250 air and ground crew are to take off in six North Stars at 7 p.m. EDT tonight from the squadron's base at nearby Dorval airport.

This morning a parade and inspection were to be held. Wing Cmdr. Mussells was expected to speak to next-of-kin and friends of personnel.

On the way to their Tacoma, Wash., west coast base, the six planes will fly in formation over Ottawa and Toronto. The unit will land at Winnipeg at 12:30 a.m. EDT tomorrow, then continue to the coast. It is expected to reach McChord Field, near Tacoma about 10 a.m. PDT.

Pioneer Africa Airman Dies From Beating

DURBAN, Union of South Africa, July 25 — AP) — Rear Admiral John Weston, 80, South Africa's pioneer airman, died on Monday night of injuries received when he was beaten by a masked gang Friday police said.

Police said the gang also beat up Mrs. Weston, 78 Two natives have been detained.

West was the fir. Briton to hold balloonist and heavier than air certificates simultaneously.

Develops Plan Shame Hoarders

DETROIT July 25 (CP)—Ernest L. Murphy, grocery store owner, thinks merchants can shame shoppers out of hoarding food.

He has had a set of big brown bags printed in bright red letters "hoarder's bag."

"Any customer who comes in and buys far over his ordinary amount of stuff scarce in wartime, like sugar, lard and the like, will have his groceries put into one of these hoarder's bags," Murphy said.

Abbott Assistant Belzile Dies

RIVIERE DU LOUP, Que., July 25 (CP)—Gleason Belzile, Liberal member of parliament for Rimouski and parliamentary assistant to the finance minister, died today at his summer home in the nearby St. Lawrence riverside resort of Notre Dame du Portage. He was 51.

Mr. Belzile, seriously ill since the beginning of the year, was due to celebrate his 52nd birthday Aug. 30.

He was a native of Rimouski which he represented in the House of Commons since general elections in 1945.

His widow and nine children survive.

Lion Shot On Main St.

RYCROFT, Alta., July 25 (CP) —A 750-pound African lion was shot to death Monday on the main street of this Peace River town, after terrorizing residents for more than an hour.

The lion, biggest of three in a touring carnival from Edmonton, escaped from its cage early Monday and passed within 15 feet of three sleeping carnival hands as it made its way uptown.

A few minutes later it appeared before startled early risers on the towns main street.

After refusing to re-enter its cage, baited by fresh meat, the snarling animal was shot by two town residents and an RCMP constable.

Charge Israel Fires On Plane

BEIRUT, Lebanon, July 25 — (AP) — Lebanon charged today that an Israeli Spitfire machine-gunned a Lebanese transport plane Monday, killing three passengers and wounding eight others.

A government announcement said a Jew carrying a Jordan passport and two Lebanese were killed.

The announcement said the plane, carrying 25 passengers, was returning to Beirut from Jerusalem and was attacked over Lebanese territory.

The government said it had protested to the United Nations armistice committee for Palestine.

At Tel Aviv, Israel, an Israeli army communique charged that a Lebanese aircraft had violated Israel's frontier by flying over northern Galilee.

The communique said a plane intercepted by Israeli fighters last night refused to heed signals to land and that warning shots were fired.

Six Canadians Owe Lives To Brave Korean Drivers

WINDSOR, July 25 — (CP)—Six Canadian miners who escaped from South Korea one jump ahead of the invading Communists are on theier way home to Northern Ontario and Quebec today. Four others in the group of 10 Canadian miners who escaped are following a day behind.

All praised the Red Cross and United States Army who helped their evacuation from coal mines on Korea's east coast

But their greatest praise was for the Korean people— and for five Korean drivers who stayed at the wheels of trucks for 26 hours to get them to safety

The six arrived in Windsor Monday night after reaching Detroit by plane — foreman Joseph Malette, 47 Napoleon Cousineau, 49, and Sam E. Welcher, 44, all of Timmins, Ont., John Forget, 26, and his brother Roger, 23, of Haileybury, Ont., and Dyilio Sartoretto, 35, of West Rouyn, Que.

The four expected to arrive today are Ernest Genest and Carl Osterberg of Cobalt, Dorien Roy of Kirkland Lake and Leon Landry, of Rouyn.

All are diamond drillers who left mines in Ontario and Quebec last April to work in Korea for a United States Mining Company.

"We were given only nine hours' warning of the invasion before we had to move out at 3 a.m. June 26," Sartoretto said.

"Five Korean drivers drove our trucks for 26 hours through South Korea to Pusan. We would never have got through the roads and trails if it hadn't been for them."

After the group, with eight United States diamond drillers, reached Pusan and boats for Japan, the Red Cross and the U. S. army took over.

New Bombing Trick Sends Bridges Down

TOKYO, July 25 (AP)—Maj.-Gen. Earle E. Partridge, United States Fifth Air Force commander in Korea, today disclosed a new bombing trick to blow up bridges in Korea.

Parachutes are rigged to 500-pound bombs which are dropped at the extremely low level of 500 feet. The parachute slows the descent, enabling the plane to get out of the blast area before the bomb goes off.

This new technique may have been used by B-29s in low level raids near Seoul Monday and at strategic points north of the battlefront. The big bombers destroyed or damaged 12 to 15 bridges.

King Back At Parliament Hill For Last

Guard of Honor Surrounds Bier Where Thousands Will Pass

OTTAWA, July 25 (CP)—William Lyon Mackenzie King has returned for the last time to the massive grey-stone building on Parliament Hill.

Beneath the Gothic arches and marble walls that witnessed many of his triumphs, Canadians gathered to pay their respects to the kindly but enigmatic man who was their prime minister for almost a quarter of a century.

The body of the bachelor statesman, who died Saturday at the age of 75, was brought Monday night to the centre block of parliament from his Laurier House residence.

It will lie in state in the hall of fame today and until about 3:30 p.m. Wednesday when it will be carried through lines of servicemen to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in a state funeral procession. Burial will be in Toronto Thursday.

Thousands are expected to file past the bier of the man who ruled over the buildings —as political leader of his country for a longer period than that of any other Prime Minister in the British Commonwealth.

Guard of Honor.

Before the first persons were admitted to the buildings today, a uniformed guard-of-honor was mounted at each corner of the casket. A four-man guard—a soldier, a sailor, an airman and an RCMP constable—will remain on duty during the whole time the public is allowed in the buildings, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to about 2:30 p.m. tomorrow.

On top of the casket is the golden, enamelled Order of Merit with its long red-and-green ribbon, presented to the former Prime Minister by the King in 1947. Mr. King prized the decoration more than any other award bestowed on him during his public service. It was on the coffin Monday at Laurier House where close friends and high officials were allowed to see the body before it was taken to Parliament Hill.

The Secretary of State's office announced a list of 39 honorary pallbearers, chosen by Mr. King some time before his death. Nine will be unable to attend for reasons of health or because of absence from the country.

The list was headed by Mr. St. Laurent and members of the Cabinet who had served under Mr. King. It included members of the Senate, representatives of the judiciary and men who had close connections with Mr. King.

One of the honorary pallbearers chosen was Senator Charles Bishop, former member of the parliamentary press gallery.

British Bread To Be Whiter

LONDON, July 25—(Reuters)—The British loaf is to be whiter from Aug. 27.

Food Minister Maurice Webb announced in the Commons Monday that the extraction rate of flour baked into the standardized "white" loaf is to be reduced from 85 per cent to 80.

This reduction in the amount of by-products going into flour will amount to 260,000 tons a year which can be fed to animals. The same amount of extra wheat will have to be found to meet baking needs.

The extra animal feed will produce 44,000 tons more pork, 49,000,000 dozen more eggs, or 6,000 tons more poultry meat.

King Memorial Service At Westminster

LONDON, July 25 (CP) — A memorial service will be held in Westminster Abbey Friday for Mackenzie King, it was made known today.

Canada will be represented by L. Dana Wilgress, High Commissioner in London, and other members of the Dominion's staff in London. Representatives of the King and of the British government also are expected to attend.

Gets Idea From Movie Boy 15 Wrecks Train

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., July 25 (AP)—A 15-year-old boy who admitted wrecking a passenger train told officers Monday he got the idea from watching a movie about the notorious Dalton gang.

Sheriff E. F. Claxton said William L. Godsey, son of a sharecropper confessed breaking a switch lock and a signal light near Holland, Mo.

A Memphis-to-St. Louis train hit the switch at 50 miles an hour and jumped the rails Sunday, killing the engineer and injuring 13 persons.

Hint Death Sand Latest US Development

CHICAGO, July 25—(AP)—Is the United States working to develops "death sand?" A University of Illinois physicist thinks it's likely.

This slow-acting poison, an invisible form of radio-active dust, could be the most insidious—or most humane — type of atomic weapon known.

Dr. Louis N. Ridenour said the substance would be "the lightest and most transportable of all the weapons of destruction."

The United Statesc Atomic Energy Commission's plutonium production plant in Hanford, Wash., could produce enough of this dust every month to contaminate 144 square miles, he added.

Radio-active sand, he believes, could be made by dipping tiny sand particles or metal powder in a water solution of radio-active salts. These salts, when dried, would cling to the outside of each particle.

Unless warned in advance, residents of an area sprayed with this dust would not know they were in danger until symtoms of radio-active poisoning appeared two weeks or a month later. Then it would be too late. They would have inhaled it and had their clothing covered with it. A few days later they would die.

But if warning were given, Rideour said, each member of the target population would have a choice whether to live or die.

Persons who remained in the area certainly would die, "while giving an excellent chance of survival to a person who flees at once, with a folded or dampened handkerchief over his nose and mouth."

Say Retreat

New North Korean Red attacks were anticipated in the northeast sector of the winding, 150-mile mountainous front.

In other sectors American and South Korean forces were reported holding the line, except in the far southwest, where the Communists ranged unchecked.

A spokesman at an advanced American outpost said:

"Our troops are fighting like Hell."

Frontal Attacks

The battle for Yongdong started with heavy frontal attacks on American positions across the main Taejon-Pusan highway at a point west of Yongdong. Fanatical Communists in waves fell upon the cavalrymen.

Meagre first reports indicated Yongdong itself was not fought over—contrary to earlier reports. The Americans pulled back through the town to their new positions. Most of the townspeople had been evacuated.

The Communists worked two jaws of a pincers movement while maintaining the heavy pressure of their frontal attack.

The 25th U.S. Division, in positions somewhere north of the First Calvary Division beat off two Communist attacks with artillery fire and infantry support, Associated Press correspondent Tom Lambert reported.

The 25th Division abandoned advanced positions during Monday night. Then it caught the Reds in a flanking fire when they made two heavy assaults during the day.

Damage 21 Tanks

Australian and American planes destroyed or damaged 21 Red tanks, 15 bridges and an armored car and raked enemy supply lines in stepped up activity.

Ten tanks, dispatches from Korea said, were destroyed. A Far East air forces spokesman in Korea said 11 more were damaged.

The 64 air missions in 191 sorties were in close co-operation with operations of the 1st Cavalry Division. The planes ranged also to Kwangju, deep in southwest Korea, where Red forces ranged unchecked by token forces of South Korean police.

Mustang pilots of the RAAF said they destroyed five tanks, one armored car, three artillery field pieces and five trucks. The Australians were operating in close support of U.S. ground forces presumably in the Yongdong sector.

At the same time it was announced the U.S. Fifth Air Force would step up its night operations against the Communists who have been moving men and tanks in long columns under cover of darkness.

Better Night Work

"We have to pin them down at night as we have them pinned in the day," said Maj.-Gen. Earl E. Partridge at fifth air force headquarters in Korea.

He said the Reds were able to maintain steady ground pressure because of night operations. The invaders had been moving motorized columns 25 miles long at night with lights on.

A.P. correspondent Lief Erickson reported from U.S. eighth army headquarters that the 1st cavalry division firmly held a line west of Yongdong "against Korean Reds attacking from the front, the flanks and trying to set up road blocks in the rear."

He added that Yongdong "was securely inside American lines but some guerrillas and snipers were cleared out early today."

A.P. photographer Max Destor was in the town for two hours, leaving at noon today, and reported no Red tanks moving in the battle area.

Of growing concern was the continued Communist seizure of strategic points in southwest Korea. The Reds completed a sweep of the west coast and turned east toward allied communication lines stretching inland from Pusan on the southeast corner.

(U.S. defence officials in Washington indicated that the Americans and South Koreans might be backed up into the southeastern corner. A briefing officer said it is becoming increasingly difficult to hold against hordes of North Koreans with units of three U.S. divisions and the smaller, more lightly-armed South Koreans.)

The Reds captured Haenam, near the extreme southern tip of the peninsula and more than 230 airline miles from the 38th parallel over which they plunged to begin the invasion a month ago.

Another Communist column swung northeast of captured Kwangju and occupied the southwestern railway junction of Namwon. Also seized was Kurye, 15 miles south of Namwon and midway between the rail centre and the southern port of Sunchon.

The former naval base of Mokpo, on the southwest coast, was taken previously.

The battle for Yongdong was a continuation of an assault which began with a tank attack Sunday. Increasing strength of the Red forces was reported in field dispatches and in headquarters announcements.

Unit Falls Back

Correspondent Erickson reported one of the cavalry units fell back from positions west of the Taejon-Yongdong highway. The withdrawal might have been for a few miles. The last reported position of the North Koreans was near the widening Kum River, which crosses the highway five miles west of Yongdong.

Two Red columns were reported attacking the American left flank in this sector, a point farther north defended by units of the U.S. 25th Division. Six of eight tanks were destroyed. MacArthur's headquarters reported.

Seventy-five miles east of Yongdong the naval-ground battle continued for ruined Yongdok, 25 miles up the east coast from the American beachhead at Pohang.

Directed by ground forces and aerial spotting, Allied warships poured 428 rounds of heavy shells into the area. Ground observers reported heavy casualties inflicted on a large concentration of Reds in the mountains southeast of the town.

On the central front, near Hamchang, the sixth South Korean Division was reported to have captured several field pieces and machine-guns in a counter-attack, evidently on comparatively small scale.

Press For Early Boost In United States Taxes

WASHINGTON, July 25—(AP)—Pressure for an early increase in United States taxes built up in Congress today to help pay for the multi-billion dollar battle against Communism in Korea and elsewhere.

Spokesmen for President Truman pushed ahead, meanwhile, with their first task: obtaining broad emergency controls over business, industry and consumer credit.

Those calling for an immediate tax boost included some who opposed, or at least questioned the requested controls, including Senator Robert Taft (rep. Ohio), chairman of the Senate Republican policy committee.

President Truman already has said he will ask for higher taxes. He may present some details tomorrow when Congress gets a report from his economic advisers. However, until Monday most talk had been of higher taxes becoming effective Jan. 1.

Impressive Figure

An impressive figure on the down-payment needs in the Korean-Communist defence came late Monday from Truman. He asked $10,486,976,000 in new money for the armed forces, give them an additional 600,000 men. It would expand the U.S. armed forces to more than 2,000,000.

The additional money would boost planned military spending for the current fiscal year which ends next June 30 to approximately $23,000,000,000.

Truman said he asked for the money "to meet the immediate situation in Korea" and to help the U.S. get ready to "deter further acts of aggression."

Of the total, $4,535,000,000 would go to the air force.

Senator Tom Connally (Dem. Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said a plan is being studied to divert Marshall Plan money from economic developments in Europe to military projects there instead.

On the Senate floor, Taft lashed out at the request for controls as mostly unjustified, except possibly for allocation of steel and scarce materials needed for munitions.

Prices Slump Steadily On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, July 25 (CP) — Prices slumped steadily as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Mild downward pressure depressed a wide list of market leaders for a second successive session following three straight days of advancing prices last week. Volume for the first three hours was 585,000 shares.

Most declines were held to fractions on the industrial board. Canadian Vickers lost 2½ at 103. A few refining oils bucked the trend.

Senior golds were down fractions and losses ranged up to about 15 cents in leading junior producers.

In base metals, key issues like Consolidated Smelters, Noranda and International Nickel led the decline. East Sullivan and United Keno Hill were also sharply down.

Western oils weakened quietly. National Petroleum, a leader in recent upturn, paced the downturn.

Final Tribute Paid Mrs. W. J. Outram

The funeral of Mrs. W. J. Outram, late of Edinburgh St., took place Monday to Little Lake Cemetery from the Belleghem funeral home. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. James Semple of George St. United Church of which Mrs. Outram was a devoted member all her life. Many friends attended.

In the congregational affairs at George St. Church Mrs. Outram had been a member of the Women's Aid and the Women's Missionary Society. She was especially interested in the Co-Workers Bible Class of which she had been a most attentive and faithful member for forty years, and until about two months ago.

The pall-bearers were the sons of Mrs. Outram: Howard and James, Edward A. and Walter; and two grandsons, Robert Outram and William Emmerson of Toronto.

Threatened Invasion

TAIPEI, Formosa, July 25—(AP)— The threatened Chinese Communist invasion of Quemoy Island, off the China coast opposite Formosa, ended today — at least temporarily.

The defence ministry said that Red junks seen approaching the 50-square-mile island, did not strike.

OPEN TOURIST BOOTH

A tourist booth was opened last weekend at Welcome. It boasts a complete, up-to-date library of road maps and other tourist information. It is being operated and financed by the Port Hope Board of Trade.

Canada Given Few Details Of US War Needs

OTTAWA, July 25 — (CP) — Canada so far has been given only the barest inkling of United States armaments and industrial needs in the event of all-out war, officials disclosed today.

That is why they are looking forward to the high-level, two-day industrial mobiliztion talks to be held here Aug. 8.

At this meeting of the joint Canada-United States Industrial Mobilization committee, Canada hopes to obtain concrete estimates of the type of industrial potential needed to fill armaments orders not only for the two countries but also for the eight member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty.

"If we only knew what was wanted," one authoritative source said, 'we could go ahead and plan. But we don't know. Canada needs so little herself that it would be a problem to plan a vast expansion without knowing what the United States wants."

At Leisurely Pace

Until the Korean crisis, joint Canada-United States planning proceeded at a leisurely pace, the source disclosed.

A survey had been made of Canadian industry and how it could be geared to produce war equipment. The United States was informed of the kind of goods Canada could produce, but there was little further activity and no United States decisions made as to how the Canadian potential could be used.

The source said joint committee is a planning body only. It can make recommendation to both governments and will do so, but it cannot implement the recommendations.

Stockpiling Proceeds Rapidly Across U.S.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP) —The munitions board told Congress today that a little more than half of the United States' proposed $4,000,000,000 stockpile of strategic and critical materials is on hand or on order.

The dollar value of stockpiled materials June 30 was $1,556,154,352, or 38.4 per cent of the total objective, the board said in a report on its activities for the first half of 1950. An addtional 12.2 per cent is on order, making a total of 50.6 per cent of the pre-Korean war objective on hand or on order.

Blame 2 Deaths On Storms Across Ontario

TORONTO, July 25.—(CP)—Two deaths were blamed in part on drenching rain which swept across Ontario, Monday.

The rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, overloaded sewers, disrupted some communications, caused considerable flooding and flattened field crops. Property damage amounted to thousands of dollars.

Mrs. Emile Milette, 62, of Stratford, was killed and four other persons injured in a two-automobile crash in blinding rain at Christie's Corners, near Hamilton.

Edward Speers, 23, an operator for the Municipal Telephone Company at Caledon, 30 miles northwest of Toronto, was fatally injured in a 40-foot fall from a wet, slippery pole on which he was making repairs.

Four persons were injured when a bus overturned in London, during the height of the storm.

Escapes Fire

At Mount Dennis, near Toronto, Mrs. William Tugwell carried her 11-day-old baby to safety when lightning streaked down a chimney, set fire to curtains in her apartment and made part of a ceiling collapse.

Cellars of hundreds of houses and downtown office buildings were flooded in Toronto. Rain caved in a section of the roof of a broker's office. The Bell Telephone Company reported the city hall switchboards and one in a Canadian National Railways building were "out" because water got into cables.

Toronto's lakeshore road was so badly flooded that traffic was detoured through the Canadian Exhibition grounds. Street-car service in several parts of the city was delayed for 15 to 30 minutes. Minor hydro breaks were reported.

Two people were trapped in an automobile in Brantford when a cloudburst inundated a subway. Harold Sewell of Brantford and his daughter waded through knee-deep water a few minutes before their car was completely flooded.

The storms extended as far west as Sault Ste. Marie, north to North Bay and east to the Quebec boundary. Forecasters said the disturbance will make little difference today in the weather, abnormally cool in many areas.

Wind and rain toppled chimneys at Sarnia and flattened wheat and barley south of Stratford. Lightning hit hydro substations at Sarnia, leaving the city without power for half an hour, knocked down trolley wires in Toronto and set fire to a barn on the farm of Mrs. Florence Osborne near Brantford.

Asks Inquiry Made Into Asylum Security

OWEN SOUND, July 25 (CP)—Mayor E. G. Sargent Monday asked the Ontario government for an investigation into security measures in force at the Ontario Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Penetanguishene.

In a letter to Premier Frost, Mayor Sargent said his request was prompted by the escape July 13 of Melville Wilkie of Owen Sound, committed to the hospital in 1932 after being tried for the murder of his wife and baby daughter.

Wilkie is still at large. It was his fifth escape from the hospital in 18 years. Police are searching a wooded area near Sauble Beach, 10 miles west of here, where Wilkie was last seen.

George Herman Woodcox of Haliburton, who escaped with Wilkie, gave himself up at Shallow Lake, near Sauble Beach, Saturday night.

Stocks Go Up Despite War And Depression

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Some advice to exporters is given in a booklet entitled "How To Get Your Share of the American Market," published by The New York Times.

It recognizes that the United States is a big territory for any sales organization to cover, but says the business, industrial and financial centre of the country is located within a relatively small area.

It consists of the 15 states of New York, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, Delaware, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia—and the District of Columbia.

These, with only 11 per cent of the area of the United States, have nearly 60,000,000 people or more than 40 per cent of the country's population, and within them is made more than 40 per cent of the country's retail sales.

Stocks Go Up

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane publish an advertisement in Wall Street Journal which rates quoting because what it says of American stocks can also be said of Canadian issues.

Says the New York firm, in part:

"If you own stocks you have probably been concerned about them since the Korean war touched off a decline in the market four weeks ago.

For our part we wish we could tell you that the market is bound to go up... Tomorrow, next week, next month. But we honestly can't do that. We don't know. Nobody does.

So don't put us down as either bullish or bearish about the market outlook. But you can put us down as definitely bullish about one thing—the solid investment value of owning good common stocks over the long pull..."

Historically, the trend of stocks in this country has been steadily up... Despite peaks and valleys, the general proposition stands: stock prices may go down, may even stay down a long time — three years, five years, 10—but they have always come back, always moved to higher ground.

Jury Says Death Due To Lack Safety Device

MARMORA, July 25—(ENS)—At the inquest held in the council chamber of Marmora town hall on Monday evening into the death of John Laird which occurred at Deloro on July 18 the following verdict was reached by the jury:

"John Laird met his death at Delora Smelting and Refining Company on July 18, 1950, caused by internal injuries from the machine he was operating, due to the lack of safety device on the machine".

Dr. S. R. Beatty was the presiding coroner and the questioning of seven witnesses was carried out by Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson. Photographs of the deceased were exhibited by Provincial Constable Jack Hurrie the first witness.

Dr. J. H. Bateman of Belleville described the findings of the post mortem which he had conducted and expressed the opinion that the primary cause of death was injury received rather than natural causes.

Corporal Jack Hatch of the Provincial Police gave a description of the roller machine connected with the death of Mr. Laird and said that in his investigations he had discovered that the man was working alone at the time.

Arvi Koski, welder, in whose absence on the holiday, the deceased had been called upon to operate the machine, described the operation of the machine. The next witness was James Rice who was the first to discover the accident. He described how the body was slumpeded over the machine. He secured assistance to get it freed.

Sidney Sandham, foreman of the repair shop described the particular work that the deceased was engaged in at the time that of making a certain pipe

The coroner mentioned at this point that an inspector of the Department of Labor had reported to him that he had made an inspection of the machine but was unaware as to whether the report came under his department or that of the Department of Mines but would ascertain and act accordingly.

The jury was composed of William Forestell, foreman, Nathan Mumby, Joseph Darrah, Edward Post and Gordon Phillips.

FANCY BUT PHONY — London's coat of arms has been affixed to millions of letters, notices, proclamations and debentures in the last 95 years, but it's never been confined legally as the city's own. City Clerk R. H. Cooper discovered the situation and a by-law will be presented to city council to establish it officially. Here it is being nailed to the front entrance of the City Hall.

Labor Minister Intervenes, Said Too Late

TORONTO, July 25 — (CP) — Labor Minister Daley intervened Monday in a threatened painters' strike but a union official said Mr. Daley's move came too late to halt the strike.

Mr. Daley asked the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators (AFL-TLC) to postpone a strike, set for today, pending a meeting of the union and employers in his office.

George Hamilton, union secretary, said the minister's request was made too late to halt the strike.

A strike would take about 1,200 painters off construction jobs in the city.

The strike was called after the union rejected a Conciliation Board recommendation of a 10-cent-an-hour pay increase to bring the standard rate for painters to $1.45 an hour. The union is demanding $1.55.

Demand Inquiry Into Police Dept.

LONDON, July 25, — (CP) — Demand of Deputy Reeve Ernest Ingles for an official investigation of the London Township Police Department was backed Monday by Albert E. Cowan, the Hanover constable who last week turned down the job of township police chief.

Cowan said his observations during his visit here led him to believe there was "too much interference with the township police."

Meanwhile, London township Reeve Roy Bloomfield said, "there's nothing to get excited about. There's nothing that needs investigating as far as I can see."

Eldon Ibey Elected Secretary Of Rotary

CAMPBELLFORD, July 25 — (ENS) — Campbellford Rotary Club Monday elected Eldon Ibey secretary in place of the recently elected secretary, Carl Maier, who has resigned from the club because the position he now holds takes him out of town five days each week.

Mr. Ibey, who was only recently made a member of the club, will take over his duties immediately. He also gave his classification speech at the Monday meeting.

Rotarian H. N. Carr, who is at present on holidays, sent a note to the meeting informing the members that his committee has advertised the new cottage for sale. This is the cottage that was built near town by club members. It is to be sold to raise funds for the club.

President Arthur K. Loucks and Mr. Ibey plan to attend the meeting of presidents and secretaries called by the Governor of Rotary, at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby on Thursday. Presidents from all over Ontario will attend this meeting.

Girl Has Cut Finger When Cars Collide

CAMPBELLFORD, July 25 — (ENS)—Margaret Parker suffered a cut finger on Saturday, when the automobile driven by her father, Alfred Parker, of Seymour East, was in collision with another vehicle driven by Charles Johns of the same district.

Mr. Parker was returning from the Menie cheese factory about eight miles east of Campbellford, along the main highway, when the cars collided.

Damage of about $50 was suffered by the Parker car, but damage to the Johns car was somewhat less.

Provincial Constable Don Erskine of Brighton investigated.

Car, Truck Collide Near Trent River

TRENT RIVER, July 25 (ENS) —A 1937 sedan, driven by Joseph Bailey, Campbellford, met in collision with a 1950 truck driven by Jim Brown, Trent River, on Highway 30, about ¼ mile north of Trent River village, Saturday night.

Both vehicles had damaged left front and rear fenders. No one was injured.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable David Coffey, Hastings. No charges have been laid.

Two Trucks Collide Near Fair Grounds

While cars lined both sides of Lansdowne St. just outside the Peterborough Exhibition Grounds late Monday afternoon, a truck owned by Curtis Bros., Peterborough, and being driven west on Lansdowne St., by Bart Moher, R.R. 1, Douro, went out of control, smacking into the side of a Smith Transport truck. Cause of the accident was believed to be faulty steering.

The left front fender and door of the dump truck were damaged, with little damage to the side of the transport, as the driver swung the front end clear, when it was realized a collision could not be avoided.

Fraserville WA Meets

FRASERVILLE, July 25 (ENS) —The WA group of Fraserville United Church met for their July meeting at the home of Mrs. Frank Lackey.

The president, Mrs. R. B. Lobb, presided and the opening reading was taken by the vice-president, Mrs. W. G. Waterman.

It was decided that the WA would sponsor a play the second week in September. Further details about the color scheme for the decorating of the church were decided on.

Supper was served by the hostess.

State Department Man Communist–Charge

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP) —Sen. Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wisc.) asserted today he has airtight proof that an important official of the United States State Department — a Moscow-born "Mr. X"—is a Communist.

The proof, McCarthy said in a speech prepared for delivery in the Senate, is contained in the Department's own loyalty file on the man.

He said his evidence was furnished by an agent of the Federal joined the Communist party in Bureau of Investigation who 1937 as an undercover agent.

A report last week by the Democratic majority of that inquiry group labelled previous similar accusations by McCarthy "a fraud and a hoax."

Canadians To Study In France

Much attention is given each year to the award of Rhodes scholarships and a few other scholarships which permit Canadians to study in English universities. Too little attention, we feel, is paid to the scholarships awarded by the Government of France, which this autumn will permit thirty-two graduates of Canadian universities to do a year of post-graduate work in French universities. These scholarships are generous, for they not only pay the student's fees, but also give them a living allowance and their return fare to Canada. The students themselves are only required to find the price of their passage to France.

* * *

Of the thirty-two scholarships, fifteen have been awarded to students in Quebec, eight to students in Ontario, and the remainder among the other provinces; this proportion changes from year to year. The Canadian students who go to Paris this autumn will study a wide variety of subjects, including medicine, literature, history, physics, chemistry, geography, music, philosophy, political science and canon law.

* * *

The generosity of the French government in this matter cannot be overestimated. The system has been in action since 1919, and has now been extended until students from forty-seven countries are eligible to receive scholarships for a year's post-graduate study in France; the French embassy in each country makes the awards, working closely with the local universities.

* * *

Thirty-two Canadian students to Paris at the expense of the French Government! Here is generosity! Here is a truly humanistic outlook! And here is rich advantage for Canada, for, this country needs all the knowledge, taste and breadth of vision that our brilliant young people can acquire abroad, and bring home with them.

Those Memoirs Which Will Never Be Written

In the newspaper comments on the death of Mackenzie King there have been many expressions of regret that he was unable to complete his memoirs; some preliminary sorting and arrangement among his papers had been done, but nothing had been written.

This is the sort of loss which must be borne philosophically. If Mr. King had been able to write the memoirs of his long and eventful life in Canadian politics there is no doubt that he would have given personal and revealing details which would illuminate many incidents in the history of our time. But he has left a great accumulation of papers behind him and two secretaries, —Fred A. McGregor and Fred Gibson— who knew him and knew his wishes. There is no reason to suppose that all the material which he would have used in his memoirs cannot be used with equal effect in a biography.

Mr. King has been the subject of several biographical studies, long and short, some of which are illuminating. But we may hope that in time a complete biography will be written, revealing not only much that was widely known about Mackenzie King, but also about the principal political figures of his time, Canadian and non-Canadian. Our country has not been lucky in the biographies which have been written of its great men, and it is a sad fact that the publication of the memoirs of a Canadian statesman is not often a profitable venture. However, we must persevere, for the time will come when our population is large enough to make such books not only necessary, but necessary in considerable numbers.

American Rome

Rome used to be full of marble; state buildings, churches and statuary. Now, from reports reaching our ears, it is so full of tourists looking at the marble (and other sights both ancient and modern, secular and ecclesiastic) that the marble can hardly be seen for visitors' hats, cameras, and cars. Like the soft-drink signs, a post-war phenomenon, the visitors are mostly Americans. It is Holy Year in Rome, and a boom tourist year. The noise is terrific: more raucous than New York's, it is said.

Movies are booming, department stores are booming, hotels are booming, and buildings are booming. New great blocks of flats and hotels have sprung up across the Tiber near the Vatican to accommodate the pilgrims. Rome may be the eternal city, but this year it has the newness, bustle and brashness of a mid-western American city that sprang up yesterday.

The American comparison is not unwarranted. Rome, and far off in the hills of Siena and the northern Italian plains, have felt heavily the commercial and social hand of the U.S.A. The tourist, the movies, the new buildings, the factory-made clothes, the pretty-girl covered magazines, the soft drinks in wine-bars and the road-signs are American, in fact or in copy. The rapid Americanization has not been due primarily to Marshall Aid, UNRRA or the Anglo-American occupation during the war. It is due to the preponderance of American investment, commercial exploitation, the ubiquity of American travellers requiring catering to their own standards and tastes, and above all to the unassailable potency of the American dollar.

The average urban Italian used to have an aesthetic taste of his own: the craftsmen an indigenous art, and the towns and villages a traditional way of life. The post-war American invasion has either destroyed these, or submerged them.

The sun still shines on the Eternal City, and perhaps its eternality will survive, even as the pilgrims to the Vatican can find themselves in touch with 1,500 years of church history, in the glare of Rome's new gaudiness.

U.S. Retains The Electoral College

There is talk from time to time in the United States about abandoning or reforming the Electoral College by which that nation elects its president. On at least two occasions, talk has developed into action, but in both instances the attempt to abolish the College failed. The latest attempt was defeated in the House of Representatives this week by a vote of 210 to 134. This decisive rejection was considered surprising, since the Senate had approved the proposal by a vote of 64 to 27. Even if it had passed the House, the proposal to abolish the College would have required ratification by three-fourths of the States.

The Electoral College is an interesting voting device. It gives to each State of the Union as many electoral votes as the State has Senators and Representatives. These electoral votes are the votes that elect the President, and the votes are traditionally cast for the party polling a majority in a State. This may or may not be the party polling a majority in the nation as a whole, and the College therefore makes it possible for a candidate to become President although receiving fewer votes than his closest rival.

The manner in which the Electoral College vote may misrepresent the popular vote is shown by the election results of 1936 and 1940. In the former year, the late Franklin Roosevelt received some 27,000,000 votes, while Alfred Landon received 16,000,000, yet the Electoral College vote was 523 for the former against eight for the latter. In 1940 Mr. Roosevelt received approximately the same number of votes while the late Wendell Willkie polled 22,000,000, and the College vote was 449 to 82.

By taking hypothetical results in two States, it is easy to demonstrate how a loser in the popular vote could become President. In the last Presidential election, approximately three million votes were polled in New York State, two million in California. These States have forty-seven and twenty-two Electoral College votes respectively. If the Democratic candidate polled 1,750,000 in California and 1,499,000 in New York, his total would be 3,749,000. That would leave 250,000 votes in California and 1,501,000 in New York for the Republican candidate, for a total of 1,751,000—less than half the number polled by his opponent. Yet the Republican would be elected President, on the vote in these two States alone, by forty-seven to twenty-two. The foregoing may seem an extreme example, yet President Harrison, in 1876, and President Hayes, in 1888, were elected President with fewer popular votes than their closest rivals.

Abolition of a constitutional instrument capable of producing such a result would seem desirable, but the House of Representatives appears determined to retain it—perhaps because it regards the College as a colourful tradition, perhaps because it sees difficulty in devising a system guaranteed not to produce that result. It might be noted that a similar result is possible under the Canadian and British systems, for a man obviously could become Prime Minister while receiving fewer votes than his nearest rival in the nation as a whole.

U.N. Prestige Soars In U.S.

By FLORA LEWIS

ALL across North America, professional commentators are still reporting with surprise the intense and very nearly unanimous popular support behind President Truman's decision to fight in Korea and the new respect for his courage.

Another change that has been quite noticeable in the misty atmosphere called public opinion is a sudden deep concern for and pride in the United Nations. This is particularly noticeable in the United States. I have just travelled from New York to California and am on my way East again. Korea became a headline word while I was in Los Angeles, and almost immediately people began to talk about the U.N. with overtones of belief that had not been heard since the organization was founded in San Francisco.

* * *

TWO people, one a businessman and another a social worker, strangers to one another, voiced a slightly extreme but apparently widely held view and said, "It is a shame that President Truman could not have waited for U.N. support before committing the U.S. to defend South Korea instead of the other way around".

Everyone else is just relieved and pleased that the U.N. (they don't say the "Western World" now, but the U.N. majority vote) has stepped in. The idea that the United States is acting as policeman for an important society rather than fighting a battle of its own is taken very seriously, and whether this impresses the troops very much, it has obviously provided a great moral comfort to the rest of the population.

* * *

THE same relief and satisfaction has been drawn here from the contributions and offers of Britain and other countries to help fight in Korea, even though Americans know that they must bear the brunt of the cost, in manpower quite as much as in any other way. It might almost be said that Americans are quite willing to shoulder all but the responsibility for the fight, and if that moral burden is equitably shared out they don't mind carrying most of the rest.

* * *

THIS is more unusual than most Europeans might realize. Every war in which the U.S. has taken part, outside the American continent, has been accompanied by roaring complaints about "pulling other people's chestnuts out of the fire". This was true even of battles that never reached that status of wars, such as the Boxer rebellion and the Siberian intervention.

Many Europeans probably remember rather painfully the tendency among Americans in World War Two to regard disdainfully, if not very nearly to ignore, the worth of military contributions from any of their Allies and to grumble in a way that sounded like "we'd get on with this better if you'd only move off and leave the job to us".

* * *

THAT is not the way now. An example of the change is the changing stature of U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, who a few weeks ago got a foretaste, from some parts of the American Press, of the same kind of fierce attacks he now receives from Pravda and Izvestia. Today, Lie stands as a leader, a sort of honorary commander-in-chief since it is under his blue and white standard that the battle is waged.

* * *

IT is true that for some Californians this feeling that the U.N. had more real meaning than they might have thought began a few weeks earlier than the Korean war, though it does have a tenuous connection. In a decision of very nearly revolutionary importance—though it was but poorly publicized—the California appellate court rejected a plea to uphold discrimination against the right of Orientals to hold property in the State on the ground that such discrimination was inconsistent with the United Nations Charter. The Charter, the court said, had been signed and ratified by the U.S., and so its provisions, including its human rights provisions, must be considered as the supreme law of the land overruling local laws.

If that decision were applied to Alabama or Georgia it could easily achieve a revolution. It is a footnote to the war in Asia and the consequent mushrooming of U.N. prestige in the United States, but a cheering one.

* * *

ANOTHER, though more subtle, change in the climate of opinion as a result of the fighting has been a release from the Red-hunt hysteria that gripped the United States a month ago. Now that Americans with guns and Communists with guns are shooting at one another, it seems far less important whether a Hollywood scenarist ever sneaked a line of Marx into his script or a State Department official disapproved of corruption in China.

* * *

IF the hearings about these things are still going on in Washington, they are being quite thoroughly disregarded now by the rest of the country whose newspapers no longer have room for Senator McCarthy's outpourings. In fact, instead of working up into the furious lather over agents and spies that might have been expected, the general attitude now seems to be that the Communists to be fought hardest are the ones who shoot or might soon do so, and that a cool head will be of greater help in the struggle than a spy-proof capital. Secretary of State Dean Acheson who was being bitterly condemned not long ago for failing to fall into a dither of excitement over his own housecleaning is now the object of considerable admiration.

* * *

AND all this has come with recurrent communiques of defeat. It has shown that people in the United States agree with one another much more than they thought they did. The basis of their agreement would appear to be that they really do not want war, not cold war any more than hot war, and that with welcome support from anyone else of like mind, they are quite prepared to demonstrate it forcefully.

Training For A Higher Jump?

New Advance In Heart Surgery

by Trevor Williams

NEW advances in anaesthesia and in surgery of the chest, are bringing new hope to sufferers from heart disease.

Dr. R. C. Brock, of Guy's Hospital, London, who two years ago made medical history by demonstrating techniques for operation on heart conditions normally considered incurable, has now, with two colleagues, Dr. Charles Baker and Dr. Maurice Campbell, extended his work to an operation for the relief of mitral stenosis. This, in familiar language, is a blocking of the valve which connects the two left-hand chambers of the heart.

Blocking of the valve often follows rheumatic fever, and the results can be very serious. Gradually the circulation of the blood, especially to the lungs, is so impaired that the slightest effort leaves the patient exhausted and breathless. Normal life becomes impossible and complete rest is essential. Even then, the condition generally proves fatal. About one-tenth of all cases of heart disease are due to mitral stenosis.

* * *

THE team of surgeons at Guy's Hospital are not alone in their efforts to relieve mitral stenosis by operation; others are at work elsewhere, especially in the United States. The outstanding success of the Guy's surgeons, measured by a comparatively low mortality for the operation, is due to two main factors. First, they have approached the valves by a surgical route different from that normally employed. Secondly, they have enlarged the flaps of the valves, once reached, by merely slitting them instead of by punching a small hole as others have recommended.

A very interesting feature of this remarkable new operation is that, although elaborate equipment and instruments are required before the valves themselves can be reached for operation, the only instrument required for the final operation is the simplest of all, the finger of the surgeon. A special knife was developed for the purpose but it has in fact, been used on only two occasions. The valves are distended simply by insertion of the surgeon's finger. This process takes altogether about ten minutes, though care is taken that the flow of blood is never interrupted for more than two or three heart-beats.

* * *

SO far nine patients, very carefully selected after study of their medical histories, have been operated upon by the new technique. All but two have made excellent recoveries.

In the seven successful cases the results were spectacular. From being helpless invalids, unable to walk any distance, exhausted by the least exertion, unable even to sleep without being propped up in bed, they were transformed, almost overnight, into normal human beings able to take and enjoy their full share of life.

'Not To Dispose of Dead Cats'

(Ottawa Journal)

A CORRESPONDENT, discussing the size of Ottawa's City Council, says it's a fine thing that here a citizen should be able to telephone his alderman at night, on a Sunday, or any time he wishes.

The inference is that this sort of intimate service is possible because we have 28 aldermen, two to a ward, and if one isn't at home another may be. What an alderman thinks of being called out of bed at 2 a.m. to be told of a flooded basement, or dragged to wakefulness from his Sunday-afternoon nap to hear about a dead cat in the road, is another story. He must wonder whether the honour of the job, or the honorarium, is adequate recompense for the surrender of his leisure.

We doubt that democracy demands keeping an inordinately large company of aldermen to answer the calls of indignant citizens, especially as the council years ago established a civic Complaints Bureau which deals very competently with faults, errors and emergencies in civic administration.

It is always pleasant, of course, to talk with an alderman, to give him our ideas and suggestions, to feel that we are setting him right on municipal problems — and hinting delicately that he needn't expect our vote at the next election unless he toes the mark—but after all the town is growing up, and we elect aldermen not to dispose of dead cats but to make civic policy. And in that respect we are convinced that a council of 19 would be far superior to a council of 33.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

The same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea side. And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore....

And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given....Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand. (Matt. 13: 1, 2, 10, 11, 13.)

* * *

And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others: two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. (Luke 18: 9-14.)

Letter To The Editor

WILL OFFENCE BE REPEATED

Sir: In Friday night's Examiner I noticed some one else feels as I do about those stallions that were found neglected and suffering.

If there were enough people in our city who cared enough about horses I think they could find some way to prevent a man who can make animals suffer so much from owning them.

In a few months time I don't doubt that we will be reading about this man's horses suffering and neglected again. It does not make good reading.

Why wasn't there a regular check-up on this man before. This is the third time for the same offence and still he is allowed to keep horses. What is the use of having a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals if they are not allowed to do anything about it?

A man that is too old should not be allowed to keep animals.

Yours,
IN FAIRNESS TO ANIMALS.

Doubts Many Atom Bombs Will Be Used

LONDON, July 25 (AP)—Home Secretary Chuter Ede said in the House of Commons Monday night that he doubts whether any country is able to drop a large number of atomic bombs anywhere.

He added that he does not believe that atomic weapons necessarily would be decisive in any conflict.

Ede spoke in a debate on civil defence. Earlier, the Labor government disclosed it will publish Wednesday a booklet to steel Britons against the threat of atomic warfare.

"I do not share the view that the atomic weapon need be decisive in a conflict, provided that we know what we have to meet and we have made reasonable precautions towards meeting it," Ede said.

Can Take Steps

"Fortunately, we know enough of this weapon to be able to take steps toward meeting what it can do. We can take steps that will minimize the effect of this weapon, and I do not believe, on the information we or anyone else has at the moment, that a large number of atomic bombs can be dropped by any country. We must make our preparation with that in mind."

Ede called for a strengthening of Britain's civil defence organization. There were sufficient instructors in civilian defence to warrant recruitment of a force at once. Fifty hours' training would make a recruit fairly proficient.

"There is the greatest urgency now that recruiting should be stepped up. But I do not want civil defence to be the softer option for people who ought to take a greater share in the defence of our country."

Jungle Animals On Rampage, Out To Kill

DURBAN, South Africa.—(CP) — The international pre-occupation with the law of the jungle has spread to—the jungle. Hunters and wardens are unable to account for an unprecedented outbreak of aggression among the animals in Natal's wild game reserves.

The dangerous temper of Africa's wild life is particularly noticeable among those formidable fighting machines — the rhinoceros and hippopotamus. The already thinning ranks of the rare white rhino have been seriously depleted recently by numerous duels to the death for leadership of the herds. Vanquished survivors expelled by their fellows, have escaped from the reserves through the electrified fences and are damaging crops and attacking cattle.

Terrorize Humans

The animals are not only fighting and killing each other, but they are terrorizing humans. Many rhinos now will charge at the first sight of man and many visitors to the reserves have been treed. Usually photographers are able to approach them.

Hippos are also in militant mood. At least a dozen have met their death in battle and boating and fishing parties have had narrow escapes.

There is an element of germ warfare in the conflict. Farmers fear that the refugee rhino may re-introduce the dreaded nagana (sleeping sickness) among their stock. Nagana has only recently been eliminated after many years by a full-scale air campaign with modern insecticides sprayed from planes over the jungle breeding places of the tsetse fly.

Can Forget Inflation Worries Until Production Up Half Billion

By HAROLD MORRISON

OTTAWA, July 25—(CP)— A government trade expert said Monday there is little need to worry about inflation unless Canadian production of goods and services increases $500,000,000, and there is no indication that it will this year.

However, the situation is fluid and anything can happen between now and next December, he warned.

A step-up in demand for production of goods and services beyond the gross national product mark of $16,800,000,000 this year could bring runaway price inflation in its wake, the expert said. Currently the total is running at the annual rate of $16,300,000,000.

Once that $500,000,000 production gap was bridged it would mean that Canada was working at its peak capacity and any demand beyond that point simply could not be met. Consumers would compete for available goods and send prices skyrocketting or products would have to be channelled to those requiring them most urgently, through government controls.

Forget Hoarding

The only way consumers could avert the need for such controls, said the expert, would be to buy only what is needed and not aggravate the crisis by hoarding and stockpiling.

So far, it apears that Canadians are heeding this cautionary note. There are only a few scattered reports of hoarding or of unusual movement in selling of consumer goods.

The Canadian manufacturing industry was given an example of how the Canadian production applecart could be upset. The industry now is producing about twice as much as it did in the peak war year of 1943, the expert said.

Any unusually heavy demands on the current manufacturing structure could send prices climbing. Such demands may be made on Canada as a result of increased international military activities and particularly the war in Korea and North Atlantic treaty defense preparations.

A clearer picture of what demands will be made on the Canadian economy likely will emerge out of the big Canada-U.S. industrial mobilization talks to be held here Aug. 8. Canada may be asked to increase her output of raw materials and manufactured goods and turn over a great share of her industrial capacity to war production.

That could mean an annual output of more than $16,800,000,000 in goods and services, leading to inflation—if not curbed by voluntary consumer effort or controls.

Top Professionals Lead Enemy U.S. Soldiers Learn In Korea

(Editor's Note: The following dispatch from Tokyo speculating on the possibility that North Korean tank crews may have fought at Stalingrad in 1943, was written by Philip Potter, Baltimore Sun-Papers war correspondent, and was made available to the Associated Press in Baltimore.)

By PHILIP POTTER
Baltimore Sun-Papers War Correspondent.

TOKYO, July 25 (AP)—Those who felt the United States was taking on a bush league foe out here have learned differently.

The professional competence of the brown-clad orientals leads one to suspect that their military training long ante-dated the establishment of the People's Democratic Republic of Korea, under whose flag they fight.

Their familiarity with tank warfare indicates that some might have been around in Russian uniforms at the battle of Stalingrad.

In any case, the green American infantry who were thrown in against the Communist invaders have had a bloody and sweaty time of it.

The North Koreans have had too heavy a punch for the lightweight battalions which the U.S. has committed one at time in an operation which one soldier described as "throwing in flyweights against a Joe Louis—one at a time."

The gaunt and bearded faces of the men who have faced North Korean tanks and infantry for three crucial weeks are those of men who have been in a war.

Shock Of Defeat

The shock of defeat is registered in their faces.

Expressions of optimism heard here don't jibe with the picture one sees in the battle area and along the supply lines.

One of the major weaknesses of the American position from the start has been the lack of flank protection from the battalions facing the main Communist forces.

This has made possible the Communist tactics of infiltration which have turned one position after another and forced continued retreat.

Some observers see withdrawal to a beachhead, where a continuous line of American troops in some depth could be formed, as the best to be hoped for now.

There is confidence that an impenetrable perimeter could be established which would gain the time needed for American industrial might to produce the needed war material and to train the men to use it.

One is reluctant to guess how much it might take. There are too many imponderables in the situation, the main one being the extent to which the North Koreans can draw on Russia for war weapons.

Crash In Rain Woman Killed

HAMILTON, July 25 (CP)—A Stratford woman was killed and four persons injured in a collision during a heavy rain at Christie's Corners near Hamilton Monday.

Dead is Mrs. Emile Milette, 62, of Stratford. In hospital are her husband, her daughter and her three-year-old granddaughter.

Driver of the second car involved in the crash, Charles Tanner, 55, of St. Catharines, suffered injuries to his right leg and facial cuts.

The dead woman's husband suffered chest injuries and cuts.

The couple's daughter, Mrs. Charles Habel, 24, also of Stratford, was treated for cuts and possible skull injuries. Diane Habel, 3, is in hospital for observation.

The accident occurred where Highway No. 8 between Dundas and Galt curves sharply.

FINALLY MARRIED — Magdelene Sohl and Joseph Scheuhmmer are married after four years of post-war complications. Joseph was a 15-year-old cabin boy on a German merchant ship when captured in 1939. He met Magdelene while working as a prisoner of war on her father's farm near Glencoe, Ont. He was returned to Austria in 1946 and finally made his way back to London, Ont., for the wedding.

All Korean Civilians Ordered Out Of Zone

AN AMERICAN ADVANCE POST IN KOREA, July 25 (AP)—All Korean civilians have been ordered out of the fighting zone southeast of Taejon.

The order was aimed at stopping infiltration behind United States lines by Communist soldiers and saboteurs dressed as civilians.

In an area once cleared, anyone in civilian clothing may be shot.

Kawartha Club Top Place Tennis Schedule

Kawartha tennis club completed its Kawartha Tennis League play in first place with 10 matches played for 49 points out of a possible 70, secretary-treasurer Ralph Charlton announced today. The second, third and fourth places will be decided shortly when the remaining games and the postponed games are completed.

At present the Cobourg club with nine matches played holds a one-point lead over the 3rd place Quaker A club. The Quaker club has a seven-point lead over Port Hope. Cobourg has 35 points out of a possible 63, Quaker A (nine matches) 34 out of 63 points. Port Hope with eight matches has 27 points out of 56.

Quaker B club with one postponed match is in fifth place with nine games played for 24 points and the Lindsay club is in the cellar with seven games for 13 points.

Results of games played last week are: Kawartha won from Port Hope at home 5-2 and lost to Cobourg 4-3 at home; Port Hope won from Quaker B 5-2 at the Quaker and took Quaker A 6-1 in Port Hope; Quaker A won from Lindsay 5-2 at Quaker.

The remaining matches are: Port Hope at Lindsay Wednesday; Lindsay at Port Hope Saturday. Lindsay has a postponed game at Cobourg while the Quaker Bees and Quaker A have a postponed match.

The playdowns will commence the week of August 7, with the Kawartha club meeting the fourth place club at the Kawartha and the second place club meeting the third place club at the home court of the second. The semi-finals will be single matches. The finals two out of three points will be played the week of August 14.

Lions Win 5-2

Lions slipped the peewee Petes a 5-2 loss Monday in the minor lacross play in Miller Bowl. Short several players the Petes started out fairly strong but tired quickly to allow the Lions to pull up and finally take the win.

C. Coombs started the ball rolling in the first as he sank the first goal of the game for the Petes. The Lions roared their loudest in the second when they rapped in three goals by D. Parry, T. Hendren and J. Ellis. Trudeau and Reid helped Ellis. Coombs counted the second tally for the Petes in the third before Ellis slipped in the fourth and fifth Lions' goals for his hat trick.

Penalties were confined to the third period when K. Hawthorne of the Petes, R. McCabe and F. Trudeau were given the gate.

Line-ups:

Lions—G. Heffernan, T. Hendren, D. Parry, L. Scharf, B. Casely, A. Reid, J. Ellis, R. McCabe, A. Danahy, F. Trudeau.

Petes—F. Heffernan, T. Davis, D. Mountney, C. Coombs, D. Kent, K. Hawthorne.

GERRY PRIDDY, Detroit keystoner, fell on his face fielding Joe DiMaggio's smash but got the ball away to Johnny Lipon, Tiger shortstop. However, the play was too late to nail Johnny Mize (36) and Priddy was charged with an error as well. The umpire is John Stevens. The play came in the first-place series between the Tigers and Yanks in New York with the champs gaining a full game on the leaders by taking two of the three games.

Here And There In Sports . . .

By The Canadian Press

Larry Doby, Cleveland outfielder, was beaned Monday night as Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Indians 6-4 in an exhibition game before 10,435 at Ebbets Field.

Doby was hit on the head by a Joe Hatten curve ball in the eighth inning. He had to be carried from the field on a stretcher. His condition, however, was reported not to be serious.

The Dodgers pushed across two runs in the eighth inning off Steve Ridzik to snap a 4-4 tie. Carl Furillo's single drove in the deciding run. Hatten was the winner.

In only 50 minutes, the top-ranked amateur in the United States, Davis Cup veteran Ted Schroeder, was soundly beaten by the national collegiate champion, Herb Flam, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2, 6-2, in the finals of the national clay courts tennis meet yesterday at River Forest, Ill.

It was a blow to Schroeder, top-seeded in the tourney, who hoped to use his first clay courts' title as a stepping stone to the 1950 Davis Cup team. And it was his second defeat in little more than a week. He was beaten in the semi-finals of the recent western tourney at Indianapolis by Tony Trabert.

Boston Red Sox rallied in the eighth inning on home runs by John Pesky and Vern Stephens to defeat New York Giants 8-5 on Monday in the annual Hall-of-Fame game on ancient Doubleday field at Cooperstown, N. Y., where baseball was born.

It was the fourth American League victory against five for the National League in the series that started in 1940.

Bill George, one of the Dominion champion Alouettes' hopes for the 1950 season, has been called up by the United States Army reserve and is not allowed to leave his home State, it was announced Monday night.

Jim Ferrier, the transplanted Australian golf professional from San Francisco, won top money in the St. Paul open tournament by winning a playoff with Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., on the 21st hole.

The two ended the scheduled 18th hole of their playoff all even with three-under-par 69s, forcing them to go extra holes in the sudden-death playoff.

The Aquila of the Crescent Yacht Club of Chaumont, N. Y., Monday won the Charles Freeman cup in the 175-mile yacht race on Lake Ontario.

The Aquila was skippered by C. Willard Campbell of Watertown, N. Y. The Charles Freeman cup was awarded for the best corrected time in the racing class.

Winnipeg Scottish, Manitoba champions, whipped Port Arthur Brent Park 5-2 in Winnipeg last night in the opener of the best-of-three series in the Manitoba-Northwestern Ontario soccer playoffs leading to the Dominion finals.

Foy Funderburk drove the favored Lusty Song, winter book favorite for the Hambletonian, to victory in the $10,000 Volomite trot as the grand circuit returned to Roosevelt Raceway last night.

Two other candidates for the $85,000 trotting classic at Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 9—Stuart Hanover and Mariner Hanover—were second and third respectively. Stuart Hanover was driven by Joe O'Brien of New Glasgow, N. S.

Lusty Song, owned by the Hayes Fair Acres Stable, Du Quoin, Ill., was clocked in 2:04 2-5 for the mile and returned $4.30, $3 and $2.70 across the board.

Newly-Formed CAHA Major Series Shelved After Talk With Pro-Men

By JACK SULLIVAN

TORONTO, July 25—(CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is sorry, but its widely-ballyhooed Major Series—a sort of super-duper competition amongst the strongest clubs in the country—has been deferred and probably cancelled.

The proposed set-up didn't get approval of the professional leagues.

That is the sad position today of the 70,000-membership C.A.-H.A. after Monday night's surprise announcement that the series has been shelved. The decision was made at a Monday meeting of the joint relations committee of the pro leagues and the C.A.-H.A.

A statement issued after the private session said the major series was "dependent upon satisfactory arrangements being reached with the professional organizations." The committees were "unable to find sufficient common ground to establish the major series of the CAHA on a proposed basis."

Cause of Breakdown

The breakdown occurred because the amateurs, who proposed putting players in the series on an iron-clad contract, didn't realize they might be dealing with some who already had the finger put on them by the pros. And the pros weren't keen about relinquishing the hold on any now on their lists—or any who might be at some future date.

Terms of contracts to be signed by players in the major series from the Cape Breton, Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario and Western Canada senior leagues, stipulated a minimum $1,000-a-year salary. That was okay, but a waiver clause providing a club shall not dispose of a player by transfer, except to a professional club, until all teams in the league or group have had a chance to claim the contract at a $100 waiver price, was a stumbling block.

Doug Grimston of New Westminster, B.C., president of the CAHA, said in an interview a special meeting of the association will be held in Toronto Dec. 27-28 when the question of a major series will be reopened.

Gets Former Status

"It looks at present as if there will be no major series in 1950-51," he said

And what of the Allan Cup, which faded into the background when the major series was announced? It probably will return to its former status as the premier trophy for senior competition.

It was decided Saturday at a CAHA meeting that the Allan Cup would be competed for by senior clubs in the country, except those in the major series. Now, unless some agreement can be reached with the pros concerning the big five, everybody will be in on it.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Notices were sent out Monday for the Black Memorial mixed doubles tournament for Wednesday, August 30, and although this tournament is over a month away, the committee has already received 45 entries, and these came in before the notices were sent out. We are passing on this information for the benefit of our local bowlers. It's a case of first in, first accepted. Act accordingly.

No bowling Monday night—rain.

Tonight we will have the regular games as per schedule.

Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock—mixed rinks. Draw from the board.

Westclox Defeats Canoe Players 21-14

Westclox defeated the Canoe Company 21-14 in a fastball fixture. Heffernan had six for six and Miller four for six. Byrnes hit a homer in the ninth for the Canoe Company.

Westclox started with seven runs in the first and the Canoe Company picked up two. Westclox added two in the second, three in the third, two in the fourth, one in the fifth, one in the seventh and five in the eighth. They were scoreless in the sixth.

After their two-run beginning the Canoe Company were shutout until the eighth when they bunched seven runs. Again in the ninth they rallied but only for five runs.

London's Gaiety Theatre To Be Pulled Down Now

LONDON, (Reuters) — London's Gaiety Theatre birthplace of musical comedy in Britain and centre of the capital's gayest entertainment for three generations, is to be pulled down to make way for government offices.

The historic house in which the choruses of "gaiety girls" won fame—some of whom later married into the British peerage — will be replaced by a modern building for the headquarters of the India High Commissioner in London.

Lupino Lane, member of Britain's oldest stage family, disclosed, almost tearfully, that he had surrendered his greatest ambition by selling the beloved but derelict landmark of London's entertainment world.

Great Disappointment

"I feel just as though someone had kicked me in the stomach," the comedian sighed as he told how his five-year effort to reopen the Gaiety as a musical comedy theatre had failed.

Lane bought the Gaiety in 1945 for about $560,000 after it had lain disused throughout the war. He spent over $70,000 in rebuilding, repairs ad taxes. Today he sold it for "round about" $532,000.

"I was on the verge of bankruptcy, so there was nothing I could do but sell, for the sake of my family," Lane said. "I would even have sold it for a lower figure if it meant seeing it as a theatre."

Musical Comedy Born

The Gaiety, opened in 1868, was the birthplace of musical comedy in Britain. It was the first London theatre to stage matinee performances and the first to use electricity for outside advertisement. Great stage figures like Henry Irving and Sarah Bernhardt were billed there but, from 1886, it was turned over to Burlesque and the chorus of "Gaiety Girls" won it world fame. Many women became famous on its stage and married well—some into the peerage.

At the beginning of this century the theatre moved from its original building to the present gaiety, only a few yards away. Between the two world wars it maintained its reputation, but in February, 1939, it had to close down when its renters refused to make structural alterations demanded by the authorities.

German bombs shattered it to a shell.

In 1945, when it had been deserted for six years, Lupino Lane bought it.

After restoring the interior he ran into difficulties.

Unless $280,000 was obtained within six weeks, he said, the Gaiety might be lost to London as a theatre.

All his efforts proved in vain.

Hoyt is the only amateur to cop the Kentucky Derby of the harness horse world. He did it with Demon Hanover two years ago. Sheppard is working Star's Pride at Good Time Park, scene of the big heat.

Release Fastball Standings, Rest Of Schedule

With the Civic Softball League schedule half completed eight teams are closely grouped while the ninth team is beginning to show. Secretary Chum Gillespie announced today that the Grant and Loucks nine were sitting atop the standing with six wins and two losses for 12 points while the Post Office, the Foresters, and the Bell Telephone squads are grouped in second place with five wins and three losses each.

Bankers, who dragged along the cellar all last season, have proved to be the most surprising team this year. In their eight games they have won four and lost four to ho'd third place with the Policemen who also have a four and four count.

Bus Drivers with three wins and five losses are in fourth place with the Peterborough Lumber. The Loblaw nine at the halfway mark still have to win their first in eight starts.

Second half of the schedule is: (one is for King Edward diamond and two for the Armour Road diamond).

Chandler Pledges Support In Korea

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y., July 25 (AP)—Commissioner A. B. Chandler today pledged baseball's full support to the United States armed forces in the Korean crisis.

"Baseball in this emergency is prepared to offer to the President the services of all its players and workers," said Chandler.

"The needs of the country come first. Baseball has traditionally always given its loyal support in time of stress."

Mount Pleasant Wins

Mount Pleasant won a fastball fixture from the Quaker Oats Company Monday night by default. The Quaker players failed to show up at the diamond.

Minor Lacrosse

Minor lacrosse activity at Miller Bowl tonight includes a bantam game at 6 p.m. between the American Hotel and the Irwin-Godson teams and a junior practice under Lou Vitarelli at 7:30.

AMATEUR CHAMPION—Bill Mawhinney, of Vancouver, won the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship with a sensational six-and-four victory over the highly-regarded Nick Weslock, of Windsor, Ont. The 21-year-old truck salesman from the Quilchena Club of Vancouver was only four over par in medal score for the 36-hole title playoff. Par is 70. Weslock, who won the title last year, was 12 over par.

Phils Lose Heartbreaker 2-1 After Rains Come

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The fuzzy-cheeked Philadelphia Phillies may have cause to remember Monday, July 24, to their rocking-chair days.

The Whiz Kids lost a heartbreaking game—and perhaps a pennant with it—the victims of a one-in-a-thousand episode.

The box score of Monday night's Philadelphia - Pittsburgh game shows only that the Pirates defeated the Phils, 2-1, in a six-inning game ended by rain.

What it fails to show is that the Phils were leading the Bucs, 3-2, when the rains came down.

Pittsburgh, the home club, was deprived of a chance to bat in its half of the seventh. Under league rules, the game reverts to the previous inning if the trailing home club does not get a chance to bat.

The Bucs, behind rookie Bill MacDonald, had a 2-1 lead when the Phils came up to bat in the top of the seventh. With two out and pitcher Bob Miller on base, Eddie Waitkus smashed a home run to put his team in front. Then came the rain. The game was called, wiping out Waitkus' homer.

Lose First Place

The defeat knocked the Phils out of first place. Although they are even in games won and lost, the Phils trail St. Louis Cardinals by two percentage points. Brooklyn, in third place, is a game and a half behind. Boston's fourth-place Braves trail by two lengths.

Judging by the tight pennant races in recent years, the Phils-Pirates game could turn out to be the pivotal one in the National League.

It was the only championship game in the big leagues Monday although Cleveland, Brooklyn, the Boston Red Sox and New York Giants played exhibition games.

The Dodgers defeated the Indians, 6-4, in a game at Ebbets Field, marred by an injury to Indian outfielder Larry Doby. The crack Negro star was hit by a Joe Hatten curve ball in the eighth inning and taken to hospital for observation.

In the annual event at Cooperstown, N.Y., site of baseball's Hall of Fame, the Red Sox defeated the Giants, 8-5. It was the American League's fourth victory in nine mid-summer games.

Red Wings Clip Orioles In Doubleheader

By The Canadian Press

Rochester's Red Wings are rolling along with the smoothness of a well-oiled machine.

Manager Johnny Keane brought his league-leaders into Baltimore Monday night for the first two games of an important five-game set with second-place Orioles. Four victories would have catapulted Orioles into the International League lead.

But Rochester smashed the Oriole hopes, 5-4 and 9-3, in a twilight-night doubleheader. Now Baltimore is five games behind.

Mike Schultz and Tom Poholsky held Baltimore to eight hits in the opener, while George Copeland pitched a seven-hitter in the nightcap. The second game was halted after five innings because of rain.

Russ Derry hit homers Nos 21 and 22 for the winners.

Just Made It

Rookie Paul Stuffel of Toronto hurled a strange 6-4 victory over Syracuse. He walked 14, allowed six hits and had two errors behind him, but still staggered the route for his second victory. He left 17 men on base.

Bud Heslet hit a home run for Toronto with Bobby Rhawn on third base—but it didn't count. Ken Burkhart was charged with a balk, and the pitch was nullified. Rhawn, however, was permitted to score on the balk.

Montreal Royals behind Tom Lasorda's eight-hit pitching trimmed Springfield 9-5. The victory left the Royals half a game behind Baltimore.

Rich Horseman Dies In Hospital

BALTIMORE, July 25 (AP) — William G. Helis, oil millionaire horseman, died early today at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He was 63.

The hospital said Helis was operated on for a respiratory infection about six weeks ago and had re-entered the hospital July 12.

Helis owned a large thoroughbred breeding farm at Jobstown, N. J. He also raced a large stable under his own colors. With Eugene Mori, he purchased the Tanforan track in San Francisco in October, 1947, and is part owner of the Fairgrounds Race Track in New Orleans, where he lived.

Helis, nicknamed the "Golden Greek," won and lost several fortunes early in his career as a hard-hitting oilman in California and Oklahoma. He went to New Orleans in 1930 and made another fortune in the Louisiana fields.

Had Large Stable

He raced a large stable under his own colors and in 1943 paid $36,000 for a yearling, the third highest price for such a sale on record. That yearling, Pericles, won only one race in three starts but is considered tops in the bloodline.

He entered flat racing in 1942. He bought Attention the next year for $55,000, which became his first "big name" horse. Attention had beaten Whirlaway to the wire before Helis obtained him. In 1949 his string brought him $287,747, making him the eighth leading money winner among United States owners.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Say Citation Won't Race

CHICAGO, July 25 (AP) — Citation, world's leading money winner, definitely is out of Saturday's $75,000 Arlington Handicap and he may be all through with racing.

Trainer Jimmy Jones said Monday that Citation, who has earned $938,630 in his career pulled up lame after a public workout at Arlington Park following the fifth race last Saturday. The five-year-old son of Bull Lea-Hydroplane II has a filling low behind the left foreleg.

"We're going to walk him for the next few days and maybe put a saddle on and ride him later," Jones said. "We'll try to bring him back, but it's certain that we won't race him unless he returns to his true condition."

However, even with Citation out and the No. 1 handicap performer, Mrs. Charles Howard's Noor, remaining aloof, Arlington is assured of a worthy race Saturday when the meeting ends.

Jones said that Calumet Farm will be represented by Ponder, winner of last year's Kentucky Derby.

Four challengers from the east are expected in the mile-and-a-quarter handicap. They are Cochise and Greek Song, the Brandywine pair; Loser Weeper and Three Rings. Other horses who might show up are Volcanic, Oil Capitol and King Ranch's Curandero.

"It was just too much to ask Citation to carry 132 pounds in the Santa Anita Handicap after being injured and out of action for 13 months," Jones said.

"I can't say for sure that he's all through but it looks like it."

The Calumet standard bearer won 29 of 38 races and finished second nine times in his brilliant career. In 1948 as a three-year-old he won $709,470—a record for one year.

11 Children Enjoy Little UN Council

MONTREAL, July 25—()CP)—Eleven children who know so much about the United Nations and world affairs that their community of Huxley, Alta., was officially renamed Little Lake Success, arrived here Monday night.

They formed a junior UN Council not long ago and its fame spread so far that three days ago they signed a Hollywood movie contract to film the story of their organization's development.

The junior council idea was conceived by their school principal, C. G. Fallows, when he was sent to Dachau concentration camp at the end of the second world war to aid the rehabilitation of children whose parents died in the infamous German camp.

"The idea has been so successful that the UN has suggested we should go to Europe next year and see just what is going on in the various countries," Mr. Fallows said.

The group acts just like the real thing, he said—so much so that they even get night letters of the agenda and workings of the UN Council.

The group, ranging in age from 11 to 16, will go to New York and then to Washington after the Montreal visit. In Washington, they will be guests of the National Press Club and will present President Truman with a 10-gallon hat.

Another teacher accompanying the group is Miss Elizabeth Charlton, who chaperones four girls of the 11 in the party.

HOPEFUL INDIANS — Three Cree Indians, farmers on the Winterburn Reserve near Edmonton, keep a sharp eye on oil drilling operations at an Imperial Oil Company wildcat on their property. If the well produces oil, the community of 228 Indians will receive 12½% of the production. Interest on the money is to be used to finance improvements on the reservation. Left to right are, Stanley Ward, Pat McDonald and Louis Ward.

Hope Discovers Gold Mine In State Fairs

By BOB THOMAS.

HOLLYWOOD, July 25 (AP)—Where there's gold, there's Hope and Bob has found a new vein to mine—State fairs.

The fast-travelling comic has been hired to play two State fairs late this summer. Needless to say, the salaries are stratospheric. Hope will appear at Springfield, Ill., Aug. 19-20 and at Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 31-Sept. 3.

Meanwhile, ski-nose will be making "The Lemon Drop Kid" his latest picture from a Damon Runyon story. He'll do his third big television show Sept. 10, for which he is paid $40,000. Then he'll leave for Honolulu and a vacation with his wife and their four children, returning to start his air show for his new sponsor.

May Be Fireworks

There may be fireworks when Rodgers and Hammerstein see "My Blue Heaven." One number contains a riotous take-off on "South Pacific," with Dan Dailey doing an imitation of Ezio Pinza.

Danny Thomas plays his first comedy role in "Call Me Mister." He played a couple of character parts at MGM and they did nothing for him. Danny's next may be a straight role in "Up Front," taken from the Bill Mauldin book.

Capsule Review

"Stella" (TCF) tries to be funny, but doesn't always make it. It starts on a sombre note — a family secretly buries a wayward uncle, killed accidentally on a picnic. Then it tries for laughs, but the comedy has trouble overcoming the serious beginning. Victor Mature, Ann Sheridan and David Wayne head the cast of well-chosen characters, but all have trouble making the thing seem real.

DINNER WOES — Mr. and Mrs. Young of The Pas, Man., Indian Reservation, have 14 children, including three sets of twins. The family eats 48 meals a day. Mrs. Young says they can go through three dozen eggs at a meal without trouble. Every day they eat a pound of butter and 10 loaves of bread. The children range from 16 years of age downward.

Russian Zone Police Try New German Terrorism

By TOM REEDY

BERLIN, July 25. (AP) —The Russian Zone police are using terror methods to build a new spy ring in Western Germany.

Travelling business men have fallen victim to it. Some of their experiences have filtered into anti-Communist circles where the new plan of the Red Gestapo has been disclosed.

This is the way it works: Germans who have reason to enter the East Zone for business or social contacts have been arrested in varying numbers, estimated by Berlin sources up to as many as 500 in the last three or four months.

They are held in frightening cellars and interrogated until the security police figure they are sufficiently cowed. Then they are released — if they sign a paper guaranteeing to keep the East Zone Communist regime informed of their activities in their own home areas.

Implanting Awe

How effective this type of terror-inspired espionage has or will be cannot be gauged as yet. The aim of the East Zone police is described as two-fold:

1. To establish some kind of information ring composed of persons who are not in any way associated with the Communist party or its front organizations, so that none of its agents come under suspicion.

2. To implant in the minds of hand-picked West Germans an awe for the East German regime.

A group of anti-Communist lawyers and former judges in Berlin and East Germany has investigated a number of cases of terror arrests which were made for this purpose.

The group, which calls itself "Free jurists of the Soviet Zone," came into being about a year ago with a tiny, well-concealed membership.

Deny Any Sabotage

REGINA, July 25 (CP). — Mayor Garnet Menzies said on Monday that a short-circuit on Regina's strikebound power distribution system Sunday night was "obviously sabotage." A union official denied the Mayor's assertion. About 20 members of the Electric Utilities Employees' Union (CCL-CIO) walked off the job Saturday. They are asking pay increases of from $9 to $67 a month.

Teachers Like Summer Course

TORONTO, July 25 — (CP) — Special summer courses on Ontario's new school curriculum have brought an "enthusiastic" response from teachers, an Ontario Education Department spokesman said Monday.

The two-week courses—held in Guelph, Kingston, and Port Arthur—were designed to acquaint teachers with the new curriculum, which lumps together grades 7-10 in an "intermediate" level. A total of 310 elementary and secondary school instructors attended.

The representative group which attended will give almost every section of the province someone trained in the new curriculum, the spokesman said.

Considerable attention was paid to the integration of grades, one of four main topics designed to bring a smoother transition from public to high schools.

McVittie Elected Mayor Of Hespeler

HESPELER, July 25 (CP)—W. S. McVittie was elected mayor of Hespeler Monday, defeating former reeve W. G. Sims by 833 votes to Sims' 187.

The election was necessitated by the resignation two weeks ago of Mayor Alex W. Jardine over a wages dispute with Board of Works employees. Two councillors resigned with Mr. Jardine.

Karl Gruetzener was elected reeve, succeeding Mr. Sims, who resigned to contest the mayoralty. Mr. Gruetzener got 623 votes to 385 for Harry Noble. The vacant councillorship was won by Elmer Goebel with 799 votes against 200 for Roy Reingler, only other candidate.

The councillor's post was filled by acclamation last week.

Ask Wage Increase For Rubber Workers

COLUMBUS, O., July 25 (AP) —L. S. Buckmaster, president of the United Rubber Workers (CIO), Monday called for a general wage increase for workers in the rubber and allied industries.

His recommendation came at the opening of a two-day conference at the URWA international policy committee here.

Buckmaster said he based his recommendation on man-hour productivity increase and "fabulous profits" of the rubber companies in the United States and Canada.

Board Approves Plan For Housing Scheme

TORONTO, July 25 — (CP) — The Ontario Municipal Board Monday approved a scheme which will permit the city of Owen Sound to help pay the cost of a low-rental housing scheme.

The scheme will provide 40 apartments for old age pensioners, recipients of mothers' allowances and military pensioners at rents of from $20 to $25 a month.

The board approved the city's application for permission to put up $26,000—about 10 per cent of the cost—for the project. The rest of the money will be loaned by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, a federal government agency.

Radiology Man Dies

MONTREAL, July 25—(CP)—Dr. William Lloyd Ritchie, 67, retired director of radiology at the Montreal General Hospital and chairman of McGill University's radiology department, died Monday after a six weeks' illness. Born in Beamsville, Ont., he attended school there before entering the University of Toronto from which he graduated in 1910.

Find Boy's Body

ST. LIGUORI, Que., July 25—(CP).—The body of six-year-old Paul Godin, missing from a Laurentian Mountains summer camp since Friday, was found Monday in the Ouareau River. While police and some 200 volunteers were searching the woods, Cyril Woods, Montreal Daily Star photographer discovered the body in the river.

Long Hard Winter

ATIKOKAN, Ont., — (CP) — Workmen here are convinced that last winter was a pip. Digging sewer trenches they came across solid ice at a depth of five feet.

Handwriting Said Terrible

NORTH BAY, July 25. — A three-point program to improve the standard of penmanship on the North American continent was advocated Monday by master penmen from Canada and the United States.

About 20 handwriting experts, members of the International Association of Teachers of Handwriting, recommended the program following a week-long meeting at a near-by Lake Nipissing summer resort.

The association said time now allotted for handwriting in public and high schools in Canada and the United States is "woefully inadequate."

It recommended that departments of education in the two countries should:

1. Provide adequate training, under competent instructors, for all new teachers.

2. Provide at least 12 hours a month for handwriting lessons in every year of elementary school.

3. Provide at least five periods a week for handwriting the first and second years in every high school where commercial courses are taught.

Plum Prices Down

TORONTO, July 25 — (CP) — Minimum prices for this year's plum crop will be up to $15 a ton below last year's prices, the Provincial Agriculture Department announced Monday. A minimum of $55 a ton—$15 below last year's prices—has been set for prune plums and a minimum of $47.50 a ton—$10 below last year—was set for jam plums.

Greet Minesweeper

WINDSOR, July 25 (CP)—The Canadian Navy minesweeper HMCS Portage was greeted in Windsor Monday on its fourth annual Great Lakes cruise. The visit enables reserve sailors along the lakes to train on a warship. The Portage will take part in manoeuvres in Lake Erie next weekend with smaller vessels from HMCS Hunter from Windsor and HMCS Prevost, London.

Town Escapes Fire

LILLOOET, B.C., July 25 (CP) —Flames continued to eat through mountain forests today, but the town of Lillooet, threatened earlier, was declared by Forestry Service officials to be out of danger.

Roe Plant Announces New Union Agreement

TORONTO, July 25 (CP)—A. V. Roe Canada Ltd., which manufactures jet aircraft and engines at nearby Malton, Monday announced a new agreement with the International Association of Machinists (Ind.).

"Due to the international situation, the union made sincere efforts to speed negotiations," the company said in a statement.

The new agreement, affecting some 2,000 employees, extends to Aug. 12, 1951. It provides a general increase of five cents an hour, bringing the minimum to $1 an hour, and payment of 50 per cent of the cost of group insurance. There will be a 10-cent premium for off-shift work. In addition, 15 job classifications are moved into higher wage brackets. The union, which has a voluntary membership of more than 95 per cent of hourly-paid employees, was granted compulsory check-off of all such workers.

Won't Take Canadians

DETROIT, July 25 (AP)—No Canadian citizens are being accepted for enlistment in United States military forces, an officer of the United States Army recruiting office for Michigan said Monday. Maj. Thomas P. Dickinson said Detroit recruiting centres turned away 30 Canadian youths last Saturday. Only U. S. citizens, or those who have taken out their first papers for citizenship are being accepted into the armed forces, he said.

Threaten Strike

ORILLIA, July 25 (CP) — Employees of the Water, Light and Power Commission threatened to strike today unless their recently-organized union is recognized and contract negotiations started. Three weeks ago the 100-odd workers voted in favor of joining the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL).

Have Security System

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP) —A security system for barring Communists and subversives from United States ships was agreed upon Monday by management and unions of the Maritime industry. Under a voluntary pact, worked out under the guidance of federal officials, the coast guard will be in charge of the actual policing.

Argentine Embassy Says Unions Free

OTTAWA, July 25 (CP)—The Argentine Embassy, in a statement Monday, said labor unions "enjoy the highest degree of freedom" in the Argentine.

It denied charges levelled against the Argentine government by the Canadian Congress of Labor, which last week accused it of mistreatment and "torture" of workers and padlocking of trade union offices.

Committed For Trial

TORONTO, July 25 (CP) — Steve Shewaga, 28, was committed Monday for trial on a charge of attempted murder in the tavern shooting July 1 of Frank Caruso, 18. Caruso, wounded in the nose, said Shewaga was a stranger. He denied Shewaga's contention that he lost $800 in a game of pool arranged by Caruso.

3-Yolked Egg

TORONTO, July 25 (CP) — Mrs. Marion Martin figured she had something when she cracked a double-yolked egg into her frying pan while preparing breakfast Saturday morning. But Sunday she went one better. She turned up an egg with three yolks.

INTERNATIONAL AMITY — The town of Huntingdon, Que., near the United States border, celebrated the 125th anniversary of its founding recently. Assemblyman W. L. Doige of New York is ready to cut the huge birthday cake, flanked by drum majorettes.

NATURE UNSPOILED

YOURS TO PROTECT

The COMMON TERN is a familiar sight. He's about half the size of a gull, with long pointed wings and forked tail. Look for the black cap, and the orange and red bill with its black tip. This beautiful bird should always be protected.

PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER

VOL. CI. No. 20 — TUESDAY, JULY 25, 1950

MAIN ST. TOPICS

FLAG AT MOURNING

The flag at the Provincial Police offices at Charlotte and Park Streets has been at half mast over the week end since the death of Mackenzie King.

DRUNKS FINED

Two drunks appeared in city court today, one of them a third offender. John Riley, of Toronto, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and $2.50 costs by Magistrate R. B. Baxter. Leo Grisdale, 30 Ware St., a third offender, pleaded not guilty, and was sentenced to three months in jail.

WRONG ADDRESS

William O'Brien, 178 Aylmer St., was fined $10 and $2.50 costs by Magistrate E. A. Gee in Monday's court. It was reported in error that William O'Brien of Lakefield was the man fined. The Lakefield Mr. O'Brien was the innocent victim of a wrong address being given.

VAGRANT JAILED

Harold Boisvert, no fixed address, was sentenced to five days in jail today by Magistrate R. B. Baxter, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy. Evidence revealed Boisvert, who came to Peterborough from Quebec, had been sleeping in a building on the exhibition grounds.

WHAT PRICE VICTORY

An Orono farmer on Monday killed a skunk that had invaded his henhouse with one thrust of his pitch fork. The farmer, R. H. Holingsworth, was tipped off by the barking of his dog. But before Mr. Hollingsworth caught up with him the skunk had killed 30 pullets.

NO CANUCKS APPLY

Several local youths have asked at the Examiner office if they could join the United States Army. The answer is no. Only U.S. citizens or those who have their first papers for citizenship are being accepted in the armed forces. Last Saturday Detroit recruting centres turned away about 30 Canadian youths who wished to volunteer.

CHARGE DISMISSED

A charge of possessing burglar's tools by night against Kenneth Mitchell, no fixed address, was dismissed by Magistrate R. B. Baxter. Mitchell, who elected trial by jury, was not positively identified as the man who was standing by the home of Ronald Horton, Peterborough lacrosse player, the early morning of July 8. Horton said in court he could not identify Mitchell as the man.

FIRE CHIEF PETUNIAS

Those bright petunias in the roof garden at Campbell's Dairy, Sherbrooke and Park Streets, are identified to you as the new Fire Chief variety, if you are not growing them yourself. They are a true red, and were rather widely distributed this year by the seed houses and some of the florists.

CARS DAMAGED

Cars driven by William Young, Port Hope, and Harry Pearson, 335 Downie St., collided early today at Park and Lansdowne Sts. Damage of about $15 was done to each. Young and Pearson were both driving west on Lansdowne, and Pearson started to turn right on to Park. Young said he thought Pearson was going straight ahead and started to pass him on the right side when the collision happened.

25 Families Offer Homes

Because the Children's Aid Society was unable to find foster homes for three babies under its care, two baby boys and a baby girl were homeless last week. If they had been old enough to understand their plight, they would have felt unwanted, unloved and uncared for.

But Peterborough people are a kindly, friendly people and when misfortune strikes at any section of the community someone, somewhere, is always able to come to the rescue.

The sorry plight of the three babies was brought to the public's attention last week and immediately the Children's Aid Society was inundated with offers of assistance. On Monday, three days after the story of the three homeless babies was told in the Examiner, no fewer than 25 families had offered to take the youngsters, to give them homes and act as temporary foster parents.

"I did not know where to turn to find homes for these babies," Miss Young, superintendent of the Children's Aid, told the Examiner on Thursday. She and her committee had asked everyone they could think of but so many were on holiday and for various reasons those who had looked after children in similar circumstances before, were unable to help this time.

Within three days of publication of the sad story, one child was actually placed in a home and Miss Young's staff was busy investigating the other 24 offers.

William Hutt's Performance Tops Summer Theatre Bill

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

This week the Peterborough Summer Theatre provides a welcome change from the succession of light comedies which it has hitherto presented and gives us that excellent psychological thriller "Night Must Fall". This play was the first big success of Emlyn Williams, who has since established himself as one of the ablest writers of melodramas and thrillers of our day. It is composed with extreme cleverness and a brilliant sense of stage effect. In the hands of actors capable of taking advantage of its great opportunities, it is melodrama of the best modern kind. The actors of the local company meet its challenges with boldness and resource, and their presentation of the play is first-rate entertainment.

Casting Admirable

The production shows the same strength as was exhibited last week in "For Love Or Money"; it is an excellent piece of ensemble acting, without a weak piece of casting anywhere. It also shows, at times, a weakness which has been observable in several of the company's productions this year—there are moments when it is too hurried Pace and haste are not the same thing. This insistence upon haste is unfair to Miss Proctor and Mr. Hutt, who carry the weight of the play. If the play is to make its fullest effect, the killer and his victim must not be hustled.

Miss Catherine Proctor plays with her accustomed skill as a tyrannical and hypocritical invalid. Her vigorous and direct acting is always refreshing. She won a very warm reception from the Monday night audience.

The most demanding role is that of Danny, the imaginative, perverse young man who kills women partly for their money, partly for the thrill of murder, and partly to get into the limelight. This is a role which Emlyn Williams wrote for himself, and it is the meatiest in the play. William Hutt played it admirably. There was no aspect of the part which he failed to exploit fully, though one remembers Emlyn Williams as being a little quieter, and therefore a little more sinister. But the rather vulgar boyish charm, the gift of the gab, the superficial cleverness, the intoxication with his own ambition, the twisted mind and the ultimate hysteria were all presented by Mr. Hutt with skill and conviction, and his performance was the strongest, most fully-realized piece of acting that has been seen in the summer season this year.

Comedy Acting

Among the supporting cast Kay McVicar must be mentioned first for an excellent piece of comedy acting as an outspoken "daily help." Williams writes these parts with great richness, and Miss McVicar played it fully, and yet without a hint of overplaying—a fine bit of artistry. Charmion King was sincere, though a little understated, as an imaginative and frustrated young woman; this is an ungrateful part, demanding much of the actress and returning little. Diana Eager is good as one of Danny's lesser victims; her offstage scream—if it was her own—was one of the best shock effects in the play. In the small part of a district nurse Katherine Moy was competent.

Gerry Sarracini grows better all the time; a part less like himself than a taciturn Scotland Yard man could hardly be imagined, but he played it with real feeling and skill. In racecourse language, he is the outstanding "improver" of the company. The cast was completed by Frank Perry as a phlegmatic Englishman, and he played it ably. Summer stock demands that actors play many parts for which they are not suited; Mr. Hutt has suffered from this until the present production; Mr. Perry has not yet had a part worthy of his capabilities, and we hope that he is not to languish in thankless supporting roles for the whole summer.

"Night Must Fall" is a top-notch summer production, and should not be missed by anyone who likes a good thriller, well done. The leading actors work hardest and receive most praise, but it is the excellent effect of the whole which raises this performance to its high level.

Issue Permits To Build Two Apartments

Permits issued for two apartment buildings of estimated value of $200,000, increases to $1,052,000 the realty investment of Sands and Bateman in the post-war expansion of Peterborough.

Their Brookdale and Parkdale subdivisions comprise their largest housing projects, but there were also other dwellings constructed in the course of their operations.

Each of the apartment buildings consists of accommodation for fifteen families. Together they provide thirty separate living quarters embracing the latest approved building ideas and conveniences.

Identical In Design

The two new buildings are of identical design. Their site is on the eastern knoll of the Parkdale subdivision within a stone's throw of the canal.

With the exception of the houses built in recent years on the east side of Armour Road, opposite Nicholls Oval, that whole block reaching virtually from Armour Road to the Canal has filled up with Sands and Bateman houses. It is one of the surprising developments of that section of Ashburnham, the old Curtis field transformed into community housing.

Work is still going on in grading and making of new streets in the area. The old creek course through the property toward the southwest has been refashioned, with culvert under Swanston Ave.

The $200,000 permit has been issued this month, and is the largest item in the July list at the office of City Engineer Chalmers. The footings for each building are already completed.

Story Of Peterborough's History Told In Pictures, Records, Maps Books At Exhibition In Public Library

Peterborough's history will come to life in a large collection of portraits, photographs, original records, maps, books and pioneer articles. This collection will go on display on Thursday for the frst time at the Public Library and is the Library's contribution to the celebration of Peterborough's centennial. The collection is largely the work of Miss Genevieve Sullivan of the Library staff who with her helpers have spent weeks preparing the exhibit. The city's history is traced from the time Samuel de Champlain was paddled down the Otonabee River in 1615. Even this event is pictured in a painting by Marleen Wright on the staff of the Boys' and Girls' Library.

Miss Wright, only 15, has made a remarkable use of rich color and bold lines to portray incidents in the district's earliest beginnings. Prominent in this series is her Immigrants Arriving at Scott's Plains, Adam Scott's Mill, an Old School House, Sugar Making, and a Log House.

The main display room is dominated by a portrait of Peterborough's founder, Peter Robinson, done by Miss Mulhall of the Peterborough Normal School. The portrait is set above a fireplace around which are grouped several pieces of pioneer furniture and utensils. Included are old brass candle holders, a wooden pitcher, a long handled frying pan and two spinning wheels.

In the same group is a model log cabin with surrounding clearing and forest, realistically done by Donald Bissett of the Normal School.

Original Documents

But probably most interesting are the large number of original documents. The prizes among these are several letters written by Peter Robinson in his own handwriting. One was to Charles Rubidge who helped to settle Otonabee township.

Also on display in one of the glass cases, is the record of the Irish immigrants whom Robinson settled in Peterborough County. The first names to appear are that of Patrick Kearney, his wife Catherine and their four children.

There is also a record of the lands in Smith township to which the immigrants were assigned. Another prize is a letter of one of the immigrants to Robinson.

A second set of records describe the beginning of the Peterborough Mechanics' Institute which ran a reading room and library in the fast growing town. The Institute's charter, received in 1868, is also on show. For the year 1887 there is a list of the president and the directors. Such names as William English, who was president that year, and directors, Dr. George Burnham, Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, Dr. John Clarke, John Corkery, John Frazer, Hon. R. Hamilton and others appear.

In conjunction with this display is a showing of books owned by the Peterborough Grammar and Union School Library Association which was established in 1856. The library books covered a wide range of subjects. There were Hints on Investing Money, Photography, Painting On Glass, Architecture and many others.

Works of Pioneer Writers

Prominent in the centennial collection are the Peterborough district pioneer authors. There are photographs and some of the writings of Mrs. Susanna Moodie, Isabella Valancy Crawford, Mrs. Frances Stewart, Col. Samuel Strickland, founder of Lakefield, Archibald Lampman and a volume of the letters of John Langton.

Many other lesser known but interesting authors and their works are represented.

Peterborough's first two mayors gaze sternly down over the collection. In two large photographs are Thomas Benson, the city's first mayor and Charles Hudson who followed him in 1851.

There is also an interesting original oil painting of Colborne district's first sheriff W. S. Conger who took office in 1842. Mr. Conger was also mayor of the town and a member of the Legislative Assembly in 1856.

People who go to the exhibit will spend considerable time examining a collection of photographs of old downtown buildings and stores, some of which still stand. They show the town's mud roads and its affinity for hotels.

Another set of photographs which will win interest is a Who's Who gallery showing many of the men and women who contributed to the town's birth and development.

Hon. Zaccheus Burnham and Thomas Alexander Stewart are prominent. There is a picture of Dr. Joseph Fife when he was on the Nicholl's Hospital staff in 1866. Rev. William Gilmour, Mrs. Walter Roger and many others are featured. The collection was presented to the library's collection by James Wallis of Montreal.

Many a veteran sportsman in the city will be interested to see a book of records of matched played by the Peterborough Cricket Club from May, 1873 to 1879.

A report of the Intercolonial Railway Exploratory Survey of 1864 made by Sandford Fleming is another item which catches the eye. The collection is a mine of items which reflect the hopes and dreams of small town growing in a wilderness.

Plans For Future

But the 20th century is not neglected. One large room is devoted to the accomplishments of the city and its plans for the future.

Photographs of representative industries of the city illustrate the diversity of manufacturing for which the city had cause to be thankful for in the depression of the 1930s.

There is a display of a few churches representing all the denominations. The ones that were picked were the oldest of their group in the city.

The city's schools are also represented by views of the most most modern schools and additions in the city.

In architects' sketches Peterborough's future is glimpsed. Several views of the new city hall's interior and exterior are presented.

With them are drawings of the proposed Memorial Centre and Views of the Civic Hospital illustrate that the city's plans are the future Post Office building, not just castles in the air, but stand a good chance of becoming a reality.

Aerial Photos

Several aerial shots of the city will give most Peterborough citizens their first extensive bird's eye view of the city.

Although the present and future are represented, it is the past which holds the spotlight of the centennial exhibition. The T. H. G. Denne collection of old prints, which many people have already seen, pin point many of the details of the city's former life.

There is the first tram that ran on city streets. There is a picture of the first government boat to sail the canal and many other firsts in the display.

In the centennial year, most people are sure to be interested in seeing the provincial act by which Peterborough became an incorporated town. Lying alongside it in its case, is one of the surveying instruments used by Richard Birdsall when he was carving up the meadow which was to become Scotts Plains and later Peterborough. The instrument is still in good condition and could be used today.

Old maps of the city and county show graphically how the city has spread out over the neighbouring land.

People who have long wanted to leaf through a collection of old newspapers will have their chance. Three files of weekly Dispatches of the 1840s, 1860s and 1880s have been put out for inspection. Readers will find that the advertisements are the most entertaining feature of the old papers.

Although the collection is already extensive, Miss Sullivan, who has been mainly responsible for gathering the material, considers it but a nucleus of a historical collection which will be a source of entertainment and study for citizens and students alike in the future.

Anyone who has any old documents, letters, maps, pictures or anything of that nature which would help round out the collection may present them to the library and know that the best possible use would be made of them.

Many people will be surprised to find, when they visit the collection, that history is not the dry, boring subject too often presented in school, but is an interesting and entertaining picture of the past which gives more meaning to the present and is often a sign post to the future.

US Architects Admire City's Queen Mary School

The addition to Queen Mary school is featured this month in one of the best known United States' architectural magazines. Completed in 1948, the addition includes five classrooms, kindergarten and the auditorium seating approximately 400. It is probably the best-known school in the city because it has been the home of the Peterborough Summer Theatre for the past two years.

Four recently-designed elementary schools in the United States and Canada are displayed in a series of photos and sketches. All four were built to meet the needs of rapidly-expanding communities. And as the accompanying article says: "All were designed by architects whose intent was to do the very best school possible within the budget and the techniques and knowledge of the time."

Excellent close-up photos were taken of the classrooms, a typical project area, the kindergarten, the lobby of the auditorium and the auditorium itself.

Architectural techniques are changing so fast however that even some parts of the Queen Mary addition are dated.

Today's design calls for the project space to be across the fear of the classroom. This reduces the broken wall line formed by alternate projecting classroom and the alcove-like project room.

Now directional glass block is used above the sash in the window walls. Queen Mary has clear plate glass with venetian blinds.

Particularly noted in the article was the "economical use of hollow tile, painted, as both wall structure and finish in the corridors." Also the "neat, nearly flush detailing of cabinet work."

Douro Man Convicted Of Careless Driving

A Douro farmer, George E. Weller, was today convicted of careless driving on the Warsaw road, and fined $10 and $6.50 costs by Magistrate R. B. Baxter.

The charge arose from an accident in which a cow belonging to Jack Leeson, of Douro, was killed when struck by Weller's auto. Leeson testified he was moving 10 cows across the Warsaw road when he hard a car coming.

Leeson said he did not notice the car alter its speed, although it was not moving rapidly.

Weller, who was driving toward Peterborough, said he did not see the cows until he was about 75 feet from them, and that he tried to stop the car, but couldn't do it in time.

Circus Worker Hurt

A minor fight broke out at the circus Monday night, in which a circus worker was injured slightly. The worker, whose name is not known, was taken to hospital for treatment, and later released.

Police say the circus worker was riding an elephant outside the main tent and ordering a number of city youths to do work for him. His language was said to be insulting and the youths reacted violently.

F. M. delaFosse 90 Years Old

Came To Canada To Study Farming In Muskoka District

"We're having a busy time here today. But it doesn't happen every day."

Frederick M. delaFosse, former librarian and one of Peterborough's best known men, is celebrating his 90th birthday today and with good reason is a little excited by it. His wife and he have been answering the door bell of their fine old Water St. home opposite Victoria Park all day.

Flowers, presents and telegrams from his family and friends have been arriving in a steady stream. Every one wanted to congratulate the man who had made himself the friend of all in his work at the Public Library and his many other activities. One of the letters was from Mayor Max Swanston congratulating one of the city's first citizens. As well as being chief librarian for 36 years Mr. delaFosse is a poet, author and historian.

Ninety years ago, Mr. delaFosse was born in the province of Bengal in India. His father was a captain in the Bengal Artillery. Mr. delaFosse spent his early boyhood in the foothills of the Himalayas while his father tried to shake off the effects of sickness contracted during his army service.

Finally, when Mr. delaFosse was seven, his father was invalided home, taking his family with him.

The seven-week voyage home was a memorable one for the youngster. He watched the crew of sailing vessel catch a shark and kill it with axes as they danced around in bare feet escaping the huge jaws of the dying monster.

Later one of the crew fell overboard from the rigging and was lost. Then just two days before the ship landed in England, the captain died.

The family went to Bath in Somerset and there young delaFosse began his schooling. Finishing grammar school he went to the famous Wellington College where sons of military and naval officers were educated.

His father died not long after he reached England and his mother died, while his sister and Mr. delaFosse were youngsters. The children were brought up by relatives. Mr. Delafosse lived with an uncle who was also his godfather.

At college he didn't give any particular indication that his life would be literary. The only time he distinguished himself, he said, was when he won the open swimming race.

When he was 18 and had finished college, Mr. delaFosse was casting around for employment. He chanced upon a newspaper advertisement in which an Englishman living in the Muskoka region of Ontario offered to teach young English gentlemen how to farm in Canada for a price.

Mr. delaFosse sailed for Canada with seven or eight others who were attracted by the offer They soon found out they had chosen a tough row to hoe.

The farmer had cleared only about two and a half acres of the land. Mr. delaFosse cleared another 50 acres before he left three years later.

Mr. delaFosse told many of his experiences in a book "English Bloods."

When he was fed up with farming, he went to Toronto, where he became secretary to Provost Body of Trinity College and there helped many a young student with Latin and Greek. He stayed at this work about nine years and then had some money left to him.

He retired to Lakefield and lived there many happy years, devoting much of his time to literature. But the money did not last and he came to Peterborough at the age of 50 where he worked for the Examiner for about three years and finally applied for the librarianship of the Public Library.

At a time when many men were beginning to think forward to retiring, Mr. delaFosse was just beginning a new long career.

He soon became an institution at the library. He was always on hand to help people find what they wanted among the bookshelves and gradually improved the library until it reached quite a high standard.

Mr. delaFosse was married twice, the first time in 1885. After his first wife died, he married again 25 years ago.

Mr. delaFosse had three children, a son and two daughters. He has five grandchildren and even more greatgrandchildren.

He has had a long, active life and from the way in which he still gets about, walking about the city, visiting friend and attending many of the city's activities, he has a long way to go yet

Gertrude Dunford Becomes Wife M. Huddlestone

A very pretty wedding took place in Regent St. United Church, Lakefield, on Saturday, when Gertrude Althea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Dunford, became the bride of Myles Edward Huddlestone, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Huddlestone, all of Lakefield. The Rev. W. H. Tone officiated.

The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and large baskets of flowers. The guest pews were marked with sweet peas and white satin bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of embossed satin with nylon yoke in an off-the-shoulder effect. The bodice, which buttoned down the back with tiny covered buttons had side peplums and flowed into a full skirt and long train. The long sleeves came to a point at the wrists. Her veil was of embroidered net and was caught with a wreath of white flowers. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Beverley Davis was her cousin's bridesmaid and was frocked in pale green embossed with fitted bodice and full skirt. Her mittens were of matching material and she carried a moon shaped bouquet of roses and carnations. The flower girls were Dianne Northley and Joan Crawford, both nieces of the bride. They were frocked alike, one in canary yellow and one in mauve taffeta with fitted bodices and full skirts with frills at the bottom and frilled collars. Sashes were tied in large bows at the back. They carried quaint little baskets filled with carnations, baby's breath and baby mums.

The ushers were Robert Dunford and Jack Huddlestone, brothers of the bride and groom.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. W. Lee and Mrs. R. Jackman was soloist.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at Deyncourt Manor, Lakefield, where the bride's mother received wearing a frey and mauve figured gown, grey hat and gloves and a corsage of roses and mauve pansies. The groom's mother assisted in a gown of powdered blue with navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For travelling, the bride chose a powder blue suit with pearl button trim, navy accessories and a corsage of roses.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Huddlestone will reside in Lakefield.

Carnrite-Varcoe Exchange Vows At QuietCeremony

A quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Paul's Presbyterian parsonage on Saturday by the Rev. C. G. Boyd, when Olive Elnora, daughter of Mr. John Varcoe and the late Mrs. Varcoe, was the bride of Harold Wesley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Carnrite.

The bride wore a gown of white silk lace over satin with long sleeves ending in points over her hands. The net yoke was caught to a bertha collar with pearl clips and her fingertip veil of tulle was caught to a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli.

Miss Isabella Varcoe was her sister's only attendant. She was gowned in pale green organza over taffeta, with matching mittens and headdress. She carried a bouquet of yellow gladioli.

Mr. Fred McLaughlin was groomsman.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Kawartha Room of the Empress Hotel.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to points east. For travelling, the bride wore a navy organza dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Varcoe will live at 255 Reid St., Peterborough.

COASTAL DWELLERS

Most Eskimos are coastal dwellers, obtaining much of their food and clothing from sea mammals.

Murphy-Hewitt Exchange Vows In Geo. St. Church

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday at George St. United Church when Elda Eileen, daughter of Mrs. Hewitt and the late Wm. George Hewitt, was the bride of Andrew, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, all of Peterborough.

The Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated. The church was decorated with sweet william and delphiniums. Traditional wedding music was played by Mr. Charles Allan and the soloist was Mr. Fraser Carr, who sang "I'll Walk Beside You", before the ceremony and "Oh Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Murray Hewitt, and wore a gown of white chantilly lace over taffeta with a portrait neckline outlined with ruffles with a very full bouffant skirt extending into a circular train. Her finger-tip veil of silk illusion was caught to a fine lace bonnet enhanced with illusion of tulle and trimmed with pearls. She carried a cascade of red roses and white gladioli.

The bride's three attendants wore identically styled gowns of organza over taffeta made with full skirts and off-the-shoulder neckline. Miss Leona Reid, as maid of honor, was wearing pale mauve. Bridesmaids were Miss Norma Hewitt and Miss Barbara Hewitt, sisters of the bride, wearing pale green and yellow. Each wore a picture hat and mittens of matching material and carried a cascade of roses and gladioli.

The groomsman was Mr. Walter Murphy, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Samuel Murphy, brother of the groom, and Wallace Hewitt, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Green Room at the YWCA, where the bride's mother received, wearing a dress of powder blue mesh with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink carnations and was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a dress of light blue with navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The bridal table was decorated with a lace tablecloth, crocheted by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Harriet Bidgood.

Later the bride and groom left to fly to New York for their honeymoon. For travelling the bride wore a red flowered dress with white accessories.

On their return they will live at 19 Conger St., Peterborough.

Roder-Burfield Marriage Vows Taken In Church

A popular Peterborough couple took their wedding vows Monday afternoon in Mark St. United Church. They were Norma Joan Burfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Burfield, Peterborough, and George Fraser Rodger, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rodger, also of this city.

Officiating minister was the Rev. B. S. Morwood of Mark St. United Church.

The bride wore a street-length, pale pink, embroidered organza gown with white accessories. Her attendant, Miss Violet Todd, was similarly attired, but in blue.

Robert Rodger, brother of the groom, was the best man.

Cables from well wishers came from friends and relatives from as far away as Scotland and England.

After the ceremony, Mr. Stewart Hammell presented the bride with a silver horseshoe especially sent from Scotland for the occasion. Mr. Hammell was dressed in the Stewart tartan kilt.

Joint hostesses at the shower for the bride were Mrs. Thomas Hammell and Mr. Hubert C. Harris, at the latter's home, 495 Mark St. A large number of gifts were received including a toastmaster from her workmates in the fractional motors club, Canadian General Electric Co.

Wool blankets from the staff of Cherney Bros. store was the gift to the groom from his fellow employees.

After the reception at the groom's home, 242 Munroe Ave., the couple left on their honeymoon, a motoring trip to Eastern Canada.

When they return they will live at 242 Munroe Ave.

Trousseau Shown At Tea Given In Janetville Home

A very beautiful trousseau tea was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McMullen, Janetville, on July 15 for their oldest daughter Marian. There was a large crowd of relatives, friends and neighbors from Blackstock, Burketon, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Pontypool, Peterborough, Lindsay, Midland, Janetville, Yelverton and Cadmus.

The bride-to-be and her mother greeted the visitors at the door, while Miss Margaret Steele, R.N., Sunnybrook Hospital, Toronto, received the guests at the guest book. Miss Doris Argue, cousin of the bride, received in the linen room, and Miss Betty Ann Kellett, Oshawa, also a cousin of the bride, received in the room displaying the wedding gifts. Mrs. John Tinney, Millbrook was in the room where the dishes, silverware and clothes were displayed.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Jim Gray, Miss Doris Stinson, Mrs. Murray Malcolm, Mrs. Albert Adams, Mrs. George Donaldson, Mrs. Vertil McMullen, aunt of the bride, Mrs. Stan Hacker, aunt of the bride and Mrs. Leonard Kellet.

Mrs. James McMullen, grandmother of the bride and Mrs. Wm. Steele, great aunt of the bride, poured tea.

The table was beautifully decorated with pink and white flowers streamers and white wedding bells.

The trousseau tea was held on the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James McMullen's 59th wedding anniversary.

Recently, Miss McMullen's fellow employees of the Lacquer and Plating Department of Westclox, held a luncheon in her honor and presented her with a rose Kenwood blanket, table lamp, table cloth, and a set of salt and pepper shakers. When she left, they gave her a chenille bedspread.

Ladies' Aid Meets

The Ladies' Aid of Lakevale Presbyterian Church, Fowler's Corners, met at the home of Mrs. R. L. Blackburn.

Mrs. Eva Deyell gave the scripture reading and the president, Mrs. Wm. Richmond led in prayer and followed with a short reading. The rerasurer, Mrs. Melville Deyell gave a brief report. Mrs N. McConnell and Mrs. M. Deyell read two stories.

Mrs. A. McConnell offered her home for the August meeting.

Following a social hour lunch was served by the hostess and the lurch committee.

James D. Smith Marries Miss June E. Crowthers

At St. Luke's Anglican Church on Saturday, Miss June E. Crowthers, daughter of Mr. E. Crowthers and the late Mrs. Crowthers, was married to James Douglas Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith. The Rev. W. E. Kibblewhite officiated and during the signing of the register, Mr. Morley Coombs played "O Perfect Love".

The church was decorated with baskets of assorted summer flowers.

Given in marriage by Mr. Maxwell Sexsmith, the bride wore a floor-length gown of slipper satin caught with lace at the shoulder and with lace panels extending from the waist throught the train and with lace trim along the bottom of the dress. Her fingertip veil was of net edged with lace and caught with pearl beaded bonnet and she carried a cascade of red roses.

The bride's attendant was Miss Joan Park, who wore a pink taffeta dress with matching fingerless gloves. The dress was floor-length and had a net yoke neckline with ruffled cape extending from the shoulders. Her hat was of matching taffeta and she carried a nosegay of sweetpeas and carnations.

Dutch Designer Making Hit In Great Britain

By MURIAL NARRAWAY

LONDON (CP).—A shy, 38-year-old Dutchman, Herbert Sidon, is making a name in London's fashion world.

Unknown three years ago, Sidon started sewing in a one-room apartment in London's Earl's Court district after demobilization from the Dutch Army.

By 1948 he had a business in fashionable Knightsbridge with a staff of 12. Soon the theatrical world came to know the Dutchman who brought a dramatic flair to his wide-skirted gowns.

The same skill earlier won him distinction as designer to the Dutch Royal House when only 18 years old. He also designed personal clothes for the Parisian actress, Mistinguett.

Since coming to London, he has made his reputation largely as a designer for stars of the entertainment world.

Eileen Herlie's gown for last year's Royal Command performance was designed by Sidon. He also makes gowns for film stars Sally Ann Howes, Sheila Sim, Moira Lister, Lizbeth Webb and Elizabeth Welch.

Startling Effect

For Hildegarde, now appearing in the Savoy cabaret show, he has designed a shimmering sheath of satin so tight it looks impossible to sit down in. Elastic bands in the back panel seams give it freedom of movement.

Sidon also is a name in society circles.

For debutante Islay Sismay's coming-out party he made a strapless model with 60 yards of organdie and 140 yards of gold braid.

An opera company recently asked him to design a double-purpose gown suitable for train travel and convertible to a glamorous evening gown.

Sidon's answer was a straight pink linen frock heavily embroidered with black raffia. In the train it is covered by a full, plain pink linen cloak, which later becomes a sweeping evening skirt.

COOKBOOK OF THE WEEK

Banish Breakfast Monotony With Crumb Griddlecakes

This surprise breakfast treat will start the day right for your family and incidentally make good use of that stale bread in the breadbox. The recipe is taken from "500 Delicious Dishes from Leftovers," the second Cookbook in a series of twenty four which is being offered one a week to the readers of the Examiner.

Breadcrumb Griddle Cakes

1½ cups dry bread crumbs
1½ cups scalded milk
2 tablespoons shortening
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder

Soak crumbs in milk and melted shortening until they are soft. Add eggs and dry ingredients sifted together. Bake on hot, greased griddle. The cakes are very tender and should be turned carefully. Makes 20 cakes.

When there's leftover oatmeal to worry about, why not try oatmeal muffins? They're quickly made and sure to win demands for encores

Oatmeal Muffins

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg, well beaten
2/3 cup cold cooked oatmeal
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons shortening, melted

Mix and sift dry ingredients Combine remaining ingredients and add to first mixture. Stir only enough to dampen flour. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in hot oven (425 F) about 25 minutes. Makes 12 large muffins.

DOROTHY DIX

Most Boys Ego Builders They Prefer Inferior Girls

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a young man of 20 and go with a good many girls. I think I am speaking for all the other boys as well as myself when I say that we like to feel a little superior to girls in both physical and mental ability. If, therefore, a girl is as quick to apprehend a situation as we are, we are robbed of the joy of explaining to her what it is all about. Perhaps this is the wrong attitude, but I prefer my girls to be less capable and less wise than I. A. B. C.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I am certain that you voice the sentiments of practically every son of Adam and that nearly every one of them does prefer the inferior to the superior woman. The average man wants a wife who is intelligent enough to understand what he says to her, but he doesn't want a wife who is cleverer than he and better educated.

Makes For Happy Marriage

Not only do men want their wives to be inferior to them, but in the scientific studies of marriage it has been conclusively proved that those families are happiest in which the husband is superior to the wife, and that the marriages in which the gray mare is the better horse are seldom successful.

This is easily explained by the fact that a man's vanity requires him to have some woman to minister to it. And, of course, he has to get a nitwit to fill this role, unless a woman is clever enough to disguise how clever she is and thinks it worth the trouble to let him think that he originated the ideas she put in his mind.

Personally, I think that men make a terrible mistake when they permit their egotism to keep them from marrying women in their own class. For it deprives them of the companionship that would be such a joy to them if they had wives who were as intelligent as they are and who were interested in the same things and with whom they could discuss books and plays and the topics of interest of the day. A very large percentage of the middle-aged men who wander away from their own firesides do so because they are bored at home. They married pretty little hen-minded girls who were not and never could be any real company to them. And that is a high price to have to pay for the pleasure of looking down on their wives.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 28. For five years I have been going with a young man. For two years I have worn a diamond ring on my left hand, which was given to me by him to be worn on that hand. I have seen him every evening and every day during that period. He says, and his actions prove it, that he doesnt want me to have any other dates, but never has he referred to or even hinted at marriage for us, though he thinks it all right for other people to get married. Do you think it possible that he doesn't love me and doesn't intend to marry me? Are there such men? Are all men generally opposed to marriage and have to be sold on it?

PUZZLED GIRL.

ANSWER: It is just as sure as shooting that this young man has no idea whatever of marrying you. No doubt he likes you and finds you an agreeable companion, but he hasn't the faintest notion of burdening himself with you as a wife and obligating himself to pay your bills.

When a man is really in love with a girl and intends to marry her, he doesn't have to have anybody sell him the idea of marriage. He thinks it up for himself and he has a million good reasons why it is the ideal state for a man and why life is cinders, ashes and dust without it. And he doesn't keep putting off the wedding day. He hurries it up.

There are many men whose attentions are without intentions, such as your friend's, though his technique is superior to any I have ever heard of, in giving you a phony engagement ring when there is no engagement, in order to keep you pacified. That is a new ringer in the game, but the game is the same old game and it ends in the same way—in the girl who is sucker enough to play it losing out.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 30 years old. Six years ago I met a boy of my own age with whom I fell deeply in love. We were planning to be married, but he had a motor accident which, after years of unspeakable suffering and vain hopes cost him his right leg, making him a cripple for life. This man is fine in every way and he is so grateful for my affection, which he calls devotion, but do you think that I will regret it if I marry him? Will other women approve of me or think I am crazy? UNLUCKY.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If you love the man and he suits you, why do you care what other people think? You are the one to be pleased, not they.

Certainly you will have the approbation of your own sex for standing by your sweetheart in his misfortune. Women will think it was the right thing for you to do and what any one of them would have done who had a heart in her bosom.

What's Right?

You want to write some message of best wishes on the card which you are enclosing with a wedding gift.

WRONG: Write, Congratulations and best wishes."

RIGHT: Never congratulate the bride. Instead write something like, "With all good wishes for your happiness"

Of Interest to Women

MISS MABELL ELLENORE BATEMAN of Marmora, was married on Saturday to Mr. Norman Walter Gawley of Peterborough. The ceremony took place at St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, and the Rev. G. D. Young officiated. After a honeymoon at Lake Simcoe and points in the States, the couple will live in Peterborough.—(Photo by Wm. E. Riley, Belleville.)

Norman W. Gawley Marries Mabell E. Bateman, Marmora

MARMORA, July 25 — The marriage took place in St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, on Saturday of Mabell Ellenore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bateman of Marmora, to Norman Walter, son of Mrs. Gawley and the late Walter M. Gawley of Peterborough. The Rev. G. D. Young, B.A., B.D., officiated before a background of tall floral standards and candles.

Music was rendered by Mrs Alex Fraser, of Marmora. Mrs. E. Colden sang before the ceremony "O Promise Me" and during the signing of the register, "Because."

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of traditional heavy cream satin, fashioned on princess style, with nylon, lace bodice and seed pearl trim on the bodice. The dress had slight train, floor length veil of nylon tulle with lace border, matching headdress of lace over satin, with seed pearl trim. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and blue forget-me-nots and maiden hair fern tied with white satin streamers.

Mrs. George Reeves of Belleville, matron of honor, wore pastel green figured taffeta with matching gloves, and picture hat. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of pink carnations with maiden hair fern.

Miss Jean McLaren of Belleville, was senior bridesmaid, wearing pastel yellow figured taffeta with matching gloves and picture hat. She had an old-fashioned nosegay of flowers tied with matching ribbons.

Miss Ruth Bateman, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid wearing pastel orchid figured taffeta with matching gloves and picture hat. Her flowers were an old-fashioned nosegay of flowers tied with matching ribbons.

Miss Judy Gawley of Niagara Falls, cousin of the groom, was flower girl, gowned in white organdy with blue satin streamers, matching hat and mitts. She carried a nosegay of pink and white carnations.

The groomsman was Mr. Leland Gawley, of Peterborough, brother of the groom.

Ushers were Mr. Francis Dwyer of Niagara Falls, Ont., brother-in-law of the bride and Mr. Gordon Reid of Ivanhoe, cousin of the groom.

The reception was held in the church parlors. The bride's mother received (with wedding party also) wearing a gown of powder blue sheer with white accessories, assisted by the groom's mother, who wore navy faille with navy accessories. The mothers' corsages were red roses.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Lake Simcoe and the States. The bride wore for travelling a powder blue suit with navy and white accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Out-of-town guests were from Oshawa, Niagara Falls, Ontario, Belleville, Peterborough, Niagara Falls, New York, Maryland, USA, Tweed, Madoc. The couple will live in Peterborough

Edmunds-McMullen Vows Exchanged at Bride's Home

BETHANY, July 25—(ENS)—The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents on Saturday of Marion Ada McMullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McMullen of Janetville and William Donald Edmunds, son of Mrs. Ross Edmunds and the late Mr. Edmunds, Millbrook. The Rev. C. W. Hutton officiated.

Before the ceremony Mr. Orville Hancock, Ottawa, sang "O Promise Me" and during the signing of the register, "All Joy Be Thine".

An attractive arrangement of white satin ribbons centred by a large white bell formed an arch, completed by large white baskets of pink and white flowers on either side of the bay window in the living room, where ceremony was performed.

The bride, on the arm of her father, entered the room to the music of the Lohengrin Wedding March played by Mrs. James Richardson, great aunt of the bride.

Her gown of ivory satin with slight train, was fashioned with sweetheart neckline, lily point sleeves and short peplum trimmed with pleated satin. Tiny covered buttons fastened the back of the tight-fitting bodice. Her full-length veil of tulle illusion with headdress in halo shape was crowned with lily-of-the-valley and satin bows. She carried a bouquet of red roses and stephanotis. Her only ornament was a gold heart-shaped locket, the gift of the groom.

The wedding attendants were Mrs. John Tinney, matron of honor, little Beth McMullen, sister of the bride as junior bridesmaid, frocked alike in pink and blue nylon net gowns over taffeta, fashioned with tight-fitting tucked bodice, cap sleeves and long full skirts. They wore matching bonnets tied with satin ribbons.

The matron of honor carried a bouquet of pink carnations and stephanotis, and the bridesmaid a nosegay of pink roses and white sweet peas.

The groomsman was Mr. John Tinney.

After the ceremony a reception was held on the spacious lawn where the bride's mother received wearing a gown of pink lace and crepe with corsage of yellow roses and pink sweet peas. The groom's mother, who also received, wore a gown of navy blue sheer with corsage of pink roses.

A dainty wedding supper was served by cousins and girl friends of the bride. They were: Betty Ann Kelleth, Diane Copping, Margaret Steele, Doris Argue, Mrs. Murray Malcolm, Mrs. Albert Adams, Mrs. James Gray and Doris Stinson.

The couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a trip to Niagara and the States. For travelling the bride wore a beige suit, natural straw hat, red shortie coat and red accessories with a corsage of roses and sweet peas. On their return they will live in Millbrook.

Anna Bell Johnston Becomes Wife Of Everett Wood

Mark St. United Church was decorated with summer flowers on Saturday for the wedding of Anna Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnston, Stewart Hall, and Everett Melville Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Wood of Keene. The Rev. B. S. Morwood officiated and Mrs. Searles played the wedding music. During the signing of the register, Miss Marg Thompson sang, "Because".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a slipper satin gown styled with a tight bodice and sweetheart neckline. The long sleeves were buttoned at the wrist and ended in points over her hands. A seven-foot train fell in graceful folds. Her headdress was a halo of French lace.

The bridal attendants were Mrs. Ray Johnston, matron of honor and Mrs. Don Forbes, bridesmaid, both sisters of the bride. Both were gowned in blue and yellow taffeta dresses with double net skirts of ballerina length and off-the-shoulder brocaded necklines. They wore mohair picture hats and carried nosegays of sweet peas and roses. The flower girl, Betty Ann Johnston, a niece of the bride, wore a pink flowered voile dress with matching bonnet of the same material.

The groomsman was Mr. Percy Wood, brother of the groom. Mr. Bob Wood and Mr. Donald Forbes were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in Mark St. United Church parlors. The bride's mother received in a sky blue chantongue gown. She wore a navy mohair hat and a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother assisted in a navy sheer gown, a navy felt hat and a corsage of pink roses.

For a trip to Toronto and the Muskoka district, the bride wore a tailored sky blue gabardine suit with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Wood will live at 231 Swanston Ave., Peterborough.

Find New Look Back in 20's In London Styles

LONDON, July 25—Reuters)—Under a hot July sun, the world's buyers today hurried from one London dress show to another, to look at coats in heavy deep-piled materials, suits and dresses trimmed with velvet, and close-fitting little hats designed for winter.

The London autumn collections were packed into a few days because the Paris houses suddenly decided to advance their autumn showings.

London's new line was "back in the '20s"—complete, down to the very name, with the "sacque" coat.

The new look appeared shyly, leaving plenty of familiar flares and pleats. But there were loose-fitting coats, with large collars and knee-hugging hemlines. There was the lower waist line. There was even the "harem" skirt for evening wear.

And skirts continue to go up and up—with the hem line from 14½ to 16 inches off the ground.

Top Heavy

The new sacque coats, somewhat top-heavy in effect, fit loosely at the top and taper inward to skirts that tightly wrap the legs just below the knees. Fastening down the centre front with a single line of buttons, they have enormous pockets placed even lower than the normal stretch of the arm.

Best designs in suits are classic in style, with the jacket inches longer than last season but the waist still nipped in. The battle-dress top is a serviceable innovation for autumn suits.

Velvet is used on coats, suits and dinner dresses. It appears on the big revers of coats — some large enough to have pockets in them—and on revered cuffs and pockets. Silk velvet of the quality worn by our great-grandmothers enhances the soft lines of dinner dresses.

Some of the hats have high crowns. Nearly all have feather and velvet trimmings.

At Many Showers Before Wedding

Before her marriage on Saturday, Mrs. Albert Bradley, nee Joan Hillier was entertained at several social affairs.

Mrs. Paul Hillier and Mrs. John Corp entertained jointly at a shower at the former's home on Murray St.

Mrs. James MacGovarin, Mrs. Ira Franks and Mrs. Arthur Lasenby entertained at a shower at Mrs. MacGovarin's home on Clonsilla Ave.

Mrs. D. Hillier entertained for her daughter with a trousseau tea.

The members of the staff of the Bell Telephone Company presented the bride with a set of crystal.

AIDS INDIAN WELFARE

NEW DELHI — (CP) — Lady Mountbatten has donated £1,000 ($3,1000) to be used by the nursing college here to buy a van fitted as a mobile clinic for infant welfare. The van will be used by students for work in Indian villages.

MISS PAULINE JOAN HILLIER was the bride of Albert William Bradley on Saturday. The wedding ceremony took place at St. Andrew's United Church, the Rev. M. J. Aiken officiating. The bride's gown was of embossed white satin with nylon yoke. The couple left for a honeymoon trip to the US and will return to live on Patterson St., Peterborough. —(Roy Studio Photo)

Bradley-Hillier Nuptials Held St. Andrew's United Church

The marriage took place on Saturday in St. Andrew's United Church of Pauline Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Hillier, to Albert William, son of Mr. and Mrs Bruce Bradley. The Rev. M. J. Aiken officiated and Mr. Harry Northrop played the wedding music. Before the ceremony, Miss M. Turner sang "Smiling Through" and "Because" during the signing of the register.

The church was decorated with a large floral basket and white satin ribbons on the pews.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of embossed white satin with nylon yoke and lace off-the-shoulder effect. The bodice was fitted with tiny buttons down the back to the waist. The skirt was caught up in the front in old crinoline style, showing lace petticoat. Her veil was of embroidered net in Juleit cap style caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of red roses and white carnations with trailing white streamers.

The matron of honor was Mrs. John Corp frocked in pink eyelet organdy. Miss Barbara Elliot was bridesmaid in a gown of embossed yellow organdy. Penny Hillier and Gloria MacGovarin were flower girls in off-the-houlder ankle-length dresses of pale green and orchid nylon. The bridal attendants wore matching headdresses of sprays of flowers with silver leaves and carried nosegays of matching gladioli, carnations and streamers.

The best man was Mr. L. Bradley. Mr. Paul Hillier and Mr. Bob Kent were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Club Aragon where the bride's mother received in a gown of apple green fascinate crep. She wore a hat of tan lace straw and a corsage of yellow carnations. The groom's mother assisted. She wore a two-piece dress of steel blue satin with navy accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Later the bride and groom left for a trip to the United States. The bride wore a navy and white dress and shoes and white accessories for travelling.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley will live on Patterson St.

6—In Memoriams

EALES—In loving memory of mother, Mrs. Gladys Eales, who passed away one year ago today.
In my heart your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day dear mother,
I do not think of you.
—Ever remembered by son Norman

EALES—In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Gladys Eales.
The depths of sorrow we cannot tell
O'er the loss of one we loved so well,
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep —Ever remembered by Aub, Rene and granddaughters.

EALES—In loving memory of my dear wife, Gladys Eales.
Deep in the heart lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest.
In memory's frame I shall keep it.
Because she was one of the best.
—Ever remembered by husband Harold.

HEARD—In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Walter A. Heard, who passed away July 28, 1947.
Every memory is a keepsake
With which we will never part.
Though God has her in His keeping,
We have her in our hearts.
—Ever remembered by husband, daughter and son-in-law, Port Hope Guide please copy.

McFARLANE—In loving memory of David McFarlane, who died July 25, 1949.
Those whom we love go out of sight,
But never out of mind,
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they leave behind
—Always remembered by Marjorie and Marlow Banks.

OAKLEY—In loving memory of a dear little grandson, Brucie Oakley, who passed away July 25th, 1949, 1 year and 7 months old.
A dear little soul, one of the best,
God took him home to be with the rest.
—Lovingly remembered by Grandma Hie and family.

5 Provincial Premiers Attend State Funeral

OTTAWA, July 25 (CP) — At least five provincial premiers will attend the state funeral for William Lyon Mackenzie King in Ottawa tomorrow.

They are Premiers Smallwood of Newfoundland, McNair of New Brunswick, Frost of Ontario, Campbell of Manitoba and Johnson of British Columbia. There is a possibility Premier Manning of Alberta may be able to attend.

Other provincial representatives:

Prince Edward Island—Works Minister Cox; Nova Scotia—Industry Minister Connolly, acting premier; New Brunswick—Lieutenant-governor MacLaren; Quebec—Provincial Treasurer Gagnon and Legislature Speaker Tache; Ontario—Lieutenant-Governor Lawson; Saskatchewan — Resources Minister Brocklebank.

MISS TORONTO—Meet Miss Toronto of 1950—lovely Ruby Mann. The 18-year-old beauty from Grimsby, Ont., was chosen from among 56 contestants Saturday. She is five-feet-six-inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has a 34 bust, 24 waist and 35 hips.

Suspend 1,000 Licences Month

TORONTO, July 25 (CP)—Despite increased penalties, far too many Ontario motorists still mix the deadly cocktail of alcohol and gasoline, Highways Minister Doucett said today.

The highways department is suspending drivers' licences at a rate of more than 1,000 a month, and "even more drastic steps will be taken," the minister said.

In the first six months of the year, there were 558 suspensions of driving privileges, compared with 5,695 for the corresponding period of 1949. Of this number, 690 were for drunk driving, an increase of 144.

Main reason for suspension listed as "careless driving," a category used by the department under which fractions not otherwise specified can be penalized. Under this listing, 2,321 motorists lost their right to drive, some for as long as two years.

Under the Highway Traffic Act, the car of a drunk driver is automatically impounded for three months, and confiscation may follow.

Trent River WI Plans Annual Sport Day

TRENT RIVER, July 25 (ENS) —Mrs. Earl Greenly, president, was hostess for the July meeting of the Women's Institute which was held at her home Thursday afternoon.

Donations were received for the Manitoba Relief Fund. The branch, which was second place winner in the district quilt competition were in favor of having a quilt competition at the Area Convention to be held in Toronto in November.

Mrs. Eric Little and Mrs. Jack Henry were appointed to look after the sport events for the annual sports day of the branch to be held in August at "Blister" Point, Trent River.

Models Show Sheath Frocks Which Give Some Freedom

By DOROTHY WADDINGTON

NEW YORK (Reuters). — The striking difference between a Paris and a New York show is felt from the moment you enter the doorway.

At Jacques Fath's Paris establishment the usual procedure represents a 15-minute struggle before you are seated, the first step being to fight your way through a mob of uninvited guests at the dorway, trying to talk their way in. This accomplished, you must find the little gilded chair bearing your name, which is usually occupied by a back row stranger. This calls for some polite conversation. An hour's waiting ensues; a Paris show never starts on time.

Jacques Fath's New York show at the Waldorf Astoria recently was a striking contrast. There was no rush, no jam, and even a few unoccupied seats. The orchestra played the "Star Spangled Banner" and the show started on the dot. The courtesy on the part of a foreign designer in starting his show with only the national anthem of this country created a favorable atmosphere. But, from the moment the show begins you are in no special country but at Jacques Fath's. Even the beautiful American models have assimilated that look which typifies Fath among all other designers. At a quick glance they could easily be taken for one of their Paris colleagues.

The overall impression created by a day of New York shows is a big bravo to the American models who always come on with a pleasant smile and look happy to display their clothes.

Paris Translation

The Fath line is an excellent translation of his Paris gowns. They are adapted to leave Mrs. America all her freedom while maintaining the chic Parisian look of the narrow silhouette.

The dresses are most often sheath to just above knee height where either a deep pleated hem line or a side pleat give freedom of action. The Paris version of these same gowns necessitates a slow mincing step; whereas the American version permits a healthy stride. Evening gowns are all floor sweeping. This should be a style setting forecast for next winter. Skirt lengths are shorter than at any other American collection but slightly longer than in Paris ,where Jacques Fath has shown some daring just below knee length.

New Colors

The colors most strongly endorsed were caramel, tangerine, orange peel with bankers grey, a favorite in the basic types.

America, the country of specialists, has carried this theory right into the fashion field.

The Martini Dress Corporation showed a collection designed exclusively for "the not so tall woman." Contrary to the universal idea, 78 per cent of the American women are in the five foot four and under group. These women are fashion conscious and want the "New Look" of today, but so often it is unwearable for them if not adapted.

Alterations are expensive and the effect is never as harmonious as if the gown were built for the "petite" woman. Proportion of lapels, pockets, pleats and fullness that need abbrevations are among the numerous problems that must be solved. The same theory is applied to hats which are scaled to put in value for diminutive faces.

Workers Cut Plant Power

ORILLIA, July 25 (CP—Factories were at a standstill for three hours here today and some 3,000 men and women were idle as 70 employees of the Orillia Water, Light and Power Commission went on strike

The employees pulled the switches, shutting off the power to industries, to emphasize demands that their ocal of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers AFL) be certified as bargaining agent.

At 10 a.m. the power was turned on again, and S. R. Sergeant, chairman of the power commission, said it would stay on "while we talk things over with the union."

F. W. Snider, union secretary, said nearly all employees voted in favor of joining the international brotherhood about three weeks ago. But the commission would not pass a by-law allowing the local to be certified under the Ontario Labor Relations Act.

Mr. Sergeant said the commission was waiting for "the new labor law to be brought into effect before we pass on the by-law."

CCF Convention Discusses Rights For Canadians

VANCOUVER, July 25—(CP)—The CCF Youth Convention—the Co - operative Commonwealth Youth Movement—Monday night pledged itself to work for a bill of rights, union security, guaranted agricultural prices and a complete social security program.

"Growing unemployment and falling agricultural prices herald the coming period of collapse of our capitalist structure with its accompanying human degradation," the convention said in a policy statement issued after a closed session.

The convention adopted a resolution calling for abolition of capital punishment.

Twenty delegates from six provinces—all except the Maritimes—are attending the sessions, which continued today.

The convention has set as one of its main tasks ways to increase and hold C.C.Y.M. membership.

Proposed is a full-time organizer for Saskatchewan and part-time organizers in British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario.

Meanwhile, delegates to the national C.C.F. convention were arriving for opening of the three-day sessions tonight.

West Still Rugged Lion Shot On Main St.

NOTTINGHAM, England, July 25— (Reuters) —Despite a fighting innings of 63 by Godfrey Evans, England was all out for 436 at the lunch interval on the last day of the third cricket test here today.

West Indies, with four hours left for play ,needed 102 runs to win. Only a sensational collapse could rob them of their second successive test victory.

England scored 223 in the first innings and the West Indies replied with 558.

Each side has won one victory in the series.

Crude Bomb Explodes Beside Detroit Hotel

DETROIT, July 25 —(AP)—A crude bomb exploded Monday night at the Berkshire Hotel. None of the 220 guests was hurt. Police said the bomb was placed next to the five-storey hotel in an alley.

Windows in the rear of the hotel were shattered.

Jittery residents rushed into the streets in terror. Some said they feared a bombing attack.

Roy Saunders, manager of the hotel, said there had been recent "labor trouble" over attempts to organize maids and housekeepers.

Car Driver, Owner Both Face Charges

COBOURG, Ont., July 25. — The driver of a car William Chennery, Toronto, was charged with drunk driving and the owner Victor Richardson of Toronto, who was with him at the time was charged with careless driving in police court yesterday. It was the first time in local courts that such a combined charge was laid. Chennery was found guilty and sentenced to seven days. The charge against Richardson was adjourned. The two attended a picnic here July 16 and afterwards Chennery was arrested after police followed his car along King St. Constable E. Butler said the car was running an erratic course and that when he stopped the automobile found that driver Chennery was intoxicated. In the front seat with him was Victor Richardson. Chennery's counsel said he would appeal the case.

Accidental Verdict Returned By Jury

ALMONTE, July 25—(CP)—A verdict of accidental death was returned Monday night by a Coroner's jury investigating the death July 20 of 11-year-old Freddie Leach who was struck by a train while crossing a railway bridge here.

The jury recommended that the Canadian Pacific Railway strictly enforce the "no trespassing" regulation on the bridge.

Young Leach and three companions were headed for their favorite swimming hole when the train bore down on them. His companions managed to make the end of the bridge as the train roared by.

League Tightens As Campbellford Defeats Hastings

HASTINGS, July 25—(ENS)—The Trent Valley League race tightened even more Monday night as Campbellford waded through a sea of errors to down the Hastings Legionnaries 15-9.

West started on the mound for the Legion and was touched for one run in the top of the first on a hit and an error. Legion tied it up in their half of the first and then took a 3-1 lead in the bottom half of the second. But the lead was shortlived as Campbellford bounced back in the top of the third to push four runs across. They stayed out in front from there in.

Legion added a single in the fourth but were snowed under in the fifth when Campbellford tallied six times. Crowley was called to the mound to stop the attack.

McComb went the route for Campbellford and although he gave up 11 hits, he spaced them well. His good control was backed by the support of Fraelick catching.

Scott, the Legionnaire catcher, hit the longest ball of the game, a triple to left field.

Lineups:

Royal Visit Cemented Unity Across Canada

LONDON, July 25 — (CP) — The Royal Visit of 1939 convinced Mackenzie King that Canada could be united in war, a political commentator said today.

A. J. Cummings, veteran News Chronicle correspondent described a "personal recollection" of conversation with the man who was then Canada's Prime Minister.

It happened when the Royal Party stopped for a week-end at Jasper in the Canadian Rockies. Cummings quotes Mackenzie King as saying:

"'You know as well as I do that we may be at war in the Autumn. I confess I feared greatly that I could not unite all Canada on this issue.

"'Now the great popular success of the Royal Visit has stilled my anxiety. We are all at one, I am a happy man tonight.'"

You Can't Prove A Thing By Russian Naval Attache

By DOUGLAS HOW

OTTAWA, July 25 — (CP) — You can't prove a thing by Petr I. Egorov.

He's the one man in Canada who quite probably has inside information whether the Russians have sent one and possibly more submarines into waters off the Canadian East coast.

He's a captain in the Russian navy, the one Russian naval officer in the country. He came to Ottawa two or three months ago as the first naval attache the Russia embassy has had in some years.

But Capt. Egorov is not talking. He says all he knows is what he reads in the papers.

A reporter called the big home on Swanky Range Road where the three or four Soviet military attachese live with their families.

A woman answered and promptly put Capt. Egorov on the line. The captain's English was good. His voice was quiet and polite.

The reporter explained who he was. The rest of the conversation went roughly like this:

Q. "There are reports that some of your submarines are on a training cruise off our Eastern coast. Is that true?"

A. "I know nothing about it."

Q. "Is it possible?"

A. "I just saw it in your paper."

Q. "You have had no information from Moscow about it?"

A. "No."

Q. "You only know what you have seen in the press here?"

A. "I have no comment."

Used U.S. Ships For Red Supplies

LONDON, July 25 (AP) — Sailors on a Greek freighter told today of watching Russians unload supplies in a North Korean port from American-built Liberty ships last March 28.

The freighter is the 7,000-ton Georgios F. Andreads, the last European vessel known to have visited North Korea before its Communists invaded the South June 25.

Christos Petrides, 25, second mate of the Greek ship, told reporters that soldiers sealed cameras and binoculars and ordered the Greek sailors to remain on board during their one week stay. He continued:

"We fooled them. We have small binoculars attached to our sextants. We were able to sneak looks at factories in the town and several Liberty ships flying the Russian flag.

"There were also a number of naval launches flying the Russian flag.

"All the Koreans who came on board seemed very hungry. They stole food as soon as our backs were turned."

Band Concert Given In Warkworth Park

WARKWORTH, July 25 (ENS) —A large crowd gathered on Sunday evening at the ball park to hear the Community Band give their first of a series of open air concerts.

It was a sore of "drive-in theatre set-up" and those who wished, used the raised seats. The new lighting system produced a lovely setting for the occasion. Mr. George Nichols of Campbellford was master of ceremonies.

Miss Ina Bowen gave a medley of hymns on piano, which resembled the chimes and these were particularly well appreciated by the enthusiastic audience. Silver collection was taken during the interlude which amounted to $83.00.

Home Cooking Sale Held By WA Group

TRENT RIVER, July 25 (ENS) —Group 3 of the Women's Association of the United Church under the group leadership of Mrs. Ross Pollock held a parcel post and home cooking sale Wednesday afternoon in the Church dining hall.

A large number of tourists attended and the buying was brisk.

Thick juicy pies, large feather light cakes, home-made bread, cookies and biscuits as well as fresh eggs and raspberries were easy prey for the eager buyers. About $40 was realized from the sale.

The ladies decided to hold a combined group pot luck dinner in the dining hall of the Church, Wednesday, July 26.

Must Stabilize Korean Front Before Peace

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP) —Prospects for some new diplomatic negotiation to end the Korean war appear now to hinge on the outcome of the effort by American and South Korean forces to stabilize the front.

The critical point at which Russia's real intentions toward the Korean fighting will be disclosed, American officials say, will come when and if the Red advance is brought to a standstill.

Russia must then realize, they contend, that without powerful outside assistance the Korean Communists will be unable to hold their gains and will be confronted with the threat of ultimate defeat.

At that time, by this line of reasoning, the world will probably find out uickly whether there is to be an end to aggression and a return to peace in Korea or whether the danger of a great war will increase.

Under Review

Top officials here believe the major decisions on Russia's course have been under study in the Kremlin since the middle of last week.

Two things happened at that time. One was President Truman's message to Congress, calling for a $10,000,000,000 down payment on an expanded military program and warning Russia tnat a series of limited aggressions of the Korea type might well bring on a third world war.

The other development was the failure of Indian Prime Minister Nehru's effort to create conditions for a negotiated settlement. The United States rejected Nehru's suggestion that it facilitate Communist China's membership in the United Nations as a means of getting Russia to resume its place in the Security Council.

These two developments together are taken here as having demonstrated to the Kremlin that the United States intends to stand absolutely firm against aggression in Korea or anywhere else, whatever the cost.

FROM THE COMMAND POST, over the writhing field telephone wires, the man says "Cease fire!" Maybe the Communist gooks over the ridge have beat it. No such luck. Anyhow, it's a break. It's what the headlines call a "lull in the action." Lull—but no lullaby. They don't need lullabies, this 155-mm. howitzer crew, standing off a North Korean drive. They just flop where they are. Some of them are youngsters, like the sleeping kid in the foreground. They're bushed. Old Baldy there in the centre, looks like he might have been through this before, lobbing 155's on Tojo's boys. He uses his piece of the "lull" to snatch a smoke. Somebody's blistered dogs must be howling, judging by that pair of empty field boots at right. Behind them sits another group. Funny how clean a guy's shirt stays on a rugged deal like this. These guys relax, but their rifles are stacked handily against the tree. Leaning against the big gun, another Joe daubs at his face with a handkerchief. Sweat? Blood? Who knows? He's just part of the picture. It's a picture, incidentally that is one of the most quietly dramatic photographs taken on the fighting front in Korea.

Family Sees Father Drown

SAULT STE. MARIE, July 24 (CP).—A Sault Ste. Marie man, father of six children, was drowned in full view of his family at a dam bearing his family name near Thessalon Sunday.

Walter McCreight, 40, stopped into a deep hole as he waded in the waters of the dam, his six-year-old daughter Mary on his shoulders.

A seven-year-old son, Billy, walking at his father's side, also stepped into the hole as Mrs. McCreight stood helplessly on the shore. Bystanders pulled Mary and Billy from the water and struggled in vain to locate the father's body.

The forestry men applied artificial respiration to Billy for three hours before he revived. Mary recovered almost at once.

Voluntary Censorship

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP) —The Times-Herald said Saturday in a front-page announcement it has "imposed on itself voluntary censorship." The paper said it will not print designations of service units called to active duty.

Midgets Find Life Hard Always Treated As Child

BY JACK SCOTT

REGINA, Sask.—I want to tell you a story today about a 35-year-old Englishman, his American wife and their four-months-old baby boy and I hope you will feel as good inside about it as I do.

The Englishman's name is Ronald Street and he and his family are living in the smallest cottage of the Regina Auto Camp where we have parked our trailer.

If you could pretend that you were looking through the wrong end of a telescope, you would describe Ronnie as a surprisingly youthful-looking man despite his mid-thirties paunch, with a suave, yet pleasant manner and, above all else, the proudest darn father in the world.

But, without telescope, you might at first notice none of these things. You would be aware only that Mr. Street is just over three-and-a-half feet tall.

Ronnie and his 26-year-old wife, Lela Mae, who is two inches shorter than her husband and looks up to him as a good wife should, are midgets, or Lilliputians. Which means that they are perfectly formed and proportioned folk who just happened to come in the small, or trial package, size.

We became friends by accident at the camp's water tap. I was waiting there with my bucket behind what appeared to be a well-fed 10-year-old in a precocious blue suit when the "boy" turned, revealing a large cigar in his mouth, smiled and said in a Phillip Morris voice, "Deuced hot weather, isn't it?"

He laughed at my double take and I laughed gratefully and we got to talking.

Baron's Idea

It turned out that Mr. and Mrs. Street are in Regina to join up with a lovely 19-year-old redhead Regina girl named Ann Hubick, w hois even littler than they.

"A very talented young lady," Mr. Street stated in a tiny baritone. "We met while doing a show here two years ago and now Miss Hubick is to join us in some work in the United States."

Mr. Street, known professionally in the show world as "The Cheeky Little Chappie," crossed the Atlantic (two to a berth) some 10 years ago as a comedian with the Royal English Midget Circus, subsequently met Lela Mae and married her in 1948.

I asked if he would tell me something of what it is like to be doll-size. Ronnie gave a few thoughtful puffs on the cigar.

"The most difficult part, of course, is that many people insist on treating you as a child," he said. "I suppose we are somewhat on the defensive against this in our desire to be accepted as adults.

You'll notice I drive a new Ford. Bought it and had it fixed up with extension pedals rather than a small English car because I can't stand anything that smacks of being cute.

"Y'see, we all have full-sized homes, full-sized beds and bathtubs, live our own personal lives just exactly as anyone else. The only difference is that we can't earn a decent living unless we're in show business.

"A midget friend of mine was a riveter during the war. They used him for crawling into parts of airplane frames where a larger man couldn't go. But he was an exception. Another was Aesop, who wrote the fables. Bet you didn't know he was a midget, did you?

"But, y'see, most of us must go on display. There are something like 2,000 of us in America and Europe and nearly all of us are show people.

"For that we have the daughter of one, Baron Leopold von Singer to thank," Ronnie went on. "You've doubtless heard of Singer's Midgets, but very few people know how they began.

"The Baron was a very wealthy Austrian whose daughter had infantile paralysis. It was his practise to read to the little girl and one night he read her Gulliver's Travels. Well, the little girl said, "The one thing I want most is to see a real, live Lilliputian.' And so Baron Singer hired some midgets to stroll about his gardens, hit on the idea of forming a troupe to amuse other children and that was that. Rather charming story, isn't it?"

And Danny

Mr. Street got up, hoisted his pail with an effort and suggested I come along to his cabin to meet his wife. "I would also like you to meet somebody very, very special," he said with a mysterious smile.

Mrs. Street turned out to be a dainty little lady wearing a dark blue dress and sport shoes (made by the designer for a 10-year-old girl) and the somebody special was a plump, blue-eyed baby very busy at work on a bottle.

"Danny Lee," Mr Street said as if in introduction, "Born April 12 in Indianapolis and our pride and joy."

The two little parents stood looking down at their son with wonder and delight and it occurred to me that here were two people elected by fate to be freaks, to be stared at and laughed at because they are "different" and who now, through this small bundle, had risen above all that.

The baby is normal (no midget has ever given birth to a midget) and Ronnie explained that although one famous Lilliputian, Mrs. Judith Skinner, less than three feet tall, has had 14 children, it is an extremely hazardous gamble. The baby weighed six-and-a-half pounds and was delivered by Caesarean.

"I sat outside the room and prayed," the Cheeky Little Chappie said, "and my prayers were answered."

Give 3 Million To Atkinson Foundation Fund

TORONTO, July 25 (CP)—The sum of $3,000,000 from accumulated surplus has been transferred from the Toronto Star Limited to the Atkinson Charitable Foundation as a capital fund, it was announced today.

The announcement came in a statement issued by executors and trustees of the late J. E. Atkinson's will, directors of the Star, and trustees of the foundation. The Atkinson will left his newspaper properties in trust for support of the foundation, and ultimately to belong to it.

The announcement estimates at $80,000 to $85,000 the yearly income available to the foundation as a result of this transfer. In addition to this gift to the capital fund, a further sum of about $100,000 in the hands of the estate's executors is also being transferred as an expendable amount, together with $15,000 to $20,000 from the Toronto Star Limited. Total income available for charitable purposes in the coming year, therefore, will be about $200,000.

To Announce Project

Announcement of an "important project to be assisted" will be made shortly, with further projects to be announced from time to time during the year.

In connection with the foundation's position, the Star says:

"Two misapprehensions should be cleared up: one of these is the idea that the earnings of the Star companies are not subject to income tax. The other is that 90 per cent of their income must be devoted to charity. The Toronto Star and the Toronto Star Realty Limited are and have been subject to the same taxes as other companies and to the same degree. It is the foundation's income which is free from tax. And it is the foundation's income which is subject to the new federal law that there must be a 90-per-cent expenditure of this in any one year."

Outnumbered GI's Hang On To Defence Positions As Reds Closing Pincers

Predict Beachhead Battle Quite Possible
Yanks Recapture Hadong
As Fresh Forces Pouring Along East Coast

TOKYO, July 27—(Thursday)—(CP)—Outnumbered American and South Korean troops clung stubbornly to defence positions Wednesday in the face of "heavy pressure" along all fronts, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said today. A field report indicated that the embattled defenders may have recaptured Hadong, only 70 miles by air west of the major American supply port of Pusan, after furious air strikes left the city ablaze.

Headquarters of the United Nations Commander in Tokyo, in a release issued at 10.50 a.m. Wednesday EDT, said the U.S. First Cavalry Division had repulsed a number of North Korean attacks on the Yongdong front in the centre of the defence lines. The Reds hurled waves of tanks and infantry in an effort to overwhelm the defenders.

The fourth North Korean Division was reported continuing its flanking move along Korea's west coast, while the Communist fifth division was "heavily engaged" on the east coast, somewhere south of Yongdok.

Spot Fresh Forces

Fresh enemy forces—of undetermined size—were spotted by American pilots pushing south along the east coast from Sanchok, 74 miles north of Yongdok, to back up the Red offensive on the extreme right wing of the line. The battle was within 25 miles of the American beachhead and supply port of Pohang where the First Cavalry Division landed one week ago.

Headquarters said "no alarm was felt" over the flanking move of the enemy do n Korea's west coast because of the small number of troops involved.

However, north and east of Yongdong where First Cavalry Division lines are under heavy pressure, the Reds were streaming through mountainous passes at Yongsan, Chongsan and Ponghwang mountain. These were eight, 12 and 23 air miles respectively north and east of Yongdong.

Largest Battle

The four-day battle in which the Communists won Yongdong earlier this week was the largest ground battle of the campaign

Use Children As Shield, GI's Won't Fire

By DON WHITEHEAD

AN ADVANCED U.S. COMMAND POST IN KOREA, July 26 (AP)—A United States officer said today North Koreans herded several hundred Korean men, women and children before them in this morning's attack around Yongdong.

The non-combatants were used as a shield for four tanks to cross a bridge, said Maj. William O. Witherspoon of San Francisco.

The Americans withheld their fire and the tanks got up to positions for attack.

This is the way Witherspoon described the fighting, in which the Americans fell back east of Yongdong. The withdrawal was orderly and casualties were reported not heavy.

The Reds opened their drive against Yongdong Monday.

Tuesday, the enemy again struck the American right flank at 5 p.m. and fought on after dark in the first major night attack of the war. There was a little enemy artillery fire. The infantry then came swarming through the mountains around the flanks of the unit.

At 1:30 a.m. this morning the North Koreans attacked the American left flank which was drawing back.

This was the drive led by four tanks herding the non-combatants before them. The bridge had been mined by the Americans and they would have blown it up otherwise.

"The Americans just couldn't open fire on those women and children," Witherspoon said.

This gave the tanks a chance to come in close and open direct fire on the American positions.

Deny Mutiny On Icebreaker

QUEBEC, July 26—(CP)—A Transport Department spokesman denied today a report that "mutinous incidents" preceded the departure Monday of the new ice-breaker C. D. Howe for northern waters.

The official made the statement commenting on a published report that several facts seem to confirm" rumors of "mutinous incidents" aboard the 2,600-ton vessel.

He said it is true the ice-breaker, replacing the Arctic supply ship Nascope, sailed on a delayed schedule. The C. D. Howe originally was scheduled to leave Quebec Saturday for its four-month Arctic cruise.

He declared the delay was due to mechanical adjustments which have to be made in a new ship.

UK Navy Retains Men For Longer Service

LONDON, July 26 (Reuters)—The Admiralty announced today that regular officers and ratings of the Royal Navy will be retained in service beyond their normal periods of engagement to increase crews in the Far Eastern fleet.

A recall will go out to a limited number of officers on the emergency list and to a limited number of ratings and Royal marines on the reserve list.

The Admiralty said some officers and ratings due to return home would be kept at foreign stations.

Hit On Head By Ball Valens Umpire Dies

VALENS, Ont., July 26 (CP).—Pheron Cosby, 65, was hit on the head with a baseball while umpiring a game Tuesday night and died within a few minutes.

Cosby, a West Flamborough market gardener, was walking between first and second bases during a warmup session between the first and second innings of a game between West Flamborough and Valens when he was hit by a wild throw to first base.

Valens is nine miles west of Galt.

Coroner J. . Seaton of Beverly reported today that Cosby died from a broken neck. He said there would be no inquest.

Week-Old US Optimism Badly Misplaced—Reporter

By LEIF ERICKSON

U.S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN KOREA, July 26 (AP)—The American optimism of one week ago now is sorely misplaced.

United Nations forces are running out of space to yield in their battle for time.

Quick American reinforcement is vital.

Optimism was high a week ago. Two fresh United States divisions were moving up to the front. There was talk of—even firm plans—for an American attack.

But overwhelming masses of Red troops kept moving into the vital rail and highway corridor that runs from Taejon southeast of Pusan, the main U.S. supply front.

Red tanks and massed infantry forced the U.S. 24th Division to make a costly retreat from Taejon. Tuesday the Communists hammered the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division out of Yongdong.

Meanwhile, a Red scythe has made a lightning swing down the Yellow Sea coast and across southwestern Korea. This sweep threatens to envelop the supply lines running from Pusan northward to the front.

Almost certainly the next battle in the Taejon-Pusan corridor will be another delaying action—with another eventual withdrawal.

Kumchon is the next city on the important railway and highway southeast of Yongdong. By air it is 20 miles from Yongdong—30 by a winding course through the mountain valley.

The Allies' beachhead on the peninsula is shrinking.

Find Missing Boys

LINDSAY, July 26—(CP)—Missing from their Lindsay homes, 11-year-old Jack Sheldon and 10-year-old Larry Larose were found by police on the main street selling daily papers in which appeared a front-page store of their disappearance. The youngsters were unaware of the search.

London, Others Pledge Ground Troops

By The Canadian Press

Britain, Australia and New Zealand today boosted the roster of United Nations forces pledged to aid United States troops in Korea with offers of ground forces.

In London, Defence Minister Emanuel Shinwell said Britain is prepared to send to Korea "effetive land reinforcements including infantry, armor, artillery and engineers along with administrative backing."

Size of the British force was not announced immediately, but Shinwell said it would leave as soon as possible.

Britain already has put into the Korean action her Far Eastern fleet of 22 ships, placed today on a "war footing."

The new offers raised to five the number of countries pledging ground troops. Turkey and Thailand earlier offered troops. Bolivia said she would send 30 officers.

Australian Offer

In Canberra, Acting Prime Minister Arthur Fadden anounced the decision to send Australian ground troops to aid South Korea. The size of the force will be announced later. Australia earlier contributed a destroyer and fighter planes.

In Auckland, N.Z., Prime Minister Sydney Holland told the House of Representatives that a New Zealand artillery combat force would be added to the United Nations forces. Enlistment of volunteers will begin tomorrow. Size of the force was not announced immediately. Two New Zealand destroyers already are in the Korea fight.

Other pledges answering the United Nations resolution calling for aid in fighting the Reds in Korea:

Turkey — 4,500 fully-armed troops equipped with United States arms received under the current U.S. military aid program.

Thailand — 4,000 officers and men.

Bolivia—30 officers.

At first many countries said they would not be able to provide ground forces

But repeated allied withdrawals in South Korea have made it apparent that many more divisions than the U.S. and South Korea have in combat will be needed to push back the Communists.

Cuba notified the UN it "is disposed to discuss" sending troops to Korea. The cable to the world organization said, however, that Cuba's military forces are limited.

DENIES ENGAGEMENT

LONDON (CP).—Barbara Ann Scott denied through a spokesman today that she is engaged to be married to anybody. The 22-year-old Ottawa skater said there is no truth she is engaged to Frank Jones.

Cabinet Men Confer On Proposal

Offers From Others Change Attitude On Original Query

OTTAWA, July 26—(CP)—Key Cabinet ministers are expected to confer today on a possible revision of Canada's stand against sending ground troops to Korea "at this stage."

The action of Australia, Britain, New Zealand, Turkey and Thailand in offering Army troops to the United Nations is a development which has placed a new light on Canada's decision of last week against doing likewise.

Some informed quarters consider it not impossible or even improbable that the government will make some similar gesture now that Korea has settled into a long slugging match. If such action were taken, parliament would have to be recalled.

Contact Washington

It is understood that Ottawa has been in touch with Washington on the question of sending Canadian ground troops as well as other types of aid in addition to the three destroyers and eight transport planes now on their way.

Washington's reaction is that, militarily, small non-American ground units would be more bother than they are worth because of the difficulties of integration.

Politically, however, from the standpoint of UN olidarity, the contribution of ground troops takes on an entirely different aspect.

Cabinet's regular Wednesday meeting was postponed today because the ministers were busy with preparations for the funeral of former prime minister Mackenzie King.

However, certain key ministers were expected to confer with Prime Minister St. Laurent on the rush of ground troop offers that has developed.

Missing Yacht Reaches Picton

PICTON, July 26 — (CP) — After being reported missing earlier Tuesday in the choppy seas of Eastern Lake Ontario, the 24-foot yacht Cherie reached here Tuesday night with all three of its crew safe.

J. C. Lackner, owner of the Cherie, said the C-Class sailboat had been blown off course in the Freemen Cup race that started from Youngstown, N.Y., Sunday. With him were Mrs. Lackner and Fred Stinson, 27. All three were from Toronto.

Two RCAF aircraft had been sent from Trenton earlier to scour the area between the Bay of Quinte and Chaumont Bay, N.Y., end of the 175-mile race. The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Maple was also sent out to search for the Cherie.

Highways Dept. Plans Prosecute Operators

TORONTO, July 26 (CP — The highways department today instructed the Lincoln county crown attorney to prosecute five operators of roadside fruit stands.

Prosecution will be based on a breach of the Highways Act which prohibits the erection of roadside markets on controlled access highways.

The department banned wayside fruit stands as creating a traffic hazard and set aside a stretch of highway on which stands would be permitted. Some operators are alleged to have built stands elsewhere.

Have Air Force

HONG KONG, July 26 —(AP)—Russian-built fighter planes—bearing the insignia of the Chinese Communist air force—roared over Shanghai the week-end of July 16. An eyewitness said that was a "full dress airing" of the hitherto-secret Chinese Red air arm.

LOOKING MUCH LIKE a Canadian railway station trackside garden, a troop train is seen leaving for a South Korean town with troops and front line supplies. Name of the town on sign in picture is blacked out for security reasons.

Capital Bids Farewell To Statesman

OTTAWA, July 26 (CP). — Canadians gathered in fresh thousands today to bid a last farewell to the country's veteran statesman, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Hours before the full state funeral procession was due to begin crowds began to collect along the three-block route from the Parliament Buildings to St. Andrew's Church.

Thousands of others slowly filed past the bier of the former Prime Minister, whose body lay in state in Canada's Hall of Fame yesterday and until 2 p.m. today when the casket was closed.

More than 4,000 people formed a long queue in front of the Peace Tower today to wait their turn to pass the bier. The lineup stretched more than 200 yards down the main walk to Wellington Street and then cut along Wellington to Confederation Square.

Bow In Prayer

Before the general public was admitted to the centre block, Prime Minister St. Laurent and other cabinet ministers walked up to the bier, gazed once more at the calm face of the man who had led their party for some 30 years and bowed their heads in silent prayer.

As the time for the funeral procession nears, eight scarlet-coated RCMP officers will shoulder the mahogany casket bearing the body of the man who was at the nation's political helm for more than 21 years. It will be lifted to a black hearse, flanked by pall bearers and honorary pallbearers and preceded by a three-service guard of honor.

Then will begin a slow, three-block procession through shoulder to shoulder lines of servicemen to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where Mr. King worshipped in life.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, Mr. King's successor in 1948, will lead the 31 of 39 honorary pallbearers who will be present.

Many Dignitaries

There will be members of the Cabinet, at least five Provincial Premiers and representatives from the other provinces. There will be scores of representatives of the judiciary, the military, the clergy and the thousands of persons who worked with Mr. King during his long public career.

There will also be hundreds — perhaps thousands — more who come for a glimpse of the funeral procession. Federal and city offices will be closed.

Police Mercy Ride Too Late, Child Dies

TORONTO, July 26—(CP)—Twenty minutes after being sped here at 80 miles an hour from Brantford, the day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lockyer of Brantford died in hospital Tuesday night.

The child, suffering from a rare blood disease, was brought here for special treatment. Detective Tom Blower with the child in an incubator, drove from Brantford, about 60 miles west of here, in 45 minutes.

Baruch Requests All-Out Economic Mobilization

WASHINGTON, July 26—(AP)—Elder statesman Bernard Baruch today called for all-out economic mobilization of the United States with a quick freeze on prices, wages and rents. "Events have left us no choice," he said. "We have to mobilize." Baruch, the government's mobilization adviser in two world wars, urged quick action in testimony prepared for the Senate banking committee.

The Senators are weighing a bill to give President Truman limited wartime controls in the present emergency. These would not include price control of any kind.

Baruch's recommendations included—but went far beyond — the President's requests. He has taken the position that the President was not doing enough for preparedness.

Would Be Prepared

"I proposed that we organize ourselves—all our resources of men, money, materials and morale—so that whatever happens—new aggressions abroad, possible destruction at home—whatever happens, the armed forces can get what they need, when they need it, with the least necessary dislocation of the civilians."

Baruch said the U.S. has the choice of "peace or butter" and the real danger is not government control but military defeat abroad and inflation at home.

"The situation is sufficiently grave to warrant an over-all ceiling across the entire economy — over-all prices, wages, rents, fees and so on, with high enough taxes to prevent profiteering and to pay all defence costs, and an all-embracing, effective system of priorities," Baruch asserted.

Ontario May Close Liquor Outlets Earlier

TORONTO, July 26—(CP)—The Provincial government is considering a midnight closing for all liquor outlets in Ontario, Col. Arthur Welsh, chairman of the Liquor Control Board, said Tuesday.

"It is under consideration and has been for some time," he said. "However, I cannot say when a decision will be reached."

Speculation on the early imposition of a midnight curfew arose here Tuesday when three liquor licences received by successful applicants contained the midnight restriction.

At present, beverage rooms and cocktail bars must close at midnight but dining lounges are permitted to sell until 2 a.m.

Have No Water House Burned

WINDSOR, July 26—(CP)—A house owned by Omer Lafleur of Windsor burned to the ground Tuesday while firemen stood by helpless, unable to fight the fire because of lack of water. Firemen said there are no water mains in the district, in suburban Sandwich West.

Earl S. Totten, reeve of the township, said today homes have been built in the area in spite of the fact that it is zoned as an industrial area and has no water supply. He said water mains would have been built if a petition signed by 60 per cent of residents and industries in the area had asked for the service.

4 Teen-Agers Kidnap Cabbie

MONTREAL, July 26 (CP) — Four teen-agers who kidnapped a taxi-driver and a garage attendant and stole a cash register were captured early today before they knew they were being chased.

Police said the youths, armed with daggers, hailed taxi-driver Jean-Paul Pilon, 23 in midtown Montreal and forced him to sit in the back while they drove off At a service station in nearby Ile Perrot, they picked up attendant Rene Beaulieu when he told them he hadn't any money and his cash register was locked.

They took the register along too.

The youths dropped off Beaulieu at suburban Baie d'Urfe where he called police Two radio cars answering the alarm caught them in suburban Ville St. Pierre a few minutes later.

Find Missing Lad

EDMONTON, July 26 (CP).—Five-year-old Paul Harris, missing from his Cherhill district home since last Friday was found Tuesday, suffering from exposure and hunger, in the dense woods near his home.

Foreign Aid Bill Ready For Truman's Signature

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP)—The new $1,222,500,000 foreign arms aid bill aimed at speeding anti-Communist defence preparations around the world was ready today for President Truman's signature.

The measure authorizes a second year of American military assistance to friendly powers. It is to be followed soon by a new, and probably larger, request to Congress for more money for the same purpose. Some of Truman's advisers have recommended an additional $5,000,000,000 to meet the Korean crisis.

Meantime, officials reported these developments in the effort to speed the flow of arms to North Atlantic Treaty countries and others receiving American backing:

1. Between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 in orders have been placed this month without waiting for enactment of the second-year program.

2. New depots may soon be opened and double work shifts ordered to shorten the weeks required for taking tanks, planes and other Second World War weapons and equipment out of storage.

After a slow start in getting the vast arms enterprise moving, an estimated 75,000 tons already has been shipped abroad.

Just what Truman will ask as the next instalment hinges on the current meeting in London of the North Atlantic Council deputies.

Navy Admits Strange Sub Off East Coast

Investigations Show Reports True
Navy Officials Say

OTTAWA, July 26—(CP)—The Navy announced today that "one or more submarines of an unknown nation have probably been in the waters off the east coast of Canada during the past month."

Russia, Navy officials said earlier, is the only power which could have sent them there.

The Navy issued this statement:

"A preliminary assessment of a series of reports of submarine sightings ranging from the grand banks of Newfoundland to the Bay of Fundy indicate that one or more submarines of an unknown nationality had probably been in the waters off the east coast of Canada during the past month.

"Reports, most of them received from fishermen, of submarines sighted in the Bay of Fundy between the 5th and 19th of July have been investigated and examined and it is considered likely that a single strange sub was in the Bay.

Five Reports

"Up until Monday there had been five separate reports of sightings in the Bay of Fundy. Since then there have been several more, the latest being from the Chignecto Bay area at the head of the Bay. They are under investigation but it is considered unlikely that a submarine would venture into this area where the extreme tides and tricky currents make pilotage a risky undertaking for a submarine captain unfamiliar with the waters.

"Navy headquarters is still awaiting word from the (British) Admiralty which is expected to clear up whether a submarine reported sighted on the Grand Banks by a Spanish fishing vessel was HMS Astute. The Astute was on passage from Halifax to Plymouth and was in the same general area as the fishing vessel at that time."

Asks US Civilians To Sacrifice

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP) —President Truman today summoned the United States to "some sacrifice" of its civilian plenty. He declared himself ready to call for "complete economic mobilization" if the defence of freedom requires it.

Truman told Congress, in his mid-year economic message, that price ceilings, rationing and "serious shortages" can be avoided if Congress quickly gives him limited control powers and a $5,000,000,000 tax raise.

But he warned: "We must realize that the engagement in Korea will be costly and may not be short. We must prepare against the possibility that new crises may arise elsewhere."

The President said that industrial output must be stepped up—possibly by a rate of $10,000,000,000 annually before Jan 1—and that basic industry itself must be expanded by federal loans and guarantees.

"We cannot afford longer to risk the possibility of future desperate shortages of some of the most essential requirements for our national security," Truman said.

Allot 60% Of Dollar For Military Weapons

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP) —About 60 cents of each of the $10,500,000,000 the United States military wants Congress to provide for fighting in Korea and future rearmament would be used to buy weapons—guns, bombs, planes, ships and tanks.

Before the Korean war revealed inadequacies in amounts and types of weapons, the peacetime dollar slice for this purpose averaged about 18 cents.

U.S. Exports Increased By 60 Million

Imports Also Climb, Sales To Britain Showing Sharp Drop

OTTAWA June 26—(CP)—Canada increased her exports to the United States by more than $60,000,000 during June and achieved a total export trade of $291,800,000 during the month.

This total, said the bureau of statistics Tuesday in a preliminary statement on June exports and imports, was greater by $34,000,000 than the June, 1949, exports of $237,400,000.

In sales to the United States, Canada's shipments took a significant jump from $115,600,000 in June last year to $179,850,000, boosting the U.S. share of the Canadian export pie from 45 per cent to more than 60.

Not So Bright

In trade with Canada's other important customer—the United Kingdom—sales were not so bright. Exports slipped to $52,620,000 from $61,100,000, indicating a continual paring down of Britain's purchases of Canadian goods.

While sales climbed, Canada's appetite for foreign goods also increased from $250,500,000 in June last year to $282,000,000.

There was a significant increase in purchases from the United States, the total rising from $176,900,000 to $189,800,000.

Other countries, too, shared in Canada's accelerated program of imports. The U.K., seeking to increase her supply of dollars, shipped $36,800,000 worth of goods, an increase of $9,800,000. Other Commonwealth countries boosted their sales from $19,200,000 to $23,400,000. From other foreign countries Canada took $32,800,000 worth of commodities, compared with $27,400,000 last year.

The over-all effects of this buying and selling for Canada with a favorable balance of trade of $9,000,000, a climb from $6,900,000 in June, 1949.

thus far, with overwhelming pressure placed on four new U.S regiments strung along a 25-mile front.

In the Hadong battle, a fifth airforce spokesman said the city was subjected to vigorous assault by infantry and planes.

He said carrier-launched planes attacked the central front. The unconfirmed report of the city's recapture might be the first step by United Nations forces to plug the gap in their shrinking defence perimeter in southeast Korea.

The Reds put the squeeze on the United Nations front elsewhere today.

They seized Hadong; threatened Pusan, vital supply base; and pushed the U.S. First Cavalry division farther away from Yongdong on the central front.

Despite these reversals, which drew some pessimistic comment from the front, a spokesman at Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said the batle lines around Yongdong have "stabilized considerably."

Can Hold Beachhead

He added confidently that new American strength — which includes an army division and a marine division en route from the United States—assures the Korean beachhead "can be held."

The spokesman did not amplify his reference to "beachhead" but apparently he was referring to the narrowing arc-like perimeter of South Korean territory held by the Allies, with Pusan as the anchor. The Communists already have overrun more than two-thirds of Korea since they attacked June 25.

In sharp contrast to this headquarters statement, AP correspondent Leif Erickson at U.S. Eighth Army headquarters in Korea said the rosy American optimism of last week was sorely misplaced.

MacArthur's spokesman asserted a "continuous line" had been established. But he alluded only to the short central sector around Yongdong — placing the battle line from Yongju in the northeast to near Yongdong.

He glossed over the fact that the whole left flank in the southwest has been circled by North Korean forces. He termed them insignificant and unimportant. Yet these tank-led forces forged farther east toward Pusan by the hour, although their strength was small.

The Communists' lightning drive in the south was a two-pronged move—each led by tanks. One pushed to Hadong; the other reached Hamyang, 45 miles southwest of Kumchon.

Kumchon is a vital communications and supply centre for two U.S. divisions—the 1st cavalry and the 25th infantry—in advanced positions.

While American and South Korean forces fought fiercely for every mountainous mile in the front arching northeast of abandoned Taejon, the North Koreans were free-wheeling in the south.

Battle Evidence

At only one point was there evidence of a battle. A U.S. eighth army spokesman in Korea said South Korean marines and national police forces had retaken Namown, rail and highway junction 60 miles south of Taejon.

Evidently the Communist columns were moving at night. British and American airmen from two carriers flew more than 100 sorties in the southwest, but reported results were "negligible due to a lack of targets."

On the front from Yongdong yielded by the U.S. 1st cavalry during an all-night North Korean assault Tuesday, the Reds' eighth division continued unrelenting pressure.

Not On Schedule

AP correspondent Don Whitehead reported the tank-led night attack on Yongdong pushed the Americans back "farther than their planned withdrawal." He said the defence plan had to be "revised completely."

MacArthur reported the retreat totalled about three miles and was orderly. Heavy artillery and other weapons were saved.

The North Koreans continued attacks against both the 1st Cavalry and the U.S. 25th Infantry Divisions in new defensive positions east of Yongdong.

MacArthur's announcement said that it was still "an indecisive action."

Favored by sunny skies, Allied fighters and bombers hammered relentlessly at enemy communications, railroad marshalling yards and ground forces.

On the east coast, much-battered Yongdok took another naval shelling—this time from a U.S. destroyer. Heavy casualties were reported among Red troops in the area.

A naval announcement reported that, at other points along the coast, ships of the Seventh Fleet caused between 600 and 700 North Korean casualties.

WELCOMES GUESTS — On hand to welcome 50 Canadian boys who are touring the British Isles as his guests on their arrival in England, was W. Garfield Weston, Canadian-born industrialist. Donald Gillespie of Dawson City, Yukon, left, is shown shaking hands with his host. A similar tour of British boys through Canada is also being sponsored by Mr. Weston. The tours are to acquaint schoolboys of both nations with each other's countries.

Germans Want To Know Extent Allied Protection

BONN, Germany, July 26 — (Reuters)— West Germans are closely watching the Atlantic Pact Powers' conference in London to see if it will mean more Allied toorps for West Germany's defence.

Germans in ordinary conversation—in contrast to government officials and politicians — have been asking since the Korea war broke out: "How many troops have the Allies here and where are their defence lines,"

Naturally, Allied authorities refuse to give any such military secrets, but it has not escaped notice that three Atlantic Pact powers—Britain, Denmark and Norway—Tuesday began unusually-large manouevres near the Soviet zone.

Government officials and politicians want an Allied guarantee of West German security.

Thus far the Allies have been adamant in refusing one. They have not gone beyond the attitude expressed by the British High Commissioner, Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick, that "an attack on the Germans in the west is an attack on all of us."

One of the arguments for a guarantee is that Germans rely entirely on the Allies for defence. All political parties, except those of the extreme Right and Left, have in the last few days reiterated their opposition to German re-armament.

Politicians here express belief Allied troops would be more effective stationed strategically near the Soviet zone frontier. This would leave them free from being tied down on internal security responsibilities.

This opinion, in turn, has strengthened West German arguments for a mobile central police force, for which the Alies have not yet given permission.

Say Mackinnon New Minister

TORONTO, July 26 (CP) — A Toronto paper says today that Dr. Mackinnon Phillips, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Grey North, is expected to be appointed minister of public welfare.

An announcement is expected within a few days, the newspaper says.

The welfare post at present is held by William A. Goodfellow who also is acting health minister during the illness of Russell T. Kelley. Mr. Kelley, seriously ill in Hamilton, is not expected to return to his duties.)

Two McIlmoyles Involved In Crash

Two McIlmoyles were involved in a collision Tuesday afternoon at Water St. south of Murray St.

R. McIlmoyle, 751 Water St., was driving a panel truck north on Water St., and stopped behind several other cars. Bob McIlmoyle 33 Armour Rd., also driving north on Water St., struck the rear of the truck.

The two rear doors of the truck were damaged, and the left front fender of the car dented.

Grant of $50,000

WINDSOR, July 26 (CP) — Final approval for a city grant of $50,000 to assist Windsor Hospital was given by city council last night. The grant is the city's share of financing a $373,000 addition to the hospital. Other grants of $186,500 from the Ontario government and $124 333 from the federal government have already been made.

100 Chicks Hatched

Plan Inquiry At Hospital

TORONTO, July 26—(CP)— The Provincial government will make an investigation of the Ontario Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Penetanguishene, Premier Frost said Tuesday.

His announcement followed a statement by Mayor E. C. Sargent of Owen Sound, describing the hospital as a "circus."

The Mayor said Monday he was writing the Premier asking for an investigation as a result of the escape July 13 of Melleville Wilkie of Owen Sound, committed to the hospital in 1932 following conviction for murder of his wife and baby daughter. It was Wilkie's fifth escape. He is still being hunted.

"Apparently the men can go on vacations every couple of years," Mayor Sargent said

Ask Koreans In Japan Destroy U.S. Bases

TOKYO, July 26 (AP) — The Korean Communist radio is urging Koreans in Japan to destroy United States bases—by suicide tactics if necessary.

A broadcast from Pyongyang, North Korean capital, Tuesday night also asked Koreans in Japan to obstruct the flow of American supplies from Japan to South Korea.

Addressed to "our 65,000 compatriots in Japan," the broadcast as heard here said.

"Launch immediately on suicide squad activities . . . co-operate with Japanese workers and obstruct the transportation of military supplies destroy military bases. Overthrow the reactionary cabinet of Japan. Your motherland strongly appeals to you."

Price Gains Held To Narrow Path

TORONTO, July 26— (CP)— Prices were held to a narrow price path as the session progressed on the Toronto stock exchange today. Signs of recovery of a two-day decline appeared at the opening but the upward movement failed to hold. Volume for the first three hours was 465,000 shares.

Expectation of increased purchases in Canada by the United States of lead, zinc, copper and other metals for armament purposes pushed leading base metal stocks higher. Key stocks like Consolidated Smelters and Quemont led the mild advance.

Some early demand pulled a handful of industrials higher but renewed selling at mid-session wiped out the gains. Aluminum Ltd., held the trading spotlight, jumping to a new high at 75¼ at the opening but settling to 72, up a point.

Junior gold producers chalked up losses ranging to about 10 cents. McIntyre slipped in senior golds despite an improved quarterly earnings report.

Private Control Of UK Industry For Some Time

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON, July 26 (CP)—Five British industries, under the threat of public ownership for more than a year, will probably remain in private hands for some time.

Speculation on Socialist plans for the next general election indicates that no new nationalization proposals are in the making. Instead, a compromise formula is anticipated.

Labor would ask a general mandate to take over industries considered anti-social, monopolistic or inefficient. In practice, since nationalization now is by no means popular with all sections of the community, this probably would mean that private enterprise would be left alone.

May Get Reprieve

If so, a reprieve will be in order for the cement industry, sugar refining, cold-storage facilities, water supplies and "all suitable minerals." Life insurance, which Labor promised to "mutualize," also presumably will be left in private hands.

All those industries were scheduled for nationalization in Labor's last election manifesto issued in April, 1949. The close result of last February's election prevented the plans from being implemented.

A manifesto incorporating Labor's reported compromise formula on nationalization will be in the hands of party branches by the end of August. Final approval of this document was expected today at a meeting of the Labor party's national executive committee.

Miss Canada Clocks 130 mph On Trials

GRAVENHURST, July 26 (CP) —Miss Canada IV was clocked today at 130 miles an hour in a trial run here and Charlie Volker, her mechanic, said he was "quite happy" with her performance

Volker who took the boat out for this morning's spin, said that her owner-driver, Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, likely will take an official crack at the world's speedboat record here "around the end of the week." He said the craft would make another trial run later today.

Wilson is aiming at the 160-mile-an-hour record set a few weeks ago by Stanley Sayres of Seattle, Wash., in his Slo-Mo-Shun.

Ask Investigation Of Treatment

TORONTO, July 26 (CP)—The Association for Civil Liberties protested Tuesday to Premier Duplessis of Quebec and Federal Justice Minister Garson about the treatment of five Baptist evangelists in La Salle, Que., last Saturday.

(La Salle dispatches said the five were shoved in puddles, potatoes and rubbish and jostled and kicked as they tried to hold a religious meeting on the main street of the north-western Quebec town.)

The association, in a letter signed by C. H. Millard, Irving Himel, B. K. Sandwell and J. S. Midanik, told Mr. Duplessis it appeared from newspaper reports that the five Baptists' religious liberties were invaded. It asked him as attorney-general of Quebec to:

1. Fix the responsibility for the La Sarre disturbance.

2. Determine whether there was mob violence and to take action to prevent its recurrence.

3. Establish "beyond dispute" that it is the intention of law officers to see that religious freedom in Quebec is recognized and respected."

Mr. Garson, to whom a copy of the letter to Mr. Duplessis was sent, was asked to look into the matter and take what steps he considers necessary.

Circus Visits Cobourg

COBOURG, July 26 (ENS) — The circus was in Cobourg on Tuesday and was packed at both the afternoon and evening shows. The train of circus cars was late arriving in the morning and a hustling job was necessary in order to open on schedule. Almost every youngster in town was in the park when the circus was setting up, the kids clambering among wagons, elephants, tent poles and canvas in such numbers that circus attendants gave up any attempt to keep them in check. It was a big day for the children and the adults too.

Picnic For Producers

COBOURG, July 26 (ENS) — Producers of can crops of tomatoes, peas and corn in Northumberland county, are planning a picnic at Cobourg on August 2. W. I. Walker, chairman of the Growers Marketing Board and county members of parliament will be present. Committee in charge of the arrangements are Tom Sire, Gerald Robertson and Gordon Rutherford.

Fifty-seven Children Attend Bible School

HAVELOCK, July 26 (ENS) — Fifty-seven children were registered at the vacation Bible school at Havelock Baptist mission which was conducted last week by Miss Lois Brown, Ottawa.

A number of children whose parents attended other churches were among those attending and on Friday the building was filled to capacity for parents' night.

Prizes for answering questions, memorizing scripture, bringing visitors, good attendance, went to the following: Ruby Salter 33 points, Gail Sanderson 32, Joan McGowan 25, Windsor McGowan 20, Omar Corneil 20, Ann Davis brought the most visitors.

May Get Land For New School

COBOURG, July 26 (ENS) — An option has been secured on land near the Ontario Training School for Girls by the public school board. The board seeks to acquire some adjoining property owned by the Ontario Government and the whole will be used as a site for a proposed new east end school.

Due to the growth of the town, the west end and central public schools will not accommodate the number of pupils enrolled and for some time a kindergarten has been held in St. Peter's Parish Hall. The school board awaits word from the Ontario Department of Public Works about the government-owned land which is required.

New Speed Record

WINDSOR, July 26—(CP) — Windsor police have set a new speed record. They recovered a stolen car before the owner knew it was missing. Two constables spotted the car in Windsor early Tuesday and gave chase. The driver outdistanced the police cruiser, and escaped after abandoning the car. It was returned to Michael Nosonchuk, the owner, before he knew it had been taken from in front of his home.

Belgians Pay Visit

MONTREAL, July 26—(CP)—Twenty Belgian students—12 boys and eight girls—arrived here Tuesday from New York for a two-day visit of Montreal before proceeding to other Canadian centres.

HEADS SERVICE CLUB—Don H. Murdoch, 54, of Winnipeg, is president of Kiwanis International for 1950-51. A Winnipeg laundry executive, he is a native of Keewatin, Ont., and was elected at the annual meeting held in Miami. He is the first Canadian to hold this position since 1943 when Fred G. McAlister, of London, Ont., was president.

No Liquor Permit

COBOURG, July 26 (ENS). — Arthur Miller, 19 of Peterborough paid $100 and costs for having liquor without a permit. On the same charge, Gordon McGraw, also of Peterborough, paid $100 and costs.

Request Judge Settle Strike

REGINA, July 26—(CP)—A Manitoba appeal court judge will attempt to settle the Regina Power Workers' strike.

Acting Premier C. M. Fines said he had requested Mr. Justice S. E. Richards of Winnipeg to mediate the wage dispute which sent 120 members of Local 9, Electric Utilities Employees' Union (C.C.L.-C.I.O.) out on strike Saturday morning.

Union representatives and officials of the city-owned utility agreed to the move late Tuesday after a meeting with the acting Premier.

A few hours earlier, police reported a power plant picket had been "caught red-handed" attempting to puncture tires of a truck hauling fuel to the powerhouse.

The picket will be charged in city police court, Chief Constable McDougall said.

A Narrow Escape

WINDSOR, July 26 (CP) — A two-storey fall into a bed of cinders caused little harm Tuesday to two-year-old Janice Hillis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hillis of Windsor. X-ray examinations showed no broken bones.

Three-Week Exchange Planned For Cadets

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP)—Civil Air Patrol headquarters announced Tuesday that a three-week exchange of 70 American CAP cadets with a similar number from Canada and five European countries will begin Friday.

The first group to leave will be United States boys who will visit Canada. They will fly from Lowry Airbase, Colo., to Calgary, Alta. The plane will bring Canadian cadets on its return.

American cadets are also going to Britain, France, Italy, Portugal and Switzerland.

The CAP is an Air Force civilian auxiliary devoted to training American youth in aviation.

Worker On Highway Injured By Own Bulldozer

MILLBROOK, July 26—(ENS)—A bulldozer operator, Cliff Challice, narrowly escaped being crushed by his own bulldozer in a freak accident Monday.

Mr. Challice was doing road construction work on Widdis Hill on the fourth line. Some wire became entangled in the moving steel track of the machine. Getting out of his seat to untangle the wire, he stepped on the top of the track.

The bulldozer began to move and Mr. Challice was dragged along the top of the moving track. Before he could jump clear his feet became wedged under parts of the frame. The soles of his heavy boots were torn off and his feet badly bruised.

He managed to grab the clutch levers and stopped the bulldozer in time to escape more serious injury.

The "Death Sand" Rumour

Rumours about new and horrible weapons are two-a-penny these days and it is well not to pay too much attention to them. The latest that has come our way is a rumour that the U.S.A. is working to develop a "death sand", consisting of sand particles which have been dipped in radio-active salts; such a sand, it is said, is capable of causing death in any area over which it is sprayed, after a lapse of a month or two. It would touch the inhabitants of the contaminated area, and they would breathe it into their lungs, and they would be killed by it.

* * *

It may be that such a weapon can be developed. We have our doubts, however if it would be used. Despite some evidence to the contrary, the world is neither completely mad nor completely evil, and there are forces which would make a death-sand a weapon of last resort, if it were used at all.

* * *

During the last war there was great fear that poison gas would be used extensively. Both sides had large quantities of lethal gasses, ready for use on short notice, but no gas was used. The fear of reprisal was too great. Further, there are still some things at which the conscience of mankind revolts; no nation, and the U.S.A. less than many, wants to rule the world by naked fear, for such rule can only be perpetuated by perpetual threats and force of arms. The nation which uses atomic power in any form in warfare must face the concentrated hate and contempt of the rest of the civilized world for centuries to come. Atomic weapons are more powerful as a threat, or for isolated demonstrations of power, than as actual weapons of conquest.

* * *

It may be possible to develop this "atomic sand", but if one nation can develop it, the secret is sure to leak out, and other nations will have it. And as nations have a keen sense of self-preservation, they will not be likely to use it. The world is in a very ugly state, but it still has some elements of common sense.

Is Swearing On The Increase?

The Ottawa Citizen comments favourably upon a campaign which the Church of Rome is conducting in Northern Ontario at present against swearing and blasphemy among the French-speaking citizens. We are somewhat surprised that such a campaign should be necessary, for we had formed the opinion that swearing was on the decline in Ontario. It does not seem to us that we hear so many oaths in ordinary conversation as we did fifteen or twenty years ago. But we have not been particularly attentive to this matter, and it is very likely that we are mistaken.

Continuous repetitive blasphemy and foul speech is undoubtedly disgusting, and it is never heard among people of any education, discretion or imagination. Apparently the printed notices which are put up in public places in Northern Ontario now declare that "swearing is vulgar, always gives scandal and settles no problems". This is true, and we will add, that of every hundred oaths which are cast into conversation, ninety-nine should have been restrained. But as the Devil must always have his advocate, we should like to say a word or two, not perhaps in defence of swearing, but in extenuation of it.

Swearing settles no problems, but it lets off steam. Repressed anger can be dangerous, the medical profession tells us, and an oath or two under stress may prevent a heart attack. Swearing always gives scandal, but very often it is intended to do so, and there are people who need to be scandalized for their soul's good. We cannot all follow the example of Our Lord, and take a whip to those who, under the cloak of good, do evil, but we may be pardoned a few stinging expressions.

Swearing may be eloquent. It may even be a form of poetry. Did not Emerson say: "I confess to some pleasure from the stinging rhetoric of a rattling oath .... How laconic and brisk it is by the side of a page of the North American Review." And after reading a few pages of the confused gobbledegook which is foisted upon us by government agencies, social service agencies—yes, and by newspapers—how often and how welcomely some short, pithy Anglo-Saxon objurgation rises to the lips!

A campaign to put down habitual, thoughtless, foul-mouthed speech has our fullest support. But we feel that there will always be a place for the oath which takes the place of apoplexy, of tears, or of a long retaliatory harangue. The oath itself may be a sin. But to repress it might lead to an even greater sin.

Reporters Then And Now

Like many persons in other professions, newspaper men today consider that their profession has made remarkable progress during the past century. In most respects, they are quite correct, although the carefully objective reporting of today may at times seem pallid alongside the vituperative generalities and lurid descriptive matter not uncommon about the middle of the nineteenth century. In one respect, however, the profession has stood still, insofar as the quality of its practitioners are concerned; we refer to the foreign correspondent.

A book was published about 1843, entitled Borrow's Bible in Spain, in which the author described British foreign correspondents of the day. "What extraordinary men are these reporters of the English newspapers!" he exclaimed. "Surely, if there be any class of individuals who are entitled to the appellation of cosmopolites, it is these; who pursue their avocation in all countries indifferently, and accommodate themselves at will to the manners of all classes of society; their fluency of style as writers is only surpassed by their facility of language in conversation, and their attainments in classical and polite literature only by their profound knowledge of the world, acquired by an early introduction into its bustling scenes. The activity, energy and courage which they occasionally display in the pursuit of information are truly remarkable."

"I saw them during the three days at Paris, mingling with canaille and gamins behind the barriers, while the mitraille was flying in all directions, and the desperate cuirassiers were dashing their fierce horses at the seemingly feeble bulwarks. There stood they, jotting down their observations in their notebooks as unconcernedly as if reporting the proceedings of a reform meeting in Finsbury Square; whilst in Spain, several of them accompanied the Carlist and Christino guerillas in some of their more desperate raids, exposing themselves to the danger of hostile bullets ...."

We doubt if many of the foreign correspondents of the late war or the present Korean war stood jotting notes unconcernedly while bullets flew about them, but many of them accept extraordinary risks as part of their work. And although we know there are not a few reporters who could otherwise be described in words somewhat similar, if a little less flowery, than those used by George Borrow, we submit that today's foreign correspondents have progressed little beyond the standards of 1843—if Barrow himself was an accurate reporter.

Mechanical Signals On Cars

It is good news that the Department of Highways has given its official approval to the mechanical signal-lights which are part of the equipment of many English cars. These fixtures are in many ways superior to hand signals; they are easier to see, and there can be no doubt about what they mean. We have often wondered why American and Canadian manufacturers have not used them on cars built on this continent.

If we are not mistaken, the signal-light system was invented in Germany, about twenty years ago, and quickly won favour with many European manufacturers. When they were new a few sets were brought back to this country by tourists, and were attached to Canadian cars, but they never won general favour. For years they have been standard equipment on many popular English cars.

Why American manufacturers have never taken them up is unexplained, but we have heard it attributed to American reluctance to adopt any feature of car design which did not originate in their own country. It took them more than ten years to adopt the system of gear-shifting from the steering-wheel which originated in England. The idea that all the improvements in motor manufacture originate in the U.S.A. will not stand up to careful inspection.

The signal lights are far more reliable than hand signals, and it would be a good thing if they became a feature on all cars.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A set of false teeth has been found imbedded in a tree in England. There was one bark which got the better of somebody's bite.

"Heiress Becomes Bride of Bus Driver" says a headline. Probably married him in hopes of getting a seat on his bus.

Profile Of Frank Lloyd Wright

THE other day, an elderly American, looking faintly like Bertrand Russell, was addressing the students of the Architectural Association's School in a marquee on Bedford Square. He told them not to worry about the sort of prizes he was conferring, even denied that the practice of architecture should be considered a profession; he asserted that this art had been going down-hill for the past 400 years, until today no one knew a good building from a bad one; and, after saying much else, suddenly ended by saying: "This can't go on for ever" and sat down, amid strenuous applause.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE speaker was Frank Lloyd Wright, now aged eighty-one—the great Frank Lloyd Wright, who, with Le Corbusier, is alone among architects in being known throughout the world. Yet, although Wright has been regarded as a prophet by successive generations for more than sixty years, it is only now, as an octogenarian, that he is receiving formal recognition. In his own country—where he has found patrons to commission 300 original buildings, and much public misunderstanding — the American Institute of Architects did not award him their annual gold medal until this year. And the first comprehensive exhibition of his work will not be held till next year, at the Strozzi Palace in Florence.

◇ ◇ ◇

FRANK Floyd Wright is undoubtedly something of a genius—a spirited, rebellious soul, whose generous idealism and vision have not been dimmed by maturity. As a prophet he is just coming into his own. He has spent many years and covered many printed pages warning America and the world against the enslavement of the individual by the aspect of modern life that he calls "mobocracy."

◇ ◇ ◇

HIS philosophy—like that of Walt Whitman—is based on reverence for Nature, and being true to the nobility that every man has within himself. In terms of his architecture, this has meant a denial of all academic teachings, a contempt for acquired and formalized "taste," and a refusal to make a god of science. His theme has always been that architecture should be "organic"—his favourite adjective; his methods have always been guided by a respect for "the nature of materials"—his favourite phrase.

◇ ◇ ◇

BY organic, Mr. Wright has meant architecture that fits the land beneath and about it, in contrast to an architecture imposed upon its surroundings. He has, for instance, deliberately built houses of concrete, steel, and glass upon uneven ground, modelling them to its shape, and he has always avoided emphasising the frontier between house and garden. Building in the flat prairies of America, he did not protest against the surrounding flatness by erecting skyscrapers (which originated in Chicago, not New York), but made low houses with long horizontal rooflines, naming such buildings "prairie houses." "Why," he asked, "plant more Oxford Gothic on the plains of Oklahoma?"

◇ ◇ ◇

PERHAPS his most spectacular functional success in attaining the "organic" was achieved in Tokyo, where he built the vast Imperial Hotel in 1916-20 with a foundation designed to move with any earthquake that might occur. "Why fight the quake? Why not sympathise with it and outwit it?" In the Tokyo earthquake of 1923, his building was almost alone in remaining erect.

◇ ◇ ◇

WHEN he crosses the Atlantic, he loses no opportunity to decry what he calls "the renaissance architecture that all Europe is stiff with"; but his particular tragedy is that America is stiff with it, too. He has never forgiven America one particular decision which, he feels, determined that American architecture was not to develop a new style of its own, but was to resort to the past, even when designing a skyscraper. This decision was taken in 1893. Wright's master, Louis Sullivan—the other architectural genius that America has produced — had plans for the great Chicago World's Fair that would show what a new country could do with new techniques and opportunities. But the architectural academies opposed his plans successfully. It was decided that the Chicago exhibition should be built in a magniloquent version of the Roman renaissance style.

◇ ◇ ◇

SULLIVAN died in poverty, but Frank Lloyd Wright, his disciple, continued protesting against the onward march of an adapation of revived styles to new technical attainments. For half a century America would not listen. It pronounced itself shocked by his private life (he has been three times married). It labelled him a crank and an impractical dreamer.

◇ ◇ ◇

WRIGHT is, indeed, the supreme example of The American Crank, just as Bertrand Russell (whom he resembles in more ways than one) is the culminating example of the aristocratic tradition of The English Eccentric. Both loved the Russian Revolution (though Russell quickly understood it and hated it, and Wright never understood it at all); and neither could abide being labelled with an "ism." They loved rebellion because they loved freedom, as each has shown in his life and work.

◇ ◇ ◇

WHEN Frank Lloyd Wright was already past 65 something happened to make him more publicly acceptable – something that he did not entirely like. For decades he had held out in his native Wisconsin, running a "Fellowship" or patriarchal school, and erecting strange buildings wherever a patron would give him a free hand (his fees were not low). Then, suddenly, he was joined in America by the most advanced achitects of Europe—the makers of the "Bauhaus" tradition of Weimar Germany, now turned into refugees by Hitler.

◇ ◇ ◇

THEIR impact on America was considerable, coming as they did with a sophisticated and self-confident style that had already attained maturity. Soon, the smooth, white rectangles and curves of their concrete were seen on American soil, and it is in part due to their influence that skyscrapers of the last decade no longer look like elongated cathedrals or nightmare mosques. And the change in fashion brought Frank Lloyd Wright into more favourable, less controversial, prominence. The public could see little difference between his style and that of the "Bauhaus" architects.

◇ ◇ ◇

BUT to Wright there was an all-important difference. The modern style of Europe deliberately proclaimed the supremacy of the machine, of technical attainments, of Science. It deliberately de-humanised or, at least, de-personalised architecture. And it therefore provided precisely the right style for a skyscraper. Indeed, small buildings in that style had always looked rather like dwarf skyscrapers. At their best, in the airy edifices of Le Corbusier, so lightly poised on the ground that they seemed about to take off, their poetry had been that of the aeroplane.

◇ ◇ ◇

WRIGHT, born in the country that is par excellence the country of the machine, had never been impressed by this kind of poetry: Nature, he always insisted, was the only true source of poetry. And he had never approved of skyscrapers ("concentration of population is murder, whether in peacetime or war"). His buildings equalled those of the European "moderns" in boldness and cleanness of modelling, but they proclaimed their affinity to the earth by their long horizontal lines, and their friendliness to man by their shade-giving roofs.

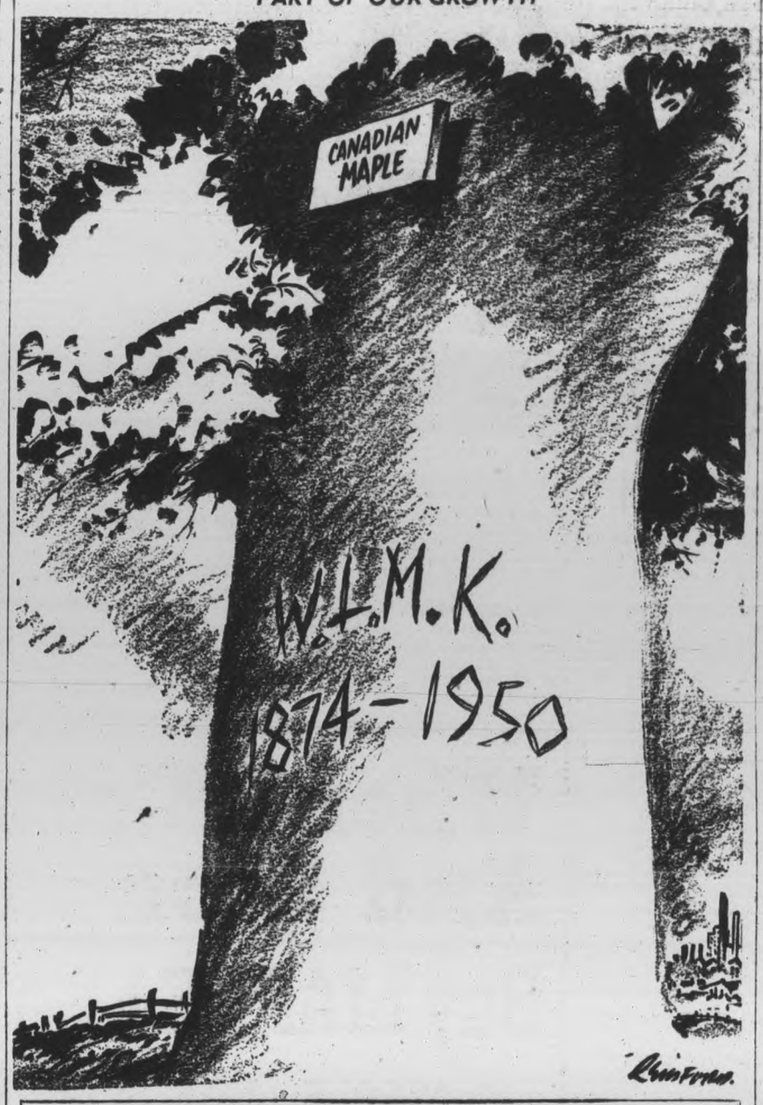
◇ ◇ ◇

THUS, his attainment of some public approval in the thirties (when he was in his sixties) seemed to him a sorry misunderstanding. But the story does not end there. Since that time, modern architecture has moved on—and it has taken a turn in the direction that Wright (now in his eighties) has always indicated as the right one. In the last few years, modern architecture has become less abstract and discovered a need of the very qualities Wright has always championed—naturalness, a sympathetic relationship to landscape, a sense of the quality of materials. Modern architecture has had to discover for itself things that Wright knew by instinct all along.

◇ ◇ ◇

THUS, this old man, the grandson of a Welsh hatmaker, has lived to see buildings erected in 1950 that somewhat resemble in spirit those he was designing in the 1890s. But being a proud, even vain and self-loving, old rebel, he will not much enjoy this implied compliment. For him, the only true pleasure will always be the doing of his own work, the execution of his own ideas. And, of course, as an artist, he is perfectly right. (Special to the Examiner from the London Observer.)

PART OF OUR GROWTH



Letter To The Editor

COMPLIMENTS ON CENTENNIAL EDITION

Sir: My mother Mrs. J. A. Seger, forwarded me a copy of your centennial section, which I read with a great deal of interest and not a little nostalgia.

I think that you are to be congratulated on a very excellent edition which shows considerable research.

Many years have passed since I carried Route 11 of the Examiner, which if I remember correctly was the longest route you had.

There are many things which I remember, which perhaps are too recent to include, but I thoroughly enjoyed reading the whole edition.

Again let me extend my congratulations to my "Home Town" on her achieving the dignity of one of the senior Cities of Canada and to the "Examiner" as one of the most respected members of the "Fourth Estate."

Yours faithfully,
IAN MUNRO,
Crown Attorney for Algoma.

Four bakers in the Peterborough district report the sale of the 24-oz. loaf at eight and ten cents, depending upon the quality. An increase is undecided as yet.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way ... The wicked watcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him. The Lord will not leave him in his hand, nor condemn him when he is judged. (Ps. 37: 23, 32, 33.)

◇ ◇ ◇

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven. (Matt. 5: 10.)

◇ ◇ ◇

We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body of the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body....

For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God ....For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal. (II Cor. 4: 8-10, 15, 17, 18.)

Secret Of The Porpoise

(Baltimore Sun)

Many an ocean voyager has been astonished, while idling on deck, to see his ship overtaken by a school of these fascinating creatures, bowling along at the speed of an express train and disappearing presently over the horizon ahead. Now and then one or more of them (the porpoises, that is) will be seized with the impulse to ride the ship's bow wave, sometimes for hours on end. And if the porpoise is close enough, the observer discovers to his astonishment that the porpoise's flukes are moving hardly at all—though his forward motion, synchronized with the wave, may be that of a fast ship.

How does he do it? The British scientific magazine Nature conducted a symposium on the question not long ago. And it was the almost unanimous conclusion of the scientists who participated that what the porpoise does in the way of fast swimming simply can't be done, by porpoise or anyone else.

That is, taking into account the resistance of the water, the shape of his body, the calculated propulsive efficiency of his muscular system, and the porpoise's estimated output of energy, it is simply impossible for a porpoise to swim as fast as he does as long as he does. Yet he does.

U.S. Car Boom

(Wall Street Journal)

War-scare demand for new automobiles, which popped up in scattered communities almost as soon as the shooting started in Korea, is gaining momentum.

A 12-city survey finds dealer reports just about unanimous. This, they say, is the typical cry of customers: "I went through the last war without a car, and it's not going to happen again."

In Detroit, right in the auto factories' backyard, a dealer reports the list of orders on his books is three times as long as it was three weeks back.

Shaw Biographer Seeks Help From GBS Forces

By SAM SUMMERLIN

CHAPEL HILL, N.C., July 26 — (AP) — To all devotees of George Bernard Shaww:

The authorized biographer of G. B. S. wants you to play a part in a tribute to the Great Irish dramatist.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, 73-year-old intimate of Shaw, has started work on a biography designed for publication in 1956, Shaw's centennial year, and he needs your help.

Henderson says he feels confident the white-bearded playwright, 94 years old today, will be around to read the new biography, on his 100th birthday.

Needs Help

Henderson already has begun collecting material for the six-year project, which probably will run into several voulmes. Although he has been a friend and chronologist of Shaw for nearly 50 years, Henderson concedes he'll need a lot of help from Shaw's friends—and enemies, too—to make the centennial biography a success.

Says the biographer:

"I am inviting corespondence with owners of manuscripts, letters, postcards, likenesses, caricatures, cartoons, programs, playbills, portraits of players in Shaw roles, photographs of scenes from his early plays, and all other types of Shaviana."

"Shaw told me it was an impossible task," chuckled Henderson. "He told me he supposed he's written 1,000,000 letters in his life.

"But I decided to go ahead with it," Henderson said. "There seemed to me a tacit obligation on my part to carry Shaw on from 1932 (where Henderson's last biography ended) up to 1956 and complete the 100-year span."

Johnny Lost Jacket Working At Circus

The circus came to town Sunday afternoon and like lots of other youngsters, 11-year-old Johnny didn't want to miss any of the fun. He set the alarm clock for seven o'clock Monday morning and rushed down to the fair gorund to help put up the big tent.

Johnny didn't know that it does not do to leave things lying around for someone with fewer scruples to pick up So he worked away and as he worked he got warm and threw off his new green satin jacket

Johnny left his jacket lying on the ground and when it came time to go home, to his amazement, it was not there. After working from early morning until nearly noon, Johnny went home with a 10 cent ticket and no jacket. It was a sad homecoming, for he knew mother would not be pleased.

Johnny is a trusting little boy. "We can't get it into his head that he must not trust the general public and that he must keep his things on him" his mother complained when telling of the tragedy.

And Johnny's loss is a tragedy because any little boy who is one of a family of six, usually has to make his jacket last a long time.

And Johnny didn't get back to the show. It was a happy day when he woke to the sound of the alarm clock, but what a heartbreak to see the crowds going off to the show without him.

SUPER-MARKETING—Two Berlin housewives try out their new "shopping car," designed by Helmut Butenuth, German automobile engineer. The car weighs 540 pounds and has a 6.2 horsepower rear engine. The designer says it could be sold for $450 if produced on a mass scale.

Orphans Bunch 12 Hits To Tie Mutuals

Harold Dormer's Orphans, Peterborough's entry in the junior OASA playdowns, were easy pickings for other teams in the city league early this season but lately have been providing the stiffest opposition. Tuesday night the Orphans bunched 12 hits off three Mutual hurlers to tie the Mutuals 5-all in a nine-inning exhibition fixture at the Bowl.

Bob Crowe, George (Red) Sullivan and Bill Lewis worked on the mound for the Mutuals while Ken Hall went the route for the Orphans. The Mutuals collected nine scattered hits off him.

Russell's Mutuals opened the scoring in the second with a single run but the Orphans replied with a run in the third when Hall scored after he had opened the inning with a single.

Two successive hits followed by a walk and then a single by Mutuals' Borland sent three runs across the plate in the fourth to make the score 4-1. Again Orphans came back. First they added a single in the fifth on two hits and then two runs in the sixth to tie the score four-all.

Mutuals worked two hits in the seventh for the fifth run only to have the young Orphans again tie the score in the eighth five-all to complete the scoring.

Griffin of the Orphans hit the only extra-base blow in the third inning, a double, to have two for five at the plate. Leo Sullivan the Orphans rightfielder, led the hitting with two for two while Ted Evans and Hall each had two for three. Pryde was tops for the Mutuals with two for four and Bob Crowe had two for five.

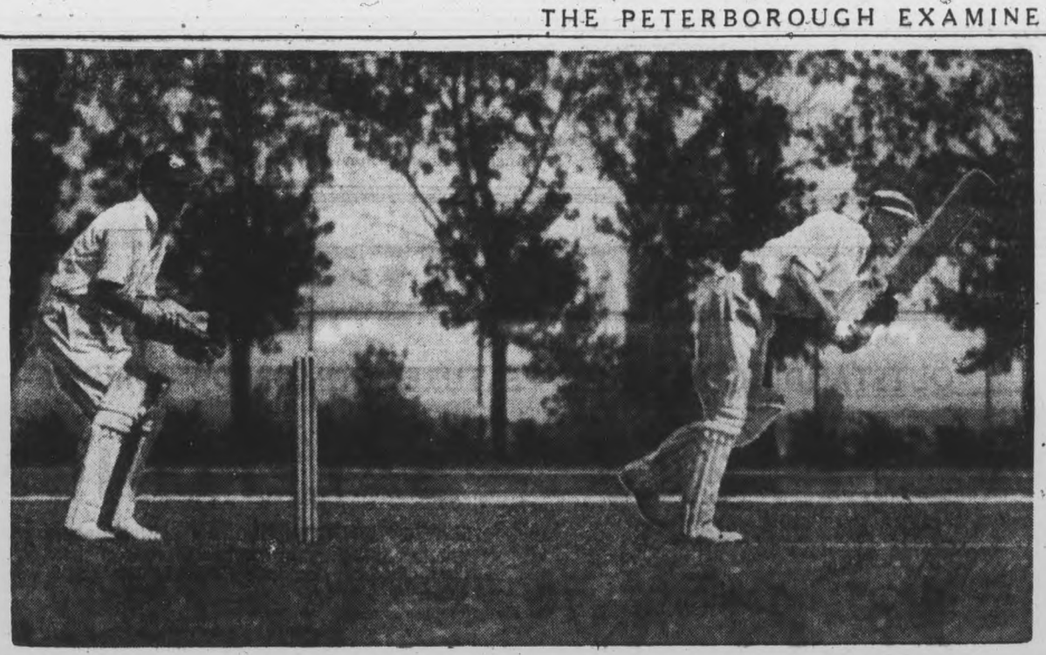
Sullivan also stood out in the field for the Orphans with Wyatt in centre. Lewis was the pick of the Mutual nine.

Lineups:

Orphans: Pammett lf, Griffin ss, Casey 3b, Wyatt cf, Grafstein 1b, Evans 2b, Sullivan rf, McGrath c, Hall p.

Mutuals: Crowe p, Borland c, Pryde 1b, G. Sullivan ss, Foster cf, Lewis rf, Currie 2b, Jaquith 3b, Russelle lf.

Umpires—Livingstone and Russelle.



ONTARIO CRICKET STAR IN ACTION. Mel Rilstone, one-time Aussie cricket ace, is shown in action at Westmount Grounds in Montreal, shortly before he was bowled after scoring 34 runs in the inter-provincial match for the Atholstan Cup, which was won by the Quebec eleven. A member of the Quebec side last season, he was the big gun on the Ontario stand in the first innings. The wicket keeper is N. Camacho.

East City Team Wins 9-3 Juvenile Game

Batchelor of the East City juveniles bettered two Southend juvenile moundsmen Buckton and Murphy, to lead his team to a 9-3 victory Tuesday night in the minor baseball league.

The southenders were baffled by Bachelor. They nicked him for three runs in the first inning after the first two batters grounded out. Young started the rally with a single which was followed by three walks and an error before the side was retired. Despite a shade of wildness from there in Bachelor allowed only two hits, a single in the fourth and a double by Jensen in the seventh.

The fifth inning spelled doom for the southerners as the East City batters began to swing with ease for eight runs off four hits and two errors. They scored their first run in the third after a walk.

Lineups:

East City: Sullivan cf, Gandy 2b, McGrath c, Wyatt ss, Reynolds rf, Hillier 3b, Foley 1b, Rodger lf, Batchelor p.

Southend: Jensen cf, Jones 3b, Young 1b, Douglas ss, Ginn lf, Buckton p, Bryan c, Hope rf, Langhorne 2b, Murphy p.

Hitting Secret Relaxation, Musial Says

By JACK HAND

BROOKLYN, July 26. (AP)—"I just go along, day by day. Relaxed. Trying to hit that ball."

Stan Musial of St. Louis talked about his 29-game batting streak through Tuesday night's game with Brooklyn. How he tried to keep it off his mind. Letting every game take care of itself.

"Lots of days I only get the one hit," he said. "I don't know how many times I've almost been stopped. Honestly, I don't think much about it.

"I've been hitting the ball better since my leg has improved. I twisted it a week or 10 days ago. I was hitting to left more because of the leg. Didn't get a full swing. Now I think I'm all right again."

Since Musial last went hitless June 25 against Boston's Vern Bickford, he was hit 393 with 49 hits sprayed over 29 games. During the streak he hit 13 doubles, six homers and drove in 26 runs.

Tommy Holmes of Boston holds the modern National League record of hitting safely in 37 consecutive games in 1945. Of course, Joe DiMaggio has the Major League high string of 56, set in 1941.

Likes Outfield

Stan likes it better in the outfield, his regular position, after a spell at first base.

"I'm back where I played when I first came up," said Musial, "back in left field. I like it out there although you get a chance to throw more in right."

Musial, like his boss, Eddie Dyer, thinks the National League is going to be a tight race right down to the wire.

"We seem to play our worst against Brooklyn," said Musial, "and they get lots of runs against us. It used to be just the opposite."

Dyer says he was worried about Musial's leg injury. That's why he took him out of games already won or lost. He also returned him to first base for a few games, figuring it would be less strain on the leg.

"Maybe I shouldn't have played him all the time," said Eddie, "but you know Stan. He wanted to stay in there. And we needed him."

Petes Defeat Peewee Tigers

Play was fast and furious on Tuesday in minor lacrosse tilts at Miller Bowl as the peewee Tigers were downed 7-4 by the Petes and the Hurricanes adged the Shrimps in the tadpole loop 6-3.

The Petes started early in the first piling up a three-goal lead, Kent, Ferguson and Davis with Murduff assisting. Ketcheson notched the only first period goal for the Tigers. Davis of the Petes on a pass from Coombs added a goal in the second before the Tigers retaliated with a score by Ketcheson.

Ketcheson continued his battle with the Petes in the third when he tallied the only goal to make the score 4-3 in favor of the Petes. But Davis and Ferguson led the Petes' attack in the fourth with goals before Ketcheson shot home his fourth counter and the last score for the Tigers. Davis picked up his fourth goal to end the scoring at 7-4.

Hurricanes Win

Like the Petes, the tadpole Hurricanes jumped to the fore early over the Shrimps on goals by Parks and J. Davis in the first period. McCarthy with Mountney came back in the second for the Shrimps to make the score 2-1 before Parks scored his second goal. The Shrimps again edged closer when McCarthy scored unassisted. Late in the period a hard driving offensive by the Hurricanes resulted in two goals both by Parks, his third and fourth. They continued to push in third but only scored one, that by Davis, his second. McCarthy scored his hat-trick goal to end the scoring at 6-3.

Lineups:

Peewee Tigers—G. Heffernan, T., Kelly, K. Murduff, W. McCarthy, T. Maniece, P. Ketcheson, K. Dixon, G. DeNoble.

Petes—A. Reid, T. Davis, C. Coombs, D. Mountney, L. Ferguson, D. Kent, Parnell.

Tadpole Hurricanes—B. DeNoble, J. Davis, B. Parks, F. Pace, P. Cochrane.

Shrimps—B. Reid, L. Scott, K. Sage. D. Seabrooke. B. Mountney, J. McCarthy, K. Sutherland.

Indians Trip Philadelphia In Sizzling 7-6 Victory

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cleveland's rampaging Indians, looking more menacing each day, seem the "dark horse" in the jumbled American League pennant race.

No club in the league—and that includes the pace-setting Detroit Tigers and runner-up New York Yankees—has looked better than Lou Boudreau's men. They have rung up 12 triumphs in their last 16 games.

Three weeks ago the Indians trailed the Tigers by seven full games. Now they are only 2½ games out. Thanks to a 7-6 triumph over Philadelphia Tuesday night, while both Tigers and Yankees were losing, the Indians find themselves in the best position they've been in all year.

They still are in third place, one length back of the Yankees and three in front of the Boston Red Sox. But they are in good shape to make a whale of a battle out of it the rest of the way. They own three top-flight pitchers in Bob Lemon, Bob Feller and Early Wynn. And, in rookies Al Rosen and Luke Easter, they possess two of the top sluggers in the game.

Schedule Asset

Cleveland's biggest asset is the schedule. Not only is the tribe facing a long home stand, but the end of the season will find Indians playing at home in 12 of the last 14 games. If they remain anywhere near the top of the next few weeks, they will be mighty hard to stop.

Feller was the winner Tuesday although he needed help from Lemon in the ninth. It was Bob's 10th triumph of the year. He got a big lift from Easter, who smashed his 18th and 19th homers off loser Alex Kellner.

The Red Sox won a 7-6 nip-and-tuck affairs from Detroit, scoring three runs in the eighth off relief pitcher Hal White to overcome a 6-4 deficit.

Stubby Overmire pitched the St. Louis Browns to a 4-3 victory over the Yankees. The little left-hander, who holds two of the three Brownie wins over New York, had a three-hit shutout until the ninth. Four hits, including a two-run homer by Johnny Mize, gave the Yankees three runs. Overmire batted in what proved to be the winning runs with a two-run single off Vic Raschi in the fifth.

Good Pitching

Fine relief pitching by Joe Haynes and strong stockwork by Sam Mele and Gil Coan helped Washington triumph over the Chicago White Sox, 7-4.

Philadelphia's Phillies moved back to the top of the National League by handing the Chicago Cubs two shutout defeats, 7-0 and 1-0.

The Cubs now have suffered through three straight shutout losses.

The Phils' double win put them a half game in front of the St. Louis Cardinals who whipped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 9-5. The Boston Braves moved into the third spot 2½ games off the pace, by thrashing Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-2.

A five-run eighth inning and another tally in the ninth gave the Giants a 7-6 triumph over Cincinnati.

Just Made It

Paced by Del Ennis' 18th home run with two mates aboard, the Phils were an easy victor in the opener. They had to wait until two were out in the last of the ninth to win the second game. Richie Ashburn took care of that, lashing a single to centre to score Ralph Caballero from second.

Del Rice's three-run homer highlighted a four-run eighth inning which enabled the Cards to overcome a 5-3 Dodger lead. It marked the first St. Louis win in Ebbets Field this year.

The Cards' Stan Musial cracked a home run, double and single to extend his consecutive hitting streak through 29 games. The modern National League mark of 37 is held by Boston's Tommy Holmes. Joe DiMaggio of the '41 Yankees set the major league high of 56.

Toronto Dovers Here Saturday

Ed. Murphy's senior baseball squad are idle until Saturday when they meet Toronto Dovers at Riverside in an afternoon Viaduct Major League fixture.

Last night's game in Toronto was postponed due to wet grounds.

Lefty Bill Dadson looked good in his first start on the mound for the Murphymen last Saturday and should be a big help to the team in the stretch drive ahead. The Bowmanville boy has added a little weight during his layoff and seems in fine shape again.

Al Menzies, scrappy catcher, at present holidaying in Cleveland where he intends to see a big league game or two, is reported hopeful of returning to action, possibly Saturday. Al splintered a bone in his left ankle in a softball exhibition two weeks ago at the Bowl.

Peterborough are two games back of second place in the Viaduct League standing and will be seeking their 13th win in 22 starts Saturday before what is expected to be the largest crowd of the season. Oshawa lead the pack with Toronto Aces in the second slot.

Here And There In Sports . . .

By The Canadian Press

The Quebec Senior Hockey League doesn't like the idea of waiting another year before setting up a super-senior status for the richer leagues of Canada.

Representatives of the seven teams, meeting in Montreal Tuesday night, decided to oppose the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's decision to shelve the major series project.

They said they will ask that the CAHA reconsider its decision. The major series would include teams from the QSHL, Ontario Hockey Association, and Western Canada Senior League. They would play off for a separate cup, leaving the Allan Cup for other senior teams.

St. Catharines Tee Pees of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League have signed a long-term working agreement with Buffalo Bisons of the American League. It takes effect immediately. For three years the Tee Pees were hooked up with Boston Bruins.

They really take their cricket seriously in Trinidad. The island's capital went wild Tuesday at news that the West Indian team had won a cricket test match from Britain.

The government announced it will proclaim a holiday Thursday to celebrate.

The West Indians took a 2-1 lead in the series of four matches when they defeated England by 10 wickets Tuesday.

Ronald G. Cook, Canadian-born sportscaster, is the new president of the United States Hockey League. Cook, whose home is in Moose Jaw, succeeds Carl Voss who resigned recently to become chief referee for the National Hockey League. The announcement of Cook's appointment was made in Omaha.

The Cleveland Indians aren't taking any more chances. General manager Hank Greenourg has ordered his players to wear protective cap liners when at bat. The order followed an injury suffered by Indian centrefielder Lary Doby who was struck on the head by a pitched ball Monday night. Doby's condition is not serious.

Bernie Hanover won the $10,000 Dean Hanover trot for two-year-olds Tesday night on the Grand Circuit program at Roosevelt Raceway in Westbury, N. Y., defeating Watcha by a length. Mahlon Hanover, the 3-to-5 favorite, placed third. The winner was timed in 2:10 4-5.

Horses from New York State dominated the harness program at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto Tuesday, capturing three of the featured dashes on the eight-card race.

Selka's Boy, owned by M. R. Schuyler of Napies, won the fifth at 6-to-1. Scotland Hy, owned by Harold McQueer of Hammond, won the sixth, paying $38.50. Then Holly Hall, owned by Dr. A. S. Miller of East Aurora, won the seventh, paying $9.50.

Winnipeg Scottish Tuesday night earned the right to meet Regina Nationals in the inter-provincial soccer playoffs for the Dominion championship. They defeated Port Arthur Brent Park 4-0 at Winnipeg to take the best of three series in straight games.

Will Pass Up Detroit Regatta

DETROIT, July 26 (AP)—The world's fastest speedboat, Slo-Mo-Shun IV, will pass up the Detroit Memorial Regatta on the Detroit River Saturday.

Owner Stanley Sayres of Seattle announced, "if we are selected on the U.S. team, the Harmsworth will be our next race."

By winning the gold cup last Saturday, Slo-Mo-Shun is believed assured of a berth on the Harmsworth Trophy competition Sept. 1-2.

Meantime, the Union of International Motorboating put an official sanction on the world record established June 26 at Lake Washington, Seattle, by Slo-Mo-Shun. The boat covered a measured mile at 160.323 miles an hour. Recognition was cabled from Brussels yesterday.

Sayres' mark replaces one of 141.74 mph set in 1939 at Lake Coniston, England, by the late Sir Malcolm Campbell in his Bluebird II.

Babe Ruth And Judge Landis Rejuvenators Of Baseball

By FRED MAYBEE

What baseball player rendered the greatest service to the game during the first half century? Old time fans can name several men of note such as Cobb, Ruth, Wagner, Foxx, Walter Johnson, Hornsby and many more. But who was greatest of all?

Following the White Sox scandal of 1919, two men sprang into prominence almost overnight to save the game for America and the world. The scandal was baseball's darkest hour.

It was felt by many and not without good reason that ball would die out following the terrible let down by such men as "Shoeless" Joe Jackson and Eddie Cicotte, the "shine ball" king. True, several men had remained staunch. Little Dickie Kerr trimmed Cincinnatti in two games despite weak support, in that series and there was peerless Eddie Collins, prince of second sackers who remained untainted, also Ray Schalk that great little catcher. But, even so — baseball couldn't take it. The disgrace was too great, 'twas thought.

Then two men stood up to give the lie to seeming fate on those eventful 30 years ago as Judge Landis forsook his post on the federal bench to become baseball's high commissioner and George Herman "Babe" Ruth gave up the mound to play the outfield for New York Yankees in 1920. He played every day and became the greatest individual star and showman baseball has ever known, or probably ever will know.

Landis played his part off the field behind office doors. He purged the ranks of baseball in both leagues and was hated by thousands because of the fear he put into the hearts of dozens of the games top stars who trembled in his presence under that searching gaze. But he held firm and did a grand job with John Heydler, now 81 and then president of the National League always at his side and with Ban Johnson, American League president—on the other hand—his enemy to the grave.

Out On The Field

Babe Ruth played his part in the rejuvenation of baseball on the field. In his own way, he developed into a very competent outfielder and having left behind him an enviable record as a pitcher with 92 wins and 45 defeats in five years toil with Boston. He mastered the new assignment allotted him and became the greatest slugging outfielder of all time.

Though Ruth's average of .342 for 21 years is over 20 points below that of Ty Cobb for 24, we have never rated Ty along with Ruth for a number of reasons. We saw both men perform and feel satisfied Ruth had the more inspirational value of the two. Ty Cobb had great mechanical ability but Ruth inspired all his mates. There was victory in sight with Ruth on deck. The Babe led the Yankees in seven world series and participated in three more with Boston before going to the Bronx. As a showman he had no peer.

And so we believe Babe Ruth was the greatest of baseball players and showmen for the first half of the 20th century.

Orioles, Wings Divide Doubleheader

By the Canadian Press.

The "rabbit" baseball was given a rest in the International League Tuesday night.

Seven games were played but only four homers were hit. The pitchers combined for one two-hitter, three three-hitters and one four-hitter. The eight clubs averaged only 7½ hits a game.

The best hurling was at Baltimore, where the Orioles and Rochester Red Wings divided a doubleheader. Tommy Fine stopped the league-leaders with three hits in the opener, 5-0, but Rochester bounced back to capture the nightcap, 8-2, behind Johnny Yiha's two-hitter.

Jersey City and Buffalo also split a doubleheader, the Little Giants winning the opener, 7-1, but the Bisons coming back with four runs in the ninth to take the afterpiece, 9-6.

Springfield coasted behind Bob Moisan's three-hitter for a 4-0 victory over Montreal. Moisan, who evened his record at 7-7, walked five and struck out five.

Toronto and Syracuse also divided a doubleheader. Bud Byerly pitched Syracuse to a 4-2 victory in the opener. Steve Ridzik and Jack Brittin of Toronto combined for a four-hit, 4-0 triumph in the second game.

Louis Prepares Fight Charles

DETROIT, July 26—(AP)—Joe Louis, former heavyweight champion, confided to friends here Tuesday night he hopes to arrange a title bout with Ezzard Charles in September.

Louis said, however, that it depended on how his negotiations turn out with th United States Revenue Bureau in Washington on an income-tax adjustment.

It was reported last week that Louis is trying to make a deal with the government accept his purse from the proposed Ezzard Charles bout in full settlement of an income-tax claim.

Friends said Louis plans to take mineral baths at West Baden, Ind., to get his weight down. He now weighs between 220 and 225 pounds and would have to take off 10 or 15 pounds to get into fighting trim.

No Objection To Truman Tax But Don't Approve Methods

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP) —President Truman's call for $5,000,000,000 in new taxes got an unenthusiastic reception on Capitol Hill today—not because of the amount asked to fight communist aggression but because of the tax methods the President proposed.

The "quickie" increases if approved by Congress, would raise the annual take from individual incomes in the United States by an estimated $3,000,000,000 to about $21,900,000,000—higher than the wartim pak of $20,300,000,000 reached in 1944.

Individual taxes would be boosted, beginning in October, by as much as 20 per cent.

A man with a wife and two children in the United States who earns $3,000 now pays $100. This would be jumped to $120 under the proposed increases. If his earnings were $4,000, the boost would be from $266 to $320. The $10,000 man would pay $1,592 instead of $1,361 at present.

Truman asked that the increases be made effective on all this year's corporation income, and on three months of this year's income of individuals.

Hints Second Boost

The President told Chairman Walter George (Dem. Ga.) of the Senate finance committee that this was only the first instalment of new taxes—that a call for another boost might be expected, perhaps in January.

Congressmen raised no argument o nthe size of the President's request. They are ready to raise taxes, but many objected to:

1. Retroactive taxation on corporations.

2. The absence of any excess-profits tax proposals in the President's program. The critics here want a crack-down on "profiteering."

This is what Truman proposed:

1. Cut a proposed $1,000,000,000 cut in taxes from an excise tax bill, (then use the bill's skeleton to build the body of a $5,000,000,000 emergency tax increase.

2. Raise corporation rates, effective on 1950 income, from 38 per cent to about 45 per cent.

3. Increase individual income-tax rates to the levels of 1945, by removing reductions made in 1945 and 1948.

The President did not say how the $5,000,000,000 increase would be distributed, but treasury experts said it would be about $3,000,000,000 on individuals, $1,500,000,000 on corporations, and $500,000,000 through plugging loopholes, dividend withholdings and taxes on life insurance companies.

3 Homicides Still Unsolved

TORONTO, July 26 (CP). — Three of the five homicides that shocked and horrified this city in the space of five days nearly a year ago remain unsolved.

From July 28 to Aug. 3 last year, five persons were killed. Two of the cases were quickly solved and two men were sent to penitentiary for manslaughter.

But police still are searching for the bandit who shot down Arthur Layng when he attempted to interfere with the holdup of a groceteria July 30. They also are confronted with the mysterious killing of Robert Mackay who was found lying in a ditch shot through the head and his wife, Gloria, who was found shot to death a day later in a vacant lot half-way across the city.

Canadian Has Ringside Seat

A FAR EAST NAVAL BASE, July 25 (delayed) — (AP) — A Canadian-born seaman in the Royal Navy today enthusiastically described his "ringside seat" at the Allied naval bombardment of Korea's east coast.

William Courtney Edwards, 17, a native of Edmonton, who now calls London, England, his home, is an anti-aircraft lookout on a gun-direction platform high atop his cruiser.

"I saw no enemy planes but I did see our planes machine-gunning enemy tanks about two or three miles away," he said.

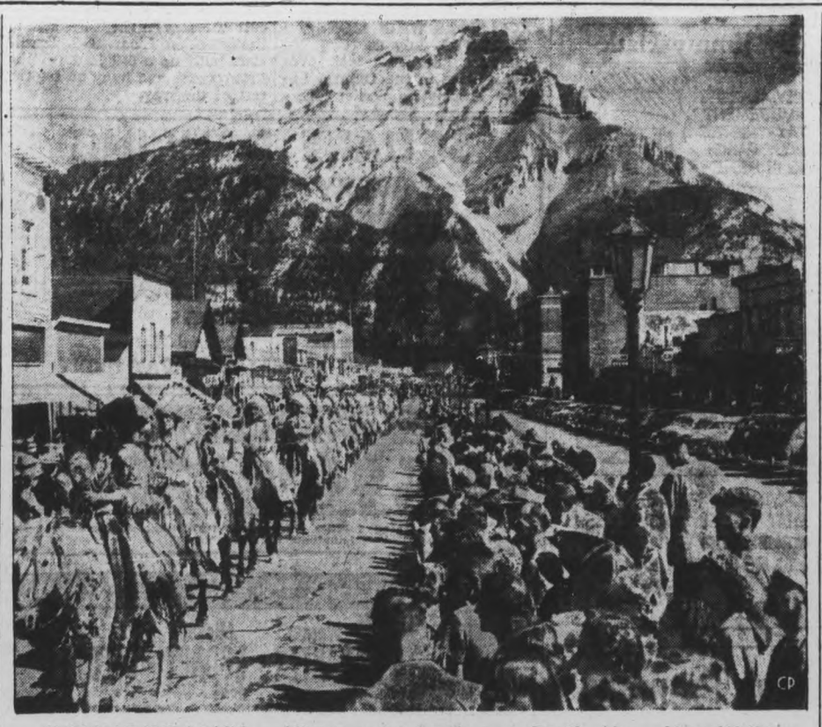
During the Yongdon shelling he could not see shells landing because a small hill was between the cruiser and the target. An American cruiser some 2,000 yards astern of his warships was also pouring shells into Yonkdok.

Of Allied shelling farther north, he said:

"I had a ringside seat. I saw a factory knocked down in North Korea. Everybody shouted 'That did it.' I gues I said the same thing."

Consecrated Bishop

SASKATOON, July 26 (CP)— The Rev. Stanley C. Steer Tuesday was consecrated Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Saskatoon and enthroned into the "actual possession" of the See. He succeeds the late Bishop W. E. Fuller who died last February.



INDIAN DAYS AGAIN — All eyes and cameras were on the line of mounted Indians who took part in the parade along Banff Avenue to open the Indian Days celebrations at Banff, Alta. Here Walking Buffalo, medicine man of the Stony Tribe, leads the decorated chiefs and tribesmen. In the background is Mt. Cascade.

Britons Told How To Fight Atomic Bomb

LONDON, July 26 (Reuters)— The government told Britons on Tuesday that protection against deadly radio-activity from an atomic bomb is a practical proposition.

However, in the first published textbook for city defense against atomic war, the government warned that casualties among an unprepared population would be formidable.

The book, issued as a manual of basic training for civil defense, said unprotected persons within a half-mile of an atomic explosion would be killed. Those within three-quarters of a mile would have a 50-50 chance of survival.

Excellent personal protection could be gained from the garden shelters used in the Second World War, which were usually built of earth piled over a steel arch. Brick and concrete were better protection than wood, thick masonry could remove danger of radioactivity completely.

The book said atom-conscious Britons should carry a dosimeter, a gadget about the size of a fountain pen which measures radiation and presumably could decide danger from it.

Ruin 30,000 Houses

One atom bomb exploded in the air over a British city, the book said, would ruin 30,000 houses in a one-mile radius; badly damage 35,000 houses in a further radius of 1½ miles; and slightly damage 50,000 to 100,000 within the same 1½ miles outer radius.

The damage would affect the homes of 400,000 persons and at least 100,000 would need rehousing — "a very big civil defense problem."

The book warned that radio-activity could not be destroyed. The main symptom of radiation poisoning would be sickness. Most severe cases would develop symptoms of deep shock with extreme weakness and vomiting.

If cases survived three weeks they might live. If they kept going six weeks they would have a good chance of recovery.

Radioactive material could be taken to a place where it could do no harm, or it could be left to decay by natural means, which in some cases was a long process and in others relatively short.

No Other Method

"There is at present no other method of decontamination suitable for use in civil defense."

Severe effects could be expected from heat flash on unprotected persons. Severe burns would be suffered up to about one mile from the explosion and burns of lesser intensity up to 2½ miles.

Civil defense had to take into account the risk of a fire storm from a bomb burst—a fire in which intense heat generates high wind which fans the blaze.

Mysterious Blasts

HALIFAX, July 26 CP) — Something kept going "boom-boom" outside Halifax harbor Tuesday but military officials just looked innocent and said they knew nothing about it. Civilian residents on McNab's Island, near the harbor mouth, said over the telephone their homes were shaken by the blasts. But they don't know what caused them either.

Two Oil Company Offices Entered

Two more in a series of recent breakins occurred in Lindsay Monday night or early Tuesday. Thieves made off with $165 in cash from the office of one oil company and thoroughly ransacked another.

Police Chief Arthur Webster says that during the night, a lock on the front door of the McColl-Frontenac premises, corner of Mary and Albert Sts., was jimmied open and $165 cash taken. The loss was discovered by the manager, Lloyd Patterson, when he arrived at his office at 7 a.m.

Nearby, manager J. W. Brookfield of the Shell Oil Company, found that his office door had also been forced with a jimmy and the premises ransacked. Nothing was reported stolen here.

Will Strengthen Police

WASHINGTON, July 26—(AP) —The United States today was reported ready to authorize a strengthening of police forces in Western Germany to bolster internal security. Informed American officials said, however, the U.S. remains firmly opposed to the idea of creating a big, centralized federal police force.

Coldwell Tells Convention CCF Backs Korean Intervention

VANCOUVER, July 26—(CP)— The member of parliament for Rosetown-Biggar and the premier of Saskatchewan Tuesday night gave an indication of what line the CCF's biennial national convention will follow.

Both spoke of democracy. M. J. Coldwell, national leader of the party, described what he considers the CCF's stand must be in the face of Communist aggression. Premier T. C. Douglas discussed government in Canada.

The convention opens officially today.

The Korean war, high on the CCF agenda, was the outcome of the "clearest and most obvious case of aggression" since Hitler's armies overran Europe, said Mr. Coldwell.

He said the policy of the CCF must be: No compromise with Totalitarian states—Fascist or Communist.

Back Action

Prompt United States intervention in Korea "may have forestalled other and more serious aggressions leading to a third world war." He reiterated his support of Canadian aid to United Nations forces in Korea.

"To my mind," he told a public meeting, "support for United Nations action now, to stop aggression, is the acid test as to whether or not an individual or a party is determined to preserve and defend precious freedoms which we have so far achieved."

Premier Douglas described to the same meeting CCF achievements since it assumed control in Saskatchewan six years ago. Only the CCF could give Canada true democracy, he said.

A combination of freedom and security was needed for such government. Freedom without security might be only the freedom to go homeless and hungry. Security minus freedom would end in a police state.

Goal of the CCF was to combine both, and socialist advances in Saskatchewan showed it was possible.

Mr. Douglas listed these as gains of the CCF: cancellation of farmers' relief debts totalling $83,000,000; advanced labor legislation; equal education opportunity; increased old age pensions; a hospital insurance program; and low-cost automobile accident insurance.

Senate Urges Treaty Passed

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP) —The Senate foreign relations committee recommended to the Senate today that it ratify a treaty with Canada concerning increased diversion of water at Niagara Falls to generate more electric power.

Federal Power Commission engineers have estimated that the additional water, properly utilized, could about triple the present hydro-electric capacity of United States plants at Niagara.

Production on the Canadian side of the river also would be increased.

Chairman Tom Connally (Dem.-Tex.) said the committee acted unanimously in agreeing to send the treaty to the Senate. He said he did not have any idea when the Senate will act on it.

Connally told reporters the committee made one reservation in its approval of the treaty.

The reservation, he said, expressly reserves for Congress the right to say how the additionally diverted water shall be utilized for redevelopment purposes.

The treaty, to win ratification, must receive a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

$263.25 Raised At Berry Social

FAIRVIEW, July 26 (ENS)—Mrs. Wm. Steinkraus of Lily Lake was the special speaker at the July meeting of Fairview Women's Association, which was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Harrison.

Mrs. Stanley Boyee, leader of group two, led the worship service. Mrs. E. Mahood read the scripture and lesson thoughts were given by Mrs. Harold Lewis, The Rev. D. P. Morris led in prayer. The President Mrs. W. D. Wilson introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Wilson took charge of the business. The treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Lewis, reported that receipts from tickets at the strawberry social amounted to $263.25. New silverware was purchased and Mrs. E. Cockburn and Mrs. Lewis were appointed a committee to purchase new dishes for the church.

Mrs. Wesley Bell moved a vote of thanks to the hostess and Mrs. Boyce expressed appreciation to the speaker.

Mrs. Albert Bulmer invited the members to meet in her home for the August meeting.

WINDSOR, July 26 — (CP) — Funeral services will be held here Tuesday for Hugh L. Leal, 59, mechanical superintendent for L. A. Young Industries, Limited, of Windsor. A native of Tweed, Mr. Leal lived in Windsor for 27 years and was a founder of the Windsor branch of the Independent Association of Industrial Electricians.

Premier Frost Delighted With Community Move

TORONTO, July 26. (CP) — Premier Frost of Ontario said Tuesday he is "delighted" with the action of the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in recommending approval of a treaty providing for greater hydro production at Niagara Falls.

The treaty still must be ratified by the whole Senate. The Canadian Parliament has okayed the agreement.

"I certainly hope it will pave the way for speedy ratification", Mr. Frost said of the committee's action. "I construe it as an act of friendship as well as providing for mutual necessity."

Engineers estimate increased diversion of Niagara River water for hydro purposes would give Ontario an extra 800,000 horsepower.

Canadians Caught Smuggling Gold

DETROIT, July 26. (CP)—Two Canadians pleaded guilty Tuesday to aiding the smuggling of contraband gold into the United States. They are identified as Harry Tichinoff, 36, of Timmins, and Alfred Piteau, 38, a Windsor house painter.

Agents said the two men carried 177 ounces of 22-carat gold, valued at about $7,500, when they were seized two blocks from the Detroit end of the Windsor-Detroit tunnel.

Customs agents said that up to 3,000 ounces of gold, valued at more than $100,000, is being smuggled into the United States each week along the Canadian border.

However, agent Joseph Bourke said in court Tuesday that the two men arrested were apparently not connected with any large smuggling ring. They will be sentenced after probation reports are filed.

Officials said an accomplice who had carried the gold taped inside the hood of his automobile through the tunnel, escaped after delivering the contraband. Customs agents said they are seeking four other men believed to be minor operators in the same smuggling.

The gold seized is believed to have been stolen from a mine at Timmins. It was cast in hemispheric shapes. The two men were reported to have planned to sell the gold in Detroit for $42 an ounce, or $7,434. The government-established price is $35 an ounce.

Tichinoff was described by police as a professional gambler with a wife and four children in Timmins.

Win Two Nominations For Senate Position

WASHINGTON, July 26 (CP)—Representative Mik Monroney won the Democratic nomination for United States Senate in Tuesday's bitter Oklahoma primary campaign, defeating the veteran Senator Elmer Thomas.

In Louisiana, Senator Russell B. Long won the Democratic nomination—which is equivalent to election—for a full six-year term. He has served two years of an unexpired term.

Malcolm LaFargue, of Shreveport, conceded that Long, son of the late Huey P. Long, had beaten him for the nomination.

2 Unions Decide Work Together

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP)—For the first time in their history, the AFL and CIO formally agreed Tuesday to work together. In all previous unity talks, the AFL insisted there could be no active co-operation, until a real merger had taken place.

All that was changed Tuesday. They set up a permanent AFL-CIO "unity committee," which will meet again today and later from time to time.

"We will work together in the fields of legislation and political action," they said in a statement, "to insure the continued strengthening of our own American democratic institutions."

Together the two big groups have 141 unions and claim around 14,000,000 members.

Besides the immediate "working together" of the AFL-CIO, the committee announced that it will discuss later:

"1. Establishing practical machinery to handle problems of jurisdictional disputes and raiding affecting unions of our two organizations.

"2. Considering specific proposals for organic unity in the American labor movement."

Britain's Groundnuts Plan Scrapped After 3 Years

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON, July 26—(CP)—Britain's groundnut plan, which roused political passions and grew few groundnuts, has been scrapped.

Nobody says so officially. It is merely admitted that after three years of controversy, well-meant plans to plant the plains of Africa with groundnuts have been both abandoned. The idea now is to transform the original scheme—a board project for colonial development, leaving the groundnuts to wither as they will.

Food Minister Maurice Webb outlined the new policy in a House of Commons debate.

The groundnuts plan, one of the Labor Government's pet projects, started in a fine glow of idealism and quickly became a political headache. From the first, nothing went right. The drive to grow groundnuts—what North Americans call peanuts—encountered obstacle after obstacle, from drought and flood to native labor trouble.

Now, it is known, nearly £36,000,000 ($111,600,000) has been spent. In return, this year's yield of oil-bearing seeds is about £350,000. This includes both groundnuts and sunflowers, which were introduced as a substitute when the nuts proved difficult to grow.

When the plan was launched, the hope was to produce essential fats in a hurrry to cope with a world shortage. Now Webb says: "Whether or not those shortages are as valid as they were—which is open to argument — it now seems clear to any realist that it would be unwise to focus the project exclusively on this original purpose of producing fats."

Require 2 Men To Enforce Gasoline Bylaw

To enforce the bylaw fixing the hours of sale of gasoline at the local outlets would require two men from 7 p.m. to midnight "checking on the gasoline stations", Mayor Swanston informed the legal committee of the council Tuesday, quoting a statement by Chief Constable John Thompson.

The committee with Ald. Adam Sands in the chair recommended that the association of retailers when they have the proposed changes in the bylaw ready, they be requested to discuss the terms with representatives of the council.

"This is a hard bylaw to enforce," Mayor Swanston said. "I understand 50% of the retailers of gasoline are in favor of it, 40% are against it, and 10% are noncommittal. It was a mandatory bylaw. That is the council had to pass it, according to the provincial legislation."

Questions Figures

"I don't think your percentages are correct, Mr. Mayor," Ald. James Gillespie remarked.

"I'm not positive about them," Mayor Swanston replied.

Comment of Ald. Sands was: "When we passed it, I said I didn't think the bylaw was any good; and I still don't think so. My suggestion would be that it be thrown out, and get one that's hole-proof."

Attitude of the council has been reluctant about prosecuting under this regulation. It was said that Mr. A. L. Elliott, KC, prosecuted in a case brought by the associated retailers last year.

"At that we had better luck than Toronto had with its bylaw," said W. F. Huycke, KC, City Solicitor.

As to the recent report quoting him as having said that he hadn't time to prosecute in a pending case, Mr. Huycke said that when Chief Thompson telephoned him that it was coming up in court, his reply was that he hadn't heard about it. The Toronto bylaw was now going to the Court of Appeal, Mr. Huycke said.

"It does seem to me that the dealers should arrange for the prosecution of any cases they have," the Solicitor said.

Wm. John Kent Druggist Dies

For many years a prominent Peterborough druggist, William John Kent of 155 Hunter St., E., died on Tuesday in hospital following a short illness. He was 83 years of age.

Born near Roseneath, he was educated in that district's primary school and received his degree from the Ontario College of Pharmacy. Mr. Kent worked in Ottawa and Port Hope before establishing a business in this city more than 50 years ago.

His store was at the present site of the Ritz Grill at the corner of George and Hunter Sts. His wife, the former Mertie Curtis, predeceased him. There were no children and are no surviving relatives.

Mr. Kent was a member of St. John's Anglican Church and a former Warden. He was also a member of the Masonic Order, Royal Arthur Lodge.

Funeral service will be held at the Belleghem Funeral Home on Thursday at 1:30 p.m. The Ven. Archdeacon C. W. Balfour will officiate and burial will be at Union Cemetery, Port Hope.

POSTPONE CONCILIATION

There has been a delay in hearing the contract dispute between the Ontario Marble Co. and Local 527. United Electrical Workers.

The Conciliation Board, under the chairmanship of Judge J. C. Anderson, adjourned Tuesday until September 6. Judge Anderson was of the opinion the wage question was the only outstanding issue but the union claims that hours, holidays and seniority must also be discussed. The matter is being referred to the Department of Labor for a ruling. Macauley Dillon, K.C., is the company nominee on the Board and Drummond Wren is the union nominee.

Few Drivers Signal Before Making Turn Showing Lack of Courtesy To Pedestrians

By BOB HATTON

Wednesday mornings in Peterborough are fairly quiet. Pedestrians stand a much better than average chance of walking about the streets and crossing intersections without being knocked down or forced to jump for their lives. Just the same they had better have their eyes open. A short time spent watching the sloppy and dangerous driving on the main intersections reveals a steady stream of infractions of law and common sense, every one of them endangering citizens, walking. This morning a young girl started to run across Simcoe St. with the green light. A car driven by a young man about to make a left turn across the girl's path, didn't slacken its speed in the least or sound its horn. The girl saw the car in time and stopped abruptly as the car cut about two feet in front of her.

A few minutes later, a car pulled up for a red light, but instead of waiting behind the clearly marked cross walk, it stopped half way across the pedestrians' path forcing several people to walk around the nose of the car.

Pedestrians walking with the green light are forced to guess whether cars coming toward them with the green light are going to turn into them or drive straight on. Few drivers signal their intention to turn.

Although there is no provision in the Highway Traffic Act which says a driver must signal when he makes a right turn, it is supposed to be a matter of courtesy that they do signal a right turn as well as a left. But Peterborough drivers are rarely polite. They swing round corners without a thought that it might be important that someone else know what they are going to do.

One of the city drivers' biggest faults is the way they cut across a corner when making a left turn. The Highway Traffic Act lays down a rule which says a driver making a left turn must keep to the right of the centre line of the street on which he is travelling until he is opposite the centre line of the street into which he is going to turn then swing his steering wheel.

You have to watch a long time before you will see a motorist make a left turn properly in this city.

In making a right turn as well as a left, drivers are supposed to wait until pedestrians have passed before proceeding. But this morning time after time motorists swung around corners forcing men, women and children to stand back or jump out of the way. One driver blew his horn to make sure a group of children waited for him to make his turn.

Beating The Light

Pedestrians are very wary of cars. Often they do not start to walk across as soon as the light turns green for them. They know many Peterborough drivers delight in racing across just as the amber light is turning red.

There is little the police can do about it. Chief Constable John Thompson said today it was very difficult to get a conviction on many of the infractions under a charge of careless driving for instance.

One of Peterborough's lawyers remarked today, "I've come to the conclusion, faced with the mentality of pedestrians and drivers, the only way to deal with the problem is to separate them. They should have to walk and drive on different levels."

And that seems to be as close as you can get to a solution until drivers start driving according to the book and with common sense.

Lindsay Woman Hurt When Car Rolls Over

WOODSTOCK, July 26 (CP).—Mrs. Laura S. Archer, 45, of Lindsay suffered knee injuries yesterday when her car went out of control on No. 100 highway north of Thamesford.

Thomas Parker, 73, of Beaverton, suffered a lacerated nose and bruises, and T. A. Cooper of 356 London St., Peterborough, was badly shaken up.

The three were on their way to Detroit when the car struck a tree and rolled down a 15-foot embankment.

Thamesford is 18 miles west of here.

Two YWCA Girls Visit Europe Like Holland

Two Peterborough girls returned Saturday from an eight-week trip of Europe, taken with 23 other girls from Canadian YWCA's. The two are Hazel Wilson, 505 Chamberlain St., and Marion Pogue, 190 London St.

Purpose of the trip was to create closer ties between European and Canadian Y's. Countries visited by the groups were England, Scotland, Holland, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and Switzerland.

The two girls were pleased with their trip, both from the Y's standpoint and their own. They left New York on the Queen Elizabeth May 29 arriving in Southampton. The return trip was on the Ascania from Liverpool to Quebec.

The voyage across the pond to England was the better of the two legs, said Miss Wilson. Held up for several hours because of fog, the Queen E. hit calm, sunny weather all the way over.

Returning via the northern route, the weather was rough and chilly and morning fogs were frequent.

Stayed In Hotels

Of continental cooking, Miss Wilson said the party stayed in hotels and ate at restaurants that catered to English-speaking people. She says she prefers home cooking, but that may have been because the restaurants and hotels attempted to prepare food American-style.

Most impressive of the countries she visited were Holland, Scotland and Switzerland. Holland was the cleanest country she has seen, said Miss Wilson, and there were few ruins showing the country had suffered bombing in war. Rotterdam was the only city in which bomb-ruins were still noticeable.

"You wouldn't know Holland had been bombed unless people told you so," she said.

Scenery Picturesque

Of Scotland and Switzerland, Miss Wilson said she was most impressed by the picturesque scenery of both countries. "It was so different from travelling all the time on flat country."

One unusual thing Miss Wilson noted was that the Paris YWCA has only 200 members. Otherwise, she said European Y's are not too different from those in this country.

The group, led by Elise Klaasen, from Hamilton YWCA, visited national headquarters in each of the countries they visited, and world YWCA headquarters, located in Switzerland.

Fawn Rescued

A fawn by the name of Bambi, about five months old, is attracting a lot of attention at Ointment's service station in Apsley. Two district men, Vernal Earnshaw and Irvin Nesbitt, saw the mother killed by a car on Highway 28 a few weeks ago and rescued the fawn from the roadside and brought it to the village.

Bambi is still being milk fed by bottle by the proprietor's daughter, Joan, age 8. It does not lack for good things to eat since tourists give it pop, candy bars and ice cream. Mr. Ointment has a permit from the Lands and Forests Department to keep this fawn until the end of this year.

War Scare Past Tourists Now Remaining

First rush of tourists back to the United States following news of the Korean war seems ended.

Some city merchants report that tourists in this district at the present plan to stay here. One American, interviewed on George St., said he planned staying in the district until next Monday.

Chamber of Commerce manager James Fraser believes a few cancellations at resorts have been due to the war, but stresses that numbers of Americans have been enquiring about vacancies during the past few weeks.

Mr. Fraser said he had one U.S. party visit him who were concerned with getting back to the States before gas rationing sets in.

But, he said, there is a possibility that Americans who believe there will be war will come to Ontario for one final fling.

Transport Hit By CNR Shunter

Minor damage was done to a transport Tuesday when it was struck by a CNR shunting engine at the Rink St. crossing.

Driver of the transport, Gerald Withers, 43 Lafayette Ave., told police he was driving east on Rink St., and that his view of the tracks was obstructed by box cars standing on a siding.

The air brake connections and right front fender of the truck were damaged.

Manners of Motorists Grow Increasingly Offensive To The Peterborough Public

The risks of the pedestrians who are writing their protests to the Examiner these days about the increasing hazard of crossing down town streets with the green lights were acknowledged by the legal committee of the council Tuesday. The expressive phrase of Mayor Swanston, one of the recognized main streeters, was: "You're likely to get knocked off a day." A to the deteriorating manners of men and women at the wheels of motor cars, trying to sneak around corners against the red light and its stop order, nothing much was said.

There was no definite answer to the committee's question: "What can we do?"

It was admitted that the pedestrian is in his full right when starting across the street with the green light, and that he should not be required to cast about for further assurance of safety.

But that pedestrian lane is likely to be crossed by the car with the red light confronting it, but its driver intending to make a right turn, and thereby cutting through the foot traffic.

Ald. Sands presided with Aldermen Gillespie and Anglesey and Mayor Swanston attending. They referred to the complaints of Examiner correspondents, said something should be done about it because it was quite evident that the manners of motorists here in Peterborough were increasingly offensive to the public.

UE Will Support Rail Unions

Locals 524 and 527, United Electrical Workers, have pledged full support to the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees now seeking a reduced work week with the same take-home pay.

Today leaflets were distributed among local railway employees bearing the text of a letter sent A. R. Mosher, president of the CBRE, by C. S. Jackson, Canadian UE president. These included express employees, CBRE members, and other railway employees in AFL unions—maintenance of way workers and engineers and train crews.

"The determination shown by members of the CBRE in recent strike vote certainly will be supported financially and morally by the members of our union," says the telegram in part.

The UE telegram also takes a slap at the Canadian Congress of Labor which it claims "have done much to undermine the struggle of the working people. The "disruptive and raiding policies of the leadership of the CCL" are blamed.

Woman Suffers Burns Trying To Stop Fire

BANCROFT, July 26—(ENS)—Trying to put out a fire which was started by a flooded gas stove in her Paudash Lake cottage, Mrs. Norman MacMurchy, Lansdowne St., Peterborough, was burned severely on her right arm.

Mrs. MacMurchy was taken to the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital where she was treated by Dr. Lumb.

Her husband was away shopping for supplies when the fire started. Nearby neighbours ran to help and the fire was soon put out. Very little damage was done to the cottage.

Mrs. G. Marriott gave first aid to Mrs. MacMurchy before the woman was taken to hospital.

Dr. W. C. McGuire Dies At Lakehurst

LAKEHURST, July 26.—Dr. W. C. McGuire, 79, for 25 years milk and food inspector for Cornwall, died last night at this Peterborough area community. He served on the Cornwall council and school board and founded a fuel business in that city.

Cool Weather Increases Yield Of Grain

Ontario is hearing these midsummer days the agricultural symphony of the cereal harvest as its instrumentation increases with hundreds of combines tuning into key and action as the grain ripens in nature cycle of 1950.

Recent cool nights have slightly delayed the process of the final stage of maturity, but that weather has served to put more substance into the heads that are nodding with their weight and ready to fall. At least that is what some of the agricultural representatives remark.

Rain last week apparently reached from the Detroit to the Ottawa River, extending delay in haying on those farms where foraging had been a somewhat tardy operation.

Good Hay Crop

Generally, however, the hay crop is off. Ed Summers in Douro reports "There is about double the crop." That is hardly the average comment throughout the province, but the yield has been better than satisfactory.

Rainfall has freshened the pastures. The wheat crop in Perth, for instance, is estimated at 30 to 50 bus. to the acre.

Western Ontario press report quotes farmers' rating of the winter wheat crop as "an excellent sample" as in Halton. London Free Press reports some farmers as being inclined to hold their wheat for a higher price, if they were sure of safe reduction in the moisture content.

Corn and potatoes are said to be thriving. Simcoe county reports cutting of fall barley completed. Fair yields of peas are showing in Northumberland. Generally, farmers would like to see a little warmer weather for tomatoes, tobacco and canning crops.

Aid In Entertaining Bermuda Cricketers

"They've had a good team here for years, and I don't think they have ever asked us for anything," was the comment of Mayor Swanston on a letter from Gordon Monkman of Whitaker's Cricket Club Tuesday.

They are asking the council for some assistance in entertaining the touring Bermuda team that will be here Wednesday, Aug. 9 for a match.

Incidentally, Frank Roberts has been mentioning this engagement as an opportunity for local people who do not know the game to spend a couple of hours at Nicholls Oval and get acquainted with cricket.

The match begins at 11 a.m with adjournment for lunch and finally dinner for the visitors.

The letter to the legal and reception committee will be followed by enquiry as to what the Club wishes the council to do.

Freighted Provisions In Riel Rebellion

William Franks Recalls Pioneer Days In Saskatchewan

Meet a man whose parents were pioneers in Emily township. A man who helped open up the wheatland of the Canadian west.

He is 84-year-old William Franks, now retired after an active life and living on the farm of his nephew Alvin Franks, Emily township, about four miles northeast of Omemee.

A man of his years and experience might be expected to have a few words of advice for the younger generation—or at least a recipe for how to live a long, full life. But not Mr. Franks.

"I think the young folk of today are as good as their fathers or grandfathers ever were. Maybe some don't come up to the mark but there's a few bad ones in every generation."

And as for advice — well, he hasn't any.

"In any case they wouldn't listen to me," he chuckled tolerantly.

At one time Mr. Franks was right in the mainstream of the history of the Canadian west. He freighted provisions for the army that was fighting Louis Riel, in the Northwest Rebellion of 1885.

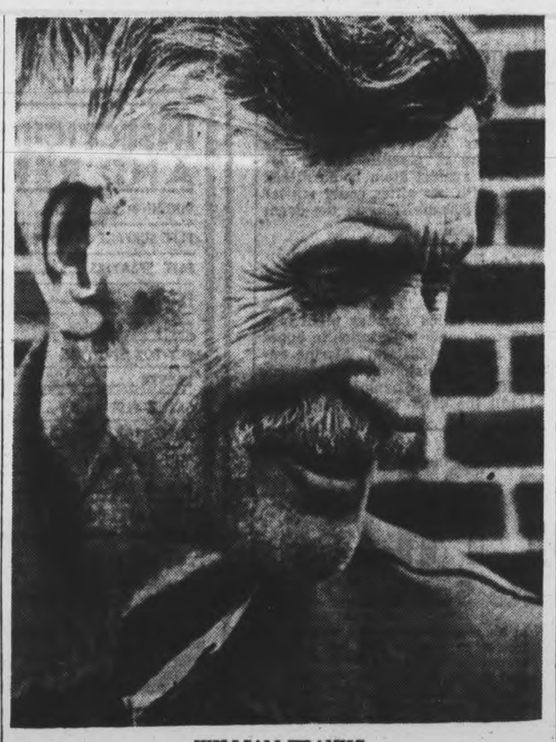
He left the 100-acre family farm in east Emily when still a lad of 19 years and headed west with his brother James, 29. Their parents William and Alecia Franks were Ulster folk and years before had made the journey to Canada, eager to share in the hard but independent life of the pioneer.

It was the search for adventure and possibly the inherited pioneering spirit that made him set out for the prairies with his brother.

Brother James began homesteading at Tuxford, Saskatchewan, 16 miles north of Moose Jaw. What with the land obtained through homesteading as well as purchased land the size of the farm grew to about 480 acres. William lived with his older brother.

("Yes, 480 acres seems big for this district but it didn't amount to too much out there. There were lots bigger.")

The Riel Rebellion gave the brothers a chance to make some money. Far to the north the troops were engaged in their campaign against the rebels and one of the army's biggest problems in that land of few railways was food and other supplies.



WILLIAM FRANKS

"We went into the freighting business," Mr. Franks recalls. The farm was temporarily abandoned and the two brothers started hauling "grub" (bully beef and hard tack, chiefly) as well as baled hay and other supplies from Moose Jaw to Clark's Crossing on the Saskatchewan River.

Hundreds Of Teams On Trail

"It was a fine trail—known as the Saskatoon trail," Mr. Franks told the Examiner. "We'd have two horses pulling a waggon, making a load of about 3,000 pounds. There was never any trouble; all the fighting was way up north. We didn't meet any Indians or halfbreeds."

"At Clark's Crossing we'd unload and the supplies would be taken across the river on boats. There were hundreds of teams on that trail."

"So we didn't see anything of the war. Back in Moose Jaw, though, there were 50 tents of wounded."

Here is Mr. Franks' impression of the now-prosperous and expanding city of Saskatoon:

"When I saw it Saskatoon was just half a dozen dilapidated shacks. It sure was a mighty poor looking place. I still don't know how the people were able to keep alive, or what they lived on."

The bonanza lasted only about three months. By the fall Louis Riel's forces had been smashed and the rebellion was over. Riel went to the gallows later that year, the centre of one of the bitterest controversies in Canada's brief history.

Big Help To Farmers

The money the brothers made freighting for the army proved a lifesaver. It was their principal capital for three years.

On the prairies, Mr. Franks explained, it was not simply a case of plowing the land, sowing the seed and then waiting for the harvest—all in a year. The tough prairie grass did not decay in a single season, even after it had been plowed under.

"It was three years before we had a load of grain off that land," he said. "We found the going pretty rough."

That same year Mr. Franks acquired his own farm. It adjoined that of his brother. Three hundred and twenty acres he purchased at $3.50 an acre and the other 160 acres were acquired by homesteading.

Mr. Franks stayed out in the west for 26 years. As all farmers did, he had his good and bad crops. The twin scourges—grasshoppers and dust—were practically unknown to him.

"No, I never remember the grasshoppers being serious," he said. "And don't forget that the prairie land was not broken up like it is today. It's the wind on the long stretches of broken land that starts dust storms."

In 1911 after his wife died Mr. Franks returned to the Peterborough district. He purchased a 10-acre lot and began mixed farming near Jackson's Park. Then in 1942 he retired and since has been living on the farm of his nephew Alvin Franks.

A recent injury to his right foot has forced him to curtail many of his activities. Now he gets around, only with difficulty, and with the aid of a cane.

"I can still do some of the chores," said Mr. Franks. "For instance I look after the wood. It's this foot that bothers me."

"No city life for me," he said in parting. "I've lived on a farm all my life and that's where I want to stay."

Word Inflation Confusing Expert Finds

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

One of the difficulties in talking about inflation is that we don't know what we mean when we use the word.

It used to mean what happened in Germany after the first world war, when it might take a wheelbarrow load of marks to buy a meal.

Gradually the meaning has come to be modified to the point where we use it to refer to any considerable rise in prices.

The Concise Oxford Dictionary gives the following meaning:

"Abnormal increase of the currency (for example) by the issue of inconvertible legal - tender notes."

By that definition, or by reference back to what happened in Germany, we do not seem to be in danger of "inflation."

Perhaps it would be better if we just used the term "higher prices" to refer to the condition which we have been experiencing and with which we are threatened.

Much Better

We have since the first world war been experiencing what pre-1914 would have called "inflation" if it had envisaged it. Yet there can be little doubt that the average person is much better off than he would have been in pre-1914.

Even if he is "broke," he is "broke" paying for more things. He is no more "broke" and he has more to show for what he has spent or is spending. As a matter of fact he is not so "broke" because people at large have more money in the bank.

What it seems to boil down to is this:

By a sort of tug-of-war process, prices have gone up and people have been given more money. It would have been difficult and probably impossible in 1914 to have suddenly established this condition of higher prices and more money, but that is the way it has developed, and people are better off for it.

It all has a relation to the ability of people to produce goods; but we don't know the principles well enough to say that if you increase production of goods by so much you can increase incomes by so much.

Scared Of It

We don't know the principles and we are scared all the time that the whole thing will get out of hand and that we shall find ourselves in a mess.

Perhaps some day we shall arrive at a formula. Meantime we have to continue by the method of trial and error, with everyone trying to use as much common sense as possible.

If, given a set of conditions, we try to envisage what they will lead to in two, three of five years, we may conclude that the answer is disaster.

If we do, we are underestimating our proven ability to deal with things as they arise. For the condition of two, three of five years from now won't come on us overnight, and we have developed a remarkable capacity of adjusting ourselves to the extraordinary conditions of our times.

Inventory Ordered

VIENNA, July 26 (AP)—Russian military authorities have ordered an industrial inventory in their zone of Austria, threatening "appropriate military justice" to firms which fail to comply, government circles announced Tuesday.

Kill 25 Peasants

MANILA, July 26—(AP)—The Phillipines Defence Department today reported 25 Hukdalahap armed peasants were killed in an eight-day offensive launched by 3,000 government troops 50 miles north of Manila.

FUNNY BUSINESS —By Hershberger

"Darling, I bought a new hat yesterday!"

Steel Market Said Whirlpool

NEW YORK, July 26 — (AP) — The Iron Age, metal-working trade weekly, describes the steel market today as "a whirlpool of frenzy and uncertainty" resulting from what it called slow-motion prodding by the administration for "painless" controls.

Saying the manufacturer "has not been provided with rules governing the procurement battle," the Iron Age says that "this has turned the race into a mad scramble, with no holds barred."

Steel people face a dilemma, the trade weekly says, adding: "what is a military order? Which civilian orders are essential and which are non-essential? Who should get more steel and who should get less? The steel market will keep whirling until these definitions are spelled out, clearly and concisely."

Military orders were reported slow in coming. But the Iron Age said a sizable military build-up is definitely on the way.

Steel production this week was listed at 99.5 per cent of rated capacity, with some mills still handicapped by vacations.

Adimts Stabbing

TORONTO, July 26 (CP). — Michael Josefacki, 31, Tuesday pleaded guilty to charges of stabbing his wife and was remanded for sentence until Friday. Police testified he stabbed his wife during an argument after accusing her of being unfaithful to him. They added there was no evidence of any misconduct by his wife.

Resigns From Board

OTTAWA, July 26 (CP). — Trade Minister Howe Tuesday announced the resignation of Dr T. W. Grindley, 49, as a member of the Canadian Wheat Board. Mr. Howe said that Dr. Grindley's resignation, effective Aug. 1, results from ill health, and "has been accepted with regret." No successor has been named.

Drowned In Aqueduct

OTTAWA, July 26—(CP) — Albert Zhukow, 13, was drowned Tuesday while swimming in the city aqueduct. Police said the boy found himself in trouble while swimming under the west-central Booth St. bridge and cried for help, but passers-by could not see him.

Fugitive Shot In Escape Try

KIRKLAND LAKE, July 26 (CP)—William Bosak, 21, was shot in the head by a police bullet Tuesday night, allegedly while attempting to escape from custody after his arrest on charges of indecent exposure.

He is not expected to live.

He was shot by Constable Tom Whittle. Police said the officer aimed at Bosak's legs but the man tripped on some brush and was struck in the back of the head by the bullet.

Bosak, from Noranda, Que., was released from jail a month and a half ago after serving 18 months for indecent assault.

Constable Whittle arrested Bosak after receiving complaints from Robert Young, an assistant school principal, that a man was indecently exposing himself in the presence of school girls. The officer found the man on the edge of a stretch of bush behind the school.

Bosak was said to have ran some 60 feet along a winding trail before he was shot.

Held For Robbery

TORONTO, July 26—(CP) — Toronto police arrested Douglas Odam, 27, of Toronto in Montreal Tuesday and said they now have in custody the four men who stole $3,000 from a dairy safe last July 5. Police said they have recovered most of the stolen money. Sam Miller, Ken Brown and Adam Bubrowsky, all of Toronto, are in custody and charged with the robbery.

To Decide on Offer

WINDSOR, July 26—(CP) — Windsor employees of General Motors Corporation of Canada will vote today to decide which of three company-paid health insurance offers they wish. A similar vote last week among Oshawa employees of General Motors was in favor of the Windsor medical plan, a privately-organized scheme for full medical and surgical care of the worker and his family.

Makes A Trade

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., July 26 —(AP)—Milton Raney, 53, Tuesday traded a six-month drunken sentence for six months of Sunday School. Mayor Thomas L. Lemon rescinded the jail sentence when a Salvation Army worker pleaded that Raney's wife is ill and would have been left without support. Lemon ordered Raney to attend Salvation Army Sunday School session for six months.

Hollywood Calls Chef Robert For Special Food

By HUBBARD KEAVY

HOLLYWOOD, July 26 (AP)—"There is a bar—naturally," said the chef, "and then hors d'oeuvres . . ."

When the gourmets of Hollywood go out to entertain with food, and want to do it properly and impressively, they leave the menu to Chef Robert Kreis. Tomorrow night in the private dining room of one of the Brown Derbies, where Chef Robert is the head kitchen man, a visiting millionaire is entertaining for 20. There will be a bar, "naturally," and the same menu Chef Robert ran up for Clark Gable's party last week.

Leave It To Robert

Gable and many others and the unnamed millionaire have full confidence in Robert because they know he will prepare something very edible. The Gable meal started with Dugeness crab meat en cocette (baked in little dishes) and next was onion soup au sherry.

Then, the piece de resistance, coq au vin—a three-pound rooster cooked in a sauce of burgundy and brandy. It is most unusual to fix white meat in red wine. Each guest gets half a rooster, along with carrots, onions, celery and potatoes parisienne, which have been cooked in the sauce. After that, fresh-chilled asparagus vinegarette. For dessert: Strawberries Romanoff—which consists of berries, brandy, Kirschwasser and curacao poured over vanilla ice cream.

Happy Frenchman

Kreis, a very happy and well-fed Frenchman, has been catering to the eating habits of Hollywood for more than 20 years. He knows what everyone in town likes. When Jimmy Durante comes in, Robert knows he will ask for one of two dishes: centre cut of finnan haddie served in a chafing dish with milk and butter, or English roast beef, four slices cut paper thin.

Named Superintendent

TORONTO, July 26 (CP).—J. G. Demeza, superintendent of public schools, Tecumseh township, Kirkland Lake, has been appointed superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville, effective September 1, 1950, it was announced Tuesday. Mr. Demeza will study various methods used in the education of the deaf in Great Britain and in the United States, before taking over his new duties.

Must Register

TORONTO, July 26 (CP). — Public accountants in Ontario have until Aug. 1 to register with the Public Accountants Council in Toronto under legislation passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature. So far 1,150 applications have been received by the Council which was authorized to supervise the profession by the the Legislature.

Gigantic Defence

BERLIN, July 26—(Reuters)—The Russian-approved "military expert" of the East German press told an East Berlin audience Tuesday night that Russia has built up a "gigantic fighter defence" against atom bomb attack and with her allies could muster 400 to 500 divisions in the event of war.

Try Trip To Britain

SYDNEY, Australia, July 26—(Reuters) — Two men and a woman sailed Tuesday night in a 35-foot home-built ketch in hopes of reaching Britain. Marine engineer J. Walsh, who is taking his wife and R. Chapman as crew, built the ketch in his spare time.

Calls Himself Duke Caught Smuggling

TORONTO, July 26 (CP). — Earl Anglin James of Chicago, who called himself the Duke of Scala and Prince of Parma, was charged Tuesday with smuggling cameras and movie equipment into Canada. He was remanded one week for trial.

Police said James also claimed to have been prison chaplain at the Cook County Jail in Chicago. He was released on $3,000 bail.

TOURIST BOARD

The British Tourist and Holidays Board, a non-governmental body was set up in January, 1947.

Plant Refused An Injunction

TORONTO, July 26 (CP)—The Continental Can Company Tuesday was refused an injunction to restrain the United Steel Workers (CIO-CCL) from picketing one of its three plants at sunburban New Toronto.

The application was dismissed by the Ontario Supreme Court which said, however, the application could be renewed on 48 hours notice if there was evidence of interference by the union.

The union is on strike over a wage dispute at two of the three plants and has set up pickets around the third plant. Norman L. Mathews, counsel for the company, claimed pickets were interfering with non-striking employees of the third plant. Union counsel J. H. Osler contended employees of all three plants used a common entrance and an injunction applying to one factory would affect the union rights of employees in the others.

DEFACED BRICK WORK: "We have just moved to a house with badly marked brick walls. It appears the children of the former owner did their homework on the brick. How can we remove the marks?"

If the bricks are just marked with chalk you should be able to clean them by scrubbing them with a soap and water solution and a scrubbing brush. For marks caused by smoke try this same method. If this fails use a 10 per cent. solution of muriatic acid and water, being most careful not to let any of this solution touch the mortar joints. The bricks should be washed down again with water.

HOW TO GET QUICK RELIEF from sore, PAINFUL PILES

A Candid and Honest Discussion on a Delicate Subject

IMPORTANT! Here is frank information — in non-technical language—regarding an annoying, painful, often embarrassing physical condition which now afflicts countless thousands — you, perhaps, among them. Far too frequently this condition, at first superficial in itself, can be Nature's warning of more serious trouble to come. We believe everyone who suffers from this condition owes it to his or her own personal comfort to read the statement below. LEONHARDT PROPRIETARIES, LTD.

Since the dawn of civilization, medical men have been fighting a ceaseless war — to save lives and to conquer dread diseases.

When they discover a new "miracle" drug or surgical technique, the news rings round the world! Yet all the while, other "unsung" men of science are working equally hard to relieve suffering caused by less dramatic, "everyday" maladies. Among them is perhaps the most painful of all — piles!

A Subject Seldom Discussed

Pile sufferers are burdened with a double hardship. They yearn for relief, but hesitate to seek it because of false pride and embarrassment. Yet to the man or woman who knows the agonizing torment of itching, burning piles, the truth about their trouble may mean a world of difference in business efficiency, in social pleasure, in good looks and vitality!

What Causes Piles?

Piles are not a primary ailment. Conditions which cause them never originate in the parts affected. At first, piles are simply inflamed and distended "varicose veins" in the delicate membranes of the rectum. A common cause is hepatic congestion (torpidity of the liver) which results in ordinary, everyday constipation.

How Piles Develop

As the liver function slows down, blood flow from the lower bowel to the liver is retarded and small rectal veins swell with blood. Then, usually, constipation starts. Hard, clogging masses form in the lower bowel — irritating and bruising the distended rectal veins. Blood stagnates in and bruised areas, until the tiny veins become greatly inflamed, lumpy, horribly painful.

This agonizing pain aggravated by constipation, is "self-perpetuating". The constipation adds to the itching, burning pain and soreness—which in turn increases the constipation — which then tends to further enlarge the swollen veins until they become pile tumors. If this vicious circle is not broken, there is only one choice — chronic piles or the surgeon's knife!

Why Face This Choice?

Decide now to break this vicious circle! Many others have done so, thanks to an able professional man who, more than 50 years ago, began an intensive study of piles — their cause and effect. Knowing that piles are caused by congested conditions inside the body, he wisely searched for an internal medication that would relieve hepatic congestion, stimulate bile flow, gently ease constipation and improve circulation of the blood in the lower bowel — thus helping Nature herself promote a healthier condition in the sore, painful areas where piles are found. Finally, in his own practice, he devised a formula of medically-proven elements — small tablets taken by mouth — which showed amazing results in 86 out of 100 cases that came to his personal, professional attention!

Sufferers Acclaim Hem-Roid

He gave his formula the trade name of Hem-Roid — using it first in his own practice, later supplying it to friends and acquaintances. In 1904 he sold the formula and name. Since that time, millions of packages have been bought by the public throughout the world — and countless satisfied users of Hem-Roid testify to its quick, efficient action.

Accept This 10-Day Offer!

Naturally — long-standing, neglected cases of piles may call for a doctor's advice. But for average pile conditions, we know nothing better than Hem-Roid to give you the relief and results you want. To prove it, we make this special 10-day offer!

Now from any drugstore, get a package of Hem-Roid — 60 tablets, 20 full days treatment — at the amazingly low price of $1.50. Use the tablets exactly as directed for 10 days. If at that time you are not delighted with results you get, just return the package with unused tablets to your druggist for full refund of the purchase price! You risk nothing — and you stand to gain immeasurable relief from the embarrassing discomfort and torment of itching, burning piles. Ask for Hem-Roid — today!

Find Hair Styles Enlivened By Head Effects

BY MURIEL NARRAWAY

LONDON —(CP)— London's shorter-than-ever hair styles brought a burst of glamorizing head-effects for evening wear.

Most popular are "ears" of net, tulle, fruit and flowers. These are inexpensive and easy to make.

One example is a ruffle of white tulle fixed across the back of the head and pinned above the ears. This is offset by startling earrings, like the black velvet bow set on a rosette of white lace and supporting three cherries.

For the ash-blonde who rinses her hair lavender - blonde to match a midnight-blue brocade dress, there are ears of rosebuds and leaves surrounded by a matching blue net ruche.

Intriguingly combined with a grecian-styled jersey dress in the baccante halo of artificial grapes or cherries. The short hair is arranged in a deep "S" on the forehead which frames the grapes and leaves behind it. A slender swinging line of fruit descends to the ears, completely framing the face.

Longer For Evening

A Mayfair hair stylist lengthens the hair for evening by addition of a nape chignette, a double row of softly-brushed curls attached to the nape by pins.

Straw in your hair is another of the same stylist's ideas. Two attached pleats of straw are tinted to match their hair and there are bows to match the dress.

For the bride, a crown of lace and flowers is set high on the back of the head like a Spanish comb.

One such head-dress is a gauzy bow standing on the crown of the head surrounded by a heart-shaped coronet of single gladioli heads mounted on individual hairpins.

For the bridesmaid there is a deep horseshoe of slender, starry white flowers coming from the temples to the nape. Any type or color of tiny, slender flowers may be used.

Designer Puts Gloves on Hats

PARIS, July 26—(AP)—You have to wear your gloves—preferably well stuffed—on top of your hat nowadays to be a la mode in Paris.

French hat designers are showing this unique trimming on the new fall hats now being paraded here.

A hat show given Tuesday by topflight designer Paulette featured derby-shaped caps - with "clenched fists" rising from the crown.

Other highlights of the show were monk's hoods, helmets of feathers surmounted by wings and halo hats worn back to front.

The hoods seem just the thing for an icy winter day. They fit over contrast-colored skullcaps and snuggle around the neck before merging into brief shoulder capes. Paulette makes them in shaved plush, velvet or wool jersey.

Paulette shows a neat line in veils. She uses cobweb-fine gold mesh sprinkled with rhinestones for "mask" veils and fine black tulle spattered with sequins for veils draped with curtains into fullness at each side of the face.

Big-footed Gals Win Shoe Victory

LONDON—(CP)—Women who banded together in defence of big feet have won two victories in seven months.

Victory No. 1: A London shoe firm has agreed to supply outsize shoes of all kinds.

Victory No. 2: A hosiery firm promises special stocking for feet up to size 11½, gloves up to six nine.

These concessions were wrested by an organization called the Association of Women with Large Feet, which set out seven months ago to obtain larger shoes for women.

Driving force behind the campaign is Mrs. Phyllis Crone (9½ shoes), a widow from Airton, Yorkshire. She said the Association hopes to form branches all over Britain.

"We haven't got around to clothes yet," said Mrs. Crone "That will come later."

1912 Touches On Clothes Not Very Popular

LONDON, July 26—(Reuters)—Export sales at the autumn fashion showings are better than last year.

Overseas buyers like the short skirts—some are as much as 17 inches off the ground—and the Scottish Angora coats and many other new high-fashion fabrics from Scotland.

But they do not seem to like such 1912 touches as tweeds trimmed with braid. And some aspects of the 1920 look, including the sacque coat, are not going down too well.

Muffs—survival of even earlier years—have found favor. Peter Russell has suits in velour or velvet, with matching muffs, lined with the same silk as is used for the blouses worn with the suits.

Like Jersey Dresses

Buyers also like Peter Russell's tailored jersey dresses in both silk and wool, to be worn under tweed or fur coats.

The same house shows tall hats with close brims, and some of these are also going overseas.

The Queen's dressmaker, Norman Hartnell who makes a specialty of shimmery, gossamer-like materials, is showing dresses in tulle embroidered in passmenterie, in what may best be describ as Siamese-cat colors—ranging from pale cream through biscuit to the deepest brown.

Another popular model, from Mattli, is a gold-meshed dinner dress. Heavyweight Scottish Angora coats from Ronald Patterson are another favorite.

Sheik Headdress Latest Angle In Stylish Halo

PARIS, July 25—(AP)—The headdress worn by Sheiks in the desert to protect them from the sun will be worn by women next fall if French milliner Rose Valois has her way.

Highlight of her fall hat show was a group of bright-colored scarves worn draped over the head and, under the chin, held snugly in place by a turban.

Another of her ideas is to wear turbans made of thick dressing-gown cord or rouleau, wide piping stuffed with cotton wool coiled round and round like a spring.

Her collection includes a wide variety of headgear but in particular she goes for Balaclava helmets in Angora, pointed crown pixie hats with small roll brims, and tiny skullcaps with ear-flaps sticking out at each side.

For women who get tired of wearing hats half way through the day, she has designed hats with rouleau slipknots so they can be slung around the shoulder like a satchel.

You'll Prove an Expert Jam Maker

The First Time you try this Easy, 5-Point, Short-Boil Way!

The modern, short-boil way of making jam with CERTO is so quick, easy and sure it's hard to believe . . . until you try it!

It's the natural way, too, because CERTO is fruit pectin (the natural substance in fruit that causes it to "jell") in concentrated form. These 5 points, typical of CERTO recipes, explain how CERTO simplifies jam making.

Point 1 — ONE MINUTE BOIL
With CERTO you don't have to "boil down" your fruit to make it set. You boil hard ONE MINUTE only. That cuts down by two-thirds the time needed for making jam the old, long-boil way!

Point 2 — 2 lbs. FULLY RIPE FRUIT
You use RIPE fruit at the peak of flavor and color (Long-boil recipes call for under-ripe fruit.) The one-minute boil does not dull this lovely natural color or spoil the ripe fruit taste. So your jam keeps the taste and color of fresh fruit.

Point 3 — 3 lbs. of SUGAR
A pound of jam made with CERTO contains no more sugar than a pound made the old long-boil way.

Point 4 — 4 ozs. of CERTO
You add a half-bottle (4 ozs.) of CERTO to ensure the correct ratio of pectin to fruit and sugar for a perfect set. That ends guesswork. CERTO helps all fruits to jell perfectly.

Point 5 — 5 lbs. of JAM
There's no "boiling down" with CERTO, so you average a 50% greater yield from the same amount of fruit. You get about 5 lbs. of jam where long-boil recipes would only yield about 3 lbs!

Follow the Recipes Exactly

Under the label of every CERTO bottle is a book of tested recipes . . . one for each fruit because different fruits need different handling. RESULTS ARE SURE if you follow the simple directions EXACTLY. Get CERTO at your grocer's.

Look for the Book of 78 Tested Recipes under the Label

MISS GERTRUDE MARGARET LEAHY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Leahy, was married on Tuesday to Raymond John Lynch, son of Mr. John Lynch and the late Mrs. Lynch. The ceremony took place in St. Peter's cathedral, the Rev. Gerald Garvey officiating. Roy Studio Photo.

Miss Gertrude Leahy Bride Of Raymond John Lynch

The marriage of Gertrude Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs John F. Leahy and Raymond John Lynch, son of Mr. John Lynch and the late Mrs Lynch, was solemnized in St. Peter's Cathedral, Tuesday. The Rev. Gerald Garvey officiated, the wedding music was played by Mrs. R. Amon and the soloist was Mrs. E. Collis.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white embossed nylon trimmed with French lace. Her fingertip veil of tulle net was caught in a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of charmaine red gladioli cups and ivy.

The bride was attended by her two sisters, Miss Barbara Leahy, maid-of-honor, and Miss Maude Leahy, bridesmaid. They wore identically styled gowns of imported green and pink embroidered Swiss organdy, with fitted bodices and full skirts. Their heart-shaped bonnets were in matching shades and were tied with ribbons. They carried bouquets of asters, carnations and ivy.

The groomsman was Emmett Leahy, brother of the bride. Tom Carey, brother-in-law of the groom and Fred Leahy, brother of the bride, were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Kawartha Room of the Empress Hotel. The bride's mother received in a green printed silk gown, with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The groom's sister assisted. She wore a pink printed silk gown with brown accessories and a corsage of talisman roses

Later the bride and groom left for a trip to points north. For travelling, the bride wore a flowered nylon dress with black accessories and a corsage of sweet peas.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Lynch will live at 53 Maria St., Peterborough.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

"Please clear up a misunderstanding for me," asks a Milwaukee correspondent. "While playing Canasta the other night, one of the players wanted to take the discard pile before his side had melded.

"I claimed that the pack was frozen to them until their side had melded. For this reason, I said, the opponent could not take the discard pile to make his initial meld.

"Am I right? If I am, why cover a wild card or a red three when you turn up such a card as the dealer? Since the pack is already frozen, what is the point of causing any special fuss over a wild card or a red three?"

The pack is not ordinarily frozen at the beginning of the hand. You are allowed to take the discard pile when you make your initial meld. When you take the discard pile on the same turn in which you make your initial meld, you must put down a pair of natural cards that match the previous discard. For this reason, it is sometimes said that the pack is frozen to you until you have made your initial meld.

However, once your side has made the initial meld, it is possible for either player of your partnership to take the discard pile with one matching card and one wild card. This may be done at some turn of play following the turn on which the initial meld was made.

When the deck is really frozen (either by the dealer or by the discard of a wild card by some player) the deck stays frozen until it is picked up. It does not become unfrozen merely because your side make an initial meld.

For example, suppose the dealer turns up a red three, thus freezing the pack. Then suppose you meld three aces from your hand. The deck is still frozen. Your partner is not allowed to take the discard pile with one matching card and one wild card. He must still have two matching cards that match the previous discard.

If the deck had not been frozen, the situation would be quite different. When you put down your three aces, your partner would be able to take the discard pile thereafter with one matching card and one wild card.

✧ ✧ ✧

Q—If you pick up a discard pile that consists of more than one card, are you allowed to go out?

A—Yes. You are allowed to take the discard pile and meld out on the same play. As a matter of fact even if you take a discard pile that consists of only one card, you are allowed to meld out on that play. The only exception is that you are not allowed to take a discard pile that consists of only one card when your hand also consists of only one card.

HAPPY WEDDING SMILES were numerous on Saturday, when some 30 couples were married. The above pictures shows three couples: LEFT, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lavern Heffernan after the marriage at Sacred Heart Church. Mrs. Heffernan was formerly Miss Cecile Marie Chenier. CENTRE, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Warren Hie, who were married at George St. United Church. Mrs. Hie was the former Miss Donna Florence Jean Minor. RIGHT, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, whose wedding was in Mark St. United Church vestry. Mrs. Johnson was Miss Bernadette Cranley. (Duke Studio Photos.)

Heffernan-Chenier Wedding At Sacred Heart

The Sacred Heart Church was the scene of a lovely wedding Saturday morning, when Cecile Marie Chenier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Chenier, became the bride of Donald Lavern Heffernan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heffernan. The church was beautifully decorated with large baskets of white delphiniums, white snaps, achilleas and ferns. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev G Sullivan.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a gown of white satin and lace that fell into a long train. Her fingertip veil was of silk illusion and chantilly lace with a headdress of satin and lace enhanced with pearls. She carried a pearl rosary entwined into a lover's knot of a white orchid with roses and bouvardia.

Miss Doris Chenier was her sister's maid of honor and Mrs. Leonard Johnston, aunt of the bride and Miss Theresa Chenier, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. All wore gowns of white net and lace with fitted bodices and full skirts, similar in style to that of the bride. They wore large open-crowned picture hats of net and edged with chantilly lace and carried cascade bouquets of white roses and gypsophila.

Mr. Ted Chenier, brother of the bride, was groomsman. Mr. Leonard Johnston, uncle of the bride and Mr. Kevin Heffernan, brother of the groom were ushers.

Mr. Armstrong was at the organ and Mr. Anthony DeNoble sang during the ceremony which included "Ave Marie" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother" during the signing of the register.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Kawartha Room of the Empress Hotel. The bride's mother received wearing a gown of navy sheer with pink and navy accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. The groom's mother assisted in a gown of navy figured sheer with navy and red accessories and a corsage of white roses.

The couple left for a trip to Montreal and Quebec. For travelling, the bride chose a two piece white dress with navy and white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Of Interest to Women

daughter of Mrs. Hazel Cranley and Carl Johnson, son of Mr and Mrs. Wm. G. Johnson. The Rev. B. S. Morwood officiated.

The bride wore a white nylon marquisette gown and her net veil was caught up with mother of pearls. The wedding attendant was Miss Barbara Cranley, sister of the bride, who wore a pink sheer gown, net veil and matching headdress. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The flower girl, Joanne Bruce, neice of the groom, was dressed in yellow crepe trimmed with blue and wearing blue flowers in her hair.

The groomsman was Lawrence Johnson, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, 627½ Oxford St. The bride's mother received wearing a blue figured crepe dress with white accessories and a corsage of red roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a black crepe gown with matching accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a trip to points west. For travelling the bride wore a yellow silk jersey dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will reside at 709 Aylmer St., Peterborough.

DOROTHY DIX

Self Sacrifice, Not Virtue It's Weakness in Parents

DEAR MISS DIX: In a recent check-up of myself I find I am what is known as a "giver" personality. I remember birthdays of friends and relatives, yet my own passes unheeded. I write letters of cheer and sympathy that people love to receive, yet my sorrows and joys are born in gruesome loneliness. I speak kindly and loyally of all I know, yet unkind and hurting criticisms are my lot. I am so disgusted with living because I seem utterly unable to cultivate selfishness as a virtue. My only consolation is the fact that I am 22 and still can change, but how does one strike a happy medium.—M. K. R.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I suppose the only workable suggestion would be for you to reverse the Golden Rule and do unto others as they do unto you.

The only trouble in pursuing this line of conduct is that it will hurt you a hundred times more than it will those to whom you apply it. For a generous nature loves to give and finds far more happiness in giving than in receiving. A loving heart overflows with tenderness that it must expend on those about it, and an unselfish nature gets an exquisite joy in sacrificing its own pleasures to those near and dear to it and making life easier for them.

Shows Laziness

Unselfishness is exploited as a virtue, but it is, in reality, generally just a manifestation of weakness, laziness and lack of backbone. A wife thinks she is unselfish to her husband when she gives in to all of his whims and lets him inflict petty tyrannies upon her and ride roughshod over her, but it is because she lacks the nerve to stand up and fight him and force him to treat her properly. The woman who makes of herself a doormat for her children thinks she is an unselfish mother when she spoils them to death and makes them little hellions, but it is because it it easier to give in to them than it is to make them behave themselves.

Because this is a selfish world we have scant respect for those who lack courage to stand up for their own rights and who let us impose upon them. It is never the enslaved wife or husband who is the adored one. It is never the mother who looks like a human ragbag while her daughters are daily hints from Paris, whose children look up to her. Visiting relatives think more of being asked to Cousin Sophronia's to tea than they do out of grafting a three weeks' hotel bill off Aunt Emma. Nobody loves the family goat or makes a pet of it.

So you are a wise young woman to realize at 22 that you have the self-sacrifice complex, because you have time to modify it. And this I advise you to do both for your sake and the sakes of those about you. There is neither dignity nor virtue in being an easy mark.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a man and am losing all my love for my wife besause she is so untidy. She believes there is some other woman, but there is not. It is her own slovenliness, her own aversion to soap and water. When I married she was a cute little blonde with beautifully curled hair, but now her face needs washing, her hair needs a shampoo and combing, her clothes need to go to the cleaners, her shoes need their heels straightened, and if I dare suggest that she looks as if she needed to be run through the laundry she says that there are other things she would rather spend money on. She says she cannot darn stockings or fix a ripped hem. She is a sweet little girl and could be very attractive if only she was neat. In the meantime we are getting nothing out of life just for the lack of cheap cleanliness, for I am ashamed to be seen out with her. She has all the time in the world and nothing to do, as we live in a hotel. What must I do?

DESPAIRING HUSBAND.

ANSWER: I don't know unless you turn the hose on her. For untidy people seem to be wedded to their dirt and no persuasion makes them part with it.

I don't blame you for being disgusted with your wife, for nothing in the world is more repulsive than a slovenly woman. She knows shows that she lacks self-respect, for that would make her try to present as good an appearance as possible before the world, and it would make her take care of her person and her clothes.

The only expianation is laziness. She is too lazy even to take a bath or get somebody else to clean her clothes, and against that sort of slothfulness a man beats himself in vain. Nothing can change or alter it, not even the knowledge that she is losing her husband for the most shameful of all reasons—because she is dirty. What a pity.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Does a man whom a child or a dog takes to make a kinder husband than one whom children and dogs dislike?

F. P. B.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If there is any scientific data on this subject, I have never seen it. But there is a lot of truth in most old saws, and the general belief that children and dogs are intuitive judges of the kindly or harsh natures of people must be founded on the observation of generations who have noticed the reactions of babies and dumb animals to certain types of individuals.

However, I certainly would not advise a woman to marry a man who did not like children because he would be likely to make a hard father and one who always regarded his children as encumbrances and brats.

Everett W. Hie Marries Miss Donna Minor

At George St. United Church on Saturday Miss Donna Florence Jean Minor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Lonsherry Minor, was married to Mr. Everett Warren Hie son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hie. The Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated.

The bride was dressed in a floor length gown a petal pink nylon marquisette with draped bustle hipline, shirred bodice with matching stole, matching tiara of sequins and beads and her shoulder length veil was of pink net. She carried a cascade of pink delight roses.

Mrs. Freddie Lascombe, cousin of the bride was matron of honor, wearing a floor length dress of daffodil yellow net with lace peplum. She wore a matching hat and carried yellow Johannah Hill roses and mauve sweet peas.

Mr. Gregory Tanner was groomsman.

The bride's mother received at a reception at the home of Mr and Mrs. Arthur Mann, wearing a navy sheer dress with navy hat and white accessories and her flowers were red carnations. The groom's mother, who also received, wore a grey flowered silk jersey dress with grey accessories and her flowers were blue carnations.

A buffet luncheon was served from a table decorated with pink and white streamer and a white bell, centre by a three tiered weding cake. There were about 25 guests and those from out of town were Mrs. Freddie Lascombe of Cobourg; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Carruthers of Plainville; Miss Mary Tanner and Mr. George Tanner, Bailleboro and Mr. and Mrs. Marvel Lonsberry of Fenella.

The couple left for a trip to Akron, Ohio, and for travelling, the bride wore navy sheer organza embroidered in white with navy suede shoes, navy hat trimmed with white and white purse and gloves.

On their return they will live in Bailleboro.

6—In Memoriams

LUNDY—In loving memory of our baby, Sharon, who passed away July 26, 1945.
There's an open gate at the end of the road,
Through which each must go alone,
And there is a light we cannot see,
Our Father claims his own.
Beyond the gate our loved one,
Finds happiness and rest,
And there is comfort in the thought,
That a loving God knows best.
—Mommy, Daddy, Marilyn and Nancy.

OAKLEY—In loving memory of Bruce Dennis Oakley, who passed away July 26, 1949.
The memory of his dear wee ways,
Will linger with us all our days.
Sweetest flower, too sweet to stay,
God took him home to show us the way.
—Ever remembered by Mother and Dad.

RALPH—In loving memory of Herbert Ralph, who died two years ago today.
We often sit and think of him when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
—Ever remembered by mother, sons and daughters.

RICHARDSON—In loving memory of James Richardson, who died July 26, 1943.
We who loved you sadly miss you,
As it dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of you are ever near.
—Always remembered by wife and family.

7—Cards of Thanks

I wish to thank all the friends and neighbours and anyone who in any way remembered me by letters, cards and flowers, also the nurses and doctors of St. Joseph's Hospital. —Mrs. William Campbell, Norwood.

I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to the attending doctors and nurses of Civic Hospital, the Rev R. D. Duncanson, Rev. C. G. Boyd and Rev. F. R. Vanderburgh and to the many kind friends who sent letters, cards, flowers and fruits during my stay in hospital.—Mrs. R. Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hayes and family wish to thank the sisters and doctors of St. Joseph's Hospital, Fathers Leahy, Greenan and Hayes and friends for the flowers, gifts, cards and many kindnesses during her recent illness.

Baptists Plan To Hold New Meeting

MONTREAL, July 26 (CP). — A Baptist public meeting will be held Saturday in the northwest Quebec town of La Sarre even if the evangelist team there now still is held in police custody, Baptist officials said here today.

The Rev. J. R. Armstrong, secretary of the Union of Regular Baptist Churches of Ontario and Quebec, said another evangelist team will be on hand if the five ministers arrested on a charge of illegal assembly are not released.

The ministers were arrested Saturday night when they attempted to hold an open-air meeting. They are being held in default of bail in the Amos, Que., jail.

"We are not taking steps to bail out our members before their trial this Saturday," Mr. Armstrong said. "They will probably not be legally represented. We are depending on the public sense of justice."

Disgrace to Quebec

Mr. Armstrong said he has received a reply from Mayor F. X. Martel of La Sarre to his telegram protesting the arrests. He said the reply stated "no question of religion or churches. Men in jail refused to obey laws according to police instruction. That's all."

Dr. Alan S. Reid, secretary of the Montreal Presbyterian Church Presbytery termed the incident a "shame and a disgrace to Quebec."

"The Protestants of the province must see to it that freedom of speech for religious organizations is respected," he said.

Union Members Victims Of Reds

LONDON, July 26 (Reuters)— The British Labor Party today warned Communists in Eastern Europe they would be punished for their "crime against the workers" when their countries were restored to freedom.

The party's national executive declared that during the last few weeks "the Communist offensive against the workers in Eastern Europe has reached a new pitch of fury."

Savage labor legislation and destruction of trade union rights had caused resistance and unrest in the factories.

Vojtech Dundr, trade unionist with 55 years service in the labor movement and former general secretary of the Czechoslovak Social Democratic Party, had been sentenced to 19 years hard labor—"a death sentence for a man aged 71."

Zdenek Peska, another Social Democrat and leader of the Czechoslovak resistance movement, against the Nazis, had been sentenced to 25 years hard labor.

In Hungary over 500 Social Democrats had been secretly imprisoned without trial the executive claimed.

Dudley Puzzled At Quebec Row

TORONTO, July 26 (CP) — George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said today he is puzzled by the demand of the Quebec Senior Hockey League that the CAHA continue with its Major Series plans

Dudley said the recommendation of the CAHA officers was that the association proceed with its proposal for a super league including the QSHL the Ontario Hockey Association and the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association but without player contracts.

"I talked to George Slater, president of the Quebec league, Tuesday and explained it to him," he said.

Plans for the series hit a snag when the professional leagues objected to contract terms. The association, however, now plans to take a poll of CAHA branches on the question of proceeding with the Major Series plans without contracts or draft agreements.

Crawls Out Window Of Blazing, Upset Car

BRAMPTON, July 26 (CP) — Seconds before flames reached the gasoline tank of an overturned automobile, G. H. Heyn, 47, of St. Catharines and Alton, Ont., today crawled through a car door window to safety.

Heyn, an Ontario Hydro inspector, said a front tire on his car blew out, sending the vehicle into a ditch, where it struck a culvert and overturned. He suffered shock and leg burns.

RCAF Flight Arrives At Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, July 26—(CP)—Five of six R.C.A.F. North Stars, Canada's second contribution to the United Nations' battle in Korea, thundered off Stevenson airport early today on the second leg of their hop to the Pacific coast.

The sixth plane, crippled by a damaged fuel pump, was to leave about four hours later.

The planes, carrying 250 men of 426 squadron, will join a group of American planes at McChord Field, Tacoma, Wash. Canadian crews will fly them unarmed over the Pacific between Japan and North America.

Wing Cmdr. Campbell Mussels of Montreal said the 11 air crews will ferry supplies for U. N. forces. Four more North Stars will join the group later.

Earlier Canada sent three west-coast destroyers to serve under the blue-and-white U.N. flag.

Take On Fuel

The flight touched down here at 12.45 a.m. CDT and the five planes were off the deck by 2.45 a.m. They took on 9,600 gallons of fuel while the men had a hot meal.

Sqdn.-Ldr. H. C. Lewis of Melita, Man., captain of the crippled ship, said he plans to meet the flight as they leave Vancouver before heading south to Tacoma.

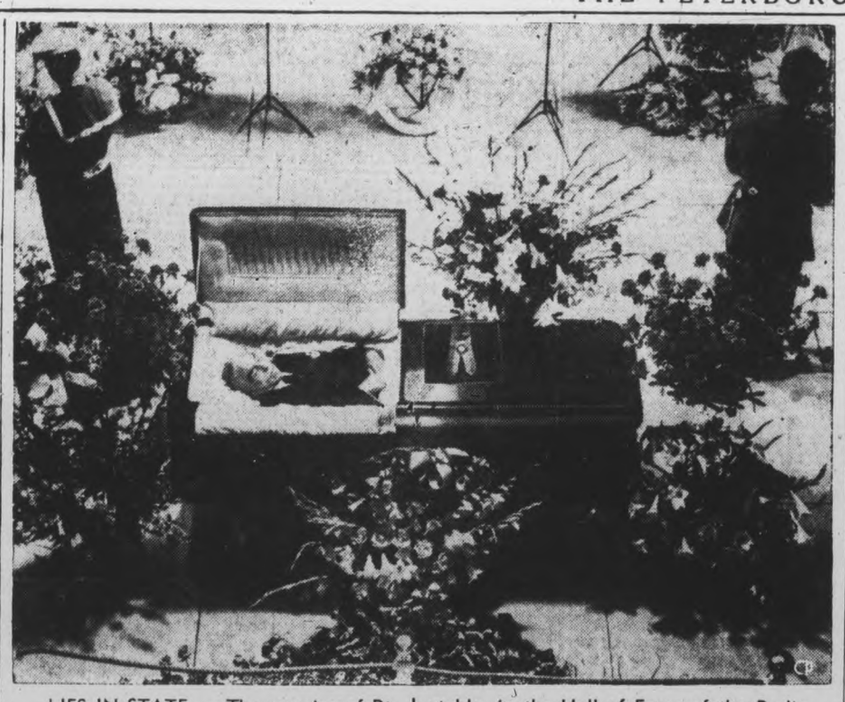
"We'll be in formation with the rest of them — just as we were when we left Montreal—by the time they hit the border."

The North Stars bore the freshly-painted crest of the UN on their tailfins.

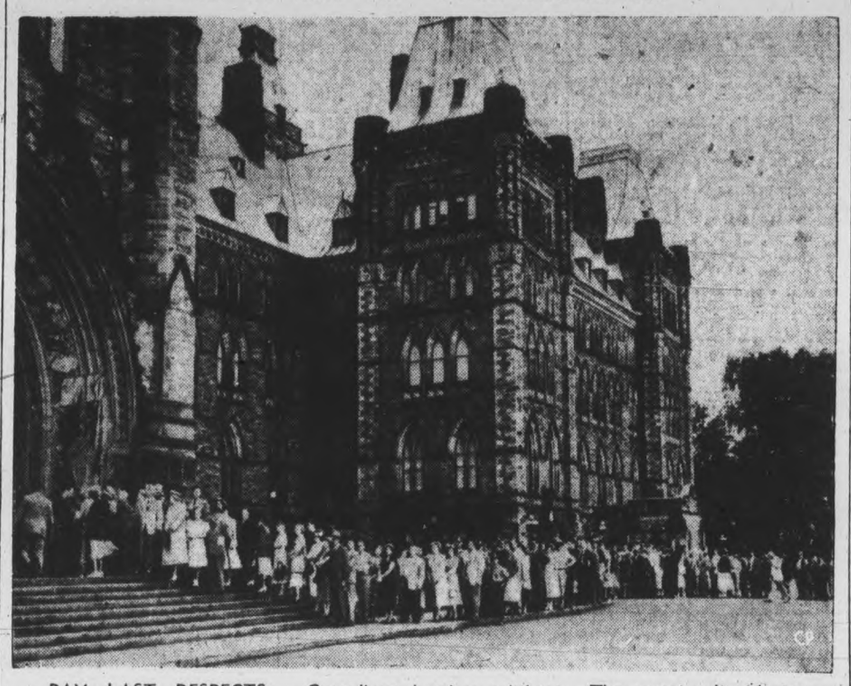
The men, too, wore something new.

Their blue-nylon coveralls are the latest RCAF issue, and they have a light blue-dark blue shoulder insignia recently approved but never worn.

Wing - Cmdr. Mussels said ground crews were taken because U.S. Army Air Force mechanics are not familiar with Canada's North Star.



LIES IN STATE — The remains of Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, former prime minister, lie in state, with floral tributes and a guard of honor comprising a sailor, soldier, airman and RCMP constable, in the Hall of Fame of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa. The doors were opened to the public at 10 a.m. Tuesday morning. In single file, led by Prime Minister St. Laurent more than 2,000 passed the bier in the first hour.



PAY LAST RESPECTS — Canadians from all walks of life, line up before the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa Tuesday morning to pay their last respects to Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, former prime minister. The remains lie in state in the Hall of Fame. Doors were opened to the public at 10 a.m. This photo shows a small portion of the crowd awaiting their turn to view the remains.

Hold Funeral Service For G. A. Wannamaker

The funeral of Gordon Andrew Wannamaker, 27, Chippewa Ave., Lakefield, who died on Monday was held today at the Hendren funeral home, Lakefield. Pall bearers were Gilbert Harrison, Robert McBride, Vernon MacLeod, Eric Hall, Alexander and Harry Wannamaker.

Flower bearers were Bernie and George Wannamaker, Terry and Ronnie Harrison, Earl Edward, Jack Leonard, Arnold Graham and Clare Hill.

Burial was in Ray's cemetery, Lakefield.

Mr. Wannamaker died at his home after a long illness. He was born in the village, son of Harry Milton Wannamaker and the late Elizabeth Ann Hatton and lived there all his life.

Besides his father he leaves four sisters, Mrs. R. W. McBride (Fern) of Belleville, Mrs. G. S. Harrison (Goldie) of Peterborough, Mrs. V. C. MacLeod (Kathleen) and Mrs. E. L. Hall (Patricia), both of Toronto. There are two brothers, Clifton Wannamaker of Dunsford and Roger of Simcoe, Ont. Mr. Wannamaker was a member of St. John's Anglican Church.

GI Left For Dead Escapes Koreans

AN AIRBASE IN KOREA, July 26—(AP)—A tall young tank corporal said today North Koreans forced him and two other bound American prisoners to lie face down under a tree and then machine-gunned them. "I was the only one to escape alive," said the corporal, 21, of the Bronx, N.Y. "A flight of our fighter planes frightened them off before they found out I wasn't dead."

Suggests Mission

WASHINGTON, July 26—(AP)—Senator William Knowland (Rep. Calif.) proposed Tuesday that the United States send a military mission to Formosa to assist in preparing Chinese Nationalist troops for any Communist amphibious assault.

Can't Make Contact

HALIFAX, July 26 (CP) — Radio contact with Ben and Elinore Carlin, who are jeeping their way across the Atlantic, failed again Tuesday night. Nothing has been heard for more than 48 hours from the 10-watt transmitter in the "Half Safe," the amphibious jeep in which the Carlins left last Wednesday to travel around the world.

Norwood Bonds Bought By Bank At 70c Premium

NORWOOD, July 26 (ENS).—The treasurer reported having received certificate of approval of the Municipal Board for the issue of further debentures of $10,000 and the bylaw was given its third reading. An offer from the Royal Bank for the purchase of the debenture issue at a price of $100.70 for the entire amount was accepted.

The local hydro commission asked the council to accept responsibility for, and approve the issue of debentures totalling $18,000 to rehabilitate the hydro distribution system. This was approved by the council.

Council decided $2 a foot would be an adequate price for jacking water pipes under the pavement.

H. W. Roche, secretary of the Norwood and District High School Area Board, reported the estimated cost of the proposed High School building in Norwood was $329,000. He asked that the village accept responsibility for the issue of debentures to finance this project.

Moved by Councillor Atkinson and seconded by Councillor Nixon that Mr. Roche be advised that the village of Norwood will accept the responsibility upon receipt of confirmation from the other interested municipalities as required by the Municipal Board. The motion carried.

The clerk was authorized to arrange for an interview with Honorable George Doucett, Minister of Highways, about widening pavement on Peterborough street.

The clerk and road superintendent were authorized to get tile forms.

Mrs. Robt. Waterman Buried At Fraserville

Rev. E. J. Whan of Park St. Baptist church conducted the funeral services of the late Mrs. Robert Waterman on Tuesday from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons.

Many friends from Fraserville attended the service, reflecting the high esteem in which she was held in that community, where she had lived, previous to coming to Peterborough 21 years ago. Mrs. Waterman was an active member of St. James' United church.

Pallbearers were Donald Waterman, Robert Waterman, Jack Waterman, William Waterman, John Waterman and Hubert Dawson.

Interment was in Fraserville cemetery.

More Sabotage On Rail Lines

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 26 (AP)—The railroad track from Liege to Paris was cut during the night near Charleroi. Trains were considerably delayed.

It was the 27th sabotage action reported since King Leopold's return to Belgium on Saturday.

About 10,000 workers laid down their tools in two large metal plants in the Charleroi area.

Tuesday night in Brussels news reels of Leopold were booed in two theatres.

In Liege, 8,000 workers of the Cockerill Steel Plant left work today and the strike movement slowly spread to all industries in the area.

Reports from Liege said 5,000 miners joined the strike.

Elect Carl Hamilton President Of CCYM

VANCOUVER, July 26—(CP)—Carl Hamilton of Regina last night was elected national president of the Co-operative Commonwealth Youth Movement.

Two Witnesses Can't Agree

MONTREAL, July 26 (CP) — Contradictory evidence of two defence witnesses Tuesday featured the trial of three Quebec provincial policemen charged with plotting bank robberies.

Charged are Lieut. Marcel Patenaude, former head of the police holdup squad; Gaston Archambault, his assistant; and Paul Hervieux, former member of the force.

One witness—Jean Marie Beriault, Montreal lawyer—swore he was driving back from a court session at Sweetsburg, Que., Dec. 13 (date of a robbery of a bank at Rougemont, Que.) and that Archambault was in the car with him.

Beriault testified the heard a report of the robbery over the car radio and that Archambault stopped and telephoned headquarters in Montreal.

Another witness—Constable J Rochon of the provincial police—swore that Archambault was with him in a provincial police car when news of the Rougemont robbery was heard. Rochon said they both went to the holdup scene.

The Rougemont robbery is one of several holdups with which the three are charged. They also are charged with inciting others to commit holdups.

Mine Foreman Killed In Yukon Crash

EDMONTON, July 26 (CP).—A Yukon mine foreman was killed Monday and another man injured in the crash of a light aircraft in northern Yukon, the RCAF here reported Tuesday.

Killed was Bud Holbrook, foreman of the Thistle Creek mine and owner and pilot of the plane. His passenger was not identified.

The craft crashed while on a 70-mile flight from Thistle Creek to Dawson City.

Wreckage of the craft was discovered by Pat Collison, Dawson City bush pilot. Collison landed his pontoon-equipped aircraft three miles from the wreck and hiked to the scene, reaching it early this morning.

He reported by radio the passenger suffered a broken leg and other injuries.

A report from Whitehorse, Y.T., said Collison returned to Dawson where he picked up a doctor and returned to the crash scene.

Holbrook's war-surplus Cornell trainer, bought a few months ago in Vancouver, apparently struck the bank of Thistle Creek as he attempted a crash landing.

MONTREAL'S LARGEST CAT, Impy, owned by two McGill University graduate students, Polly and Frank Breul, weighs all of 16½ pounds has a waist line of 22 inches and measures 34 inches from the top of his tail to the end of his nose. He was a problem from the very beginning as his mother, a pure bred Persian, got mixed up with an alley cat and when she saw Impy she refused to have anything to do with him. She wouldn't even feed him. When the Breuls found him he was a poor waif of a kitten who didn't look as if he'd ever be much of a cat. But he soon made up for lost time. He is shown above with a lesser cat, almost one-third his size.

Would Patch Korean Mess In A Session—Red 'Delegate'

By JACK SCOTT

REGINA, Sask.—I had breakfast this morning with the Security Council of the United Nations. The delegate from Soviet Russia, in deadly earnest, told me that the whole mess in Korea would end tomorrow if he had his way.

"Gosh," he said (and these are his exact words), "if everybody would just sit down and talk about it the way they ought to, it could be all fixed up in one session."

This delegate, unfortunately, is not Comrade Jacob Malik, but Master Jack Renouf, aged 13. He does not present his views to the United Nations at Lake Success, but to the United Nations of a hamlet called Loyalty, in the province of Alberta, some hundred miles north of Calgary.

But let's slow down and get into the story. Which is about the principal of a two-room farm country school house who had a bright idea.

He thought his pupils ought to know a bit about what was going on in this world, as well as Julius Caesar's. So, as part of his social studies course, he set up a make-believe Security Council.

The brightest 11 students in the school were appointed as delegates. Each Thursday, with the whole school in attendance, the principal took the role of Trygve Lie. The 11 students took the roles of the delegates. And they re-enacted the latest sessions of the council.

The principal hoped his idea would have a modest success and is just as surprised as anybody that he and his boys and girls are now en route to be feted at Lake Success, entertained by President Truman and facing a brisk schedule of engagements with radio microphones and movie cameras.

Sudden Fame

The troupe, which travels in its own Pullman, is currently in Regina before moving eastward. This morning I was invited to an informal breakfast in their honor and met the man who started it all, George H. Fellowes, a tall, intense, nail-chewing fellow who looks just a little wild-eyed about recent events.

"Never dreamed of this sort of thing," Fellowes confessed. "Oh, naturally I was pleased with how we were coming along. Started last September when the new term began and it seemed to be progressing well. The parents themselves became interested — had to, I guess. Youngsters began getting a little sharp with them.

"We had hoped that we might send three of our students down to New York to see the real council, but then, just two months ago, we seemed to have become suddenly famous.

It started when a Calgary newspaper sent a man up to do a piece about us. Then the CBC put us on the air briefly and much to our astonishment, the National Broadcasting Company telegraphed us and invited us all to fly to New York at their expense for a broadcast. We couldn't do it, of course. Not during the term.

"Well, my goodness, things certainly started to hum then. The people at UN invited us all down for a visit and arrangements were made in Washington for us to meet the President and—oh, my! —any number of things!

"A fund was got up and something like $4,000 raised, a good deal of it from donations by the farmers, some of it as the result of appearances the children made. A big sign went up outside Loyalty proclaiming us 'Little Lake Success.' Had it copyrighted, by the way. And now here we are and with a 10-gallon hat, of all things, from the city of Calgary to give the President. Size seven-and-an-eighth."

Fellowes took a deep breath.

"Don't take any credit for this at all, you understand," he said. "Just got the right school, the right youngsters and the support of all the people. But I do think it's worthwhile. Where adults are falling down in finding peace and understanding maybe children can succeed."

Happy Russian

Perhaps the most refreshing aspect of this Security Council (Junior Division) are the youngsters themselves. They are nearly all the sons or daughters of farmers. Not a quiz kid in the pack. None had ever been out of Alberta. Only three had travelled on a train before. Fellowes himself confided to me, "They're not very sophisticated. Had to warn them not to talk to strangers."

The four girls looked at ease in light dresses and saddle shoes, but the seven boys were clearly dying in obviously new suits, the sleeves of which all seemed to hang too long.

The youngest in the party is Joyce Renouf, a dark little girl of 11 who is the delegate from France. I asked one of the boys about Joyce and he replied, "Oh, Peanuts is swell. In Calgary she had to defend the status of women and she was terrific."

The kids know the workings of the UN backwards and forwards and have their own opinions about the news from Lake Success. Joyce's brother, Jack, who is Peck's bad boy of the gang, and who impersonates Russia's spokesman, let me know in a firm voice that he's only acting and that, in his own private opinion, he would sure like Mr. Malik to be a little more cooperative.

I wondered if Jack were displeased with his role and he grinned and said, "Gosh, no I've got the best part there is. 'Bout all I do is get up and walk out."

"Besides," he added happily, "if I wasn't in the Council I might never get down to New York to see the Giants play."

36 Miners Say Deal Unfair

VIRGINIATOWN, July 25 — (CP)—Thirty-six miners brought here from Newfoundland six weeks ago to work underground at Kerr Addison Gold Mines Ltd., today threatened to walk off their jobs because of the company's action in deducting excessive amounts from their pay to meet transportation cost advances.

Harold Hann of Belle Island, Nfld., said the miners agreed to leave iron ore pits in Newfoundland for jobs in Ontario on condition that transportation costs were not deducted until after three months.

"And now look what's happening," Hann complained. "In the last pay the mine deducted $40. Some had as much as $64 deducted. This left us only a few dollars to keep ourselves and send home to our families. In my case I had $18 left. Others had as much as $20 and some only received nine dollars."

Hann said the group was prepared to leave the mines and return to Newfoundland.

"We like the people here and we like the work but we don't like the conditions," he added.

He said they receive an hourly wage of 85 cents.

U.S. Plans To Double Security Payroll Tax

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP) —A Congressional committee agreed Tuesday to more than double social security payroll taxes over the next 20 years to pay for a vastly expanded old age and survivors insurance program.

This will increase social security tax collections from the present $2,500,000,000 a year, to about $3,000,000,000 next year, $4,000,000,000 in 1954, and progressively to about $6,500,000,000 a year in 1970.

The bigger collections will result from stepping up the present 1½ per cent payroll tax on employee and employer to 2 per cent each in 1954, to 2½ per cent in 1960, to 3 per cent in 1965 and to 3¼ per cent each in 1970.

If the bill becomes law in August, payments to 3,000,000 persons now receiving benefits will increase by an average of 77½ per cent in October or November.

3 Brigades Contribution For UN Army

Australian Recruiting Gets Good Results Force Ready Soon

SYDNEY, Australia, July 27—(CP)—A British Commonwealth Division, comprising one brigade each from Britain, Australia and New Zealand, is expected to be the outcome of this week's decisions by the three countries to send troops to Korea, Reuters News Agancy said today.

Reuters said it had learned of such a Commonwealth move from authoritative sources in Melbourne.

(The average size of a three-battalion British infantry brigade in the Second World War was about 3,000 men.)

The report of a Commonwealth Korean Division came as Supply Minister O. H. Beale warned that Australia must mobilize her industry for all-out war—even as the country began recruiting a force to fight in Korea.

Need Stockpile

Beale told a Defence Supply and Planning Committee in Melbourne that its job is to build a stockpile of needed materials to bolster the armed forces and to plan the immediate mobilization of key industries in the event of war.

Australia began recruiting a fighting unit for Korean duty this morning. The government also announced that Australia will send another destroyer, the 1,927-ton Warramunga, to Korea.

In the recruiting drive, army and navy minister Josiah Francis said, about 100 men had applied in Sydney during the first few hours. He said most of them want to go into action immediately

Reports from all Australian capitals today told of steady streams of inquiries from men wanting to join the volunteer force. Most came from men under 25.

Acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden said he would not summon parliament to discuss the decision to send troops to Korea

Fixed Up Quickly

A high army officer said he thinks the force required will be recruited within a few days

Saboteurs Burn Singapore's Largest Factory

SINGAPORE, July 27—(CP)—At least one woman worker died today in a fire which razed Singapore's largest rubber factory. Police said the blaze was set by Communists.

Rescue workers dug through the rubble of the huge Aikhoe plant, which employed almost 1,000 persons, in search of more victims believed trapped in the fire.

Nearly $900,000 worth of raw rubber was estimated to have been destroyed. The factory was insured for $2,300,000.

Deputy Police Commissioner R. C. B. Wiltshire said, "We have every reason to believe the fire was set by Communist arsonists."

He said the blaze looked like part of an ambitious Communist plot to destroy Singapore's economy and sabotage Anglo-American stockpiling.

Some workmen's houses were burned.

Second Attempt

The fire was started by the second arson attempt in 24 hours at the factory. Wednesday night a watchman thwarted the first try.

Police said terrorists had made nine efforts to fire Singapore rubber depots in the last five days.

Churchill Warns Britain Can't Match Russ Equipment

LONDON, July 27—(CP)—Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime Prime Minister, said today that Britain has no equipment in use at present which can withstand the Soviet armored avalanches which must be expected if wide-scale war should break out.

The Conservative leader delivered his warning in the House of Commons.

Churchill was defeated by a single vote in an attempt to force a secret session for a debate on defence. His motion was beaten by 296 to 295.

Presence of Foreign Secretary Bevin, who arrived just in time for the voting, made the victory possible. He was in the House for the first time since he underwent an operation May 13.

Churchill had two speeches prepared—the one he began to deliver after the House rejected his motion for a secret session, and another containing confidential information.

Churchill said that because of American atomic superiority, he believes a third world was is not imminent and I cherish the hope that it will be averted."

The Conservativ eleader said planes from present United States bases in England could atom bomb "Russian cities and key points" in a third world war.

Air Bombardment

But he said Russia could sweep to the English Channel and "bring us under air bombardment, apart from the atomic bomb, far worse than we have ever endured."

The Conservative leader said pared Britain's 6,000 - tank strength with the figure of 40,000 Russian tanks which had been estimated by the chairman of the War Services Committee of the United States House of Representatives.

Churchill said that even more important than reserves or general stocks of tanks was the number organized in formation.

"In Korea we have seen how formidable even a few score of tanks might be, and how tough the heavy Russian tanks are."

Gravely, Britain's former war leader added:

"I cannot think this threat of the enormous mass of Soviet armor is any way mastered. Nor, for that matter, is there anything in use and service at the present time which could cope with this array of armored avalanches we must expect on the outbreak of war—should war come."

Referring to French statesman Paul Reynaud's statement that the Western Allies had a total of 12 divisions, Churchill said:

"On this assumption Western Union would have 12 divisions against more than 80."

Of these 12 divisions less than two were armored, against anything from 25 to 30 armored Soviet divisions, he said.

"The Russians know their own strength and it is certain they also know with great precision the Allies' weakness and conditions," Churchill added.

Bandit's Thirst Brings Capture

REGINA, July 27. (CP) — A hungry bandit crept from his hiding place to quench his thirst Wednesday and ended up in the arms of the law. The capture ended Saskatchewan's biggest manhunt and led to recovery of $45,000 stolen from the bank of Toronto at Wolseley, Sask.

RCMP who have scoured the Qu'Appelle Valley southeast of here since the robbery Saturday, said Archie Dlugopolski, 23, surrendered quietly when their famous dog, Pal, tracked him to a wheat field.

He was armed with three loaded revolvers, but didn't try to use them.

Another man, William Lukashuk, 30-year-old resident of Bourlamaque, Que., was captured two hours after the daring opening-hour robbery. He was charged with armed robbery.

Quite An Incentive

AN ADVANCED U.S. COMMAND POST IN KOREA, July 27 (AP) .— A decoration and a bottle of champagne will go to each member of every United States 1st Cavalry bazooka squad that gets a North Korean tank. Maj.-Gen. Hobart R. Gay, who will buy the champagne himself, said: "I hope this quickly costs me $500—and more."

Not Considering Use Of A-Bomb

WASHINGTON, July 27—(AP)—President Truman said today he is not now considering use of the atomic bomb in the Korean war.

Truman made this statement at a press conference. He had been reminded by a reporter that he once said he would not hesitate to use the atom bomb again if it became necessary to assure world peace.

He said he still hopes fervently for world peace.

The President also told the press conference he sees no necessity now for wage, price and manpower controls.

If they come they will come together as part of all-out mobilization, he said.

President Truman also told his press conference:

1. Steps are in the making to deal with any traitors or saboteurs in the present emergency.

2. The state and defence departments are working on proposals for increased military aid to European allies. He said these proposals will be presented to Congress before it adjourns.

FAMOUTH, Mass., July 27 (AP). — Actress Gertrude Lawrence suffered a severe muscle strain Wednesday when the beam of a small wooden bridge snapped plunging her into shallow water near Falmouth Playhouse.

Labor-Industry Committee To Consult On Mobilization

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP) —A United States labor-industry-agriculture committee was reported in the making today, to consult with the government on war mobilization.

The committee would discuss such policy questions as price and wage controls with W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board who directs the drive to get the home front ready for war.

Symington's office would not comment on the report. But elsewhere it was learned that he has begun sounding out the big organizations of labor, industry, and agriculture.

Organized labor has tentatively agreed upon the names of three persons to submit to labor representatives: William Green of the AFL, Philip Murray of the CIO and Al Hayes of the International Association of Machinists.

In addition, Symington has invited the unions to choose someone to serve as a full-time official in the NSRB. There was a possibility he would choose two—an AFL and a CIO man.

Symington was expected to make an announcement about this today.

When Symington starts active consultation with labor leaders on policy matters, one of the first questions sure to arise is that of a "wage freeze." Wednesday Bernard Baruch proposed that Congress "put a ceiling on everything." Some government officials have the impression that workers might accept a wage freeze if prices and profits were frozen at the same time.

Communist Invasion Halted By Nationalists

TAIPEI, Formosa, July 27 (AP) —A Chinese Nationalist government spokesman said today a Chinese Communist effort to land on tiny Taitan Island, about two miles from Red Amoy was foiled by Chinese warships and ground defenders. All was quiet today.

The defence ministry said about 500 Chinese Communists landed but the invaders were either killed or captured.

Red-held Amoy has been considered the takeoff point for an invasion against Quemoy Island, a key point in the Nationalist blockade of the mainland.

U.S. Patrols Plug Two Vital Holes

General MacArthur Pays Second Visit To Korean Front Line

TOKYO, July 28—(Friday) —(AP)—North Korean troops and armor massed by night Thursday for an attempted knockout blow in the centre of United States defence lines.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in a release early today said there was a lull along the whole battlefront but that enemy pressure continued in such a way as to indicate the Communists are regrouping and remassing for a new assault.

MacArthur returned to Tokyo Thursday from a swift inspection tour of the Korean warfront. He expressed confidence of ultimate victory but said he foresees a long and difficult struggle ahead.

Headquarters said "aggressive patrols" in the southwest sector had pushed back a Korean Communist column two miles to the vicinity of Hadong, 70 miles northwest of Pusan.

Two other holes were plugged on the approaches to Pusan—major American supply port. Other patrols moved into the highway town of Hamyang 78 miles northwest of Pusan and made contact with an enemy regiment in Namwon, about 22 miles southwest of Hamyang, headquarters said.

3 Large Columns

From the front an Associated Press correspondent, William R. Moore, reported three large Communist columns are concentrating east of Yongdong in front of the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division.

A spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo said two of the invading forces' three best divisions—the 2nd and 3rd—are massed in that sector.

Swarms of Allied and Mustang fighters flew over the area, spewing rockets into Red lines and pouring fire into the advancing troops.

There was little fresh official news from the southwestern region of Korea where the Communists this week swept south to the coast against little or no opposition.

However, the Pyongyang (North Korean)radio broadcast a claim that the North Koreans Monday captured Yosu, southern port, and Sunchon, in their thrust along the south coast towards Pusan. Sunchon is about 86 miles by air west of Pusan and 21 miles northwest of Yosu.

The North Korean broadcast also asserted a U.S. warship was sunk off Yosu, by coastal batteries.

Fifteen miles northeast of Yongdong at Maromyon, the U.S. 24th Regimental Combat Team, the only Negro combat unit identified in the Korean campaign, beat off a Communist attack late Tuesday.

Report Plane Crashes In Sea

TOKYO, July 27 (Reuters) — A United States general headquarters courier plane carrying 23 passengers between Tokyo and Kyushu, today was reported down in the sea about eight miles south of Oshima Island.

The passengers included four correspondents flying to the Korean battle zone.

(The Associated Press said the plane carried a crew of three).

One survivor has been picked up. Search for the others is continuing.

The plane was a C-47 transport.

Japan's southernmost island of Kyushu is 500 miles southwest of the Japanese capital. Oshima Island is 70 miles north of Tokyo.

The Third Air Rescue Squadron has been put on the alert to search the area.

Aboard the missing plane were Stephen Simmons, of the Manchester Guardian, Max Philenenko, of Agence France-Presse, James Supple, of The Chicago Sun-Times, and James Hicks of The Afro-African, a newspaper syndicate embracing a number of U.S. newspapers.

ARTHUR D. RUNIONS, former agricultural representative in Peterborough county, who died on Wednesday in hospital in Toronto in his 50th year.

Cabinet Decides No Troops Offered Yet

TORONTO, July 27—(CP)—The Federal Cabinet, in an unusual meeting aboard a train, Wednesday night reviewed Canada's position with regard to Korea in the light of offers of ground support to the United Nations by several other Commonwealth countries.

Informed quarters said that the position enunciated after last week's meeting — no ground troops at this stage—still stands. It was indicated that the government will watch developments such as the actual number of troops eventually offered to U.N. and keep abreast of developments in its study of the fluid situation.

The ministers, 15 or 16 of them, seized an opportunity to meet while travelling to Toronto for the funeral of former Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Prime Minister St. Laurent presided.

Informed quarters said the government is interested in U.N. proposals — in behind-the-scenes discussions at Lake Success — that a U.N. international force be recruited. However, Canada feels the Security Council must take the initiative in urging such a force.

Canada's answer to Trygve Lie's call for further aid in Korea was a transport squadron, added to three destroyers.

4 Missing Tourists Make Land Safely

LAVIGNE, Ont., July 27 (CP) —An Ohio man and his three sons thought lost or drowned on stormy Lake Nipissing Wednesday night, returned here this morning unharmed.

A search party spent three hours Wednesday night scouring small islands dotting the lake.

W. D. Connelly. Warren, Ohio, and his three sons, James, 17, William, 12 and David 11, brought their small boat into Lavigne today.

They had spent the night on a small island about 15 miles from here, Connelly said.

Thousands Line Streets For 6 Miles In Toronto In Final Tribute To Mr. King

Buried Beside Parents In Simple Services Before Crowd and Dignitaries, Ontario Capital Gives Fitting Farewell

TORONTO, July 27—(CP)—The body of William Lyon Mackenzie King was lowered into the earth of his native Ontario at 11 a.m., EDT, today while tears stood in the eyes of the great and of the little people. He was buried where he wanted to be buried, beside his father and mother in Mount Pleasant cemetery. Overhead a fine young maple tree shed its shade. On the six-mile route through which his remains had come, tens of thousands of people broke the lines that had stood three and four deep for block on block, and went their separate ways.

Around the grave, as eight Mounties moved the mahogany casket into a concrete vault that bore his name, the Cabinet stood, their heads bowed. Prime Minister St. Laurent stood at their head.

The committal service was brief and simple and touching. The sun beat down through the trees, on the black-garbed ministers and other dignitaries, on the hundreds of people who stood back at a distance and watched, on the 12-foot grey granite cross that bore the name of Mr. King's parents and other relatives.

Three Ministers

Three Presbyterian ministers stood in their long black robes. Mr. King's sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay of Barrie, an elderly woman in black, stood facing them, supported by two nephews.

Mr. King's own minister, the Rev. A. I. Burnett of St. Andrew's church in Ottawa, conducted the service.

With Mr. Burnett was the Rt. Rev. F. Scott MacKenzie, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, who spoke a long but simple prayer for fellowship, for guidance and for faith, and when he came to the Lord's Prayer the words ran down the line of the Cabinet ministers and of the others who stood around them.

When the crowds had gone, the body lay alone. The bronze-gilt top of the casket was covered by a great cross of flowers.

Toronto, the home of his university days, had turned his funeral into a great national tribute. Its people stood silently along the streets for block after block un-

An Unpopular Gift

CHICAGO, July 27—(AP) —Mrs. David B. Rosenbaum Wednesday decided to get rid of two footlockers left in her attic by a relative after the Second World War. She turned them over to the Salvation Army headquarters unopened. There was plenty of excitement at Salvation Army headquarters when the lockers were found to contain a land mine, two hand grenades and several detonating caps.

U.S. West Coast Guarded For 5th Column

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27. — (AP)—Security measures designed to guard Pacific coast ports against "Trojan horse" ships which might be carrying atomic bombs were in effect Wednesday.

The newly ordered government loyalty check to prevent Communists from shipping on American merchant vessels was expected to be instituted immediately.

Federal officials confirmed that customs inspectors will board and examine all foreign ships as they enter the three-mile limit. The ships will be searched by inspectors carrying Geiger counters. Any indications of atomic or bacteriological warfare cargoes or of improper ship registration will result in holding the ship offshore for full investigation.

Will Co-operate

Coast Guard ships will co-operate with the Customs Service in conducting the examinations. The Coast Guard also will administer a screening program for ship crews. A Coast Guard spokesman said it was expected that its investigation would begin with its shipping commissioners who customarily check on all seamen reporting for duty aboard American merchant ships.

The spokesman added that the commissioners will be empowered to make immediate decisions regarding a man's loyalty. Such a decision, he explained, would be governed to a great extent by information from FBI and navy files.

Seamen rejected by the commissioners would have the right of appeal, but such appeals would not delay ship sailings, the spokesman said.

Russian Sues Communist Daily

LONDON, July 27 (AP)—The Communist Daily Worker ate crow today for implying that a Russian atom spy who deserted to the west was an imposter trying to make propaganda against the Soviet Union.

The Daily Worker apologized in court in settlement of the Russian's libel suit. It said its imputations were "without a vestige of foundation."

The Russian is Grigoir Alexandrovich Tokaev, formerly a lieutenant-colonel in the Soviet air force. Tokaev sought asylum here more than two years ago.

Tokaev wrote several newspaper articles against the Soviets. The Worker suggested that he was faking with the aim of misleading the British people.

Hatless Farmer In Field Pays Homage To Mr. King

ABOARD MACKENZIE KING FUNERAL TRAIN, July 27 (CP) —A farmer came through his fields and stood near the tracks. When the train went by he took off his straw hat and stood there in his blue overalls, alone in the field, his head bowed a little bit.

A few miles along there was a big red-brick house with some people outside and a car or two. If the Mackenzie King funeral train hadn't been going through, they wouldn't have been there.

The train didn't stop from Ottawa to Toronto but the people must have known when it was due and came to see it. There wasn't much to see—just a train with 15 cars—but they came because of what it was and what it stood for.

In Smiths Falls, the station was thick with people in the early evening. They watched the train go by which was all they could do to say goodbye to Mr. King.

Every once in a while there would be a car or two and a few people standing there, watching the train go by.

In the train, 15 or 16 cabinet ministers met and talked—maybe of Mr. King, or maybe of Korea.

Other coaches carried the near relatives and government officials and reporters, all talking quietly.

In Toronto, Mr. King would receive the teeming tribute that great cities can pay. In Ottawa it was that way—thousands in the streets and filing past his bier in silent mourning. It would have touched Mr. King tremendously.

But as much as anything he would have been touched by a little scene in a quiet field—a farmer and his young son standing in the summer night, the man's hand on the boy's shoulder, watching the train go by, knowing what it was

US Tourists Spending More Money In London

LONDON, Ont., July 27 (CP) —More tourists are spending more money in London, a survey of downtown stores revealed today.

One merchant reported his sales volume up 33-35 per cent in U.S. funds, and others claim dollar increases ranging from 10 to 30 per cent.

At London's clearing house, it was reported that United States funds moved in June were almost double the total of June, 1949.

Thousands Quit Hong Kong, Fear New War

HONG KONG, July 27 (AP)—British authorities are building a wire fence against the infiltration of illegal Chinese immigrants by night. But they find those returning to Red China outnumber the incoming Chinese.

The exodus is attributed to war scares resulting from the Korean fighting and the high cost of living in this badly-overcrowded colony.

An unofficial estimate said departures exceed arrivals by as many as 2,000 persons a day. Some businessmen have left and others plan to go if the world situations worsens.

While the poorer classes are heading back to Communist China, some Chinese business men have gone to Nationalist Formosa and Europeans have gone to Australia, Britain and other places.

British officials seem not displeased over the departure of thousands of Chinese. For one thing, the water supply was made for a population of 1,000 000. Now the water is cut off for seven hours at night and may be further restricted.

Acute Housing Problem

When the Reds overran the China mainland a year ago, Chinese poured into Kong Kong. The population rose from a pre-war 750,000 to nearly 2,500,000. The British government let refugees in freely. Now the housing shortage is so acute that the colony admits only regular traders Chinese normally living in Hong Kong and those having relatives who can put them up.

There are no signs of hostility along Hong Kong's 18-mile border with Red China—the Commonwealth's only frontier with Communism.

There are no British soldiers on the border. They are back in camps in Hong Kong's mountains, and the frontier area is off limits.

The British side is controlled by a few hundred men of the Hong Kong police force.

Police said everything is quiet, but they no longer chat with Chinese police as they did before the Nationalists retired to Formosa.

Children's Aid Seeking Boost

KINGSTON, July 27 (CP). — The Children's Aid Society here is seeking an increase in its board rates for wards from Kingston and outside municipalities.

Magistrate James B. Garvin will rule Aug. 4 on whether the Society can charge 10 cents a day more for each ward from Toronto, Kingston, Leeds, and Grenville, Lennox and Addington, Trenton, Hastings County, St. Thomas and Brantford.

The same day he will consider an application for a similar increase covering wards from Prince Edward County, Renfrew, Lanark County, Welland, and Frontenac county.

The children concerned originally lived in the various municipalities, which are required to pay for their care here.

U.S. Patrol

North of Yongdong

The combat team, attached to the U.S. 25th Division, is in the defence line that swings northeastward of Yongdong.

To the east in the 200-mile battlefront are South Koreans attacked the Reds. At Hamchang they drove forward seven miles aided by American planes. On the east coast they advanced on Yongdok with land artillery and Allied naval guns supporting them.

Between the planes and South Koreans using bazookas, six enemy tanks were knocked out in the hot action, which may be the prelude to what appears to be the biggest battle of the Korean war.

A curtain of U.S. artillery fire met the attacking Reds, who aimed their attack at vital supply lines on the road to Pusan, U.S. supply port on the southeast coast 90 miles from Yongdong.

Gen. MacArthur was near the front as the battle went into its first stages.

Ultimate Victory

"That we will have new heartaches and new setbacks is inherent in the situation," he said. "But I was never more confident of victory—ultimate victory—in my life than I am now."

Three North Korean columns, backed by a Red manpower reservoir of two divisions, pushed toward the new defence positions taken by the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division near Yongdong. That city is a key point on the highway and rail lines, running to the front from the main Allied supply port of Pusan, 95 air miles southeast.

Murderous Fire

American artillery hurled murderous fire at the advancing Reds. U.S. jets and Australian fighters raked the columns with rockets and machine-guns.

With the battle setting the central front aflame again, MacArthur made his second flying visit of the war to Korea. As on the first-time—June 29—he was accompanied by key staff officers.

He conferred with Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the U.S. Eighth Army, and other top men directing the action in Korea.

Pushes Stalled

Except for the fresh Red eruption on the central front, North Korean pushes were stalled or blunted along the 200-mile front. This arc protects the United Nations beachhead that has been whittled down to a perimeter of 70 to 95 miles outward from Pusan on the peninsula's southeastern tip.

Recapture Hadong

American and South Korean troops, aided by close-support of fighter planes, were reported to have recaptured Hadong, 70 miles west of Pusan. Hadong was the deepest eastward penetration of the Red scythe sweep down the Yellow Sea coast and across southwestern Korea.

At the other acute Red pressure point—near Hamchang 35 miles north an deast of Yongdong—South Korean forces were reported shoving the Communists back north of the town. They also got close air support.

The Yongdong, Hadong and Hamchang actions were first reported in field dispatches. MacArthur's headquarters summary early Thursday afternoon apparently was behind the front reports.

Clear weather gave Allied air power another day of free-for-all hunting—mostly along the front. U.S. and Australian fighters and American light bombers shot up tanks, trucks and troop concentrations. They were joined by British and American carrier-based planes which ranged the central front for the first time. U.S. Superfortresses struck at North Korean supply lines and communications behind the front.

FEAF headquarters said the heavy bombers concentrated on pontoon bridges built by the Reds to replace knocked-out spans and blasted rail yards at Chuchon, 46 miles northeast of Seoul, and at Sairwon, 36 miles south of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

Thousands

til there were few blocks that weren't packed and none that didn't have its few silent faces.

Same For Miles

It was this way for the whole six miles. A city that for years was the heart and home of his political enemies could have done little more to surpass its homage and its eulogy.

The procession of long black cars that drove slowly through the streets passed spots Mr. King had known well, past Osgoode Hall, where his lawyer father lectured, past Toronto University where Mr. King studied, through streets he had known down through the years.

There were dozens of cars in the procession. They bore Cabinet Ministers, Provincial Premiers, foreign diplomats, services leaders, government officials.

No Military Pomp

But there was none of the military pomp that thousands saw Wednesday in Ottawa.

The great bustling heart of Toronto was unusually silent as the casket was borne out of Union Station.

Men, women and children were lined 10 deep across from the Union Station when the solemn funeral procession started. Crowds lined the whole route.

The 15-car train in which the former Prime Minister's body was brought from Ottawa arrived at the station some hours before the cortege started its five-mile journey to the cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers, led by Prime Minister St. Laurent, formed at the station trackside as the casket was taken from the train by scarlet-coated Mounties.

Many Dignitaries

Behind Mr. St. Laurent, members of the Federal Cabinet, Lieutenant-Governor Ray Lawson of Ontario, and members of Mr. King's family, were Premier Frost of Ontario, Mayor Hiram McCallum of Toronto, Ontario Hydro Chairman Robert Saunders and Toronto city councillors. Then came members of the clergy, the judiciary and the Ottawa diplomatic corps.

Outside the station were six kilted pipers. As the cortege appeared they started the sad strains of a highland lament. They played as the casket was placed in a plain hearse and as honorary pallbearers entered the automobiles.

The procession moved slowly west a block to University Avenue, where it turned north toward the cemetery.

Mourners started lining University Avenue an hour before the procession was due to pass. At first they lined the shady side because the sun was hot. Many were elderly; a few came in wheel chairs. Later, the sunny west side also filled with people.

His Last Trip

Mackenzie King left Ottawa Wednesday for the last time. He left amid the pomp of a state funeral, to muffled, black-draped drums. Fifty thousand persons crowded the processional streets to pay tribute to the man who was their prime minister for more than 21 years.

In St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the regular pew of the 75-year-old bachelor statesman was empty. The Rev. A. Ian Burnett, minister of St. Andrew's and Mr. King's close friend, described him as "the greatest Canadian of our time," a man "wedded to a few great basic principles of righteousness and truth."

"Mr. King lived greatly because he knew that life here is only a preparation for life hereafter," Mr. Burnett said.

In his eulogy at the state funeral Mr. Burnett asked Canadians to "let the final lasting tribute of all Canada to this, her great son, be to follow faithfully the Christian way of life which was his strength and inspiration to the last."

Man of Character

"Our former Prime Minister was a man of mature character, a man wedded to a few great basic principles of righteousness and truth," said Mr. Burnett

He hated war, yet proved to be "the best of leaders" in wartime.

"He believed in liberty and hated dictatorship of any kind. Yet he was never wary of seeking the path of the conciliator. All his life he opposed the unscrupulous use of wealth or power and felt deeply the plight of the poor. . .

"Of course he made mistakes, for he was human and would be the first to acknowledge his own frailty. By and large, nowever, he stood for justice and righteousness; for truth and purity; for fair play and tolerance; for mercy and loving-kindness.

"A great man, greater because he was good, was God's gift to Canada in the friend and leader whom we mourn. He has given us a pattern which we with all future Canadians must indeed follow if this country is to know that righteousness which alone can exalt it."

Grow In Stature

The minister predicted that "as the years pass, the figure of Mackenzie King will grow in stature and increase in greatness, until he enters into his true and rightful place in the affection and the gratitude of the Canadian people."

Then, after the congregation of relatives, close friends and Federal and Provincial dignitaries sang one of Mr. King's favorite hymns—"My Own Dear Land"—the funeral procession reformed outside.

32,000 File Past

For two days since his death Saturday at his summer home at Kingsmere in the Gatineau Hills, the body of the man five times elected Prime Minister lay in state in a flower-decked bier in the Hall of Fame on Parliament Hill. More than 32,000 persons filed past.

Wednesday at 2 p.m. the big brass doors of parliament were closed. In the hall the flowers were shifted, the four-man guard of honor left, an attendant polished the mahogany casket and it was moved to the centre of the hall. Sunlight streamed in the Gothic windows.

Then it was wheeled to the doors and shouldered by eight Mounties. The Carillon in the Peace Tower played a hymn as the casket was put in a hearse.

Great Crowd

The streets were lined four and five deep. People were massed at every window and at rooftop vantage points to watch the funeral procession.

The Governor-General, Lady Alexander and a few hundred others invited to the funeral were already in the church. When the funeral service ended they went out a side door and went to the station.

Thousands waited as long as an hour and a half along the route to the station where the special train of 15 cars—one a black-draped coffin coach—was ready. One car was reserved for Mr. King's relatives and another for the Prime Minister, members of the Cabinet and other officials. The same special train was to bring them back to Ottawa today after the Toronto burial service.

Secret Parley Held On Defence

LONDON, July 27—(AP) — Atlantic Pact committees, apparently charged with writing out details of western defence plans, met with unusual secrecy this morning.

Spokesman at the United States Embassy, and in the offices of American delegates to the Atlantic Council Deputies' sessions, acknowledged that committee meetings were being held but said "the subjects of the meetings are not being disclosed."

The full Council of Deputies was meeting again this after afternoon. The job of the deputies is to speed plans for joint defence by the United States, Canada, and 10 Europea countries.

Francis said the Australian force will comprise a division, but added that this will depend on Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, who arrives today in the United States to confer with President Truman.

Since New Zealand already has announced she will provide an artillery unit, Francis said, Australia's contribution probably will consist mainly of infantrymen.

Britain also will send a group of her regular army, including armor. Qualified London sources have indicated the British force will be of battalion or brigade strength—from 1,000 to 4,000 men

Dispute Settlement Left Till September

TORONTO, July 27 (CP) — Settlement of a union dispute at Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines Ltd., Timmins, has been postponed because vacations prevent complete polling of the 1 800 workers, P. M. Draper, chairman of the Ontario Labor Relations Board, said today.

The vote was scheduled for Aug. 9 to settle a dispute between the United Steelworkers Union and the International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union. Both claim to be legal bargaining agent for the Hollinger employees. The vote now will be taken some time after Sept. 1.

CONDEMN INVASION

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27 — (AP)—Local 6 of Harry Bridges' International Longshore and Warehousemen's Union Wednesday night cast a heavy majority vote for a right-wing resolution "unreservedly condemning" the Communist invasion of South Korea. Moments earlier, the local voted almost three-to-one to turn down a similar resolution introduced by left-wingers. Both resolutions pledged full support to U.S. armed forces in Korea.

Wilbert C. Jewison Dies In Hospital

For many years a pioneer employee of the Bell Telephone Company in Toronto, Wilbert C. Jewison, 78, of Bailieboro, died in a Peterborough hospital on Wednesday. He was born in Bailieboro and though he spent most of his working days in Toronto, the last 12 years have been spent in retirement in his native village.

Mr. Jewison leaves his wife, the former Pearl C. Nurse, and two sisters, the Misses Bertha and Clara Jewison, and a brother, Percy, all of Toronto.

Funeral service will be held from his residence at Bailieboro on Friday, at 2.30 p.m. The Rev. Bernard Heywood, of Bailieboro United Church, will officiate and burial will be at Bailieboro Union cemetery.

Industrials, Metals Climb Strongly Today

TORONTO, July 27 — (CP) — Industrial and Base Metal stocks climbed strongly on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Refining Oils led a wide list of leading Industrials strongly ahead following two days of narrow and easier price movements. Base Metals continued in moderate demand after a strong gain yesterday.

Papers, Utilities and Steels were strong and advances were increasing as the session continued. Foods slipped slightly. Textiles brightened from recent easiness following announcement of price increase by Dominion Textile.

Buying interest stretched into a second successive day in Base Metals. Leaders climbed well ahead yesterday and continued rising but at a slower pace.

A handful of Junior Gold Producers were in demand in early dealings but mild selling in midsession reduced the gains.

British Review Raps Mr. King

LONDON, July 27 (CP)—The New Statesman and Nation says today the achievements of Mackenzie King were important "but do not qualify him for inclusion among the great names in the history of Liberalism."

The left-wing weekly review criticizes the former Canadian Prime Minister, who was buried in Toronto today, for what it calls "shocking indifference" to violations of basic civil liberties during the Canadian spy inquiry of 1945-46 and during the wartime evacuation of Japanese-Canadians from British Columbia.

The New Statesman says Mackenzie King did little to facilitate labor organization and left the Liberal party of Canada almost indistinguishable from its Conservative opponents in performance and political philosophy.

It says his most impressive achievements were in achieving a working partnership during the war between French and English-speaking Canadians, and in the field of Commonwealth relations.

The publication is edited by Kingsley Martin. Assistant editor is Richard Crossman, Labor member of parliament who formerly headed the party's "Rebel" group of back-benchers.

Bread Up A Cent

MONTREAL, July 27—(CP)—A one-cent increase in the price of the 24-ounce loaf of bread was announced yesterday by one chain-store organization.

The old price was 12 cents a loaf. Other retail grocers sell bread for 15 cents.

AFTER ONE MONTH OF WAR—Hard-driving North Korean trops over-ran two-thirds of the territory of South Korea in the first month of war. The Newsmap above shows high points of the action which began with a Communist strike across the 38th parallel on June 25. As the war enters its second month, the major question is whether hard-pressed American and South Korean forces can hold a defensive position around the vital Pusan supply port long enough for reinforcements to arrive and give enough power to launch a counterattack.

Believe Food May Help Cancer Cures

LONDON, July 27 — (AP) — The right kind of food may boost the chance of curing human cancers with X-rays.

Just what kind of food might do this isn't known yet, but possibly it could be lots of such proteins as meat, eggs and milk.

Clues that food could be important were reported today to the sixth International Congress of Radiology by Dr. L. A. Lamerton and Dr. L. A. Elson of the Royal Cancer Hospital and Chester Beatty Institute of London.

X-rays, radium and surgery are the three proven things that often cure cancer when the disease is caught early.

X-rays work by killing the cancer cells or preventing them from dividing into two new cancer cells.

Lamerton and Elson are studying ways of making X-rays more effective.

They implanted one kind of fast-growing cancer into rats. It usually kills rats in 17 to 20 days. Six days after the implant the rats were given X-ray treatments.

Some were given foods rich in proteins, others food poor in proteins. More than half the rats eating the rich protein food were cured of cancer, the scientists said.

Only a few of those eating the poor-protein food were cured.

Appoints 16 Men

TAIPEI, Formosa, July 27 — (AP)—Chiang Kai-shek Wednesday appointed 16 men to the newly-created Kuomintang Central Reform Committee. He told a Kuomintang (Nationalist government party) meeting he would name nine other members soon. The committee replaces the central executive and central supervisory committees which Chiang dissolved earlier this week in a move aimed at eliminating factionalism within the Kuomintang.

Record Production

WASHINGTON, July 27 — (AP)—The United States Steel industry hit a record production pace in May—almost a month before the Korean crisis—the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today. Paced by a rising demand for durable goods, the industry produced 8,500,000 tons of raw steel, the Labor Department Agency said. Employment in steel works and rolling mills reached 606,500, highest in 12 months.

Spare Crows Farmer Urges

TAGEOLA PRAIRIE, Man. — (CP).—Spare that crow, says farmer Dick Sanderson.

The black-feathered bird with the noisy beak is the arch-enemy of field mice and gophers he told the District Chamber of Commerce.

The more crows conservation experts shoot, the more field pests multiply. Mr. Sanderson contended it's becoming impossible to grow a crop in some areas because of them.

Conservation men have sought to exterminate the crow because it feeds on birds' eggs and fledglings.

The Chamber referred farmer Sanderson's complaint to its agricultural committee for further information and action.

Russian Scientists Try Peace Propaganda

MOSCOW, July 27 —(AP)—A group of Russian scientists today asked United States biologists if they would permit their work to become a "weapon in the hands of the war-mongers."

The Russians addressed an open letter to four American microbiologists asking them to define their position on the use of their life's work for warlike purposes. The letter quoted Defence Secretary Louis Johnson of the United States as saying the U.S. is continuing work on bacteriological warfare.

The scientists also quoted Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of Canada's defence research board, as saying that work on bacteriological weapons is going on in seven Canadian laboratories.

Terrier Killed Because Of Sex

ISLE OF SARK, July 27—(AP)—Jip, a 9-year-old Irish terrier, has been shot to death by court order, because Jip was a bitch.

It took Jip's life to fulfill the letter of a centuries-old law which said that only the Seigneur of Sark, husband of the island's feudal ruler, the Dame of Sark, may keep a female dog on the island.

Jip had been there two years, having come with Ernest Rand and his wife when they moved here from London to set up a bicycle shop.

Rand paid his dog tax, without saying anything about the dog's sex, but last week authorities learned the truth and laid down the law: Get rid of the dog or kill her.

Rand complied with the law last night and buried Jip among the rose bushes in his garden.

Said the Seigneur of Sark, W. R. Hathaway, when asked if Jip had been killed: "I haven't the faintest idea. It hasn't anything to do with me."

A Changed Attitude Toward Unmarried Mothers

The latest report of the Children's Aid Society of the City and County of Peterborough has come to hand, and it is, as always, an encouraging account of good and humane work capably performed. We must never forget how much our daily life owes to such societies as this one. In our city's centennial year it is fitting that we should reflect on the changes which such bodies have brought about in the social structure during the past century.

* * *

One paragraph in the Superintendent's Report particularly catches our eye and holds our attention. It is headed "Unmarried Parent Work", and it informs us that it is usual nowadays for girls who find that they are going to have babies out of wedlock to seek the advice of the Children's Aid several months before they are confined. This makes it possible for them to receive pre-natal care, and to make plans for themselves and for their children; sometimes it can be arranged for the father to contribute to the support of mother and child; sometimes the separation of mother and child appears to be the wisest course. A significant comment reads: "Increasingly it is apparent that these young people usually come from home situations where there is lack of harmony and lack of understanding".

* * *

A girl who is going to have an illegitimate child has made a mistake, and under the best of circumstances the penalty will be a heavy one. We recognize nowadays that nothing is gained by making that penalty heavier than it need be. Nor is there any reason why a child conceived out of wedlock should lack the pre-natal care which ensures a good and healthy birth; the parents are the transgressors, not the child. The Children's Aid does what can be done to see that the folly of the parents is not visited upon the children, and that the mother is given a chance to make another start in life.

* * *

Such an attitude would have seemed strange fifty years ago; a hundred years ago it would have seemed to many people dangerous, for it was the custom of the time to visit every transgression as hardly as possible upon the transgressor. But in a century we have let light into many dark places, and the attitude of society as a whole toward unmarried mothers is one of them.

The Death Of Alex Skelton

Last week Alex Skelton was drowned in a boating accident at Lagos in Nigeria. He was the assistant deputy minister in the Department of Trade and Commerce and, at the age of 44, one of the most brilliant of the younger men in the Canadian public service.

Alex Skelton was the son of Dr. O. D. Skelton who, after a career as professor of history at Queen's University, went to Ottawa to be Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs. To this work he brought not only his fine scholarly training, but a mind of unusual capacity and insight; it was with Dr. Skelton as his right-hand man that Mackenzie King conceived and executed some of his finest strokes as this country's foreign minister. Dr. Skelton was also the literary executor and biographer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It appeared that Alex Skelton would follow his celebrated father to the top of the public service. The sudden end of his life is a real blow to his country.

He will not be forgotten, for the report of the Rowell-Sirois commission was largely of his writing, and he was secretary to that body from 1937 to 1940. The analysis of this country's government in that report is exhaustive and clear; if Mr. Skelton had not died he would have been secretary to the next Dominion-provincial conference, and in that capacity he would have been of the greatest value.

He was in Nigeria on loan from the Canadian government. Nigeria is trying to improve many aspects of its national economy and government, and Alex Skelton was there in an advisory capacity. He was a man that Canada can ill spare.

Hilaire Belloc Is Eighty

Yesterday Bernard Shaw was ninety-four, but Mr. Shaw's great age, and his dislike of references to it, are both old stories. It comes as a greater surprise to learn that today Hilaire Belloc is eighty. As his mother lived to be ninety-six it seems probable that he has some time yet to go, but we had not thought that he was so old as he is.

For fifty years Belloc has been one of the most interesting dissenters from the modern concept of progress. He dislikes modern politics, and in The Servile State which he wrote in 1912 he made a remarkably accurate forecast of what the advance of Socialism would bring. He dislikes the narrow modern concept of education, and exemplifies in himself a wider and richer sort of learning. He dislikes modern materialism, and as a Catholic he has written against it with eloquence and fervour.

It is as a Catholic, perhaps, that Belloc is best known. He has given the world some interesting comments upon history, written from the Catholic point of view. When his friend and frequent collaborator, G. K. Chesterton was alive, they worked together as lay apologists, to the considerable benefit of their Church. But since the end of the war Belloc has been silent, and what he thinks of the present socialist condition of his beloved England, though undoubtedly interesting, will probably remain a mystery.

In one of his best-known poems Belloc wrote:

If I ever become a rich man,
Or if I ever grow to be old,
I will build a house with a deep thatch
To shelter me from the cold,
And there shall the Sussex songs be sung
And the story of Sussex told.

It is good to think of Belloc, at eighty, telling the Sussex story to his host of friends.

Grammar And Superfluous Hair

Among the many strange things which we read every day is a series of articles which appears in a contemporary called "Secrets of Charm". We like to know secrets, and when material which is labelled "secret" is published in a newspaper, we read it at once. Last week one of the secrets of charm was this: to be attractive, a girl must speak well and grammatically. The article ends: "Tomorrow—what to do about superfluous hair."

Now this is excellent news. If the modern girl considers her grammar to be as important as the destruction of her superfluous hair, we are beginning to emerge from the barbarism which has engulfed us for the past twenty-five years. During that time, schools appear to have ceased formal instruction in grammar; certain heretics, chiefly in the U.S.A., have asserted that whatever anybody wishes to say is grammatical enough if the speaker can make his meaning plain. Although we do not deny that grammar evolves, we utterly condemn and execrate this anarchical attitude toward it. Grammar is an aid to clarity, and clarity, at its best, is elegance. And elegance, if we do not completely misunderstand "Secrets of Charm", is what girls aim to develop in themselves.

The "secret" article on grammar suggests that, while girls do not want to be stuffy and pedantic, they should take pains to speak well, pronounce well, and to express themselves with some grace. We are entirely in favour of this notion. A girl's charm is not all physical, by any means. Indeed, if we were asked to set up a standard by which young men might judge young women (and vice versa) we would lay down a scheme of marking something like this:

For physical beauty:	20 marks
For acquired beauty (grooming manners, education)	40 marks
For qualities of character and spirit	40 marks

A girl who can score a mark above seventy in such a test is well above the average in the qualities which make women desirable as companions and wives.

And grammar—for we have not forgotten grammar—is worth at least five marks in the second category of "Acquired beauty". Good speech, no less than the flashing limb and the snowy armpit, is a potent charm.

NOTE AND COMMENT

An Indiana inventor can blow bubbles which last for 200 days. That's what the world really needs right now—a durable bubble!

Scientists are wrangling as to whether the Piltdown skull is 500,000 or merely 50,000 years old. If such a wide divergence of opinion is possible that must be the skull of a woman.

A woman in Salt Lake City was struck on the head by a large icicle last winter, and has just collected $1,750 in damages. Nor is this the first time a woman has collected damages after an adventure with a big drip.

A Reporter's Farewell

By
I. NORMAN SMITH
(Condensed from the Ottawa Journal)

SOMEHOW the news was personal. Not that I knew him well or was close to him. As a reporter I had seen him off and on for 25 years, in and out of public. This meant, anyway, he knew me to see me and called me "Smith". But he knew dozens of reporters as well and some much better. And there must have been thousands of people he knew to call by name.

So behind his back, as it were, I claim no special friendship. Yet the news that came Saturday after lunch that he was gravely ill, news jumping by radio from his Gatineau lake to another where I was on holiday, made it a quiet and pensive week-end.

◇ ◇ ◇

SNATCHES of him kept breaking into the cottage context: his always immaculate white shirt-cuffs; his short stub of a pencil unexcitedly making notes as Bennett or Bracken—or Ralston on that memorable day—attacked him in Commons—his vigorous walking around and around the long promenade deck of the Queen Mary, he sporting a grey tweed cap and zestful smile.

As a boy you'd warm to Mr. King because he said he knew your father well. That made a boy proud. Then, later, he seemed to know you a bit on your own; he'd mention in kindly terms something you had written. That also made you proud.

Cynics might say this was idle flattery to win friends and newspaper support. That he said that to all the boys!

Maybe he did. Maybe a lot of boys and their fathers liked it, too! Yet even so, Mr. King had a flair for it, so much so that you felt he liked making friends, liked meeting new ones and old ones, liked people, in fact.

Mr. King talked to me of that one time, up in his Laurier House top floor study with its walls of books and its deep chesterfield chair in which guests faced his desk. "Why do people think I am lonely?" he asked. "I have thousands of friends! I wish I could show you all the letters in those files; I wish I could tell you of the people who call on me here in Ottawa and of those who visit my hotel or railway car when I am out of town. Indeed, Smith, it is the other way around. I am, you might say, overly blessed with friends. I have so many I can do few of them justice. When you have to spread yourself so far you cannot make the most of any. And on top of that I have my work to do and I've already told you of the time that takes out of every day. No, Smith; I have had a life full of friends."

◇ ◇ ◇

I MENTIONED earlier that some cynics might consider his kindness to reporters just a politician's smartness. Of that I can speak more certainly. The Journal is not commonly regarded as a Liberal paper. It has lashed at Mr. King with relish all his life. And at one time and another I have myself in signed articles, tho gh these would not have harmed his sleep. The point is, though, that Mr. King did not ever criticize or scold or ridicule me (nor, I believe, any other Journal reporter) for what had been printed in The Journal's news or editorial columns. More than any public man I've known, Mr. King practised "freedom of the press" even when it hurt him.

On several occasions I have had to approach him on an issue on which our editorials were in full spate against him. He was always courteous, always helpful, always, I believe, as ready to give me as the other fellow the news he had to give. He did not hold his scoops or sweetmeats for those who stroked him smooth.

And, on the other side of the coin, I cannot recall Mr. King gushing and lushing about The Journal or its reporters as a dodge to win our support. Many politicians—half of them?—turn a reporter's stomach by praising him to his face beyond not only all reason but acceptable exaggeration. Mr. King did not. He would perhaps remark that he had read a piece with interest, or that he was glad to see you at a conference or event. But that was all.

◇ ◇ ◇

OUTSIDE the country Mr. King took special pains to help Canadian reporters. He seemed gratified they were there to send the news back home. At San Francisco in 1945 you could always count on button-holing him for five minutes or so in his hotel. At the Prime Ministers' conference in London in 1946 he would smilingly serve you tea or a drink while expatiating on his beloved and surely vindicated opposition to central commonwealth control. At Paris as he was walking in to the opening meeting of UN he spotted me in the crowd and came over to say hello and pass a few comments. He came over on his own, not to me as an individual but as a Canadian standing on the sidelines of the steps to the Palais de Chaillot. If it wasn't plain ordinary friendship then I don't know that boon when I see it. A few days later he exposed himself in a small committee room to a vicious and violent Vishinsky attack on the Western powers and atomic energy. Mr. King sat fascinated, tense on the edge of the chair he had placed modestly behind General McNaughton. His face was pained. I lingered after the committee broke up and caught his eye. He walked over, stunned, I thought. I didn't quote him at the time. He said: "Oh, Smith, I'm aghast. Isn't this ghastly." And in his eyes were sadness, shock, fear and disillusion. I had heard Vishinsky often, too often. Mr. King was hearing as for the first time; heard not just Vishinsky but all that was to come and all the sundering and crashing of the peace structure and ideals he had fought for since San Francisco, and before. San Francisco, to which he travelled to give what to him of all people was a policy-changing and historic appeal: the urge that nations be prepared to give up some of their sovereignty to the UN ideal.

◇ ◇ ◇

I LAST saw Mr. King in June when he put in a brief appearance during the cocktail hour at the Country Club when the Canadian Government gave a dinner for the Imperial Press Conference. It was a warm evening, but Mr. King walked across the lawn wearing a heavy overcoat. He looked ill, very ill; he looked small and shrunken; his colour was ashen and his clothes hung on him. But he stayed a while and people were brought to his chair. He would shake hands: "Oh, hello, Murdoch" (Sir Keith from Australia). "Well, Astor!" (Col. the Hon. J. J., head of the Times). "Hello", to his old Cabinet colleagues.

It was Mr. King's first appearance in months and one felt it might be his last. His eyes would sparkle as he greeted these people from all over the Commonwealth and Canada, a great many of whom he had known. He'd try to smile and you felt he wanted to talk with them about old times and experiences. He had come to the party somewhat against medical advice, we had been told, because he wanted to see the people. But he was not up to it. In a few minutes he pulled the heavy coat about him, aided by ready hands. "Chilly", he said. "Yes, that's a sharp wind", they replied. But it was really a welcome Summer breeze.

I wanted, that day, to go up to Mr. King to say hello, to pay affectionate respects. I didn't; there were too many visitors and important people to be presented. I would like to think, though, that something of affection and respect comes through these lines.

THE HAND OF FATE

Letter To The Editor

ENJOYED THE CIRCUS

Sir: Your correspondent, Jim English, appears to be a disillusioned old greybeard according to his preamble on Monday's circus. What did he expect to see, a practice performance of the Geisha Girls outside their trailer?

Unwilling to be fleeced for another consecutive year on a 3-pay installment plan into the Big Top, I was inveigled into taking my young 'uns for a hopeful peek through the fence, prior to the afternoon performance.

Imagine our unbounding joy when we were able to get inside the grounds, unchallenged, to view the riderless ponies, and the interested group around the snake tent. The permeating aromas from the hot-dog stands and cotton candy were safely navigated so soon after lunch, and quite a length of time was spent admiring the gaudy imaginative posters proclaiming the dubious sideshows, "which sure ain't wot they used-ter-be", as one lively oldtimer confided to me later.

By this time we had gone about as far as we could go along the sawdust trail without being collared for the first edition of tickets. But wait!! What was that bulge in the side of the tent beyond the posters? Sure enough! Out crept the investigating trunk and one huge foot of a jumbo elephant. That did it! We ducked past the ropes and waited for it to re-appear.

Further down, an eight inch clearance beneath the canvas invited another looksee, and the children excitedly toppled backwards when two pairs of docile brown eyes, followed by the heads and shoulders of two darling baby camels appeared on the very spot, nibbling for grass. More spying showed us the moth-eaten mothers nearby, plus a vast sea of horses and elephants. Then the attendants spotted us!

Nothing daunted, we hastily retreated to the far side of the tent, where we really found ourselves in colourful surroundings. One horse was being unwillingly shod without aid of anvil or forge, and that in itself was a novelty. Here, too, horses of every type and colour were being carefully groomed, combed and braided for the big show to come.

Ooh-h!! What was that noise in our ears? "Danger! Beware Wild Animals!" it read. And right underneath their cages was a man mending the undercarriage with an acetylene torch. Were those lions and tigers ever protesting viciously, and were we mighty glad they couldn't see us either through the bars, as it must have been just before feeding time! We scrammed out of there in a hurry.

Under the waterspout the circus-folk were doing their laundry, mostly over scrub boards, but one negro was actually slapping his white undies on the cement and beating them with a stick in true river fashion. There, too, was the canvas horse trough full of muddy water and looking like an oversized bathinette. Maybe it was—for an eyewitness told me that a strapping negro was seen performing his ablutions strictly in the raw, quite unabashed by the curious stare of a young girl. I missed that strip-tease as it wasn't on the billing, but I do hope the two elderly ladies who were also lured backstage didn't happen along about then.

On our way once more, we found the tiny performing ponies all within petting range, while rounding another corner brought us face to face with dogs and more dogs, but we kept a safe distance when glared at by the surly-looking canines of Bulldog extraction.

Next we were rewarded by the sight of two huge grizzlies on chains, who shambled about, or stopped lazily to sit and scratch at an ear. The polar bears must have been kept on ice. In the background the colourful costumes were swaying in the breeze ready to be donned, and excitement was already beginning to mount with the increased activity.

Spying the coloured cook, complete with white chef's cap, was realized we were at our journey's end, and slowly retraced our steps. Oh! There he was! The cute little donkey tethered all by himself and willing to eat hay from our hands. He even hee-hawed several times for us—or at us!

Back once more to the big tent, we were delighted to see the canvas rise and Jennie, the big elephant, be led out by means of a hook in the left jowl, disgustedly blowing up clouds of dust with her snorting trunk, and emitting that whinnying noise peculiar to her species. Down on four knees she went to submit to the platform being placed on her back. We couldn't have been closer without having been taken for a ride.

Then the rains came, and a headlong dash was made to the grandstand for shelter. From here we enjoyed the music of the band, the fanfares, and the calliope all at subdued range, and lacked only the bag of peanuts. I repeat, what more does Mr. English expect for nuppence?

Yours very truly,
MOTHER OF THREE.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away....

And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit of a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God. (Rev. 21: 3, 4, 9-11.)

◇ ◇ ◇

And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him....

Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.... And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is a thirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely. (Rev. 22: 1-3, 14, 17.)

Union Approves Ending Strike

WINDSOR, July 27 — (CP) — Settlement proposals for the 20-day-old strike of 50 office employees at the Windsor Salt and Chemical Industries Limited were approved by a membership meeting Wednesday night of Local 240, United Automobile Workers (CIO).

The employees voted about 90 per cent in favor of the settlement, a union spokesman said. The union negotiating committee had recommended the proposals.

The agreement provides a two-year contract with across-the-board salary increases of $10 a month and the establishment of fixed salary rates for each job classifiction in the office.

The joint union-company statement also announced the extension for an additiooal year of the one-year contract signed in June by UAW Local 195 and CIL. This extension is subject to ratification by the 36 employees at the Salt and Chemicals plant.

Both agreements provide for readjustment of wages paid during the second year of the contract.

Offer Of Ground Troops Comes At Critical Time In U.S. Campaign

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON, July 27. (AP) —Announcement that Britain is sending, and other United Nations countries may send, ground troops to Korea comes in one of the darkest hours of United States military history.

What American military men want now are more combat-ready troops — quickly, urgently. The next two or three weeks can be highly critical.

US and South Korean troops fighting the Red invaders of the Republic of Korea haven't their backs to the wall yet—but the room is getting alarmingly smaller. In the strategy of trading space for time, they are running low on both commodities.

The British government's announcement that it is sending to Korea a regular army combat group, including artillery and armor, reached Washington as US defence officials were growing increasingly concerned about help from United Nations members.

Not Enough

Reinforcements from the United States are on the way but some US officials make it plain this can't be enough. More fighting manpower is needed not only to bolster the battered American troops but to allow soldiers exhausted by weeks of combat to rest.

Defence leaders prefer that any units contributed to the United Nations campaign in Korea be in organizations of not less than 1,000 men, trained, equipped and supplied for initial fighting.

The London announcement did not specify the size of the combat group to be sent, but it apparently would be substantially more than the 1,000-man minimum. London news dispatches speculated that it might range from a Battalion to a brigade, from 1,000 to 5,000 men.

There was other help in the offing, including the announcements of two Commonwealth countries, Australia and New Zealand, that they will send land forces. Turkey has offered 4,500 trained combat troops.

It is the combat-wise veteran units that could be of special value in Korea if they could be landed there soon.

Britain Buys Painting By John Constable

LONDON, July 27 — (CP) — A painting, "Marine Parade and Old Chain Pier, Brighton," by the British master John Constable, has been acquired by the nation for £15,000 ($45,000). In 1837 it brought $135.

Purchase of the masterpiece from the collection of Dr. H. A. C. Gregory was disclosed by Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The painting, described as "a first-class example of Constable at his best," is roughly four by six feet.

Third-Place Tie For Boxla Petes If Beat Toronto

Red Creighton's Petes will jump from a three-way tie for third place to a tie with Brampton for second place in the Ontario Senior A lacrosse league Friday night if they down the up-and-coming Toronto Riverdales in Miller Bowl. Owen Sound Crescents are sitting atop the league comfortably.

Riverdales in their first appearance suffered a shellacking at the hands of the local boxla crew but they are beginning to hit their stride now both around the opposition's net and on the defence. They were weak on the defensive play in that appearance and far from weak on the offence. The stellar work of Speck held them off.

There is no love lost between the two clubs, one encounter between them enough to build up tension on both sides. It will be remembered that Jack Howse, who was in the Peterborough lineup last year and is with the Riverdales this year, was thrown out of the first game in the first few minutes of play. From there-in tempers were smoldering.

Coach Creighton will have a full crew on hand Friday night with the exception of Jim Kinna who will be sidelined for another three weeks after his injury in the Hamilton Tigers' game two weeks ago.

At that time Kinna had a disc along his spine inverted which pressed against a nerve centre causing temporary paralysis. Although out of the hospital Kinna is forced to wear a plaster strap for support three days a week. The remainder of the week is spent having heat treatments.

To Try Comeback

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP) — Trainer Hirsch Jacobs said Stymie, second leading money-winner of all time, would be shipped to Middleburg, Va., today to begin training for a possible comeback. "If he can win one dollar more than Citation I'll be satisfied," Jacobs said. "If he doesn't win, we're not out anything." Citation topped Stymie's record this year, with total winnings of $938,639. Stymie retired last year with earnings of $918,485.

Edger To Start Saturday For Ball Petes

When Ed Murphy's senior baseball club takes the field at Riverside Saturday against Toronto Dovers in a fight to creep closer to second place in the Viaduct League standing, it is expected Danny Brown will be at his usual place at short. And that's good news for the large crowd who will be on deck for this important struggle.

Ed says that Dan has signed a contract with Chicago Cubs of the National League. Ardent ball fans here are glad to hear the news.

Why? Because Dan has endeared himself to local fans by his sterling performances here last season. Fans believe the boy has great promise and though his departure will be a loss, none will begrudge him the opportunity to go up the baseball ladder to greater fame.

Further, they hope that more young players who are or will be wearing Peterborough uniforms, will likewise succeed.

Danny will report next March to Springfield in the Cub chain. It's our guess he'll get along fast, too. Brown is a smart fielder with a great arm who has a penchant for hitting long ones over the fence at crucial times.

Last summer he sent a two-run smash in the last of the ninth 350 feet over the left field fence to defeat Oshawa by one run, in a great COBL contest.

Manager Murphy is optimistic of his team's chances at the moment and will stand pat on the team from here in. Bill Dadson has returned to mound duty after a long rest and can be used either at first or in the field.

Bill Edger, who is twirling in the best form of his career and who will start Saturday—in all likelihood, is ably supported by Doug Plunkett, another coming star, and the veteran Ed "Gunner" Whitehill, to round out a fine pitching quartette.

Harvard Bamforth To Coach Peterborough Football Entry

Peterborough's future on the football front for 1950 took on a rosy hue this week when the Peterborough Football Club was reorganized. Harvard Bamforth, known throughout Ontario for his ability to coach football teams, has accepted that position with the club. Football coaches across the province will remember his Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational school teams which swept the trophies in the thirties. In 1939 he was with the Peterborough Orfuns when they made their bid in the senior bracket. Peterborough pulled the upset of the season that year by downing Sarnia.

President of the new organization is Dr. Rodger S. Chenoweth and his executive is Clare Collins, vice-president; Dave Wilson manager; Geoffrey Grindrod, treasurer and Dr. Donald Aiken, secretary. Honorary presidents are Donald McGillis, Gordon Matthews and Hugh Campbell. Directors are Frank Foster, Harry Yudin, Stanley McBride, Bud LaBranche and the club physician Dr. Joseph Howes.

A new name has yet to be selected for the local association, the old Panther banners discarded. A contest will be held sometime in August and a prize presented for the name chosen.

Schedule Drawn

Peterborough's intermediate entry is grouped this year with the Cobourg Galloping Ghosts, Oshawa Red Raiders and Orillia Blue Bombers. The team will open its schedule September 16 playing hosts to Oshawa and will finish it October 21 with the Galloping Ghosts here. Each team will play nine games.

From first reports out of Orillia, Cobourg and Oshawa the competition will be stiff. Oshawa Red Raiders have Bob Cosgrove, last year with the Toronto Argonauts as line coach, this year as coach. Some arrangements are being made with Toronto clubs by Oshawa to form a farm system.

Although all positions will be open when practices start (believed to be around August 14), efforts are being made by the organization to import key men for the team from various football centres in the province.

Another meeting will be held August 8.

This season's schedule is: (all home games at the Exhibition grounds).

September 16—Oshawa at Peterborough
23—Peterborough at Cobourg
27—Orillia at Peterborough
30—Peterborough at Orillia
October 7—Cobourg at Peterborough
9—Peterborough at Oshawa
14—Peterborough at Orillia
18—Oshawa at Peterborough
21—Cobourg at Peterborough

Cobourg Trips Port Hope 3-0

COBOURG, July 27—Taking a 2-1 lead on the year's play, Cobourg Legionaires won a seven-inning tilt from Port Hope Ontario, 3 to 0, in a Lakeshore Baseball League fixture here Wednesday night.

Weens Jamieson was in top form for Cobourg and allowed only three hits. He fanned five and passed only one. Kevin Mooney, Ottawa pitching import for the Ports, was a puzzle to the Cobourg crew as only four men got to him for safe blows.

Don Goody's triple to left was the longest hit of the game which was won in the first frame when singles by Beakstead and Hogan accounted for Ontario tally. An error by shortstop Reeves and Goody's drive gave the locals two more in the second.

Goody was also fielding hero of the win, his catch of Ashby's drive in the third being a gem. Keeler's double was the hardest hit for the Ports. The game was played in 59 minutes.

Mimico Whips Crescents 12-10 In Thrilling Tilt

MIMICO, July 27 (CP)—Now Mimico Mounties are threatening to upset the applecart in the Ontario Senior Lacrosse Association.

The league race, starting as a runaway by Owen Sound Crescents, has been evened up considerably since Mimico started on their recent win streak—now up to eight straight games.

Mounties downed the Crescents 12-10 Wednesday night in a nip-and-tuck battle that had 2,200 Mimico fans on the edges of their seats throughout. The winners fought off a last-half drive by Crescents to squeak through.

In dividual scoring star of the night was Crescent coach Doug Gillespie, who netted five goals. Mountie scoring was well-spread with Kenny Dixon and Jack Williams potting three each, and Bill Ranking and Don McPhail firing two apiece.

Meanwhile, Hamilton Tigers moved into a second-place tie with Brampton Excelsiors by shading the last-place Toronto Riverdales 16-13.

Jack Dorney netted six goals for the visitors. Frank Facto led Riverdales with four tallies.

Zoldak Saves The Bacon For Cleveland Once Again

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sad Sam Zoldak, ticketed for the minors in May, has pitched Cleveland to within 1½ games of the American League lead with three relief victories in a week.

Zoldak was handed carfare to the Pacific Coast League. But at the last minute Hank Greenberg, Tribe general manager, changed his mind. Johnny Berardino, veteran infielder, went to San Diego instead of Sam. Hank never will be sorry.

When Mike Garcia was knocked out of the box in the third inning of Wednesday night's game with the Athletics, Zoldak came in to help. He held Philadelphia to two hits the rest of the way for a 6-2 decision.

Cleveland's surge is only one factor of a developing situation that has turned the American League into a four-club battle. With Detroit's lead sliced to half a game over New York Yankees, Cleveland coming strong and the revived Boston Red Sox on the march, anything can happen.

Get Two Straight

The Red Sox made it two straight over Detroit Wednesday, 1-0, on Bobby Doerr's home run and Mel Parnell's five-hit pitching. It was the fifth loss in the last six starts for Red Rolfe's Tigers.

Joe DiMaggio, making a late-summer comeback, slugged a two-run homer to help the Yankees whip St. Louis 6-3.

Rookie Ed Ford, knocked out in the sixth after five shutout innings picked up his second victory with Tom Ferrick's help.

Rain postponed the Washington at Chicago game in the third inning. There was no score at the time. The two clubs make it up with a doubleheader today.

The Phillies scored six runs in the sixth inning against Chicago to increase their National League lead to 1½ games with a 6-4 triumph.

Clinches Series

Brooklyn Clinched the season series with St. Louis, with a 7-5 triumph that made it 12 out of 17 this year. Stan Musial hit safely in his 30th straight game with a double and single off winner Don Newcombe.

Musial now needs to hit safely in seven more games to equal the modern national record of 37 consecutive-hitting games set by Tommy Holmes, of Boston, in 1945. The major league record of 56 was set by Joe DiMaggio in 1941.

The result left the second place Cards 1½ games behind the Phils and the Brooks three games off the pace, in third place.

Pittsburgh teed off on Vern Bickford and Bob Hogue for 13 hits, including homers by Wally Westlake and Ray Mueller, to thump the Boston Braves, 8-4.

Sal Maglie pitched and batted the New York Giants to their seventh straight win, 3-2, over Cincinnati.

Louis Prepares Start Training

CHICAGO, July 27—(AP) — Joe Louis, retitred heavyweight boxing champion, was said today to be going to an Indiana training camp to prepare for a title bout with champion Ezzard Charles.

The 36-year-old Brown Bomber, king of the heavyweights for 11 years—longest reign in the heavyweight history, — was reported getting ready to return to the ring to get some money to pay back taxes.

The report that Louis will fight again gained stature Wednesday with his departure with adviser Fred Wilson for a West Baden, Ind., training site. Trainer Mannie Seamon also was reported en route to Baden with equipment.

Truman Tibson, the Bomber's manager, has said Louis will fight in September if he can reach an agreement with the government. Joe was in Washington supposedly to find out how much Louis owes the government on 1946 and 1947 income taxes.

James Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, said Wednesday that Louis has received no instructions or official feelers regarding a possible return to action.

Cooper Will Coach Galloping Ghosts

COBOURG, July 27—Cobourg recreational director Robert (Bob) Cooper was named to coach the Cobourg Galloping Ghosts, who were Dominion intermediate A rugby football champions in 1948 and semi-finalists last year. Cooper was playing-coach last season but may retire to the bench this season. His position is quarterback and he is a fast-plunging, forward-passing playmaker from that spot. F. F. Dufton is again president of the club, and Dr. Bill Wright has moved up to vice-president.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Although we had many bowlers playing in tournaments at Cannington, Lindsay, Perth and Port Hope Wednesday, the only report that reached us was the one from Port Hope.

Upon our own greens Wednesday night, there was only a small crowd but for the mixed rink event, the winning skips were H. Taylor, and P. Bartley.

Tonight we continue with the regular schedules.

Notices are out for the annual Mail and Globe doubles—women and men's.

Friday night, men's rink, 7:30 p.m.

Port Hope Winners

First and H. Rosevear Trophy, each vouchers—Mrs. N. Killingbeck, Mrs. L. Yeotes, Mrs. W. Hepburn, Mrs. F. Staunton, skip.

Second, each vouchers—Mrs. G. Spence, Mrs. H. Darling, Mrs. R. Dyer, Mrs. C. Renaud, skip.

DOUBLE TIME—Remarkable pivotmen keep and get Detroit and New York pitchers out of trouble in the American League race. Jerry Priddy, left, grimacing as he completes a double play, gives the Tigers what they lacked at second base. Opponents just don't break up two-ply killings on Jerry Coleman of the Yankees.

Orioles Shade Rochester In 5-2 Triumph

By The Associated Press.

Russ Kerns, 26-year-old infielder, is turning in a sparkling job at third base for Baltimore Orioles.

Kearns, who came up through the Chicago Cub farm system, is hitting a respectable .290 and is a dangerous man in the clutch.

He delivered a clutch single Wednesday night to help second-place Orioles defeat the pace-setting Rochester Red Wings, 5-2.

The Red Wings, behind Tom Poholsky, enjoyed a 2-0 lead going into the sixth inning when the Orioles erupted and scored four runs to win.

Righthander Bob Raney stopped the Wings on five hits.

The third-place Montreal Royals and the fourth-place Jersey City Giants also gained ground by sweeping doubleheaders. The Royals turned back the Springfield Cubs 8-2 and 3-1. The Giants disposed of the Buffalo Bisons 4-3 and 4-2.

Relief ace Ronnie Lee, making his second start of the year, limited the Cubs to four hits in the seven-inning opener. Ed Ehlers drove in both Springfield runs with a homer in the second.

Eighth Victory

Carl Erskine, who left for a pinch-hitter in the eighth, gained his eighth victory in the finale. Erskine's string of consecutive scoreless innings was snapped at 28 when Ransom Jackson homered in the fourth.

Syracuse shaded Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 with rookie Fletcher Robbe driving in Claude Corbitt with the winning run on a seventh inning triple. Kent Peterson went all the way for the Chiefs allowing six hits.

BUNT—Sacrificing, Phil Rizzuto lays one down and breaks for first base before either the ball or bat touches the ground. In contrast, Catcher Aaron Robinson of the Tigers seems frozen in his crouch. Southpaw Hal Newhouser threw out the Yankees' shortstop, but Gene Woodling moved to second.

OHA Invites Team In League

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 27 (CP) —For the first time in its history, the Ontario Hockey Association has invited a team into one of its leagues.

With a brand-new hockey arena, Niagara Falls sportsmen are considering an offer by OHA business manager George Panter involving a spot in the Senior A loop.

After talking it over Wednesday with Panter and representatives of the present senior teams—Toronto, Hamilton, Owen Sound and Kitchener-Waterloo — they asked for time to think about it.

Mayor W. L. Houck, John P. Demetre and Dr. W. A. (Biff) Patter represented the city at the meeting. Ray Mang of Niagara Falls, N. Y., also sat in.

Meyer Candidate Bad Man Award

PHILADELPHIA, July 27 (AP) —Terrible-tempered Russ Meyer, outstanding candidate for baseball's "bad man of the year" award, was in line again today for a fine or suspension, this time because a batter stepped out of the box.

The 26-year-old Meyer, ace righthander of the Philadelphia Phillies a year ago, has had more than his share of troubles this season. First of all, Russ lost six games in a row at the start of the season.

In one of those games, Russ took a throw from first baseman Eddie Waitkus and tagged first base, but the runner was ruled safe. Enraged Meyer stormed at the umpire. He ended in the showers minus $200 and on the suspended list for seven days.

After his poor start, Russ began to find himself. His record stood at 5-10 when he went to the pitching rubber for the Phils on Wednesday night against Chicago Cubs, his old teammates.

Meyer was down 0-2 when Chicago went to bat in the fifth. Dubiel opened with a double and Russ walked Wayne Terwilliger. Carmen Mauro fouled out. Bob Borkowski smashed the ball off Meyer's glove and Dubiel scored.

Hank Sauer stepped to the plate. As Russ began to pitch, Sauer stepped from the batter's box. Seeing Sauer leave the plate, Meyer stopped his motion.

Balk, yelled umpire Lon Warneke.

Mayer told the umpire, in choice Meyerian language, what he thought of the decision and pushed Werneke in doing so.

Warneke told Meyer he was finished pitching for the night. Whether league president Ford Frick will get an official report is not yet known.

It was an odd kind of balk call. Meyer was wrong in his argument but didn't know it at the time. Russ said later he thought that when a batter steps from the box, time is out.

That's right, if the umpire calls time. But Warneke didn't and the ball was in play. If Meyer had completed his pitch and sent the ball over the plate it would have been a strike.

Canoe Boys Win

Striking out 12 and allowing only two hits Brooks led his Canoe Company fastball crew to a 7-5 win over Mount Pleasant. Mitchell for Mount Pleasant pitched fair ball but the batting of the Peterborough team was strong in patches. Doughty for the company had two triples and a walk in three times at bat. Crawford was best for Mount Pleasant.

MINERAL RESOURCES

Russia is probably the richest country in the world in mineral resources.

Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

By The Canadian Press.

An avalanche of firsts gave mutuel machine mathematicians a first-class headache Wednesday at Fort Erie race track.

Ramillion and Hi-Pal raced to a dead heat in the first race. Second Act and Lady Isley did likewise in the second. It was the first win this year for all four horses.

Old-timers around the track and in the press box said they never had heard of such a mix-up during the 20-odd years daily doubles have been on Canadian tracks. To the best of their knowledge it hasn't happened in the United States either.

The daily double payoff was delayed for more than an hour.

By a further coincidence the winners of the second race both closed at 8.45 to 1. Due to differences in breakage figured in the pay-off, Second Act paid 8.40 to win; Lady Isley, 8.10.

The double prices on the four winning combinations were: Hi Pal and Second Act $10.35; Hi Pal and Lady Isley $11.55; Ramillion and Lady Isley 29.15; Ramillion and Second Act $26.85.

Larry Doby, Cleveland Indians outfielder, was discharged from hospital in Brooklyn Wednesday. The Negro centrefielder had been under observation since Monday night when he was hit on the head by a pitched ball during an exhibition game with Brooklyn.

Doby is expected to rejoin the Indians today.

Edmonton Eskimos football squad has completed its double-blue tinge, with the arrival in the city of Frankie Morris, veteran lineman and captain of last year's Toronto Argonauts.

Arrival of Morris brings to 11 the number of former Torontonians now in the Eskies' camp. The others are coach Annis Stukus his brother Bill, Mike King, Doug Pyzer, Don Durno, Bill Briggs, Frank Hickey, Harry Bunting, Ken Sluman and Don Loucks.

At Wednesday night's workout, manager Al Anderson announced the signing of quarterback Bill Stukus and end Jim MacRae.

It will cost Canada nearly $1,000 per athlete to participate in the winter and summer Olympic games of 1952, A. Sidney Dawes, president of the Canadian Olympic Association, said in Montreal Wednesday.

Mr. Dawes, who has just returned from the International Olympic Committee meeting in Copenhagen said the Canadian Association will start an early campaign to finance the Dominion's entry.

Total expenditures by the Canadians in the 1948 Olympics was $108,000 compared with receipts of $127,000.

Harvey Fleet of London pocketed the major portion of the $1,200 purse for the featured racing stake at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto yesterday when his good mare, Della Axworthy, made a show of her rivals. In the first division, Fleet let the mare go along in high gear and she paid $2.90 for $2.

In the second division, raced at a mile and a sixteenth, Della Axworthy was removed from the wagering pool after Royal Linda and Billy Hy were scratched a few minutes before post time. Della Axworthy won handily again.

Flora Lee, owned by Stanley Somerville, of Orangeville, Ont., and driven by Jim Somerville, returned a $38.90 pay-off when she won the third race.

One way of beating the races—Frank Cassellini, a mutuels clerk at Centennial Park in Denver, sold a patron four $50 tickets on the No. 2 horse in the fifth race.

But the customer said no, he wanted No. 3.

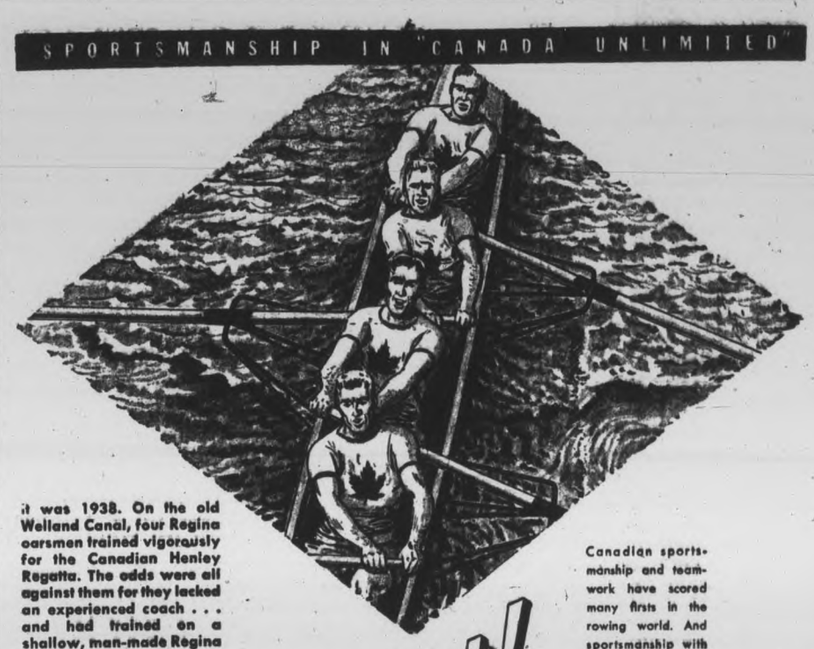
Cassellini managed to dispose of one of the No. 2 ducats before the windows closed, but he was stuck with the others and figuring how long it would take him to pay $150 out of his salary.

You're probably 'way ahead of us—No. 2, Domstead, won the race and paid $24 for a $2 mutuel. Profit to Cassellini on his three tickets, $1,650.

The No. 3 horse? Finished fourth.

EARLY FOOT—Passing Point Betsie, Mich., Vitesse II was miles ahead of 89 rivals with 250 of the 335-mile Chicago-to-Mackinac yacht race completed. A 45-foot cutter rigged sloop in Class A of the cruising division, Vitesse II is owned by Cletus Welling, Detroit.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN CANADA UNLIMITED



It was 1938. On the old Welland Canal, four Regina oarsmen trained vigorously for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The odds were all against them for they lacked an experienced coach . . . and had trained on a shallow, man-made Regina Lake during the great Prairie drought.

On the Henley's first day the quartet scored an upset by winning the junior four-oared event. The experts goggled . . . but the best was yet to come. Showing the Regatta's finest burst of speed, in the senior fours the westerners outstroked champion oarsmen from Canada and the U.S., and walked away with the prized Dominion championship.

Canadian sportsmanship and teamwork have scored many firsts in the rowing world. And sportsmanship with teamwork helps you too, in work and play. Together they keep your scope for opportunity in Canada... unlimited.

Passenger Wins The Final Round

ST. THOMAS, July 27—(CP)—New York Central Railway's crack New York to Chicago Diesel-drawn passenger express which makes a regular stop at St. Thomas, made a second unscheduled stop here.

A St. Thomas man—name undisclosed—was returning from New York. He was riding in one of the rear coaches of the long train. When it stopped at St. Thomas he looked out and saw he would have a long walk down the platform to get to the exit. He had a lot of baggage.

So he refused to get off.

This posed a problem for railway officials for a little while. The train was going on to Detroit.

After a hurried consultation between conductor and engineer the mighty Diesel engine started to pull away from the station. Just as the last coaches were abreast of the exit the train stopped—an unscheduled stop. And the St. Thomas man was allowed to get off with his baggage.

DRUMHELLER, Alta. — (CP) —Apparently it isn't healthy for snakes in Drumheller. Death here of several rattlesnakes in a touring show was attributed to a chill and diet of district gophers.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out about 2 pints of bile juice into your digestive tract every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the digestive tract. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those mild, gentle Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 35c at any druggists.

GOING UP—At the Air Force's new Long Range Proving Grounds in Cocoa, Fla., the 56-foot "Bimper" guided missile takes off on its first successful test. The missile flies horizontally, after the initial vertical take-off. The V2 part of the "Bumper" attained a speed of 3,600 miles per hour.

Find Korean War Creating New Colonial Difficulties

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON, July 27 (CP)—War in Korea awakened new anxieties about Communist influences in Britain's colonial territories.

A debate in the House of Commons showed that many members are perturbed. The cold war can look a lot less black and white in Nigeria or Kenya than in London or Washington.

Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader, said anti-British propaganda fills columns in the native press of Africa. Accounts of what was happening in Korea were unbelieveable.

The London Daily Worker, a Communist newspaper, wasn't in the same league with some African newspapers for misrepresentation.

Unless the government did something about it, the danger might become great in a year or so.

Quinine For Breakfast

Another Conservative member, L. D. Gammans, put parliament in a little better humor with a description of the spectacular advances of modern medicine in the colonies.

Gammans, once a colonial civil servant, said he can remember the days when the servant who brought breakfast put a quinine bottle beside it. "Those days," he said, have gone for ever."

Gammans reminded the House how important some colonies are to Britain. Malaya, for instance, earned more dollars than all the United Kingdom's expoorts to the United States. "If we lose Malaya, we shall have to go without our breakfasts in this country."

Change Coming

John Dugdale, Minister of State for Colonial Affairs, said: "The whole colonial empire is engaged in a major economic revolution.

"It is slow, perhaps—it is very slow sometimes—but it is profound. In 30 to 40 years, or even before that, such countries as Uganda, Malaya and Nigeria may be as highly industrialized as Australia is today."

Weak Policies

A Conservative member who did not speak in the debate C. J. M. Alport, later aired his opinions on Britain's colonial policy through a special article in the Daily Mail. Under the heading "Guilty Men and Women," Alport said colonial countries have become restive under the "weak and reluctant" policies pursued by the Socialists in five years of office.

Follows Route Of La Verendrye

THREE RIVERS, Que., July 27. —CP)—Victor Franco, a sturdy Frenchman who intends to follow by bicycle the route taken by La Verendrye to the Canadian Rockies, arrived here Wednesday on the first lap of his journey.

(Born in Three Rivers, La Verendrye and his sons were first to travel west and discover the Canadian Rockies).

Franco arrived in Quebec city Monday and cycled 90 miles to this city, following the shore of the St. Lawrence river. Wearing a beret, the young Frenchman carries 50 pounds of baggage on his eight-speed bicycue.

Franco will pedal his way along the approximate route taken by La Verendrye on his westward journey, circling rivers and lakes where the explorer travelled by canoe.

The son of a governor of Three Rivers, La Verendrye, born Pierre Gaultier de Varennes de la Verendrye in 1685, left Montreal in 1731 to look for a water route (the Mackenzie river) that emptied into the Pacific ocean.

He spent 12 years in the west, but never got farther than the Rockies which he was credited with discovering. During the 12 years, he and his four sons scoured a vast area between Lake Superior, Winnipeg and the Rockies. The explorer returned to Quebec and was planning another trip west when he died in 1749.

Requests That Parliament Should Be Recalled

TORONTO, July 27 —(CP)—George Hees, Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament for Toronto Broadview, Wednesday night urged that Parliament be reassembled immediately.

The Canadian people's representatives should be formulating policy to fit Canada's role in the tense international situation, he said in a 15-minute broadcast over radio station CFRB.

"I think it has become obvious to all of us that the Korean war is not an isolated case of aggression but, in all probability, the forerunner of still more acts of aggression in other parts of the world.

"At such a time, the course which Canada should follow must be decided by the elected representatives. The views of the people should be expressed in the House of Commons and from these views our national policy should be formulated."

Intelligent Public Opinion Great Need Today of Canada

By JACK SCOTT

REGINA, Sask.— I had lunch today with D. B. Rogers, editor of the Regina Leader-Post. He is a stocky, mild-mannered man, one of the most respected newspapermen in the country, president of the Managing Editors' Conference and a good fellow to have lunch with if you're troubled by international affairs.

Most Canadians have Koreaitis, the new chronic mental disease, and I found Rogers' answers to my questions a temporary aspirin for a troubled mind.

I guess most of us are searching around, as individuals, to feel right about what's going on these days. In this luncheon dialogue you may possibly find an inch of firm ground in the swamp:

"Darn few of the people we've met seem to have a real grasp of the situation," I suggested.

"We've talked to quite a few Canadians on our trip who are all for stopping the Russians cold, even if we have to use the atom bomb, or our troop, yet like the family of the first (United States' Casualty) don't know where Korea is, much less what the issue there is all about."

"I wouldn't worry too much on that score," Rogers said. "I'll agree that Canadian interest was certainly limited before the situation came to a head. And that happened so suddenly I suppose a lot of people were confused about what was going on. But it seems to me most people are now making an effort to find out the facts and satisfy themselves, in their own minds, that what we're doing is right."

"Then you think that public opinion is sound, that we aren't too apt simply to go along with 'our side'?"

"Not entirely. I question your estimate of Canadian disinterest in the facts. But I seriously doubt if people are doing enough hard thinking about the facts which could, of course, lead to a general war."

'Seems to me there are a lot of complexities that tend to leave you confused," I said. "You probably saw the statement by an U .S. observer in Korea that a great many South Koreans hate the Americans—all 'whites' for that matter —as much as the North Koreans. How do you reach a tidy decision in your own mind when there are such untidy factors?"

'Well," Rogers said, "I think you have to look at it in broader terms. You believe in the United Nations. You believe in the principle of collective security. You subscribe to the idea of resisting armed aggression by collective action. It then simply comes down to what constitutes armed aggression and, in Korea, who is the guilty party."

"And on that there are no doubts in your mind?"

"None whatever" Rogers said. "I accept the conclusion of the Security Council, based on evidence submitted by a UN commission on the spot. You must accept it. If you reject it then you toss overboard the whole concept of collective security. And, remember, the UN was set up precisely to deal with situations of this sort. The machinery worked just exactly as it was built to work."

✧ ✧ ✧

"How do you feel about the effect of this on the average person?" I asked. "It seems to me there's a good deal of restlessness in everybody. How can a man feel a sense of purpose or direction in his personal life with this cloud of possible world war over him?"

"It's difficult, all right," Rogers said. "A sense of personal aim is rather meaningless until it's possible to establish a peaceful world. Still, it seems to me that what we're doing now adds real purpose to a man's personal life, even though it may lead to general war."

"Do you think it will?"

"It's too soon to know. Only one thing is sure: the Korean war is either the first step towards a third world war or the first step away from it. Could be either."

"What's your own personal opinion?"

"Let's put it this way," Rogers said. "I'm convinced that if the positive action of the United Nations and the stand taken by the United States hadn't developed, the conquest of South Korea would certainly have been a definite step toward World War III. The lessons we'll learn in this emergency may at least delay a general war."

"Although, of course, there's always the chance this, in itself, could start a world war?"

"Yes," Rogers said, "but it was a chance worth taking. I don't believe permanent peace can be achieved in our generation. Possibly not in the next. But out generation may be able to find out how it can be done and the next may be able to find the final answer from our mistakes and successes. In this gradual and painful process of trial and error the Korean experience could be of great value."

"Dou you think the U.N. as the result of this is stronger or weaker? Is a U.N. without Russia actively on the team a real instrument for lasting peace?"

"I think the U.N. is stronger than ever," Rogers said. "In some respects it was dying on its feet without its real power being put to a test. People were losing faith in it. I think that's changed now, even if we fail to hold the line in Korea. The Korean affair is perhaps only the first battle in a continuing series of local wars. U.N. may lose the second skirmish, too, but there's surely encouragement in the fact that the risk of providing armed resistance on a collective basis has at last been taken."

"And what effect do you think this will have on Russia?" I asked.

"Well," Rogers said, "the Kremlin has now discovered that aggressive force will be met by collective force. At least they know now that it's a real force and not just an imaginary threat. I presume they'll govern themselves accordingly."

✧ ✧ ✧

"And what can the average Canadian do about all this?"

"The best thing he can do is to keep himself well informed. We desperately need an intelligent public opinion to back up the difficult decisions our government will have to make to meet this and succeeding threats to world peace."

ARMY APPLICATIONS — Photo above shows part of a group of more than 125 men who applied for military service at the Montreal Recruiting Office. It was the biggest recruiting day since the end of World War II. The upsurge of applications was due to developments in the Korean war. When asked why they wanted to join up, most of the applicants answered: "We want to go to Korea."

Britain Told Brighter Boxes Will Increase Sales

LONDON, July 27 — (CP) — A British research group advised manufacturers Wednesday that brighter packaging can increase sales in Canada.

"Jazz up your bundles from Britain with a little verve and sparkle," research experts said in a report to the Board of Trade, "and they will sell more quickly."

Color is vital.

"The most widespread criticism of British packaging is its lack of color," the report said. "Packages for Canada should be in full bright colors, able to hold attention when surrounded by other packages."

The report follows out a research survey in Canada by the British Export Trade Research Organization. Its conclusions were published today in a booklet, "Packaging Consumer Goods for the Canadian Market."

Like It Transparent

Apart from its drabness, British packaging is criticized for not using enough transparent film and sheet for bags, envelopes and lids. Canadians, the report indicates, really go for transparent packages.

Canadians also applaud simple, abstract patterns but dislike cartons covered with small printed matter and superfluous decoration. They prefer the new and the smart to the old-fashioned.

Research turned up a curious fact: elderly men living in country areas buy more braces than anybody else. Men's garters on the other hand, sell with "equal frequency" to all sexes and age groups.

The report said attractive packaging is most appreciated in Ontario and British Columbia, but didn't hazard a guess as to the reason.

Combine Soup, cooking liquid from beans, onion and beans. Place in casserole. Sprinkle top with bread crumbs. Place bacon strips on top. Bake for 45 minutes in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.). Serves 6.

Bothered By That "Squinty" Feeling that too much summer sunshine gives you? Then here's the answer to sun-weary eyes!... Rest and refresh your eyes twice daily with MURINE! You'll marvel at the quick, welcome relief it brings! And even when your eyes don't "complain" of tiredness, you'll notice that Murine makes them feel much better! Just two drops in each eye regularly bring welcome relief to eyes that work hard for you morning, noon and night! You see, Murine contains seven ingredients that blend perfectly with the natural fluids of the eye. Murine cleanses and soothes delicate eye tissues in a jiffy!

Because He Likes It So Much, Junior will do his very best not to spill a speck of that yummy "CREAM OF WHEAT". Smooth, delicious "Cream of Wheat" is much too good to waste! Best of all, it's so good for children. For 5 Minute "Cream of Wheat" provides Iron necessary for good red blood — and Calcium and Phosphorus for diets deficient in these elements. And it cooks to baby-ready digestibility in only 5 minutes of boiling! You've heard folks talk about that famous "Cream of Wheat" smoothness... why not discover for yourself just how satisfying a "Cream of Wheat" breakfast can be? Enjoy a bowl with Junior tomorrow!

When You Know The Simple Rules ... there's nothing tastier nor more refreshing than a glass of iced coffee on a warm summer day! First rule for really good iced coffee is to pick a truly superior brand. My choice always (for iced or hot coffee) is that famous BLUE RIBBON COFFEE. It's a blend that's wonderfully smooth and full-bodied ... and always fresh and uniform! For there are three Blue Ribbon roasting plants across Canada — one of which is close to you! So you can be sure of superb flavour — when you make Blue Ribbon iced coffee — like this:— Pour hot, double-strength, freshly made coffee into a tall glass filled with ice. The double-strength coffee makes up for dilution caused by the ice. To make double-strength coffee, place the regular amount of coffee normally used for brewing hot coffee into the coffee maker; use only half the amount of water. Serve iced coffee black or with sugar and cream, as desired.

"Hi — Breakfast Ready?" No sooner said than QUAKER MUFFETS are on the table! There's no preparation, just put the package out and let the family help themselves. Not only are these crispy toasted golden brown biscuits good to eat, but they're good for you too! In Quaker Muffets you get 100% Whole Wheat — yes, the bran and valuable wheat germ are there with the body-building protein, minerals and energy-giving qualities of the whole grain. For a breakfast that's really different, try them with fruit and milk or cream — you'll be back for more and more! Right at this moment I'm adding Quaker Muffets to my shopping list — how about you?

The Travel-Wise Folk I know are all travellers-cheque addicts, because Travellers Cheques spell safety for vacation funds. Wherever you go, they're easy to cash, but only you can cash them — with your personal signature. They're worthless to anyone else. BANK OF MONTREAL Travellers Cheques come in convenient amounts of $10, $20, $50 and $100, and you can buy them at any branch of the B of M. Special Travellers Cheques for travel abroad are always available, too. So let the B of M help you enjoy a worry-free vacation. Call on your nearest branch well before you pack your bags, and put your holiday money into B of M Travellers Cheques.

Of Course You Want To Feed Your Family Well in Warm Weather. And this doesn't necessarily mean "slaving over a hot stove" to give them nourishing food! Here's a food favourite of mine that's extra nutritious... McCORMICK'S SUNWHEAT BISCUITS! You'll want to keep them on hand all the time — for between-meal snacks — and for dessert "treats", for they're not only delicious — they're good for all the family! You see, the Vitamin D content of SunWheat Biscuits has been increased by direct irradiation with ultra violet rays. Each SunWheat Biscuit actually contains 50 International Units of Vitamin D ... and, in addition, calcium, phosphorus and other valuable food elements!

Light 'n' Fluffy As A Summer Cloud — that's the way cakes should be! And I've proved to myself over and over again that SWANS DOWN CAKE FLOUR makes the lightest, fluffiest cakes in the world! That's because Swans Down is sifted over and over again until 27 times as fine as ordinary flour. And the wonderful results show in cakes like this — Banana Cake ...

(1 egg and 1 egg yolk)

2 cups sifted Swans Down Cake Flour
1 tspn. Calumet Baking Powder
1 tspn. baking soda
1/2 tspn. salt
1/2 cup butter or other shortening
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 egg and 1 egg yolk, well beaten
1 cup mashed bananas
3/4 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 tspn. vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda, salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually; cream until light and fluffy. Add eggs, beat well; then add bananas and beat again. Add flour to creamed mixture, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time; beat smooth after each addition. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 deg. F.) about 25 minutes. Spread vanilla frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake. Sprinkle with chopped nuts. Wonderful with fresh berries!

MILK can make your child's eyes shine...

JUST CHANGE IT INTO DELICIOUS RENNET DESSERTS

Apricot Surprise Rennet Desserts
½ cup sweetened apricot puree
2 cups milk (not canned)
1 package "Junket" Rennet Powder, vanilla flavor
chocolate sauce

Set out 5 or 6 dessert glasses. Distribute apricot puree amongst them. Make rennet desserts following directions on package—takes only a couple of minutes. Pour mixture at once, while still liquid, over apricot puree in dessert glasses. Do not move until set—about 10 minutes. Then chill. Just before serving, top with a small spoonful of chocolate sauce.

You don't need magic to interest children in MORE milk—only "Junket" Brand Rennet Powder or Rennet Tablets. The rennet enzyme changes milk like magic into creamy, custard-like desserts.

A TWO-YEAR-OLD WAR against Chinese Communist bandits is still being waged in the jungles of Malaya. It started when the Reds began raiding villages, murdering British and Malayan officials and sabotaging the country's rubber industry. Now engaged on behalf of democracy are 16,000 troops, 70,000 police, units of Britain's Royal Air Force and 2,000 of the famous Indian Gurkhas. Find Radio Stations Attracted By "LP" Record Top Produciion

By The Canadian Press

If you've had trouble with the varied sizes, shapes and speeds of records, you can readily see the resultant turmoil in the minds of the record librarians and technicians of modern radio.

Standard classical and popular music used by the CBC, for example, has, until comparatively recently, been the standard 10 or 12-inch 78-revolutions-per-minute record. Last summer, however, Winnipeg studios, CBC's largest recording centre, started using the long-playnig, 33⅓-r.p.m. classical records.

Since then, most CBC stations have started using "LP" records on a more or less experimental basis, although most have decided on permanent use of them. The 45-r.p.m. records have not been considered seriously by radio, principally because the "LP" have all the advantages of the other and have much better reproduction.

Long Been Equipped

CBC turntables have long been equipped for 33⅓-r.p.m. for their standard 16-inch transcription discs, each of which can carry a 15-minute program.

The problem, however, was the size of needle and pick-up necessary for "LP." The commercial "LP" is cut with micro-grooves, about 250 lines to the inch, compared to the regular 136, used both on standard records and transcription recordings.

With the narrower grooves, a smaller needle point is needed. With the smaller point, the weight of the pick-up must be less, to prevent the needle from digging into the surface.

Standard pick-ups are about 15 grams, with needle points of about 2½ thousandths of an inch in radius. CBC's engineering workshop at Montreal was called in and developed a 10-gram pick-up to carry a needle with a point of about one-thousandth of an inch radius. Now the CBC turntables have two pick-ups, one for "LP" and one for standard records, an arrangement similar to many commercial phonograph combinations.

Some Disadvantages

Long-playing records have definite disadvantages. They tend to wear out more quickly than other records. Their vinylite surface also seems to be subject to a static change which attracts dust. The records, consequently, should be wiped with a damp cloth before using. Otherwise the dust will produce nasty passages of static.

Experiments have been made of transcribing "LP" from standard records, but the reproduction is so good that all imperfections are picked up and magnified out of proportion.

On the other hand, "LP" usually produce considerably less surface noise, due to the hard surface. Finer reproduction and a wider frequency range are possible, due to the finer needle and deeper cut. Reproduction is generally considered better than any but some top British standard recordings.

A single 12-inch "LP" record will give up to 25 minutes of sound on each side' compared with the 4½ minutes on a standard "78." This largely obviates the problem of "flipping" records in the middle of a number.

Storage' space is another thing to be considered, and "LP" takes about one-fifth the space of standard records.

ACCIDENTAL BOMBING

CUTHBERT, Ga., July 27—(AP)—A bomb big as an automobile fell accidentally from an air force plane Wednesday and dug a 10-foot crater on a farm near here.

AWAY AT LAST — The first of the six-plane squadron moves off the tarmac at Dorval while tense relatives watch in the foreground. The plane was piloted by Wing Commander Mussells who won fame as a flier during bombing raids on Germany. He has headed the transport group since 1949.

Not Institution Mental Hospital But Cure Centre

By ROD CURRIE

HALIFAX (CP).—The number of patients admitted annually to Nova Scotia's mental hospital has almost doubled in the past two decades, but this sharp increase is not regarded by authorities as an indication that mental illnesses are increasing.

Dr. Murray McKay, Medical Superintendent of the Nova Scotia hospital at nearby Woodside, says although the increase has been greater than the increase in population there are other factors that account for the jump.

"Today there are many mild cases of mental illness treated in the hospital, that 20 years ago would have been neglected, he said. "People have become educate dto the fact that many sufferers can be treated and fully cured."

He said, also, that the great turnover of patients is somewhat due to the efficiency of modern treatment, one of the most important of which is insulin therapy.

Most Modern Place

The rambling hospital, situated on park-like grounds on the eastern shore of Halifax harbor, is regarded as one of the most modern and best-managed institutions of its kind in Canada.

Dr. McKay said it was encouraging that people of today understand that the modern mental hospital is not an institution for he confinement of the insanse, but a place where they can be treated and cured.

In 1948 a bill was passed by the Nova Scotia Legislature stating that "all residents of Nova Scotia shall be treated at the Nova Scotia hospital at the expense of the Department of Health."

The hospital has for the first time in its 6-year history reached a position where it can teach psychiatry.

Dementia Praecox Cured

In a recent report Dr. McKay said that more institutional beds are occupied in Nova Scotia by dementia praecox patients than by patients suffering any other disease — including tuberculosis.

"The number of cases treated successfully is limited," he said, "by the tragic fact that the vast majority of them are not recognized or sent for treatment until it is too late."

In a one-year period 56 patients were given insulin therapy treatment ,and all but six improved. Twenty-five fully recovered.

The treatment must be intensive, thorough and carried out over a period of time and a high proportion of staff to the number of patients treated is required.

A staff of some 85 nurses, both male and female, is maintained at this hospital which has had a nurses' training school for 50 years.

PATRICIA ROC the bilingual British film star, is photographed as she boards a plane for Paris, where she will complete "Son Copain," the Franco-Canadian film which she started here at the Ste. Hyacinthe studios of Quebec Productions Corporation. The French part of "Son Copain" is to be filmed in Paris.

Five Men Begin Investigation Into London's Dock Troubles

By ROBERT BROWN

LONDON (Reuters). — Five men, meeting behind closed doors, have begun an investigation of the world's port and the habits of its 27,000 dockers, stevedores, and lightermen.

The British Government has asked them to find out why the Port of London has been the most strike-troubled sector of British industry in the last five years.

Several earlier, unofficial investigations have suggested possible explanations. The two most popular have been:

1. That Communists have infiltrated into the port, obtained key positions in the trade unions and brought the workers under their influence.

2. That the mammoth trade union which organizes a majority of the port workers has lost touch with the rank and file, does not adequately represent their interests and so drives them to unofficial action.

British Communists deny the first suggestions. The trade union denies the second.

Those Investigating

The five men who have to sift the evidence and try to reach an objective conclusion are: Sir Frederick Leggett, a former high official at the Ministry of Labor; A. M. Holbein, vice-president of the Federation of Civil Engineering Contractors; G. H. Bagnall, a former trade union official who now is an industrial administrator; Sir Robert Hyde, founder of the Industrial Welfare Society, and Sir Wilfred Garrett, a former chief inspector of factories.

They held their first meeting at the end of May and their report is not likely to be published for some months yet.

Port employers, trade union officials and government-appointed administrators are expected to give evidence before the committee of enquiry.

Canadian Ships

Representatives of an unofficial Port Workers' Committee which has led several strikes in the port in opposition to the official union have demanded the right to be heard. But it is not yet known whether they will be admitted.

Biggest dispute since the war occurred last summer, when the port was brought to a standstill by the refusal of dockers to work Canadian ships which they regarded as "black" — that it, the subject of a trade union dispute.

Government and trade union spokesmen denied the ships were "black," said trouble on board was due to a domestic feud in Canada between the Communist-led Canadian Seamen's Union and the rival International Seafarers' Union sponsored by the American Federation of Labor.

Interesting Part

Observers agree that one of the most interesting parts of the committee's report will be that concerned with the role of the Transport and General oWrkers' Union which, with 1,300,000 members, is one of the world's largest trade unions outside of Soviet Russia. About 20,000 of the 27,000 workers in the Port of London belong to it.

Ernest Bevin, now Foreign Secretary, built up the Transport and General Workers' Union almost from scratch and led it through most of its biggest struggles.

In 1940, when Winston Churchill formed a coalition government, Mr. Bevin moved from the union to the Ministry of Labor.

Casualties In Malaya

SINGAPORE, July 27—(Reuters)— Army casualties in Malaya, including Gurkhas on anti-terrorist operations, totalled 113 killed and 188 wounded between June, 1948, and June 30 this year, the Malayan government announced today. In the same period the R.A.F. lost 27 men killed on operations.

Watch Jet Crash

PENZANCE, England, July 27—(Reuters)—A meteor jet fighter crashed into the sea near here Wednesday within sight of hundreds of people on vacation. The two occupants were killed. Another jet—a Vampire—crashed in a field at Rickinghall, Suffolk, killing its pilot.

Typhoon Hits Luzon

MANILA, July 27—(AP)— A typhoon lashed northern Luzon Wednesday, destroying an estimated 50 houses and leaving many homeless.

U.N. Quarters Ready

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y., July 27—(AP))—The United Nations will begin moving into its New York City skyscraper headquarters about Aug. 15. Several departments, employing a total ow 700 to 800 persons, will be installed in the new building in midtown Manhattan by Sept. 1. This represents about one-fourth of all the personnel at Lake Success.

Catch Live Torpedo

TOKYO, July 27—(AP)— A live torpedo lying on the bottom of the sea was caught in the nets of a Japanese fishing boat today. As it was hauled aboard it exploded, killing 30 fishermen and injuring 10.

Movie Column

Has Some Tips On Breaking Into Movies

By HUBBARD KEAVY

HOLLYWOOD, July 27 (AP)—This is one of those how-to-break-into-the-movie stories.

Todya's subject is a shapely, green-eyed brunette with the improbable name of Debra—Debra Paget. When I heard that name, I asked: "Who thought that up—the publicity department?"

Debra's mother, Mrs. Margaret Griffin, a couple of hundred pounds of good nature and native shrewdness, answered: "I did. I christened her Debra. Her father's people were Pagets. I used to call her Debra Lee, thinking that would be a good professional name. But Paget is more unusual and there are no Pagets in the movies."

Tells Mother

Mrs. Griffin says something like this to all stagestruck mothers: Don't think you can come here and get your daughter into the movies you day-dreamed about 25 years ago without great effort and patience. It requires years of preparation, of training, and grooming, of dieting and dramatics. But even those are not enough.

"It helps to know somebody," said Debra's mother. "In fact, you have to have an 'in'." Mrs. Griffin's good many years with stock companies, touring shows and even burlesque gave her a wide show business acquaintance. She knew Ivan Kahn, who is Zanuck's talent scout, when she came here with Debra six years ago.

I suggested that luck and friendship play great parts.

Mrs. Griffin said sure they do.

"Lucky," Says Debra

"I am very lucky," said Debra, who, being 16 and well-mannered, usually speaks only when she is spoken to.

Debra is being built up now as a Polynesian glamor girl for "Bird of Paradise," to be filmed in Hawaii. No too-revealing Lamour sarongs for her, though, but almost-genuine Polynesian stuff.

THIRTY-NINE years reflected in snapshots! Issue Stern Warning On Hoarding

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

The warnings are out in the United States: Don't hoard, don't raise prices unncessarily, and be prepared to go without anything that interferes with essential production for defence.

If people don't follow these rules, they will get controls to force them to follow them.

Canadians have been acting calmly, and it has not been necessary yet to give a warning, but it will be forthcoming if required.

Both countries are in a good position to swing into whatever defence or war production that may be needed.

And the peoples of both countries are in a good position to face it. They have been buying now since 1945 and no great hardship will fall on any one if he has to go without some things he may have planned to buy.

It works out to this: a given number of people are able to produce a certain amount of goods from a given amount of materials and equipment. If this is sufficient to meet both defence and ordinary peacetime requirements, well and good. If it is not, it requires no great wisdom to know what we have to do without.

Insurance Up

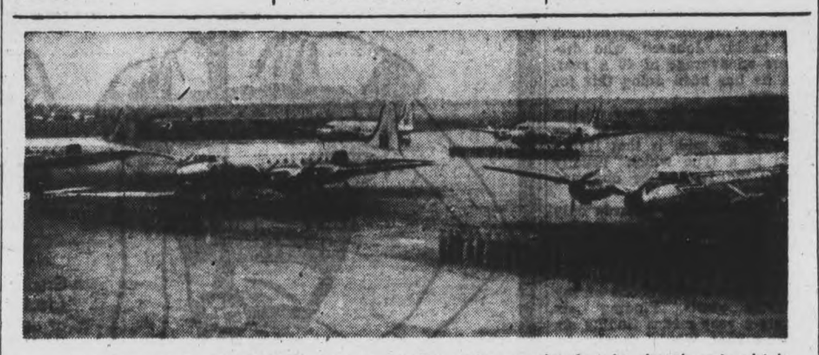
New ordinary life insurance put into force by Canadians in the first six months of the year totalled $640,229,000, up $7,228,000 from the same period last year. June figures were $110,156,000, down slightly from the preceding June.

The Public Relations bulletin of the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating comments: "The somewhat unexpectedly great increase in the birth rate in Canada, together with its also unexpected continuance during the post-war years, coupled with substantial immigration and the return to Canada of ex-service men with war brides, have produced estimates of future population considerably in excess of earlier figures.

"Some authorities now forecast the population of Canada in 1956 as 15,800,000, and in 1971 as 17,000,000."

FORMOSAN CAPITAL

The capital of Formosa is Taihoku. Formosa is the largest island in the Western Pacific.

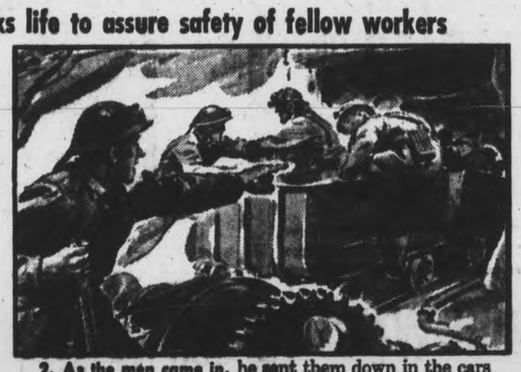


LINED UP AND READY TO GO, the six transports of No. 426 Squadron and their crews are shown on the tarmac at Dorval, minutes before they left on the first leg of the long haul to battle-torn Korea. Departing on the freight shuttle run which will be based at Tacoma, Wash., and circle over the Aleutians to Tokyo, were 275 officers and men, the bulk of the squadron. The aircraft took off shortly before dark Tuesday evening.

MINER STAYS AT POST TO EVACUATE MEN AFTER BLAST

Leonard Morrison, of Stellarton, N.S., risks life to assure safety of fellow workers

1. Coal miner Morrison's job is to run a stationary engine which sends small cars on a cable down a steep incline for half a mile to the shaft bottom. Here, a cage takes men and materials to the surface. When he felt the shock of an explosion, he knew he was at liberty to save himself if he could — and forget about the other men. However, Morrison decided to stay on the job.



2. As the men came in, he sent them down in the cars to the cage which would take them to safety. For fifteen long minutes, Leonard's ears strained for the dreaded sound of a second explosion. But it did not come. Calmly and quickly he worked until the last of the 45 men had gone. Finally, Morrison was free to look after himself!

3. Shutting off his engine, he started out — alone and on foot — towards the shaft and safety. The mine superintendent sums up Leonard Morrison's bravery in this way: "This young man might easily have given his life for his fellow workers. He went far beyond the call of duty." We are proud to add our tribute by presenting him with The Dow Award.

Pooling Plan Nearly Ready

PARIS, July 27 — (AP)—Six western European countries have nearly completed broad outlines for an international authority to control their pooled coal and steel production.

Delegates from the six governments— France, West Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg — have been meeting here to work out details of the pool plan originally proposedo by French foreign minister Robert Schuman.

An official spokesman said they have agreed—subject to approval by their governments—to set up:

1. A supranational authority to supervise the merged production.
2. A joint parliament, chosen by the national assemblies of member countries, to which the authority would be responsible.
3. A court of appeals to hear member protests of authority decisions.
4. A committee of ministers to maintain liaison with member governments.

Handless Painter Does Good Work

VEGREVILLE, ALTA., (CP)—Five years ago, a forgotten land mine exploded in a German beet field and left Toronto-born Nicolai Bidniak with a bleeding stump for a right arm. The blast also sheered off his left hand.

Today Bidniak is a painter. He is rapidly winning acclaim for canvases he paints with a brush strapped with an elastic band to the short stump that remains of his right arm.

His skill is born of five years hard work that started during his six-month stay in a German hospital after the mine explosion. His urge to paint grew almost without volition out of his efforts to re-master writing, the 30-year-old painter says.

"The pen just began to move about," he explains.

His canvases include still life and murals. He can turn out an incisive portrait in two days.

Bidniak was taken by his parents to the Ukraine when he was still a baby. He later moved to Germany and landed in a concentration camp, finally being conscripted to farm labor. That took him to the beet fields. He returned to Canada three months ago.

Mines Tied Up

SPRINGHILL, N. S., July 27—(CP).—The three Cumberland Railway and Coal Company mines here were tied up Wednesday when 1,400 miners refused to work, charging "breach of contract" by the company. United Mine Workers (CCL) spokesmen said the men had previously been paid extra for duffing—cleaning up around the machines after coal cutting operations—but the company now had cut off the extra pay. C. B. Paul, company superintendent, had "no comment."

Manslaughter Charge

BARRIE, July 27 (CP)—Charges of manslaughter, dangerous and careless driving were laid Wednesday against Michael Hayes driver of a car in which two Barrie men were killed Sunday. Hayes, who suffered a broken jaw now is in Toronto for treatment.

Population Jumps

VANCOUVER, July 27 (CP) — An elevator left the first floor of a downtown hotel here with three passengers Wednesday and arrived at the ground floor with four. The new arrival was a baby girl—born to a woman rushing to hospital. Both are "doing fine."

No More Report Scares Class Failure Outdated

By TOM MADDOX

CARBONDALE, Ill.—(AP) — Primary grade report cards no longer scare small fry.

Educators won't come right out and say no one flunks anymore in the lower grades. It seems they are afraid to—on the ground that some elementary pupils still need the threat of failing to spur them on. But it's true, fewer are flunking.

For a test, graduate students at Southern Illinois University checked the elementary picture in their own campus town of Carbondale.

They found the trend is for 100 per cent promotion of pupils. So they asked city schools superintendent Clyde V. Winkler about it. They reported:

1. Little is learned by repeating.
2. Failure merely discourages and does not aid pupils.
3. There is no reliable way of determining failures.
4. Real failures cannot do the work no matter how often they repeat.

Place Blame

To sum up, their report put the blame for failure on another foot.

"Non-promotion is an admission of an inadequate school program and has no place in a school where children are properly motivated and work to the level of their capacities.

"What is looked on as a pupil failure may be a teacher, supervisor or administrator failure."

An education expert added another interesting slant Dr. Douglas E. Lawson, dean of Southern's College of Education who has been studying education problems 25 years, put it this way:

"When a child is taken into a store and his parents say to him 'Johnnie, you are going to quit running around barefooted and wear shoes whether you like it or not,' then it is up to those parents to see that there are shoes to fit their child's feet.

Fitting Curriculum

"Likewise, when compulsory attendance laws force a child to attend school whether he likes it or not, then it is up to the school to make every possible effort to see that there is a curriculum which fits the child's capacities."

From his files, Lawson pointed out an extreme of the old failure policy. A boy was kept in the first grade from the age of six until he was 17.

He said statistics kept by a fellow educator showed that the ability to master a study such as algebra decreased every year of repetition. By the sixth year of repeating, a pupil's chances of failure is 100 per cent, this study showed.

Lawson had a case of his own in which a failing second grader proved in a test he had a learning capacity 57 points above average. Pressed for an answer as to why he did no better, the boy replied, "Aw, that's baby stuff."

Instead of failing the boy, Lawson entered him in the third grade. Within two weeks he put the boy in the fourth, and a year later it was debated whether the boy should skip the fifth.

Orphan Elephant Adopts Tenderfoot Hunter In Africa

CHIPINGA, Northern Rhodesia,—(CP)— Piet Snyders, an elephant hunter with the world's highest bag of 650, has added another elephant — and a good camp-fire yarn— to his bag.

He went away with an Englishman who wanted to own a baby elephant. After some days tracking in the bush, Snyders managed to capture a young one.

"How am I to get it back?" The tender foot asked.

Snyders took the tip of the baby elephant's trunk and rubbed it over the man's sweating body. "Now it will follow you like a lamb," he said.

To the tenderfoot's amazement the baby followed him wherever he went.

On the return journey Snyders lost the tenderfoot. After searching for some time, he found the baby elephant sitting at the foot of a tree.

Snyders looked up an saw the tenderfoot sitting out of reach

"I got up here to escape from it," he explained. It thinks I'm its father. I can't get away from it."

Finds Planet By Accident

JOHANNESBURG, — (CP) — E. L. Johnson of the Union Observatory here, who recently discovered a new planet that has aroused world-wide interest among Astronomers, made his find "by accident."

He was searching for other heavenly bodies in the course of an assignment when the new planet whizzed by little more than 8,000,000 miles from the earth.

Discovering planets is nothing new to Mr. Johnson who discovers an average of 40 a year. And he has been doing this for 36 years.

What makes the new planet different from his other discoveries, he said, is that it belongs to a type which usually travels too fast to be observed by Astronomers.

"A find like this is made only once in a lifetime," he said.

Of the 40 planets a year which he discovers, he usually has time to observe only about six.

"And here's where one of my problems starts. Finding six planets a year means finding six names a year. What I usually do, however, is to give them the names of women members of my family."

Queen Bee Wins Plane Battle

MONTREAL—CP)— A queen bee has successfully challenged a huge four-engined Constellation aircraft in sunny Holland.

The battle, reported by Capt. Bill Powell who flew the big plane from Holland to Montreal, started when the bee was attracted by the warm, sun-baked concrete of the Dutch runway.

She settled on the wing, Powell said. and immediately thousands of bees following the queen settled there too. Before long the swarm rolled across the wing into the cabin.

The plane was grounded and no one would go near the determined bees.

Finally a maintenance man, who claimed to be an amateur bee-keeper, appeared with a stick and basket and gently wiped the queeu into the basket and walked away. In a few minutes the obedient followers flew after her.

Arthur Runions OAC Professor Dies In Toronto

Professor Arthur D. Runions of the staff of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, who some years ago was representative in Peterborough of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, died in Toronto Western Hospital Wednesday.

Prof. Runions had suffered a heart attack three years ago, but recovered from its effects and resumed his staff duties at the College. It transpired to his friends recently that his health was again impaired and from another malady, and the information reaching Peterborough was that he had no chance of recovery.

Only last Sunday he was visited at the hospital by Mr. James Juby and Dr. D. W. Clark, members of Peterborough Rotary Club of which Prof. Runions was president when he was transferred by the Department to a new appointment at Kemptville Agricultural School.

Came to Peterborough in 1933

Prof. Runions came to Peterborough county June 1, 1933, succeeding John B. Nelson as agricultural representative. In December 1937 he was appointed to Kemptville school. When its buildings were utilized for military purposes during the war years, Prof. Runions was assigned to OAC at Guelph as assistant Professor of Animal Husbandry

"Arthur Runions was a great credit to the extension service of the Ontario Department of Agriculture," Mr. Frank C. Paterson, his successor, said today. "He did a grand job as a livestock man, and his abilities were widely recognized throughout the province and elsewhere. He was an authority on dairy cattle. He was greatly interested in pedigrees and records to the extent that they were a specialty with him, particularly in the dairy cattle breeds. He had a friendly personality, and a great gift of enthusiasm.

"He was highly regarded in the agricultural representative service and among the staff and student body at OAC. The last time I was talking with him was at our extension conference at OAC in June. I thought he didn't look well, and it was only some weeks later that I heard of his critical illness. He had made an appointment for a meeting or two in Victoria county, and it was only two weeks ago that he cancelled them."

Prof. Runions was deeply interested in the junior farmers of this county.

Instructor and Coach

'He was an outstanding instructor and coach, especially in animal husbandry," said Mr. Ed. V. O'Toole, who with Harry McIntyre and Clarence Coons won the first prize in the junior club judging competition at the Royal Winter Fair in 1935. In the previous year Mr. O'Toole, Mr. Coons and Archie Clysdale were the members of the judging team that placed second at Ottawa Exhibition.".

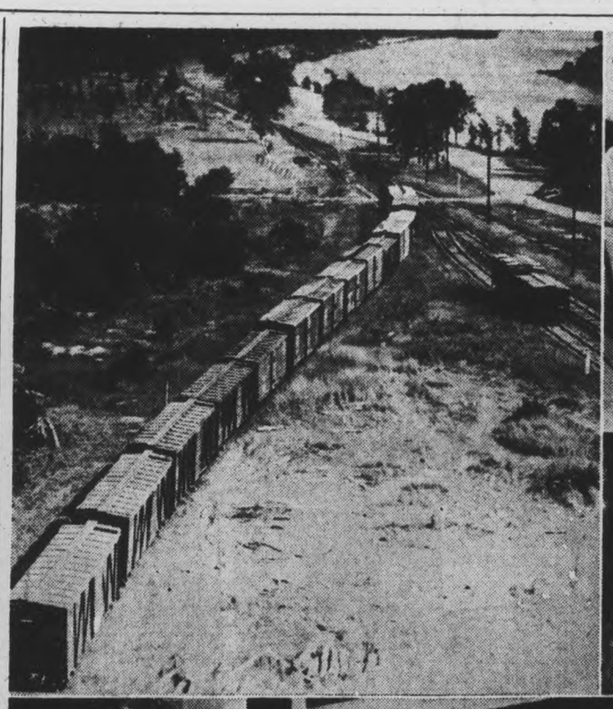
"He was a kindly disciplinarian and had a great gift of kindling interest in the young members of a judging class, and also of passing on his knowledge to them. He could get more out of a group of young people than any others I ever met in that connection. We all thought very highly of Art Runions, and his death will be deeply regretted throughout the province."

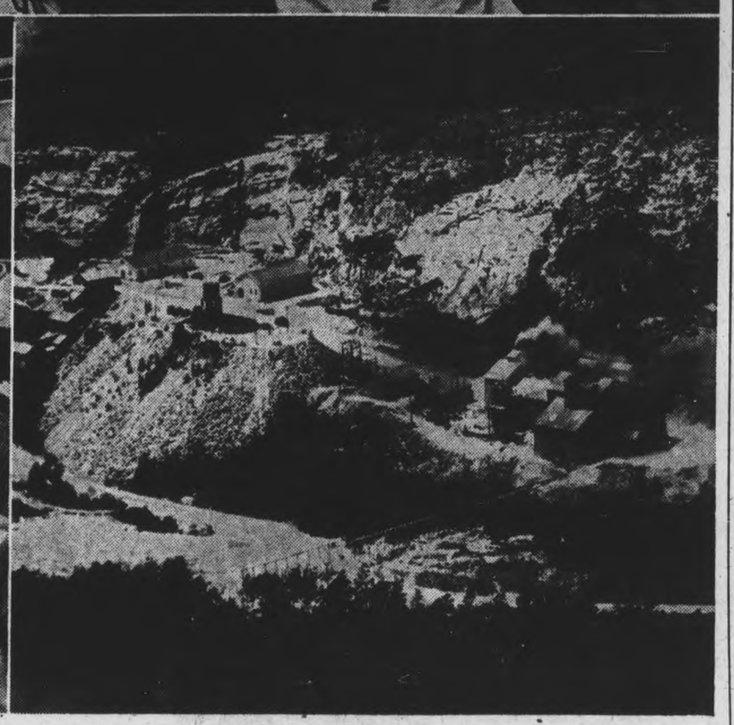
Although reference has been made to the standing of Prof. Runions in the cattle industry, it is also clearly remembered that he was a prominent figure in the heavy horse branch of agriculture.

Prof. Runions was a livestock judge at many fairs and exhibitions, ranging in importance and quality of entries all the way up to the Royal Winter Fair.

At OAC he was Associate Professor of Animal Husbandry with Prof. George Raithby.

Born at Cardinal, Ont., he was graduated from the University of Toronto in 1927. Prof. Runions leaves his widow and one son, James Allan of Guelph. The funeral service will take place at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Guelph Saturday, followed by burial in Woodlawn Cemetery in that city.





FIFTEEN CARLOADS OF NEPHELINE ORE for the Netherlands, first half of a large export order, were shipped from Lakefield Wednesday. Cars containing the ore are shown on the company siding, UPPER LEFT. Purchased by Holland with Marshall Plan American dollars, each 80-pound bag of ore carries an ECA label; vice-president Harold Deeth explains the reason for the display to shipping foreman Bill Hamblin, UPPER RIGHT. Railway bill of lading is delivered to CNR conductor E. G. Palmer, RIGHT, by station agent W. H. Fife, LOWER LEFT. A general view of the milling plant and mine surface buildings at Blue Mountain, north of Stony Lake, is shown in photo at the LOWER RIGHT.—(Examiner and Parks Air Photos.

19 Boxcars Leave Lakefield In Largest Shipment Made From Nepheline Plant

Sixteen thousand 80-pound bags of nepheline were shipped out in 19 boxcars, 15 of them destined for Holland, from Lakefield Wednesday. It was the longest string of freight cars to leave Lakefield since the boom days of cement manufacture in the village. Harold Deeth, vice-president of American Nepheline Co., said the 15 cars is but half of an order received from Holland. It is the largest single order received by the American Nepheline Mines in Canada.

About 85 per cent. of the production of the mine located at Blue Mountain, northeast of Lakefield, goes to the American market. The rest has been sold on the Canadian market. But recently a large overseas market has opened up and the company now ships to England, Switzerland, Puerto Rico, Mexico and Italy.

Nepheline, which looks like white granite in ore form, is ground into crystals and powder and is playing an increasingly prominent part in the manufacture of glass, china, dinnerware, sanitary porcelain, dinnerware, dental porcelain, art pottery, kitchenware, abrasives and many other products.

Paid For In U.S. Dollars

The nepheline which is on its way by rail and ship to Holland will be used to help make dinnerware. The other half of the order will go out in August.

The Dutch are paying for the shipment in Marshall Plan American dollars, currency Canada is very happy to get. Because the Marshall Plan or ECA is footing the bill, each of the bags being shipped to Holland has a sticker affixed which reads, in English, "For European Recovery. Supplied by the United States of America. Produce of Canada."

Only in the last 10 years has nepheline found its many uses. At the moment the company's director of research, C. J. Koenig, is touring western Europe describing the use of nepheline in ceramics, the art of pottery.

Nepheline is largely taking the place that feldspar played in pottery manufacture. Almost all the feldspar available in Europe is found in Czechoslovakia and disappeared with that country behind the Iron Curtain after the Communist Pusch.

Similar to Feldspar

Nepheline is somewhat similar to feldspar. It is composed of mixtures of Sodium, Aluminum and Silicon Oxide compounds. The biggest selling point it has is that, while it is a little more expensive than feldspar, it can be manufactured into the various pottery type products at a lower temperature than feldspar. This is an important factor in coal-starved Europe.

Blue Mountain, contains millions of tons of nepheline which will be a limitless supply for many years. At the moment it is the only commercially available nepheline syenite in the Americas.

On that basis Wednesday's 19-car shipment is just the first of many shipments just as large, and bigger, which will pull out of Lakefield, through Peterborough on their way to all parts of the world.

Haliburton Man Vacationing In USA Killed

A Haliburton man crashed to his death near Warren, Pa., Wednesday night when the engine of his light aircraft cut. The machine was unable to reach an emergency landing field, a short distance away.

The fatally-injured man was Henry Miller, 47, a machine shop operator in Haliburton village who was vacationing in the United States.

Marshall Mathis, 51, a ground school instructor at the Warren airport, is in serious condition with both ankles fractured. He also sustained cuts and severe shock. Mathias, a veteran flyer and friend of Mr. Miller, was piloting the light aircraft at the time of the accident.

He later told rescuers the last thing he remembered was "when the engine went out."

Died After Crash

Coroner Ed. C. Lowery said Mr. Miller died about two hours after the crash. He also said the aircraft was apparently heading for an open field "and could have negotiated an emergency landing if it had just gone a little farther."

The two men left Haliburton on Sunday in the aircraft. Though Mr. Miller was the owner he had no licence to fly and Mr. Mathis was the pilot.

Mr. Miller was a resident of Haliburton for the past five years and operated his own machine shop there. Previously he had worked in the Lindsay arsenal.

He was born in Tyrone, son of Adie Tennant and the late Wallace Miller, and he was educated in Tyrone.

Left are his wife, the former Maude Simpson, two sons Douglas 21, Marshall 17, and a daughter Dawn, 15.

Mr. Miller was a Mason and a member of St. George's Anglican Church, Haliburton.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

SHOE BRUSHES SMOULDER

A checkup by Police Constable D. P. Jones late Wednesday night prevented what might have been a serious fire. He looked inside the Novelty shoe repair store, Charlotte St. and saw the place was filled with smoke. He called the fire department and the firemen found that some shoe brushes were smouldering in a tub. The proprietor, Anthony Legana, had placed the brushes in the tub to clean. An elctric plate that he forgot to turn off caused the tub to boil dry, and smoke began to issue from the brushes. There was no other damage.

Norwood Airman Member Of RCAF Squadron

NORWOOD, July 27 (ENS) — A Norwood man, LAC Elmer Bert Ferguson is one of the 260 air force men flying to Tacoma, Washington, to set up a base from which the 426 Thunderbird Squadron will operate a Pacific airlift.

Most of the ground crew, of which LAC Ferguson is a member, will be stationed at McChord Field, but some of them may be placed at the far Eastern end of the run in Japan and at touchdown points along the way.

LAC Ferguson, an airframe mechanic, was a member of the RCAF during World War II and has been in uniform ever since. His wife, the former Isobel Clements lives in Norwood with their eight-year-old daughter Sharon.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Ferguson, the air force veteran lived all his life in the district before enlisting and was educated at the Norwood schools.

Hamilton Park Popular Place

Parks Superintendent Armar Butcher said today that Hamilton Park, along Jackson Park Creek between Bonaccord St. and Park Hill Rd., is attracting more family groups than ever this summer.

"The number of people there last Sunday evening must have been around 75. Some of them had supper, and it looks as if we'll have to make some more tables. More work will be started on the completion of the creek walls before long. Kiwanis Club is co-operating with the Parks Department in this work."

Mr. Butcher said parents bring their children to Hamilton Park to wade and play in the shallow water.

"By carrying out some development year by year, this should be one of our best parks".

Mr. Butcher said that three ball diamonds are in use at Morrow Park. One of them is for softball games, the two others for baseball.

"We have to keep the grass cut in all the parks. We have other ball grounds at Brinton Carpet, Western Clock, and the Trojan Club field. They are included in our grass cutting schedule. We go over the Crescent St. boulevard once a week, in addition to keeping the other park grass trim."

Burned In Barn

NOELVILLE, Ont., July 27—(CP)—Hubert Duval, 2, was burned to death Wednesday when fire destroyed a barn filled with hay on his father's farm about 50 miles southwest of North Bay. It was believed the $8,000 fire was started by one of the lad's two brothers, with whom he was playing.

Omemee Missionary Forced To Leave Quebec Village

"They've had all kinds of trouble," said Mrs. W. C. Veals of Omemee, commenting on a news story concerning the plight of Baptist missionaries in Quebec. Mrs. Veals' daughter, a missionary for more than five years, told reporters Wednesday that she and Helen Hall, daughter of a Baptist minister in Hamilton, had been "forced to leave" the village of Evain, near Noranda in Quebec.

Mrs. Veals said 'They weren't put in jail or anything like that, they were just forced to leave."

"They've had this trouble a lot. Once the priest (Father J. Cote of Evain) came and told them to leave the village or they would be arrested.

"The girls didn't leave; they just went on with their work. They told the priest there was no charge he could have them arrested on."

Home Two Weeks Ago

Eileen Veals, who was home for vacation two weeks ago, has been arrested "two or three times, now," according to her mother, and has spent three months in jail."

Eileen, said her mother, has been a missionary in Quebec for three years, starting in Val d'Or, then moving to Malartic and finally to Noranda and Evain.

The parish priest of Evain, Father Cote, said he had not ordered the girls to leave town, but said he told his parishioners to take no notice of them.

The girls claimed Wednesday that they encountered obstacles after they started door-to-door preaching and that they were "forced to leave."

DIES IN WESTON

John W. Campbell, 35, a former resident of Lindsay, where he played with local baseball, softball, hockey and football teams, died in hospital at Weston Wednesday after two years' illness.

GREASE IN OVEN

Some cooking grease spattered inside the oven, caught fire late Wednesday night in the Ritz Cafe, George St. Firemen put out the blaze with a handpump. There was no damage.

Havelock Youth Hurt In Oshawa

A Havelock youth is lying seriously injured in Oshawa General Hospital after being struck Wednesday morning by a falling brick.

He is Hugh Matthews, 18, currently employed on the construction of Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church, Oshawa. When the accident occurred he had just finished hoisting bricks to a point near the peak of the roof.

One of the bricks fell 30 feet and struck Mathews a glancing blow on the head.

He was taken to hospital with severe scalp lacerations and other head injuries. Shortly after he was admitted he became unconscious. The full extent of his injuries will not be known until X-rays photos have been studied.

Recluse Tosses Rock To Get Jail Term

KIRKLAND LAKE, July 27—(CP)—Percy Legget, bearded 58-year-old recluse who lives in a tent near Charlton, is on his way back to Haileybury jail today where he will serve one month at hard labor. He was convicted of breaking the liquor store window.

Police testified that the hermit came to the police station Monday demanding that he be locked up and fed. Refused, he went to the liquor store, picked up a rock, and hurled it through the glass.

LIBRARY BOOKS

There are nearly 20,000,000 books in Canadian public libraries.

Kinmount Mill Has Capacity 15,000 Ft. A Day

LINDSAY, July 27 (ENS) — Kinmount's new planing mill, owned by the Phillips Lumber Co. and built this spring, has a capacity of 15,000 board feet a day.

It is another step for the lumber company, formed in 1905 by the late J. H. Phillips, whose widow, and sons Ralph, Hugh and Ross, are carrying on the business.

Power for the mill is supplied by a 100 horsepower motor and a 50 horsepower diesel bulldozer. Shavings are exhausted through a 14-inch pipe.

Logs are hauled to the Phillips sawmill south of Kinmount by truck and the rough lumber is then drawn to the new mill for finishing. The mill is also equipped with two circular saws and a bandsaw for cutting lumber to the desired specifications.

Drunk In Own Home Man Faces Charge

A man can be charged with being drunk in his own home—if his home has previously been declared a public place by a magistrate.

This was the position David Forbes found himself in today when he appeared before Magistrate R. B. Baxter, charged with being drunk in a public place.

Forbes is living in rooms at 158 Charlotte St., and last month the rooms were declared a public place by Magistrate W. R. Philp, after Forbes had been convicted of permitting drunkenness in the rooms.

The charge was adjourned to August 10.

AT KING FUNERAL

Senator J. J. Duffus was in Toronto today attending the funeral of the late Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

Funeral Train Took Lakeshore Route

The CNR train from Belleville, due in Peterborough at 8:15 a.m. (DST), was an hour late this morning.

CNR officials said it was not because of a mechanical failure of the train itself but it had to wait the extra hour for a connection in Belleville. The connecting train was late.

Incidentally, the special train carrying the body of the former prime minister of Canada, William Lyon Mackenzie King, did not pass through Peterborough. It went CNR by the Lakeshore route.

The state funeral for Mr. King was held Wednesday in Ottawa and he was buried today in the family plot in Toronto.

CLEARING HOUSE TOTAL

The total amount of cheques and notes exchanged by Peterborough branch banks through the Peterborough Clearing House this week amounted to $3,449,443, considerably higher than last week's total of $2,284,984.

Havelock Man Many Years Dies In Toronto

HAVELOCK, July 27—(ENS)—The funeral of Robert Barlow, 85, of Toronto, took place here Wednesday, five days following the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Beatty, of Toronto, formerly Cassie Barlow, which took place here Saturday.

Mr. Barlow, a retired CPR conductor and former resident of Havelock, having lived here from 1894 until 1913, died Sunday at his home, 177 Glendale Ave., Toronto, following an illness of about two months.

A service was held Tuesday evening at the Turner and Porter chapel, Roncesvalles Ave., Toronto, which was conducted by Rev. C. W. DeMille, a former minister of Havelock United Church, assisted by Rev. Lautenslager, of High Park United Church.

The service in Havelock United Church on Wednesday was conducted by the Rev. F. R. Vanderburgh. The pallbearers were: Joseph Hoffman, William Bullied, Carman Coon, E. J. Leeson, H. F. McNichol, and Frank Watson. Burial was in Maple Grove cemetery.

Born in Rawdon township, Mr. Barlow was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Barlow. He was a life member of Havelock AF and AM No. 435, and received his 50-year jewel in 1948.

He was the oldest member of the local IOOF, being a member of that order and also the LOL for 50 years.

Surviving besides his widow, formerly Sarah Ann Curtis, are a daughter and two sons, Muriel and Homer, of Toronto, and Lawrence C., of Detroit, Mich; three sisters, Mrs. Dan Kennedy (Lena) of Toronto; Mrs. John Burkitt (Effie), of Springbrook; Mrs. W. Rounbrough (Nettie), of Bloomfield; two brothers, James, of North Bay, and Jesse, of Bonar Law.

Corruption Among Bureaucrats Growing Problem In Soviet Union

By THOMAS HARRIS

STOCKHOLM — (Reuters)—Corruption among bureaucrats is becoming a serious problem in Soviet Russia, according to newspapers from Moscow and other parts of the country reaching here.

It seems to be worst in the building trades and on theh collective farms.

Big newspapers are reporting abuses and deficiencies but local censorship seems as tight as ever.

Foreign diplomats arriving in Stockholm say that newspapers from Kiev, Kharkov, Tomsk and other provincial towns are not allowed to be sold in Moscow. Some of these provincial newspapers are reaching Stockholm, however.

Nikita Krushiev, recently appointed Communist party leader for the Moscow province, complains in a full page article in "Pravda" that farmers are breaking the collective farms law by selling land to private individuals and embezzling farm property.

Need Discipline

"Labor discipline" he said, "must be strengthened to fight these vagabonds who are causing heavy losses to the public."

Hinting that farm managers are most often the guilty ones, he called for fewer bureaucrats.

"Izvestia" quoted the case of the public prosecutor in remote Tomsk who "took seven good horses from a collective farm and left in their place seven others such poor quality that five fell dead in a short time."

A comrade Nison of Tomsk, interviewed by the same newspaper, expressed the view that it is "almost impossible to stop these thefts."

Similar "embezzlements," as the Russian press calls these offences, are taking place in Estonia, incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940.

The principal Communist newspaper "Rahva Haal" reported that "Bourgeois Nationalists have sneaked into the collective farms and are trying to sabotage the spring sowings.

"Some have even become farm leaders or farm bookkeepers." It added. "They must be unmasked and purged."

"Izvestia" reported that "state funds are being embezzled and squandered" in war-damaged Kiev.

Swarming With Cheats

"The building board," the newspaper declared, "swarms with cheats and embezzlers."

As an example, it quotes a bill for 557,000 roubles (about $150,000) for repairing two blocks of flats in the city.

"The total value of the work done did not exceed 200,000 roubles," it said. "The rest was stolen."

"Izvestia" gives examples of how it was done. The repairs board submitted a bill for 8,000 roubles for repairing iron grills in the two buildings, though "a very inexperienced eye could see that the grill was very old and had been only slightly repaired and painted."

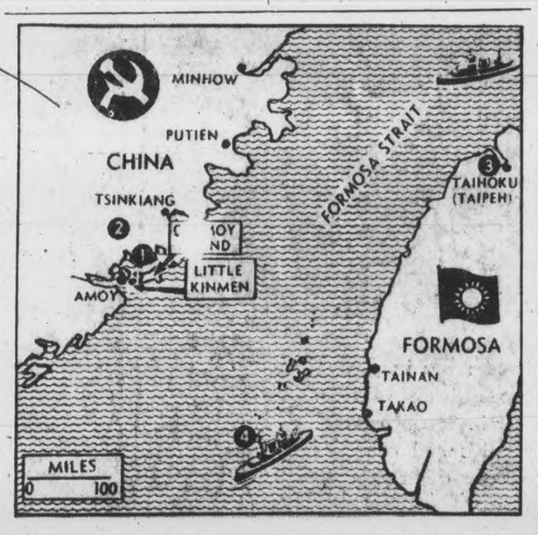
In the same way, the board received 4,500 roubles for new brickwork on 94 chimneys "But there were only 65 chimneys and not one of them had been touched," Izvestia stated.

2 Million Under Arms

LONDON, July 27 (AP)—Defence Minister Emanuel Shinwell said Wednesday Russia has 2,800,000 men under arms, including "an appreciable number in immediate readiness" in eastern Germany.

COAL RESERVES

More than three-quarters of Canada's coal reserves are in Alberta.



NEXT STOP? — Chinese Communist in Amoy reported bombardment of Nationalist-held Quemoy (1) and Little Kinmon Islands. Communist troops were reportedly moving to the coast area (2) which could be used for an invasion of the islands. The Nationalist government at Taipeh (3) and the U.S. 7th Fleet (4), assigned to combat an invasion of Formosa, were watching development closely.

Blind UK Chinese Good Secretary

VANCOUVER—(CP) — Gordon Chew, 28-year-old recent arrival from Lancashire, has all the qualifications of a good stenographer.

He can take shorthand, retype the shorthand into letters, and work on all types of office forms.

But he's not an ordinary stenographer. Gordon Chew is blind.

He takes his dictation on a Braille shorthand writer, a machine similar in many ways to a typewriter. Later his experienced finger tips "read" the dictation and he then transfers it to letter paper.

Gordon will be looking for a job later on and he's confident he'll find one. Right now he's staying with an aunt and learning about Canada.

"I have the training that enables me to go into an office and compete with normal persons for a normal wage," he said.

Fool-Proof Lock Designed By Man In Pen

VANCOUVER — (CP) —He's given them a bit of trouble in his time, but now he's the fair-haired boy of local locksmiths.

That's 62-year-old Frank Dewey, who recently walked out of the Federal Penitentiary in New Westminster for the umpteenth time, with an invention that may lose him some of his best friends —a pick-proof lock.

Frank says it's impossible to pick the lock and locksmiths here who spent half an hour's labor on the invention—operating with delicate burglar tools—say he's right. Only a once-in-a-million fluke could do the trick, they say.

But Frank, who has spent only seven and a half years out of jail since 1924, says he never doubted his brain child's success from the moment he completed a working model of it in the penitentiary blacksmith shop.

The lock was turned out by the stock, cheerful convict in spare hours during a three-year sentence given him in 1947.

Lifetime Job

The burglar's bugbear — Frank's "twin master lock"—contains the customary pins or tumblers, which cause the opening action upon being juggled by the correct key.

What makes the lock well-nigh fool proof are "thousands of combinations," which Frank says would take a burglar's lifetime to run through.

A would-be Jimmy man's task is made even more difficult by the lock's failure to open until the cylinder turns a preliminary 30 degrees. And at 30 degrees certain pins are sealed from probing picks, preventing the lock from opening.

During a brief respite from prison in the mid-forties, Frank patented another lock with the backing of a Vancouver specialty baker, but it was never put into production.

This time Frank is hopeful of making enough on his invention to buy a fishing boat and stay out of trouble for good. Vancouver police would appreciate the effort.

Stays Execution

RICHMOND, Va., July 27—(AP)—Judge M. Ray Doubles Wednesday ordered stays of execution for seven negroes sentenced to die for the rape of a white woman. Counsel's petition contended the seven men were denied "equal protection of the law."

MINERS FROM KOREA — Six smiling Canadian miners who escaped from Southern Korea ahead of invading Communist troops look over momentos of the Far East after arriving by air at Windsor, Ont. Diamond drill experts, they went to Korea in April under a United States Marshall Plan development of coal mines and narrowly escaped in the first day of the invasion. Left to right are: Joseph Malette, 47, foreman of the group; Sam Welcher, 44, and Napoleon Cousineau, 49, all of Timmins; John Forget, 26, of Haileybury; Dyilio Sertoretto, 35, of Rouyn, Que., and Roger Forget, 23, of Haileybury.

British Colonies, Said Showing Health, Wealth Improvements

LONDON — (CP) — Recently-developed drugs are expected to bring tropical diseases under control far more rapidly than could have been foreseen a few years ago. This forecast is made in the British Government's annual report on colonial territories.

The report tells the story of striking improvements during the past decade in the health of those living in the colonies. Details are also given of economic developments which have produced better living standards

The colonial office considers that the improvement in health is due greatly to increased control of malaria. This has been assisted by the development of DDT.

For example, malarial mosquitoes have been completely eradicated from Cyprus, largely owing to repeated spraying with DDT during the last three years Before the Second World War, there were 18,000 cases of malaria every year on the island; last year there were only 100, none of which were due to new infection. Ninety-five per cent of the inhabitants of British Guiana are protected from malaria by similar means.

Cyprus is also notable for the fact that the death rate now is among the lowest in the world. Infant mortality has also shown a spectacular decline; from 180 per 1,000 in 1940 to 70 last year.

Increased Longevity

Health statistics from Jamaica, Trinidad and British Guiana indicate that this trend is general in British - administered territories Longevity is these countries is estimated to have been increased by more than 15 years since 1921.

The death rate in Singapore is also low and stands at the same levels as that of the United Kingdom. Infant mortality has also declined. It dropped from 180 per 1,000 in 1940 to 72 last year. Singapore now claims to be the healthiest seaport in the east

350 Major Projects

The section of the report dealing with economic development states that there are some 350 major projects now in hand. These are estimated to involve a capital expenditure amounting to £400,000,000 ($1,240,00,000). The projects range from poultry-farming in Gambia and logging in British Guiana to cement-making in northern Rhodesia and sealing in the south Atlantic.

Yields of many important products supplied by British colonies showed large increases in the past year. There was record production of Sisal in Tanganyika and sugar in Mauritius and Jamaica. Exports of gold, manganese, copper, tin diamonds, bauxite and oil were expanded.

Britain continues to be the largest single market for colonial products, which comprise nearly 10 per cent of her total imports.

Banking System For Food Storage

WISBECH, Cambridgeshire, England — (CP) — A safety-deposit box for food is Britain's newest idea.

Huge refrigerators are divided into "strong boxes" and can be rented for 3d. (four cents) a pound of merchandise stored. Lockers containing 120 pounds have a yearly charge of £5 ($15.50).

The food banks, too few in number to accommodate the long waiting lists, are run like ordinary strong rooms. Each depositor receives a passbook for recording deposits and withdrawals. Customers are conducted to and from the boxes through corridors hung with icicles.

Many clients are farmers. One bank here opens each morning to a long queue laden with garden, poultry and pig produce.

Most deposits are made in the summer months for use during the winter when prices are high.

Minister Charges Town Idolatrous

BRIGHTON, England —(CP)— This holiday town of piers, playgrounds and expensive hotels has a rebel in its midst.

The Rev. Ernest Carter, 36-year-old minister of Salem Baptist Church, displays outside his church a poster labelled "idolatrous Brighton," showing a crudely-drawn idol and the town's coat of arms.

In a sermon, Mr. Carter demanded that the words "in Deo Fidemus" (we trust in God) should be removed from the coat of arms.

"Brighton has made the words a mockery," he said. "The present generation does not even pretend to worship God.

"I have been told my remarks will do the church more harm than the cinemas. Was there trust in God . . when they permitted the cinemas to open on Sundays?"

Entertainment managers declined comment on the minister's remarks.

Australians Preparing To Grow Rice In North

By LOUIS L. LECK

SYDNEY, Australia — (CP) — thoughtful Australians always have been concerned about the empty spaces in the north west. This vulnerable, uninhabited land is a national danger area.

A report was presented recently to the Commonwealth Government which gives grounds for even greater anxiety.

The report states that huge potential rice fields lie in this area. It was prepared by W. Poggendorff, chief of the division of plant industry in the Department of Commerce.

Australia's oriental neighbors, urgently needing more living space for their over-populated territories, have long cast envious eyes on the northern territory. They will now be able to point to an official Australian report, saying that the commonwealth has the very land they so urgently need to grow their staples food—rice.

These hundreds of thousands of acres of potential rice-growing land are at present lying idle. At best, they are used as occasional pastures for wandering herds. The reaction of Australia's neighbors is not hard to predict.

The chairman of the Rice Equalization Association, A. E. Symons, says that "before the war there was an exportable surplus of rice amounting to 6,500,000 tons, most of which came from Burma, Siam and Indo-China. Today this supply has dwindled to less than 1,500,000 tons, and is still dwindling because of the turmoil in those countries."

These great rice-exporting countries have been disrupted by Communist infiltration, on top of the damage done to their paddy fields by the Japanese Their embankments were broken, their water buffalo killed, and their fields allowed to grow over with weeds.

This results in more mouths to feed and less rice to feed them with.

It is certain that the existence of the tremendous rice-growing areas of the northern territory will be headlined in the newspapers of the east, especially in the south-west Pacific area.

What can be done to protect the so-called "back door of Australia?"

Need Fast Development

There is only one effective method of protecting it. That is fast development.

Poggendorff's report contains clear-cut proposals for action. A great deal of work has already been done by the commonwealth scientific and industrial research organization and the western Australian government. The next step is large-scale experimental planting and further observations on flood levels and rainfall.

As soon as 10,000 acres are under crop, the Australian rice industry is prepared to erect a mill. With the resultant growth of a township around the mill and increased utilization of the land, the commonwealth hopes to avoid censure and pressure from the crowded countries of south-east Asia.

CCF Council Will Call For Greater Support

By DAVE STOCKLAND

VANCOUVER, July 27—(CP)—The CCF National Council has decided to call for greater Canadian support of United Nations forces in Korea, full support of UN policy generally, and international control of the atom bomb.

How rank-and-file delegates attending the party's biennial national convention here will react remains to be seen. Emergency resolutions here were drafted by the council in closed session. Probably they will not be debated until Friday.

Reconvening of parliament "at the earliest possible moment" is asked in the Korean resolution because "grave decision should not be taken by the government without consulting parliament."

"The burden of the military action to halt aggression in Korea should not be left to one nation alone," it added.

Hollow Promises

Internally, the Liberal government was accused of a "shocking betrayal," and of riding to victory on hollow promises.

This was one of a dozen resolutions endorsed as delegates from every province but Newfoundland began general sessions.

One nine-point resolution gave an outline of CCF proposals for "lasting prosperity." It includes national economic planning and control of major investment; expansion of public ownership to reduce "irresponsible" control by private monopolies; a "bold" program of public development; and the expansion of international trade.

Reaction of left-wing forces in the party to the Korean resolution remains uncertain. Last year, at the British Columbia party's convention, one group split on the Atlantic Pact, backed by the national CCF.

3 Point Demand

A three-point demand is made in the atom-bomb resolution: International control of atomic energy; establishment of effective sanctions against violations; destruction of present stocks along with a ban on manufacture.

But it adds:

"We emphasize again that mere conventions outlawing the use of the atomic weapons, with effective control, cannot safeguard the world against the secret development of atomic bombs."

A call for an all-Canadian route for natural gas pipelines from the prairies to the Pacific coast, rent controls on all housing until supply meets demand, and a national health program are included in other approved resolutions.

Chairman Retires

Notice that a C.C.F. government in Canada would not eliminate the profit motive from all business was included in the report of Prof. Frank R. Scott, of Montreal, who announced he will retire this week from the position of national chairman.

"We do not oppose the making of a profit in all its forms," he said. "The profit motive, under proper control, now is and will be for a long time a most valuable stimulus to production."

Prof. Scott said prosperity in Canada has damaged C.C.F. strength. This was echoed by David Lewis, who will resign from his national secretary's post.

"It is clear," Mr. Lewis said, "that conditions in this country are temporarily against a rapid advance in Socialist support."

Phone Polls Mar BC Beauty

VANCOUVER (CP).—British Columbia's scenic beauty takes a beating from poorly-placed telegraph poles.

That's the observation of sun-bronzed Eric Cooke, 40-year-old Englishman who has cycled some 20,000 miles in Canada and the United States since he left England four years ago.

Cooke originally set out for New Zealand but he says he fell in love with Canada. He decided to make a photographic tour of the Dominion.

Picture snapping jaunts in Canadian wilds have caused the five-foot three-inch cyclist his share of grief. Once in the Rockies he wandered in rugged grizzly bear country for 15 hours before reaching civilization by following a creek.

Besides himself, Cooke pedals a 60-pound kit, including a tent and sleeping bag, on his cross-country hops. He's had to buy five new tires for the rear wheel of his bike since he left his home in England.

WALTER HARVEY BAILEY

Walter Harvey Bailey, 80, of Scarboro, died on Tuesday in Toronto following a lengthy illness. He was born in Norham, Ont., son of the late William Bailey and Levinia Carr and before moving to Scarboro 20 years ago, lived in Peterborough, where he conducted a decorating and tinsmithing business.

He leaves his wife, the former May Mongraw and a son, Walter J. Bailey, both of Scarboro, and another son, Lloyd of Peterborough. A sister, Miss Winnie Bailey, also lives in this city. Mr. Bailey was a former member of All Saints' Anglican church.

Funeral service will be held on Friday at 2 p.m. at the Kaye Funeral Home. The Rev. W. H. Kibblewhite will officiate and burial will be at Little Lake cemetery.

Heads Alliance

CLEVELAND, July 27—(AP)—A scholarly 56-year-old English minister Wednesday became president of the World Baptist Alliance. He is Dr. F. Townley Lord, pastor of the Bloomsbury Baptist church in London and editor of the Baptist Times. He succeeds Dr. C. Oscar Johnson of St. Louis, president since his election in Copenhagen in 1947.

Tried Save Husband

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., July 27—(AP)— A 19-year-old wife died Wednesday in a vain attempt to save her husband from electrocution. Neighbors found Mrs. R. L. Cox gripping an electric line wound around the body of her husband, R. L. Cox, 23. Cox planned to electrify a fence around a grass patch and had strung a wire from an electric line atop his garage.

Elephants Help

STETTLER, Alta., — (CP) — Several elephants with a circus outfit here gave an unscheduled performance recently when heavy rains made roads almost impassable between Stettler and Lacombe. The elephants were used to haul bogged-down vehicles out of ditches.

Editor Finds Press Conference Extremely Rewarding Meet

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

LONDON—(CP)—W. L. Andrews, editor of The Yorkshire Post, believes the Seventh Press Conference in Canada last month produced results of far-reaching benefit to the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Reviewing the conference deliberations which he attended as a United Kingdom delegate, Mr. Andrews said that during the early stages of the Canadian tour he had suffered twinges of conscience.

"We were enjoying richer hospitality than I ever knew before. Did we deserve all that our hosts were doing for us with New World open-handedness? Would our achievements in conference justify all this festivity?" he asked.

"Without hesitation I report that the conference attained abounding success. Canada, 1950, will be remembered for a richly fruitful Imperial Press Conference, with marked effects on press freedom, training and co-operation. The outcome exceeded our hopes."

Solve Problem

Some of the delegates, he said, had taken racial restraints and misgivings to the conference. They had feared clashes and discomforts. Could Indian and Pakistani, lately at loggerheads, clasp hands in brotherly love? Would they readily share the social life of the men from Johannesburg, Cape Town and Durban, as if no bittering issue had arisen over the position of Indians in South Africa? Daily companionship had solved all these problems.

The spirit of genuine friendliness had been exemplified at the close of the conference when India, Pakistan and Ceylon had joined in the hope that an early Commonwealth press conference would be held in their countries.

Mr. Andrews felt that some of the delegates had been astonished to find influencial English editors so far removed from the "stiff and starchy imperialists of tradition." They had been surprised at their eagerness to learn about the problems of other peoples within the Empire.

Open-minded Attitude

It was in keeping, he said, with this open-minded attitude that the conference had declared in favor of changing the name of the "Empire Press Union" to "Commonwealth Press Union." The effect of the change in name would be to strengthen the organization in numbers and spirit. It would become more influential.

Summing up, he said the conference had resulted in the welding of the delegates into a solid force of good-will for mutual help.

"It will be impossible for us to go back to purely insular and provincial ways of thought about our common problems," Mr. Andrews declared. "The delegates are all eager for more co-operation in order to strengthen our newspapers as bulwarks of the Commonwealth and safeguards to British freedom."

MacArthur Glad Of UK Troops

A U.S. AIR STRIP IN KOREA, July 27—(AP)—General MacArthur today made his second surprise visit to the Korean warfront and expressed complete confidence "in ultimate victory".

Reporters asked his reaction to news that Britain, Australia and New Zealand will send troops to Korea.

"Nothing will please me more than to have British Commonwealth troops here," MacArthur said. "I fought in association with them for many years and I have the highest degree of confidence in them. They cannot be excelled.

"As you know, the Australians are my blood brothers."

MacArthur confererd with his highest-ranking officers on the scene. There was speculation that high-level strategy decisions were reached.

Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding the Eighth U.S. Army, said troop reinforcements were discussed in his 90-minute conference with MacArthur. This gave rise to hopes that badly-needed troops may not be far away.

Shaw Celebrates Birthday By Offering A New Play

AYOT ST. LAWRENCE, HEREFORDSHIRE, England, July 27—(CP) — George Bernard Shaw, who says he has decayed into a dodderer, had a birthday Wednesday—his 94th. He said no one was to remind him of it.

The old man did celebrate, though, by announcing that he has written a new play called The Lady She Would Not.

Shaw passed the day quietly in his home. To his domestic staff he said: "No birthday is to be mentioned in this house."

To the post man he snapped: "I want to see no birthday cards. They will all be thrown out on arrival.

To a reporter: "I thought something might be expected of me to mark my birthday, as usual, so I've written another play.

"I've labelled it a little comedy, and called it The Lady She Would Not. It is in five scenes. I wrote the whole thing in seven days."

Not Supreme Distinction

To the U.S. chapter of the Shaw Society:

"The utmost I can claim for myself in my best days is that I was one of the 100 best playwrights in the world, which is hardly a supreme distinction."

Shaw's secretary, Miss Blanche Patch, who has been with him 30 years, cast the old boy in a new light, too. She told reporters:

"G.B.S. is really modest. He does not think he is a superman. He only regards himself as cleverer than most of us—which, of course, he is."

Miss Patch acknowledged that she isn't much of a Shavian herself.

"Shaw is glad of it," she said. "He rather laughs at Shavians and their Shaw worship."

Miss Patch had an anniversary of her own to celebrate. It was 30 years ago today she first went to work for Shaw. But she couldn't get the maestro excited over that either.

Getting Frail

When she told him, all he said was "The only thing that surprises me is that you have survived it."

She told reporters:

"His wit and his wits remain as lively as ever. He is frail but cheerful. He doesn't write as fast as he once did or answer letters as quickly, and he no longer conducts his visitors to the front gate as he always used to do.

"But he still keeps on working between breakfast and lunch."

I'M LONELY—Pat the Third, an Irish terrier and faithful companion of the late Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, looks lonesome and forlorn as he sits on the front porch of Mr. King's summer home, Kingsmere. He is apparently waiting for his master to return. Mr. King died suddenly last Saturday at Kingsmere.

Low Neckline Stirs Up Rome

ROME, July 27 (AP)—Italy's over-worked ministry of interior got another hot problem today: How low can a nice Roman lady's neckline go and still be nice?

Three Italian deputies, incensed over what they thought was too much exposure by a woman in a restaurant, now are in a court action brought by the lady. Two of them have asked the interior ministry for a ruling to bolster their case.

The lawmakers, one of them a woman, objected to the low neckline and bare back of Mrs. Edith Toussan and loudly demanded that she don a jacket. The discussion got so loud police had to be called, but no one was arrested. The deputies are Oscar Luigi Scalfaro, Umberto Sampietro and Signorina Vittoria Titomanlio.

Signora Toussan has decided to fight for the rights of women to keep in the current mode and to keep cool on hot summer days. She has charged the deputies with "attempted violence, injury and menace."

Today Scalfaro and Sampietro filed a question in the chamber of deputies demanding of Interior Minister Mario Scelba what measures are being taken to stop "a mode that offends the morals and dignity of citizens."

Havelock Newlyweds Honored By Friends

HAVELOCK, July 27—(ENS)—Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Keating (nee Ferne Towns) were honored recently when about 50 of their neighbors and friends gathered in the Orange Hall and entertained them at a miscellaneous shower.

The couple received many beautiful gifts which were arranged on a large decorated table.

The evening was spent in dancing with the music being furnished by Miss Shirley Bennett, piano; Gerald Wrightly, violin; and Lawrence Gerow, guitar. Refreshments were served.

City Of Vancouver Prepares For War Emergency

VANCOUVER — (CP) — One of three major Canadian cities with an organized civil defence and disaster committee, Vancouver stands ready to play its role at any time in the establishment of a national emergency plan.

This was the pledge of mayor Charles Thompson in a comment on Ottawa reports that the Federal Government is putting behind-the-scenes pressure on provincial authorities to organize Civil Defence committees on the Municipal and community level as a result of the Korean crisis.

Toronto has for some time had a civil defense and disaster committee and Hamilton has indicated its willingness to follow suit.

Competent Group

Mayor Thompson said "we have our organization already formed here. It is a fit and competent one — backed by a great deal of planning. The city stands ready to fit into any plans under consideration at Ottawa and will welcome Dominion leadership in Civil Defence, should the need arise."

Members of the disaster plan committee — formed early this year — include heads of the city's fire, police, engineering and law departments, as well as representatives of the armed services, major industries, public utilities and services.

The mayor said the committee will not intensify its activities as a direct result of the Korean situation but stands alerted to do so if the need arises.

Passenger Missing

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP) — The Cunard liner Queen Mary reported from sea Wednesday that a woman passenger is missing and is presumed lost overboard. The Queen Mary, due here today, messaged from a position about 110 miles south of Sable Island off Halifax.

MARRIED IN OSHAWA—Miss Lillian Irene McCann of Peterborough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David McCann of Oshawa, was married on Saturday to Mr. Ward William James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman James, Peterborough. Irene McCann-W. W. James Marry In Oshawa Church

Albert St. United Church, Oshawa, was the setting for a wedding on Saturday when Lillian Irene McCann of Peterborough was married to Ward William James of Peterborough. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David McCann of Oshawa and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman James of Peterborough.

The Rev. S. C. H. Atkinson performed the ceremony. Peach, pink and white gladiolus, palms and ferns, formed the background and the pews were decorated with white satin bows. Mrs. Joseph Wiltshire played the organ and accompanied Mr. William Jay who sang "Because" before the ceremony and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was gowned in white slipper satin fashioned with a moulded strapless bodice and richly flared skirt with which she wore a bolero of white Chantilly lace buttoned up the front to the high round neckline. Short matching lace mittens complimented the bracelet length sleeves. Wide French lace edged the double tiered finger tip veil of tulle illusion which was gathered to a halo of white net accented with clusters of pearls. For something "old" she wore a sapphire pendant on a fine gold chain belonging to her mother; a new penny in her shoe for luck and she carried a white Bible crested with red roses and rose petals caught in the white satin streamers.

Miss Dorothy Phillips of Peterborough was maid of honor, wearing flower embossed taffeta gown designed with a fitted strapless bodice and a fully gathered skirt with a triple peplum made of narrow folds. She wore a matching bolero with short sleeves and long mittens. Matching net fashioned her halo headdress, and she wore the bride's gift, a rhinestone necklace. Her flowers were a cascaded bouquet of deep pink roses tied with satin ribbon to match her gown.

Mr. Guy James of Peterborough was best man for his cousin. The ushers were Mr. Donald McCann, brother of the bride, and Mr. Lloyd Edwards, the bride's brother-in-law.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Court St., which was decorated with a variety of summer flowers and pink and white streamers and bells. To receive the guests, the bride's mother wore a street length dress of silver grey silk crepe, a small black straw hat with pink flower accents, black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's mother, who assisted, wore a navy blue crepe dress, a wide brimmed flower trimmed hat of white lace straw, white accessories and white roses.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Joseph Burgess. The Senior Women's Association of Albert St. United Church was in charge of the wedding luncheon with Mrs. Edward Snowe of Arthur, Mrs. Howard Vann and Miss Ruth Burgess of Oshawa serving.

The bride and groom left for Mission City, British Columbia. They expect to be away three weeks and on their return, will live in Peterborough. For travelling the bride wore a pink sheer dress, a short top coat of natural beige with a matching flower trimmed hat.

Canadian Accent Popular In British Radio

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON—(CP)—British radio sometimes sounds as though the programs were being piped in from Canada.

Twirl your dial these days and you'll probably hear a lumberjack tune from Jacques LaBrecque, of Montreal, a short story starring Robert Beatty of Hamilton, or a wild west show with Big Bill Campbell, of Ottawa and Toronto.

A survey shows that there are at least 25 Canadians toiling regularly on British networks. They include script men, cowboy singers, gag writers, announcers and commentators.

Why this Maple Leaf monopoly? BBC chiefs say Canadian accents —pitched neutrally between a Texas drawl and Oxford la-de-da —are the big draw.

"English people got used to Canadian voices during the war," a program director told The Canadian Press. On the other hand, a really broad American accent sometimes produces definite antagonisms."

Ears Attuned

Ivor Brown, Fleet Street expert on words and diction, wrote in a Sunday newspaper that the war attuned English ears to North American pronunciation. Now many regard it as a new way of "hearing" words.

Winnipeg's Stewart MacPherson once was Canada's No. 1 man on the BBC. His staccato delivery and breezy manner overshadowed all rivals. Now that he's gone back to North America, a cast of youthful, talented compatriots is coming to the top.

Bernie Braden

One of the hardest-working is 33-year-old, go-getting Bernard Braden, of Vancouver, who has his own show, "Breakfast With Braden," teams with actress wife Barbara Kelly on a comedy program and generally monopolizes so much radio time that fellow artists talk wistfully of a program to be called "Half an hour without Braden."

Another husband-and-wife team from Vancouver—Arthur Hill and Peggy Hassard—are heard in radio plays when not busy on stage or screen. Hill has just finished "Scarlet Thread," a movie in which he plays a Canadian-born Cambridge Don.

Scripts for popular programs are provided by Toronto's Don Harron and Eric Nicol, of Vancouver. Other contributions from the coast city are actors Warren Stanhope and Jon Farrell.

The regular cast of "Riders of the Range," a documentary-type western, includes Charles Irwin, of Sherbrooke, Que., orchestra leader Jack Fallow, of London, Ont., film star Paul Carpenter, of Montreal, and Macdonald Parke, of Cornwall. Parke, who once played football for Toronto Argonauts, portrays "the good sheriff, the bad sheriff, the rich guy—everybody but the hero."

MARRIED AT GEORGE ST. UNITED CHURCH—Miss Florence Irene Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Murray, was married to Mr. Albert Mills, son of Mrs. May Mills and the late Mr. Mills. The Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated. Duke Studio Photo

Florence Irene Murray Married to Albert Mills

Roses and lilies provided the setting in George St. United Church for the wedding of Florence Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Murray to Albert Mills, son of Mrs. May Mills and the late Mr. Mills. The Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated and Mr. Charles Allen, organist, played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a powder blue gown trimmed with blue lace. Her hat was of white nylon and styled in sweetheart design. She carried a bouquet of blue and pink roses. Mrs. Lloyd Mills was bridesmaid and she wore a pink dress trimmed with pink lace and white accessories. Her hat was of white nylon and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The groomsman was Mr. Bruce Mills. Ralph Murray and Wesley Mills were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Empress Hotel where the bride's mother received wearing a blue nylon gown a pink hat and a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother assisted. She wore a deep blue gown, a blue hot and a corsage of pink carnations.

Later the bride and groom left for a trip to Toronto. For travelling, the bride wore a navy blue suit with white accessories.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Mills will live in their new home on Sunset Blvd.

12,000 Priests Killed or Jailed By Reds - - Vatican

VATICAN CITY, July 27 (AP) —Approximately 12,000 Roman Catholic priests have been killed or made prisoners or exiled by the Communist regimes of Russian satellites during the last five years, the Vatican radio said today.

The radio broadcast its charges in all languages, including those of Iron Curtain countries.

The Vatican broadcast listed the number of priests slain, jailed, exiled and impeded in their ministries in each of several European countries.

In the Ukraine alone, since 1945, more than 3,600 priests have been killed and 1,000 churches and chapels closed or razed, the radio said.

The following figures were given for other countries:

Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—1,000 priests killed or jailed.

Poland—1,000 priests deported (usually to Siberia).

Czechoslovakia — 300 secular priests jailed; the number of regular priests who met the same fate unknown.

Hungary—About 1,000 religious (priests and nuns) jailed; 538 put to death or deported; another 580 religious persons removed from their ministries.

Romania — More than 700 priests victims of religious prosecutions.

Bulgaria—120 priests arrested or exiled.

Yugoslavia—1,954 priests put to death, arrested or deported while another 400 sought refuge abroad.

Albania—715 ecclesiasticals including all of the country's bishops, impeded from conducting their ministries.

PICKETS PICKET — Clyde E. Palmer, left, publisher of papers at Texarkana, Ark.-Tex., and El Dorado, Ark., with his granddaughter, Virginia Lee Palmer, parades in front of the Texarkana Gazette and News. They're picketing the International Typographical Union picket at right. Palmer's printers went out on strike, but called it a lockout. Palmer claims printers reluctantly struck under pressure from the ITU's national leaders.

MR. AND MRS. DONALD R. C. FLOYD cut their wedding cake at a reception held at the YWCA after their marriage ceremony in St. James United Church Saturday. Before her marriage, the bride was Miss Betty Loreen Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon.—(Choate Studio Photo)

Donald R. C. Floyd Marries Miss Betty Loreen Gordon

The marriage of Betty Loreen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon, and Donald Richard Charles Floyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Floyd, was solemnized in a double ring ceremony in St. Jame's United Church, Saturday.

The Rev. Fred Craik officiated and Mrs. Charles Renaud played the wedding music. Before the ceremony, Mrs. Ethel Minnifie sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Because" during the signing of the register. The church was decorated with ferns and white satin bows on the pews.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin nylon yoke and lace off-the-shoulder effect. The bodice was fitted with tiny buttons down the back to the waist. The skirt was caught up in the front in old crinoline style showing lace petticoat. Her veil was of embroidered net in cap style, caught up with a halo of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of carnations, gardenias and bouvardia with white streamers.

The matron of honor was Miss June Gordon, sister of the bride She was frocked in green marquisette with matching gloves and matching headdress of flowers. The bridesmaids were Miss Freda Floyd, sister of the groom and Mrs. Keith Gordon, sister-in-law of the bride.

Miss Floyd wore a gown of pink taffeta with matching gloves and headdress of net and Mrs. Gordon wore a yellow organdy gown with matching gloves and headdress of net Pauline Byrd, niece of the bride, was flower girl and was frocked in an ankle green dress of pale green taffeta and lace with hat to match. She carried a nosegay of roses and forget-me-nots. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of delphinia, roses, and gypsophila and streamers. Jimmie Gordon, brother of the bride, was ring bearer. He carried the two rings on a white satin pillow edged with gold braid.

The groomsman was Mr. Kenneth Floyd, brother of the groom. Mr. Dean Wasson and Mr. Keith Gordon were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Y.W.C.A. where the bride's mother received wearing a dress of navy blue sheer with a navy and white polka dot hat, white accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother assisted in a navy blue flowered dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The bride and groom left for a trip to Sarnia and the United States. The bride wore a navy and white dress with a navy and white polka dot hat and purse, white gloves and shoes and a corsage of pink roses.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd will live in Peterborough.

Dorothy Hoy Wed To Robert Laing In Campbellford

The marriage of Dorothy Romaine Hoy and Robert Stewart Laing was solemnized in Christ's Anglican Church, Campbellford, on Tuesday. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hoy, Meyersburg, Ont., and the groom is the son of Mrs. H. P. Laing and the late Mr. Laing, Peterborough. The Rev. J. McKibbon officiating at the wedding ceremony.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Lorne Hoy, the bride wore a street length dress of white embossed organdy, flowered headdress, white accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds. The bridesmaid, Mrs. L. J. Kelly, of Peterborough, sister of the bride, who wore a dress of daffodil yellow organdy and white accessories.

The groomsman was Mr. L. J. Kelly.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home. The bride's mother received in a powder blue gown with navy accessories. The groom's mother who also received wore a grey dress with white accessories

Later, the bride and groom left for a motor trip to points west. For travelling, the bride wore a powder blue suit with navy accessories.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Laing will reside at 272 Armour Rd., Peterborough.

Italian Mother Has New Life In Canada at 82

WINNIPEG — (CP) — Mrs. Concetta Iafolla, a slight, white-haired immigrant from Rome, says that since she arrived in Canada this month she has felt like a bride at a wedding feast.

Centre of affection and attention from her children, whom she had not seen for decades, Mrs Iafolla has been constantly confronted with tables laden with food and drink.

"I feel I'm getting married at 82," said Mrs. Iafolla, referring to the Italian custom of staging an elaborate feast at weddings.

Mrs. Iafolla left Italy to join the six of her seven children who live in Canada and the United States.

"I came to see my children; then I can die in peace," she said. "I feel now I can live to be 110 years old."

Staying With Son

She is staying at the home of her son Dave, who left Italy 30 years ago.

"I'm still a little boy to her," chuckled Dave.

Four of Mrs. Iafolla's children live in Calgary, which is her next stop. They are sons Achilles and Ascanio and two daughters, Mrs. Andre Di Paolo and Mrs. Joe Buccinni. Another daughter lives in New York.

Most of the time Mrs. Iafolla sits at home serenely watching the comings and going of her children and grandchildren.

But, when Dave played a recarding of tenor Beniamino Gigli singing the heartrending "Mamma" it was too much for the old lady.

She broke into tears and embraced the children. But after a while she was smiling again.

"Everything is good," she said. "I'm starting a new life at 82."

New Treatment Keeping Cottons Crisp

MANCHESTER, England (CP) —Thanks to a new textile process introduced here you soon will be able to buy a cotton dress that will stay as crisp after washing as when you picked it off the rack.

The new process, developed by the Calico Printers Association, will reduce ironing of cotton fabrics to a minimum and heighten their crease resistance.

Another development is a non-shrink finish of particular importance for rayon goods which will enable fabrics such as crepe and marocain to be washed without pulling or stretching. Research into pattern durability has yielded a "permanent glaze" process for cotton, spun and linen. With this, patterns in cloth can be glazed leaving the background unglazed.

There are also finishes which make spuns and linens stronger under abrasion, more translucent and permanently stiff.

The new group of processes, called calpreta, should be on the market within six months, manufacturers say.

Trailer Wives Enjoy Roaming Family Lives

MORDEN, Man. (CP).—Some 25 housewives here wash the outside of their homes as regularly as they do the kitchen floor.

They are the wives of American oil men working on the pipeline which will carry Alberta oil to the Lakehead. They live in luxury-fitted trailers.

They will stay in Morden as long as their husbands are at work nearby. Then they will move on as the pipeline progresses. A few months from now they may be with another pipeline job, perhaps in Venezuela or Mexico.

Every morning in this temporary community, the "lady of the house" can be seen in T-shirt and jeans, attacking the exterior of her trailer with scrub brush.

Ultra-Modern

The trailers are self-contained, finished in blonde wood and containing bedrooms, shower, kitchenette and living rooms. Most have electric refrigerators and ultra-modern stoves.

There are no facilities for heavy washing, so the pipeline wives usually send it out to a nearby laundry. However, a few do their own in large modern sinks.

Groceries are picked up twice a week with perishable foods stored in refrigerators. Tinned foods are stored in ample cupboard space in the kitchenettes.

No Waste Space

There is no waste space in the trailers. Good-sized cupboards line the walls and extra storage space is found under the chesterfield. Meals are eaten from a collapsible table that folds into the wall.

Wives who have babies bathe them in portable bath tubs. They are fed regularly with the help of a bottle warmer. Older children play with tricycles, wagons and toys. All go along when the trailer moves.

Mrs. L. Silvio, one of the wives, has been travelling over North America by trailer for 14 years. Her husband is a utility welder.

"Of course, I didn't have as much work until he came along" said Mrs. Silvio, glacing at her six-month-old son, Gerry. "There isn't much space, and when one thing is out of place the whole trailer looks upset."

Mrs. Silvio, whose home is Atlanta, Ga., says she hopes her husband will quit pipeline work when Gerry is old enough to go to school.

MARRIED IN ALL SAINTS' CHURCH—Miss Carol de LaPlante, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. LaPlante, was the bride of Mr. Harold Allen Lapp, son of Mrs. M. Garbutt, on Saturday. Her gown was of white embossed nylon over pale pink taffeta and her ring bouquet, of roses and sweet peas. (Garfield Studio Photo.)

Miss Carol de LaPlante Bride of Harold A. Lapp

All Saints Anglican Church was the setting Saturday, for the wedding of Carol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. DeLaplante and Harold Allen Lapp son of Mrs. M. Garbutt. The altar was decorated with summer flowers. The Rev. W. E. Kibblewhite officiated at the wedding ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white embossed nylon over pale pink taffeta, with a pink taffeta sash, white mittens and a hat of pale pink roses She carried a ring bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Miss Lois Robertson was bridesmaid. She wore a white embossed nylon gown over blue taffeta, blue mittens and white hat covered with blue flowers. She carried a nosegay roses and sweet peas.

The groomsman was Don Garbutt, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's residence where the bride's mother received in a grey lace gown, black linen hat and a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother, who also received, wore a gown of navy blue sheer, a pink lace straw hat and a corsage of roses.

For a motor trip to Toronto and the United States, the bride wore a navy taffeta dress with white accessories and a corsage of red carnations.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Lapp will live at 689 Elcombe Crescent.

New Drug Helps Mother-to-be

JOHANNESBURG, (CP).—The Union of South Africa at the moment, probably has the luckiest mothers-to-be in the world. They are able to obtain a cheap and effective antidote for the "morning sickness" nausea suffered by most women in the first months of pregnancy.

The preparation called hexadoxin, is at present only manufactured in South America, and is taken in tablet form. It has no toxic effects, and a week's course is, in most cases, sufficient to allay all the nausea common to early expectant motherhood.

Results have been "remarkable," said a doctor. In most cases nausea was instantly relieved. Only a very small percentage of sufferers did not obtain benefit.

Hexadoxin, according to medical experts, is a combination of a sedative and pyridoxine (vitamin B6). Both these substances have been used separately as treatments for "morning sickness" but when combined they have been found to be "synergistic"—each heightening the nausea-curing effect of the other.

Of Interest to Women

DOROTHY DIX

Husband Needs Some Space Why Not Room of His Own

DEAR MISS DIX: Before marrying twelve years ago I had about ten years of bachelorhood, during which time certain habits of freedom and self-determination became pretty well fastened. The restrictions upon these which came with wedded life were at first hard to take, but I finally accepted them as inevitable. During recent years, however, my work has taken me afield so that I am away from home for months at a time. These seasons of living my life as I wish, particularly the control of my rooming conditions and being able to have my clothes and belongings about me as I wish, have been so pleasant that it has set me to wondering why a measure of this comfort might not be feasible for a man in his own home. Consequently I have suggested certain changes in our home to my wife, to which she objects for no reason that I can see, except that it interferes with her supreme authority. I don't know what will come of it, but hope for some satisfactory solution.

T.M.C.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Wives are always asking how they can hold their husbands and keep them nailed to their own firesides, and I think that your letter offers a new and workable plan for solving this difficult problem. Moreover, it is a suggestion from the masculine point of view and it is one that wives have not tried, and that is giving a man a room of his own.

Decorated His Way

I mean his very own. A room he can paper as he pleases, furnish according to his taste and his idea of comfort, decorate as he chooses, and in which he can assemble all of the junk that he has gathered together and for which he has such an incomprehensible affection. And let no woman ever cross its threshold, not even to clean it up. Probably no wife will ever rise to the heights of doing this. Even if she is just enough to concede him a room of his own, she will pay herself for her nobility of fixing him up a den according to her own ideas and without any reference to his.

I believe that most husbands would be almost tearfully grateful for a room of their own, to which they could retire when feminine chatter began to get on their nerves and they felt that the children's quarrels would drive them to drink. For deep down within all of us there is a desire for some little spot that we can call our own, that belongs exclusively to us, where we can surround ourselves with our little gods that no alien hand ever touches, and where we can rest and invite our souls. Few men ever possess this luxury.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am happily married to a splendid man, or I would be happily married if it were not for my jealousy of his first wife. I am obsessed by the feeling that perhaps he does not love me as much as he loves her, and when he talks about her I get so greeneyed that I am fairly crazy and sometimes refuse to talk to him for days. Do you think I am foolish in being jealous over his dead wife?

MRS. M. K.

ANSWER: I think that any woman who has no rival nearer than the cemetery should be down on her knees thanking Heaven for her luck, instead of working herself up into a jealous frenzy. It is the live sirens a wife has cause to worry over, not the dead ones.

Certainly a wife is going out of her way to hunt for trouble, who ruins what would otherwise be a happy marriage by resenting the affection that her husband gave his first wife. That is water that has passed over the mill. That is something that is gone and done, and nothing in the world can alter it, or change it, or bring it back, and if you have any intelligence whatever you will just accept it that way and forget it.

No doubt your husband did love his first wife. Probably his love for her was more romantic, more filled with dreams than his love for you, because it was the love of his youth. But while a boy's love may be more poetic than a grown man's, the mature man's goes deeper, is tendered and more lasting. So you needn't feel that you have the worst of the bargain. In reality, you have the best.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My mother is a bad woman. She runs around with men and my father is nearly dead from worry over her conduct. Every one loks down on my sister and me and thinks we are no good because our mother is leading a loose life. Should I go on through many years like this, or marry the boy I am going with? I am 18 and have no happiness at home.

LONELY.

ANSWER: Social workers tell us that nothing so utterly demoralizes children as for their mother to go wrong. It takes away their every prop and stay and wrecks their faith in all that is good and pure and in the great majority of cases, sends the children to the bad themselves.

Eighteen is very young for you to marry, but if your boy friend is able to take care of you and if you are very sure you love him, I think you would have a better chance of happiness than you have for you that she is willing to with a mother who cares so little for you that she is willing to blight your prospects in life with her scandals.

Dixieland Jazz New Triumph For J. Pickens

By MARK BARRON

NEW YORK,—(AP)—She has sung nearly, every brand of music, bouncing her carreer as a top vocalist onto every vintage of today's music world from popular to opera to blues. And now Jane Pickens is treading into the rumble-bumble of Dixieland jazz.

A year ago she was singing the leading role in 'Regina," the operatic version which composer Marc Blitzstein made of Lillian Hellman's Broadway drama, "The Little Foxes." That was a good and serious play when Tallulah Bankhead played the role in the original play, and it was still a meritorious and tragic role when Miss Pickens put it in its musical version.

Today, the versatile Miss Pickens is starring on a program of another quality, a singing and musical show which they have been presenting at the Waldorf-Astoria and are now playing Saturdays on the NBC network on the "Chamber Music Society of lower basin street.

Wide Contrast

In contrast to the opera quality of her performances in Broadway's "Regina," Miss Pickens says that the "Chamber Music Society" is devoted almost entirely to "Muskrat Ramble," "Rockin Chair" and such other phases of barrelhouse, Boogie Woogie and the blues There also are such lyrical patterns as those based on "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "St. Louis Blues."

Miss Pickens, who was once a member of a singing team of sisters—Jane, Helen an Patti — in their home town of Macon, Ga., has not only been soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra at Carnegie Hall, but has two other distinctions unique for a pretty thrush who started out in the world of serious music.

She gave a joint recital with the Yale Glee Club and survived. She also co-starred on Broadway with Bobby Clark and Ed Wynn —and survived.

She says that the reason she survived such experiences is that she likes to eat and eat well She thinks that what really triumphed over the Glee Club. Clark and Wynn was that she knew how to cook southern fried chicken.

COOKBOOK OF THE WEEK

500 Successful Ways To Use Leftovers Told In Cookbook

Don't waste a single leftover! To use leftovers skillfully so that they are not recognized as such, sounds like a job for a wizard, but one glance at "500 Delicious Dishes from Leftovers," the second in the Examiner series of 24 Cookbooks is enough to convince us that even an inexperienced home-maker can perform miracles.

Every woman who plans meals on a budget is interested in saving money, and economy is one of the features of this remarkable booklet. However, from the finished product, you would never guess that these sumptuous dishes cost so little to prepare. For instance, the delightful Shepherd's Pie is made of leftover lamb and mashed potatoes —an excellent way to use the remains of that leg of lamb or lamb roast from Sunday's dinner.

It's a great source of satisfaction to know that nothing is wasted—that good use is made of every bit of food you purchase, and it's even nora satisfying to know that while you save money, you can still serve attractive and delicious meals.

The cookbook is conveniently arranged, too, so that you can start with whatever you find in the refrigerator, select your recipe and plan your meal around it. Meanwhile you're saving precious time and protecting your budget.

With this handy cookbook in your kitchen, you can utilize leftover eggs, fish, fowl, vegetables, meat, fruits, bread, cake, sour milk and cream, even coffee and cocoa in appetizing dishes that will make every member of the family cheer the results.

There are recipes for casserole dishes that are a meal in themselves, crisp salads, appetizers, desserts, pastries — and all with plenty of eye and appetite appeal. Such old stand-bys as Irish Stew and Brown Betty are included, as well as intriguing dishes like Kedgeree and Fricadellons with Noodles. Even luscious Baked Alaska can be made from leftovers if you know how.

In addition to the many appealing easy recipes for using odds and ends from your refrigerator, there are dozens of beautiful photographs that in themselves provide mealtime inspiration and menu suggestions.

This second cookbuok is ready now and may be obtained with only one coupon from any issue of the Examiner and 25c. Booklets are available at the Examiner office, your Examiner carrier or at Braund's Home Food Markets.

Bullfighter Look In Newest Hats

PARIS, July 27. (AP)—Women will have a bullfighter look next fall if they follow the hat styles presented today by leading French modistes Tegroux and Orcel.

Bicornes made of plush or beaver felt are favored by both designers. Some are replicas of the "Montera" worn by matadors in the Spanish bullring. Others are simply pillbox, cushion or brimless-porkpie shapes pinched out at each side into a bicorne effect.

One handsome affair had the bicorne brim in black Persian lamb and the crown in crimson velvet.

Tricornes are also popular. Legroux shows them with plain round crowns and tremendously wide brims slashed and folded back to form the tricorne.

Chechia hats—which look like shallow Cossack caps worn straight and yanked down a little to one side — are shown by Legroux in off-white plush, nettle and emerald green teddybear felt and even white ermine fur.

Toques with tremendously high crowns squashed, folded or draped down to a moderate size are also produced by Legroux. She has turbans as well, made in felt, and squat cloche styles entirely of shell-pink or white breast feathers tipped with rhinestones.

6—In Memoriams

HAMILTON—In loving memory of my dear mother, Amelia Hamilton, who passed away July 27, 1948.
I've lost a soul companion,
A life linked with my own,
I miss you more dear mother,
As I walked through life alone.
—Ever remembered by daughter Shirley and family.

WOODCOCK—In ever loving memory of our dear mother, Effie Woodcock, who passed away July 27, 1940.
If I had all the world to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more,
To hear her voice and see her smile,
And greet her at my door.
But all I can do, dear mother,
Is go and tend your grave,
And leave behind tokens of love
To the best mother God ever made.
—Ever remembered and sadly missed by daughters, Mrs. Eva Reid and Mrs. Grace Hetherington.

7—Cards of Thanks

The family of the late John Laird, Marmora, wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for the numerous kindnesses shown during their recent sad bereavement, also Mr. Fred Wells for his understanding at that time.

The family of the late Mrs. Francis Munden wish to extend their sincere thanks to the Rev. Kibblewhite and also their friends and neighbours for sympathy and floral tributes during their recent bereavement.

Servels Are Back

SERVEL REFRIGERATOR

The Refrigerator That Is Different!

THE ONLY REFRIGERATOR TRULY DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS BETTER THAN ALL OTHERS!

DIFFERENT:
Because it has No Motor.

BETTER:
Because it has No Motor.

NO MOTOR:
Means no Machinery to wear or cause noise.

NO MACHINERY:
Means absolutely silent operation. Service Free Operation

SERVICE FREE:
Because it has No Motor. No moving parts, nothing to wear, nothing to get out of order nothing to service.

SERVEL REFRIGERATORS:
Last many years longer, because they are not Mechanical Refrigerators.

IT IS CALLED THE
"MIRACLE OF ICE FROM HEAT"

Electric Models operate on a tiny electric element (takes the place of machinery).

Kerosene Models, where you are out of reach of Hydro, operate from a Small Aladdin Lamp.

Mother-In-Law Hurt In Crash Woman Charged

A charge of failure to obey a stop sign will be laid against Mrs. Louise Butlin, Toronto, following an accident Wednesday in which her mother-in-law, Mrs. Charles Butlin, 78, of Richmond Hill, suffered head injuries.

The younger Mrs. Butlin was driving east on Park Hill Rd., and went throgh the stop sign at Reid St., she told police. As she came onto Reid, she tried to avoil the children riding bicycles.

Mrs. Butlin told police she tried to apply the brakes, but her foot hit the accelerator. The car leaped forward across Reid St., hitting the high curb at the southeast corner, and striking a hydro pole.

The car came to rest with all four wheels on the sidewalk. Damage to the car consisted of a dented left front fender, the left front headlight broken, a broken windshield and damaged front axle. No damage was done to the pole.

The elder Mrs. Butlin was taken to Civic Hospital, where X-rays were taken. Her condition was reported good today by hospital authorities, but no report of the X-rays has been made.

Evelyn Doherty, 16, of 551 McKellar St., one of the cyclists, was knocked from her bicycle, but escaped with cuts to her ankles, elbows and thigh.

Break Into Dance Hall Take Gum And Candy

Thieves broke into the Brookside dance hall early today and got away with chocolate bars, chewing gum, and several other articles.

Also stolen were two coffee makers.

The dance hall, a mile east of Peterborough on Highway 7, was entered by a back door, which was pried open. Time of the breakin has not been established —either late Wednesday or early today, while it was still dark.

Earl Tully, proprietor, made the discovery when he went to the pavilion this morning.

Provincial Constable R. C. Russell is investigating.

Hold Funeral Service For Former Druggist

Funeral service for William John Kent, 83, for many years a druggist in Peterborough, was held today at the Belleghem Funeral Home. Mr. Kent established his business here more than 50 years ago, and his store occupied the present site of the Ritz Grill.

Pall-bearers were W. H. Lytle, E. L. Burnham, J. W. McDermid, E. G. and D. A. Abraham, and James Turnbull. The Ven. Archdeacon C. W. Balfour officiated, and burial was at Union Cemetery, Port Hope.

Mrs. Annie Fowler

Funeral service for the late Mrs. Annie Sophia Fowler, 73, of 930 Ford St., was held on Wednesday at the Comstock Funeral Home. The Rev. E. W. Rowland officiated and pall-bearers were Harold Moncrief, William Taylor, Harvard White, William Robson, Ernest Castle and Stanley Jackson. Burial was at Little Lake Cemetery.

Reported Improving

GUELPH, July 27 — (CP) — Wounded in the neck and shoulders by shotgun pellets said to have been fired by an irate farmer, James Jotham, 14, is improving in hospital here today. Robert Griffin, 60, district farmer, was remanded one week on $1,000 bail Wednesday on a charge of wounding.

SUGAR PRODUCTION

World sugar production is expected to reach a record 38,000,000 short tons.

Suit Quashed Against BC Businessman

LONDON, July 27 (CP) — A special commissioner today quashed a £500,000 ($1,550,000) suit against a Canadian business man and five co-defendants.

Ending court sessions believed to be among the longest recorded in British justice, commissioner Herbert Hull gave judgment in favor of Charles William Neville of Vancouver and Rottingdean, Sussex, and five other persons.

He said he was not satisfied that any of the defendants entered into a "general conspiracy" to defraud the Royal Mutual Benefit Society, as charged in the plaintiff company's statement of claim.

He also dismissed another charge that the defendants entered into 'separate" conspiracies to defraud the society.

Hull, a London barrister, said detailed reasons for his judgment would be given later.

On Holiday

Neville, about 60, now lives in Rottingdean and has listed his Canadian business address as Marine Building, Vancouver. Friends said they believe he and his wife now are on a holiday abroad.

The action dismissed today was launched in 1941. The society claimed that Neville, after acquiring control of it in 1935, caused a prospectus to be issued which resulted in £1,000,000 worth of subscriptions. In hearings which ended last April 5, lawyers for the society argued that the money went to enterprises promoted by Neville.

Gilbert Paull contended for the plaintiffs that the structure of nearly all the companies was arranged to enable Neville "to do what he pleased with their monies putting them into liquidation when it paid him."

The process of collecting and presenting evidence, along with lawyer fees, has cost a reported £100,000.

Co-defendants with Neville were Robert Dand, described as Neville's "first lieutenant"; Clifford Healy, former chairman of the society; William Turner, and representatives of mortgage and estate companies.

Firecracker Or Bomb Explodes Near Paper

NEW YORK, July 27—(AP)—A missile—described by the American Newspaper Guild (CIO) as firecrackers and by management of the New York World Telegram and Sun as a homemade incendiary device—exploded today outside the evening newspaper plant.

Part of the plant, whose editorial employees are on strike, was smoke-filled, but no one was injured.

Members of the Guild have been on strike over wages and other contract benefits since June 13. Union mechanical employees declined to cross picket lines and the big daily has not published since that time.

Jury Clears Officer In Prisoner's Death

KIRKLAND LAKE, July 27 — (CP)—Constable Thomas Whittle, 34, of the Teck township police, was cleared last night by a coroner's jury of blame in the death of William Bosak, 22, of Noranda, Que.

Bosak died Tuesday after being struck by a bullet fired by Constable Whittle in a chase. The bullet entered his brain at an angle from the base of the skull and lodged in his forehead. The policeman said the man tripped and fell just as he shot at his leg.

Vacation Pay Totals $1,790,000

OSHAWA, July 27 (CP)—This city is bulging with purchasing power as employees of General Motors Company of Canada, Ltd., receive their annual fortnight's vacation pay—the largest single pay in Oshawa's history at $1,790,00.

Some 8,700 employees are on vacation. Similar vacation payrolls in nine Oshawa plants holidaying at the same time have swelled this total. Most of the workers are spending their vacations out of town and many merchants are closing shop for the same two-week period.

UK Tea Buying Handed Back To Private Hands

LONDON, July 27—(Reuters)—The Labor Government has decided in principle to hand tea buying back to private enterprise.

Announcing this in parliament Wednesday, food minister Maurice Webb would not give a specific date for the end of government buying, but hinted it would be any time between now and April, 1951.

Rationing, price control and subsidies must continue for a time, he added.

Webb said the government had decided in principle that the London tea market should reopen in April, 1951. All sections of the trade had promised full co-operation.

Webb added a warning that the decision might have to be reviewed in the light of any international developments.

Government tea buying started during the war.

Wait Several Months

Tea traders said they would have to wait several months before being able to restart their business.

They said the Calcutta and Colombo auctions would almost certainly remain far more important than they were before the war.

They reckoned that resumption of London auctions would allow prices to reflect differences in quality, and thus encourage eastern producers to pay more attention to the better types. One of the criticisms of bulk buying, in tea and in other things, has been that it pays more attention to quantity than to quality.

Traders also hoped that enough tea would come from India, Ceylon and Africa to permit re-exports to countries which, for geographical, climatic or business reasons, prefer to buy through London rather than Calcutta and Colombo.

Beating Costs Watchman's Life

WINDSOR, July 27 (CP)—Injuries received in a mysterious beating early Wednesday proved fatal to Angello Favozzo, night watchman at the Windsor Textiles plant here. Favozzo died in hospital here.

A post mortem examination will be conducted today to determine the exact cause of death.

Favozzo was found uuconscious on the floor of the boiler room at the Textile plant. He had cuts about the shoulders and face and head injuries. The boiler room door was locked from the inside, and the condition of the room indicated that a struggle had taken place.

Preliminary investigation by Windsor police failed to show a theft or break-in.

No Word Received Yet From Jeep On Ocean

HALIFAX, July 27 (CP)—No word has been received since Monday from the 24-foot amphibious jeep "Half Safe" and her crew of two.

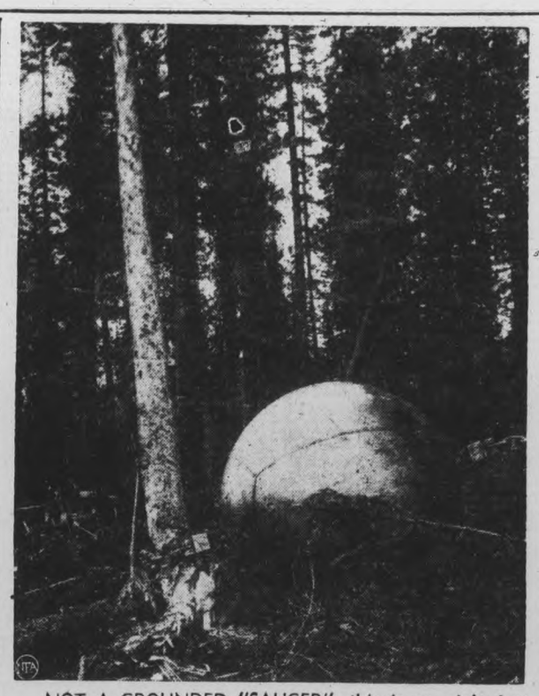
The jeep, capable of four knots, left Halifax eight days ago for the Azores, with Ben Carlin, 38-year-old Australian engineer as skipper and his wife as crew.

A Halifax RCAF radio "ham," who agreed to listen for the "Half Safe's" signals, hasn't heard from the Carlins since Monday.

The ham expressed fear that the jeep's engine had failed, as its radio was run off a generator, which in turned relied on the engine.

A RURAL PEOPLE

Of Ceylon's 6,700,000 population at least 85 per cent live in rural areas.



NOT A GROUNDED "SAUCER", this is an eight-foot steel "highball" used to clear forests in a hurry. Although the tree that's just been snapped off here looks as if it would hit the tractor in left background, it's just a photo illusion.

4½-Ton Ball Smashes Trees To Clear Land In A Hurry

By NEA Service

HUNGRY HORSE, Mont. — Heavy eight-foot diameter steel balls are being rolled over Montana forest lands, toppling huge trees like so many bowling pins.

These four and one half ton balls are an important part of a weird new method devised for clearing timber lands. It's dubbed the "highball," and it is proving just the answer for persons clearing land as economically as possible.

Some months ago, lumbermen S. L. Wixson and J. H. Trisdale, of Redding, Calif., received a contract from the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation for cleaning out 7210 acres of burned-over land. It's part of a 22,500-acre tract which eventually will be covered by water, as a reservoir behind Hungry Horse dam.

Using lots of imagination, the two hit on the idea of using a pair of diesel tractors to drag up to 500 feet of two-inch wire cable through the burned-over area, snagging down all the trees and brush caught in the loop.

Then came a contract for clearing the rest of the reservoir area. This land had been logged over. That meant stumps, and stumps can catch cables easily. So the contractors tried out eight-foot steel balls, to keep the cables four feet above ground to prevent snagging on stumps.

The cables are attached to each side of the big ball. Each of two tractors in the team is equipped with winches. When all the cable is let out, the tractors are anchored against trees or stumps. Then the cable is reeled in, with the ball holding the line high enough to escape the stumps.

The cable and ball are brought crashing through the timber as fast as a man can walk. Timber, brush and burned-over snags fall as though being hit by a hurricane. Removal of the stumps is not necssary since the land will be covered by water eventually.

Contractors are jubilant about the success of their new method. It's speedy and cost-saving. Working on fairly level ground, two tractors, 500 feet of line and one steel ball have pulled down everything on nearly 200 acres in four hours. However, a much better average, considering all types of landscape, is 100 acres per eight-hour shift.

The new method offers safety, too. The tractor operator is well clear from the area in which trees are being pulled down. So terrific is the tug that most tall trees are uprooted, thereby assuring sawable timber in good condition for the sawmill.

Warsaw Team Holds Norwood Outfit To Tie

NORWOOD July 27—(ENS)—Norwood married and single women combined Wednesday night to battle Warsaw's women to a 14-all sore in softball.

Warsaw in the top of the first opened the scoring with two runs and added six more in their half of the second before Norwood finally broke through with three runs. Both teams added three in the third. Norwood crept closer in the fourth when they held Warsaw scoreless and pushed three across. Again in the fifth they bettered the Warsaw women by three runs to two. Warsaw added one in the sixth to Norwood's two runs which tied the score at 14-all.

Lineups:

Warsaw—V. Clements, B. Edie, J. Freeburn, N. Payne, A. Watts, M. Darling, D. Davidson, M. Banks, B. Payne, J. Munro.

Norwood—L. Hie, E. Fleming, M. Shoup, R. Richardson, R. Baskin, I. Wannamaker, V. Mathews, S. Rusaw, H. Wilford, B. Andrews.

Say Copeland Will Make Things Tougher

CALGARY, July 27 — (CP) — Sensational performances by United States imports have been credited for much of Calgary Stampeders' success in their Grey Cup victory of 1948 and their runner-up showing last year.

But the Stamps' prize football package this year appears to be a Canadian.

Halfback Royal Copeland, blond pass-receiver who acquired his front-rank reputation in five seasons with Toronto Argonauts, is labelled Stamps' "Mr. Big" for 1950.

Leo Murphy, Cowboys' publicity director, calls Copeland "the best Canadian football star of these times." He is expected to "attract and excite record crowds and add immensely to the Calgary Stampeder football objectives."

After his surprise signing with Stamps this spring, unofficial reports had his salary as high as $10,000.

Both club president Tom Brook and coach Les Lear figure the western conference is going to be tougher to win this year than it was for Stamps the last two seasons.

"The league will be about 30 per cent stronger," says Brook, "but our club will be greatly improved in speed, depth and size."

The Canadian Rugby Union allows each squad seven U.S. imports. Lear already has eight Americans signed and there is talk of three more to come, which will find 11 competing for seven places.

Vanishes In Weston Seek Airman's Wife

TORONTO, July 27—(CP)—Mrs. William R. Richards, 27, who moved here from Ottawa a week ago with her airman-husband, disappeared Tuesday, Chief Constable Bruel Robertson of suburban Weston said today. Her husband, an R.C.A.F. Corporal, was transferred from Ottawa to No. 1 Equipment Depot in Weston.

Mrs. Richards, originally from Greensville in the Hamilton area, had lunch with her husband in a Weston restaurant Tuesday, returned to a boarding house, and left with $2.50 in her purse. Her husband said he knew of no reason for her disappearance.

She is described as five feet two inches tall, 118 pounds, with dark brown shoulder-length hair piled up in front, snub-nosed, and with a brown birthmark on her right forearm. She was wearing a white eyelet dress, embroidered with yellow leaves, and a black sweater coat.

Immortal Names

WALLINGFORD, Berkshire, England (CP).—Immortal to the residents of Wallingford are the names of FO. J. A. Wilding and Sgt. J. F. Andrew. In 1944 they stayed with a crippled bomb-laden plane to prevent it from crashing on the town. Both were killed. Now grateful townsfolk have named two streets on a new housing estate after them—Wilding Road and Andrew Road.

Great Changes On Trapline, Hotel, Beer Now

EDMONTON—(CP) — Northland trapping isn't what it used to be, says 46-year-old Seymour Evanson, Norwegian -American who traps beaver and mink on the upper Liard river in the Northwest Territories.

Building of the Alaska Highway has linked the northland's outposts with the modern world.

"There's a hotel and a beer parlor on my trapline now," says Evanson.

He and his wife, a city girl, can go to a movie show twice a week at the nearby Watson Lake Army base.

In summer they can see a baseball game once a week.

The lonely line camp has undergone some alterations, too. Evanson's main cabin, a neat four-room bungalow, is right on the highway. It's fully modern with hot and cold running water.

The Evansons now bring in their own supplies by truck, purchased since the highway was opened. That means another northland tradition has gone by the board.

"The days when you spent the whole summer packing in are gone," the trapper says. "It used to be a full summer job just getting ready for winter."

Robert Service wouldn't know the place.

9 Dentists May Drop Work On Children

HAMILTON, July 27—(CP)—Nine dentists of the local health department may abandon work on thousands of children's teeth, unless holidays with pay and sick benefits, enjoyed for many years and now claimed to have been removed by Board of Control, are restored to them.

The dentists were quoted as being "very dissatisfied" with the city's action in placing them on an hourly rate instead of the previous yearly basis, thus eliminating the holiday and sick benefits which had been theirs as part-time permanent employees.

The nine dentists work half a day every day, for five days, and they are said to have been considered as "permanent, part-time employees." One has 30 years with the health department, another about 18.

"Not only satisfied... we're astonished!"

50 Academy Road,
Westmount, Quebec.
June 13, 1950

Mr. Murray Byrens,
Mid-Town Motor Sales Limited,
1395 Dorchester Street West,
Montreal, Quebec.

Dear Mr. Byrens,

You said we would be satisfied with the Vauxhall's performance. You understate, sir! Not only are we satisfied—we're astonished.

The Vauxhall's maneuverability in Montreal's helter-skelter traffic turned out to be excellent, as you assured us it would be. But we were wondering how it would manage those roads up above Labelle and in the back country around Nominingue. Well, it managed everything from that early September construction mud to a one-deer cross-country track . . .

Our first long trip was an emergency flight to Detroit and back on an unseasonably hot late October weekend. We had changed to antifreeze for the trips up north, but that didn't faze that Vauxhall. It was a matter of some 1250 miles in about thirty hours driving time. Satisfactory, say we—considering the weekend traffic and the woolly fog we pushed through this side of Toronto one night. The Vauxhall's trunk took most of our luggage and there was room for the rest of it, and the four of us, inside.

I drove another make of car down to Albany a few weeks ago and got fooled three times by the pick-up. I had become used to the snap of the Vauxhall's acceleration when we turned out to pass. I found that the other car needed much more time and open road ahead. Three close calls driving me back into line were necessary before I caught on.

Driving a Vauxhall in winter we get a kick out of watching other cars at an intersection switch their tails around like angry lions trying to get started on ice. We just wait for them to slither over to the side while we go on our way. We're keeping the tires at 27 and they're gripping everything so far.

And there are a lot of little things we like about the Vauxhall: from the leather seats, the side signal lights, the heater, the footroom, to the way you can snap the windows shut on a second's notice with a flick of the wrist. But the main things are Vauxhall's ease of parking and the fact that we can afford to buy the gas—32 miles per is all right with us—and, well, we're just glad we didn't wait for that car we thought we wanted!

Thanks for everything.

Yours sincerely,
Parker L. Wearing

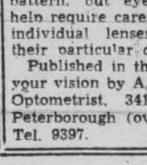
EYE TOPICS



LEEUWENHOEK, Microscope Maker

Anton Van Leeuwenhoek, of Delft, Holland, is probably the first man in all history to have seen bacteria—those minute specimens of physical life which are ordinarily called microbes or germs. Three hundred years ago, he peered through a tiny lens he made from a drop of water. Although he probably did not invent the microscope, nevertheless he was the first to use that potent instrument in the history of human progress. Furthermore, he made his own lenses, constructed his own instruments. His observations led to the theory of disease transmission by bacteria.

The secret of Leeuwenhoek's success had two sources. He was tireless in using his hands to perfect those lenses that were so necessary for viewing a strange new world. He was likewise tireless in persistent observation of what these lenses revealed to him. Leeuwenhoek spent all his spare time grinding lenses, mounting them in crude frames. One day he placed a drop of plain, ordinary water under his microscope and to his amazement he found it swarming with minute "animals" that seemed to swim about. He became the first "microbe hunter."

The microscope is one of the marvels of optical invention. But it is no more marvellous than a pair of modern eyeglasses expertly fitted to restore normal vision. Microscopes can be turned out to a pattern, but eyes that need help require careful study and individual lenses to correct their particular deficiencies.

Gentle Laxative — Mild Antacid

Have Official Market For Foreign Currency

PARIS, July 27—(Reuters)—An official market for foreign currencies handled heretofore by the Exchange Stabilization Fund and not quoted on the free market has been established, the French Exchange Control announced today.

These currencies are: the pound sterling, the Canadian dollar, the Dutch guilder, the lira, the Egyptian pound, the Deutsche mark, and the Norwegian, Swedish Czechoslovak and Yugoslav crowns.

The official market will also register future quotations.

Trading will be allowed between registered intermediaries, instead of exclusively through the stablization fund as heretofore.

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. — (CP) — Fish were never more plentiful in Labrador waters, fleet captains say, but fishermen are scarce. Despite the possibility of bountiful catches fishermen are boycotting the waters after failure to get a set price for their catch established.

Two Survivors Fight For Life

SARNIA, July 27—(CP)—Two survivors of a three-death car accident are fighting for life in hospital today, but their conditions are both described as "very critical."

Mrs. Hariett Watts, 33, Hamilton, had her left leg amputated Wednesday afternoon. Her sister, Bonnie Lee Stephenson, 13, of Thedford, also underwent surgery.

Hospital officials said Wednesday that both patients, who had just left the operating room, were still unconscious.

The driver of the car, who miraculously escaped serious injury, Pte. Wesley Clifford Fox, 22, of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps at Camp Ipperwash, was arraigned before Magistrate J. C. Dunlap Wednesday morning on a charge of motor manslaughter. He was remanded until August 1. Crown Attorney S. A. K. Logan said he would accept $500 cash bail or a $1,000 property bond for Fox's release.

Tells What Ended Stomach Distress and Nervousness

Troubled for Years With Sour Acidity, Gas, Cramps and Heartburn After Meals, This Woman Says Syntona Gave Her Grand Relief.

MRS. ELIZABETH SCANDRETT

"For many years I suffered from stomach disorders and my entire system became run down, but I have obtained relief by taking Syntona," said Mrs. Elizabeth Scandrett, 443 South Street, London, Ontario, in a recent report.

"Anyone who is troubled this way will understand how I suffered with gas, cramps, heartburn and sour acidity after my meals. The dizzy feelings, headaches and edgy, upset nerves all combined to make me so miserable I couldn't get to sleep or summon up enough energy to even do my housework. I often felt achy and sore all through my back, limbs, joints and muscles and this I attributed to my general rundown condition.

"I tried so many things without benefit that I was very discouraged so you can realize how pleased I am with the fact that Syntona has done what everything else failed to do. Since I've been using this medicine the gassourness and other distress has cleared up so that I can eat all my meals. My nerves are calmed down, allowing me to get sound sleep and the aches and pains have gone way. Also I haven't any trouble now with headaches or dizzy spells and generally I am so pleased with Syntona that I want to tell every other person suffering like this how they can get relief."

Made from 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots, Syntona has helped many people in this very same way. It is inexpensive, easy to take, and the results are quickly felt.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)
